One day last week a rough looking young man came into his store and asked for a piece of chewing tobacco. At the same time he laid a 50 cent piece lightly on the counter. The old man picked up the money and looked at it. It had a dull color and was not as heavy as an ordinary half dollar. The proprietor walked over to where the tobacco was, and, taking down a piece of the brand the young man had called for, he pretended to put it under the tobacco cutter, but instead he slipped in the counterfeit piece and cut it into halves. He then handed the two pieces to the young man and commanded him to "get," which he promptly did.—Chicago Record.

New York Is Provincial.

Perhaps there is no city quite so provincial as New York, says A. Maurice Low in The Atlantic, due to the fact that the average New Yorker, whether in society or business, has got into the habit of patronizing the inhabitants of any other city. The New York business man complacently feels that the rest of the country is financed by New York and must do as New York tells it. The society man or woman of New York believes that outside of New York, with few exceptions, there is no society worthy of the name, and what society does exist is merely a bad imitation of its New York prototype.

Things You Hear.

You no doubt "hear" things every day that are not true and repeat them. Try not to do it. It is surprising how many things are told that are untrue and cruel. It is surprising how many people like this sort of talk. Be above circulating an untrue and damaging story about any one to oblige some mischievous gossip.—Atchison Globe.

Aggravating.

Mrs. Meddergrass—The postmistress doesn't seem to like the new professor of the school.

Mr. Meddergrass—No; I reckon not. I hered some of the fellers at the store say he had wrote all his postal cards in Latin or some other furrin language.—Baltimore American.

A Martyr.

"How can you call old Bogles a martyr to his principles when every one knows he died of indigestion?"

"Exactly. He died because he was devoted to the principle of allowing no doctor on earth to dictate what he should eat."—Indianapolis Journal.

The royal army clothing factory of Great Britain has only two commissioned officers, a director and a doctor.

The stayer wins whether the weapons be brawn or brains. The best work is done by hard work.

We Want Correspondents

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

The Old Chestnuts.

It is said that a certain Cleveland lady whose handsome house is in an ultrafashionable section of the city was called east while her home was undergoing the renovating and refurnishing process. During her absence a man was especially engaged to hang the pictures. Among them were a number of excellent copies of the world's greatest works of art, and the man, an artist, found his task a labor of love.

With great care he hung the more valuable copies in the roomy reception hall and had just finished his task when the lady returned.

Her eyes snapped as she surveyed his work.

"Who hung those old chestnuts there?" she cried.

"Old masters, madam," said the startled artist.

"Old chestnuts, I say; it's the same thing. If you hung them, take them down. I won't have them there. With new furniture and new decorations and new carpets and rugs I'll have new pictures too. Who ever heard of such old trumpery stuff in a strictly modern house?"

"And what shall I do with the—the old chestnuts, madam?" the artist inquired.

"Oh, dump them into the attic until I can get rid of them," replied the lady.

And there the "chestnuts" lie, Madonnas and cherubs and all, gathering dust and calmly awaiting the getting rid of process.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Renting Locomotives.

Hundreds of locomotives are rented every year. Several corporations make their chief revenue this way. The Baldwins have many machines out on the rental form of payment—that is, the engines are rented in the same way that you would buy a stove on installments—so much down, so much a month, the payments to apply on the final purchase money. It is seldom, however, that a railroad rents locomotives. They are usually let out to contractors who construct temporary railways for hauling dirt from excavations.

Contractors who hire the locomotives usually have their own names gilded on them so that the public may suppose that they belong to them. The engines, as a usual thing, are cast offs. They may have pulled express trains once, but now they are only fit to pull gravel cars. The engineers who work them are oftentimes also the cast offs of the profession. They may have operated express engines, but through carelessness or other incapacity have been discharged from one road after another until they are only fit to haul gravel or wood trains.—Philadelphia Record.

Too High For Inspection.

Count de Koronet (who is an ardent admirer of Willie's sister)—What are you after, my little fellow? Come round here where I can see you.

Willie (who is climbing on the back of the count's chair)—Tom said you had a skating rink on top of your head, and I want to see it!—Brooklyn Life.

Until the middle of the century Great Britain imported two-thirds of the iron she used. The use of coal for smelting was then only beginning.

When a man insists on "explaining" a thing, it is a confession that it worries him.—Atchison Globe.

No northwestern farmers list of papers is complete without it. This paper and Spectator one year for $1.25.

Cosmopolitan, New York World and The Spectator.

You wish to keep in touch with metropolitan life, through the medium of a great daily. The Thrice-a-Week World of New York is the equivalent of a daily and is a marvellous fund of knowledge concerning the happenings of the day. Each issue contains six to eight pages of eight columns each or over eight thousand columns of reading matter a year. In former days this would have cost you probably as much as $6.00 a year, by itself. Now you can have it, if you wish, in connection with your home paper and The Cosmopolitan Magazine. Three together one year for only $2.50.

HAMILTON GUILTY.

Contrary to the opinion of the general public, the jury in the Hamilton-Day murder case at Minneapolis brought in a verdict of manslaughter in the first degree. The above decision of the jury came over the wire at 10:30 this morning and is supposed to be authentic.

Smallpox at Crookston.

It was by no means a small sized scare that was created Saturday evening in this city when it was learned that the James hotel on Main street contained a smallpox patient, and that the hotel had been quarantined and placed under guard of special policemen. Early in the evening Mayor Campbell was notified that Mr. Mulcahey, the proprietor of the place, who had been feeling ill for several days, had suddenly suffered a dangerous looking outbreak all over his body, and that the rash appeared like smallpox. The mayor immediately summoned Dr. Dampier, who, after first thoroughly disinfecting himself, made an examination and concluded that, while the case could not be called a fully developed case of smallpox, it would be advisable to take all precautionary steps to prevent any spreading of the disease, in case it should prove to be genuine. In consequence the mayor ordered the house quarantined and placed two special policemen on guard to guard the premises.

Up to today no new developments have appeared and the house with its eight or ten occupants, is under the strictest surveillance, and no further cases, outside of this building, are anticipated, even though the case should prove a genuine one. Crookston Journal.

Landlord has the "Bear."

Gus. Schmidt, accompanied by his grizzle bear, left this (Monday) morning for St. Hilaire and will give street exhibitions there during the week.—Crookston Journal. Gus. is boarding at the Hotel Markham and the landlord has the "bear."

The River Falls correspondent in the Gazette says Fred Harrington was around last week with a petition to open up a road from the school house in district No. 178 to the town line between River Falls and Rocksbury and further states the road ought to have been opened up fifteen years ago.

C. C. Knappen, publisher of the Gateway Magazine and the Crookston Press is here to-day distributing the second number of his excellent magazine. St. Hilaire occupies a two page write-up in a condenced form. Everybody should subscribe for the magazine—ten cents per copy or $1.00 per year.

Julius Pleth, the land man is determined to let the people know he is in town and in the land business. Last week he received two large signs and had them nailed onto the Holmes buildings. The signs are very attractive and anyone in quest of land will find no trouble in locating the office of Julius Pleth, the land man.

The annual seed distribution by the Department of Agricultural at Washington is now in progress and $100,000 worth of seed will be distributed this year. Each Senator, Representative and delegate will be given this year for distribution nearly 9,000 packages of seeds. Each one of the packages contain five papers. If you have doubts as to getting a package, perhaps you better write and let your wants be known.

It ought to be more generally known that sulphur thrown into the fire of stove, furnace or fireplace instantly extinguish the fire in a chimney or flue, says one who knows. If a small bag or parcel of sulphur, say three ounces were kept in a handy place and used when needed, as directed above, it might be the means of saving property and life.

At the October term of court the jury awarded Anna Adams a verdict of $5,000 in the damage suit against the Great Northern railway and the city of Thief River Falls, and $4,000 to Susanna Cunningham, in a like action. In answer to the petition of defendants for judgement notwithstanding the verdict. Judge Watts denies each and every petition, but cuts down the amount to $3,500 and $2,500 respectively. H. Steenerson, plaintiff's attorney, serves notice of acceptance, and the defendents now will either have to appeal the case or pay the reduced judgement. It is thought they will pay.—Red Lake Falls Gazette

It is wrong to speak of a convicted church member as "a good man gone wrong." You should say he is a bad man found out.

Perhaps one of the wittiest toasts on record is that of Franklin. After the victories of Washington had made his name well known throughout Europe, Franklin chanced to dine with the French and English ambassadors when these toasts were drunk: The son of Britain rose and proudly remarked: "England—the sun whose beams enlighten and fructify the remotest corners of the earth." The Frenchman, glowing with national pride, drunk: "France—the moon whose mild, steady and cheering rays are the delight of all nations; consoling them in darkness and making their dreariness beautiful." This furnished Franklin with a fine opening and his quaint humor bubbled over in his retort: "George Washington—the Joshua, who commanded the sun and the moon to stand still, and they obeyed him.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Regular Correspondent

Representative Bell, of Colo., a member of the committee on Appropriation made a telling speech against the unprecedented extravagance of the present Congress, in which he said it was time for the people to become alarmed at the rapid increase in public expenditures, which had grown in a single decade from $4.75 per capita to more than $10 per capita. He said that Congress had become so callous to vast increases in appropriations that it was considered almost disreputable to call attention to the extravagance of the government. Representative Cochran, of Mo., made a speech along similar lines.

The sugar trust scored another profitable triumph when Secretary Gage ordered a retaliatory duty of nearly one cent a pound placed on Russian sugar, that, too, in the face of the rather clearly implied threat of the Russian government that it would meet such action on the part of this government by putting the maximum tariff on all American goods. The short-sightedness of this policy on the part of the administration is made plain by the figures of our trade with Russia. Russia sells us annually about $300,000 worth of sugar, while American exports to Russia are nearly $30,000,000. Protests from great business interests are pouring into Washington against Secretary Gage's action.

Just before the House passed the Army appropriation bill, carrying a little less than $118,000,000, Representative McClellan, of N. Y., in a short speech presented some figures that are worthy of the country's most thoughtful consideration. He stated that the annual cost of each soldier to the U. S. excluding pensions, would be $1,288, and including pensions $2,828 while the annual cost of each German soldier, including pensions and the expense of past wars, was only $227, and that of each French soldier, including pensions and the cost of the Franco-Prussian war was only $232. The said the total cost of our army would soon reach $300,000,000 a year, to say nothing of the expense of the navy, which is now more than $100,000,000.

—Do you want to sell your farm? Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

Horse and Mule Exports.

The exports of horses and mule from the United States in 1900 were very much the largest on record. Eleven months only of that year are so far reported, but they show the export to be at the rate of 80,112 horses for the year, valued at $9,263,472. The year before the number was 49,983, and the value $5,747,468. Last years number and value were about three times as large as they were 3 to 5 years ago. But this increase is due wholly to war. For instance to the Philippines and other Asiatic ports where we had previously sent no horses, 6,356 were sent in 1900. And to South Africa, where only 73 horses were sent in '97, and 102 in '98, 21,441 were sent in 1900. It will be seen that almost the entire increase in number for the year was due to the demand of war. Mule exports, that had been running from 6,000 to 7,000 a year, has jumped to 20,228 in 1899 and to 50,287 in 1900. This is also war fruit, almost the entire increase going to our own and British wars. But perhaps we should not find fault with the source of increased trade. It's the "stuff" we're after, and if the dollars we get are tarnished with human blood it will soon rub off and they will be as bright as ever!—Farm, Stock and Home.

Occasionally a man all at once discoverer he has been fooling around a buzz saw while he has been fondly imagining he was the whole saw mill himself. This was the case with the Steel county farmer, who refused to send his children to school because he did not like the teacher. He insisted the trustees should discharge the teacher and hire another one, or he would not send his children to school. He was arrested and brought up with a short turn by having to take his choice between three things: Go to jail, pay a fine of $50 for not complying with the compulsory school law or send his childred to school. He naturally came to his senses and sent his children to school.—Granite Falls Journal.

Prof. Atwater's Theory.

Prof. W. O. Atwater, who has conducted extensive researches on the subject of food, says that variety in the food we eat is the most important consideration in fixing our diet. Most people eat too much meat. A certain amount of the proteids found in meat are necessary to nourish the body, but it is best to supply part of them from other elements. Peas, oatmeal, wheat and beer are good substitutes. The utmost care should be taken to get pure beer.

"Golden Grain Belt" beer is absolutely pure. It is brewed from the best barley malt, flavored with hops, and is an ideal tonic and food. You can get the strength of bread and meat in a simple, palatable, and easily digested form. This beer should be in every household. Order from your nearest dealer or Alex. Thompson, Crookston will supply you.

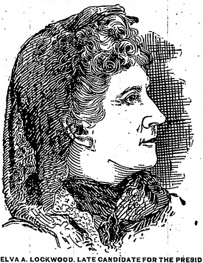
WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES

REGARD PERUNA AS THEIR SHIELD AGAINST CATARRH, COUGHS, COLDS, GRIP AND CATARRHAL DISEASES.



MRS. BELVA A. LOCKWOOD, LATE CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, the eminent barrister, of Washington, D. C., is the only woman who has ever been a candidate for the Presidency of the United States. She is the best known woman in America. As the pioneer of her sex in the legal profession, she has gathered fame and fortune. In a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, she says:

"I have used Peruna both for myself and my mother, Mrs. Hannah J. Bennet, now in her 88th year, and I find it an invaluable remedy for cold, catarrh, hay fever and kindred diseases; also a good tonic for feeble and old people, or those run down, and with nerves unstrung."—Belva A. Lockwood.

Mrs. T. Pelton.

Mrs. T. Pelton, 562 St. Anthony avenue, St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"Peruna has done wonders for me. It has cured my headache and palpitation of the heart; has built up my whole system. I cheerfully recommend Peruna to all sufferers afflicted with catarrh. My mother is never without Peruna. When one is tired and generally out of sorts, if Peruna is taken it immediately removes that tired feeling."

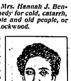
Peruna cures catarrh by removing the cause, inflamed mucous membranes.

Dr. Hartman, the compounder of Peruna, once said, in a lecture to women:

"A great number of women consult me every year. I often have occasion to say to these patients, 'I fear you have catarrh, madam.' They will generally reply, 'Oh, no, I never had catarrh. My nose is perfectly clear, and my breath is not bad, I am not troubled with coughing or spitting, or any other disagreeable symptoms of catarrh.' But, my dear madam, you may have catarrh all the same. Catarrh is not always located in the head. You may have catarrh of the lungs, or stomach, or liver, or kidneys, and especially you may have catarrh of the pelvic organs."

The doctor went on to say:

"I have been preaching this doctrine for the last forty years, but there are a vast multitude of women who have never heard it yet. Catarrh may attack any organ of the body. Women are especially liable to catarrh of the pelvic organs. There are one hundred cases of catarrh of the pelvic organs to one of catarrh of the head. Most people think, because they have not catarrh of the head, they have not catarrh at all. This is a great mistake, and is the cause of many cases of sickness and death."



Mrs. Julia C. Brown, of Pecatonica, Ills., says: "I have used Peruna in my home for the past four years and am thoroughly convinced that it is a reliable family remedy."—Julia C. Brown.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Pervades All Classes.

"It makes me tired," observed the cynical guest, who had been reading about the avalanche of invitations which the distinguished actress staying at the hotel had been compelled to decline, "to see how your people run after famous characters when they visit the city."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

"Adam," said our first mother, in a serious tone, "we are certainly living beyond our means."

"That's exactly my own opinion, little woman," said the father of his kind. "And what do you propose to do about it?"

"Yes," said Adam, "we must, and I'm ready to second anything you suggest. But, wait. There is one item of expenditure that positively must be excepted from the pruning shears."

"And what is that?"

"I will not," said Adam, with a strong emphasis. "I will not have our laundry bills cut down."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Was an Inspired Orator.

If ever a man had a genius for pulpit oratory, it was Phillips Brooks, and yet Dr. Allen's memoirs bear repeated, indisputable evidence of the toil with which he wrought at his sermons. The explanation is to be found in two causes. There was in him the consciousness of an artist. One can see this in such insignificant matters as the character of his handwriting and the finish of his ordinary expression, as in familiar letters. He was not merely a man of taste, exquisitely modulated for the appreciation of all forms of art, if music be excepted—a not uncommon exception—but he had the constructive gift, and his first efforts in youth predicted for him a literary career. But there was in him emphatically that which now and then lifts an artist into the region of inspiration—namely, a possession.—Atlantic Monthly.

IN DEBTORS' PRISON

DEBTORS RAPIDLY BECOMING CRIMINALS IN ENGLAND.

We all know that imprisonment for debt has been abolished, but only to make way for imprisonment for contempt of court, and while, under the new regulations, the hardship of prison life is made easier for the convict, it has become more stringent for the debtor, who is rapidly becoming a criminal, writes K3-17, No. 5,580, in London Chronicle. Formerly, Wandsworth jail was a prison for female as well as male prisoners, but the women now find accommodation at Holloway and their ward at Wandsworth has become the debtors' division. Here the cells are similar in all respects to those occupied by convicts. The size, the furniture, the utensils are identical. The only literature allowed the debtor, like the criminal, in the early days of his confinement, is the Bible, the prayer and hymn books and a little volume called "The Narrow Way." It is merely in regard to bedding that the debtor, within his cell, is better off than the convict. While the latter at the commencement of his incarceration is compelled to rest on bare boards the former, at all times, is provided with cocoanut fiber mattress and pillow, as well as with two coarse linen sheets, a pillowcase and a couple of blankets. Before the debtor is finally locked up for the night on the day of his arrival at the prison he receives a circular yellow cloth badge bearing the number of his cell inscribed in black on both sides, which makes him look something like a cabman. This badge—the badge of infamy, for it is identically the same in color and all other respects for convict and debtor alike—he is compelled to wear fastened to the left hand side of his coat whenever he leaves his cell. It is absolutely illegal to brand him in this fashion, because in the abstract from the regulations exhibited in his cell it is set forth that a debtor shall be allowed to wear his own clothes unless they are unfit for wear, and that even then the clothes supplied him shall not be of the same color as those worn by convicted prisoners. But this badge of the criminal attached to the debtor's coat becomes part of his attire. The prison bell tolls at 6 a. m., and the day begins. The cell floor must be swept, the white metal utensils cleaned and furbished up so that you can see your face in them, the plank bedstead set leaning against the wall on end, with mattress dangling over the back, bedclothes made to hang in front, and pillow crowning the whole. Then you wash and finish dressing. All at once you hear a clanging of keys. The door flies open. A canvas bag bearing the cell number is flung on the floor, accompanied by an inquiry in an unsympathetic tone as to whether you are "all right," and an order to put out your pots and pans. The bag contains your work—some pieces of canvas, some samples of buttonholes, a stout needle, a skein of white thread, a lump of wax, a knife. You have been deprived of your penknife down stairs, only to be placed in possession of a much more dangerous weapon in your cell. From the moment the debtor comes into prison he is given every opportunity to find money to satisfy his creditor, should he be so disposed. He may telegraph, he may write and receive as many letters as he pleases in that bona fide aim. But if he makes no effort to discharge his debt, he may only write and receive one letter and have one visit a week. It will surprise a good many people to learn that the majority of debtors at Wandsworth are sent there by their wives for failing to satisfy maintenance orders. Then come the fathers of boys sent to truant schools, who have been ordered to contribute a couple of shillings a week towards their support. A third category is made up of persons in arrear with rates and taxes. Debtors of the miscellaneous class are few. Most of my companions during the fortnight I passed at Wandsworth bore up against their misfortunes with a good heart. One or two gave way. One man took the matter so keenly to mind that he displayed signs of insanity and was removed to the hospital.

Dreamed of Hidden Gold

Went to the Spot Indicated and Found a Treasure

A singular certification of a dream was the experience of Mrs. Rachel Moores of Texarkana, Ark. In 1866 she was living with her husband, Maj. David Moores, on a plantation about 30 miles south of Texarkana. They had a large sum of money which the husband took out one night and buried. Ten years later he died quite suddenly, without even revealing to the wife the hiding place of the money, and although diligent and repeated search was made, no trace of the buried treasure was ever found. Mrs. Moores, who is now more than 70 years old, has remained a widow, living most of the time alone since her husband's death. A few weeks ago she had a vivid dream one night, in which she saw in the old plantation with certain landmarks the spot where, as her dream indicated, the money was buried. In a few nights the dream was repeated, and thereafter at intervals for more than a dozen times, each dream being an identical repetition of the first. Mrs. Moores is not at all superstitious, yet this oft-repeated dream led her to make a secret investigation recently, when, strange as it may seem, the long-lost treasure was found, and that, too, at a place in the woods marked exactly as that so often in her dream. The money was all in $20 gold pieces, and the total amount $2,800.

Uncle Sam as a Flower Gardener.

During the fall planting at the white house there are placed in the ground more than 56,000 bulbs and fully 5,000 plants, whereas in the spring 35,000 plants, embracing 150 varieties, are set out. Surrounding the executive mansion are 55 flower beds of various sizes. All of the beds must be shielded in winter by elaborate blanketings of protective material, and in the case of many of the beds precaution must always be taken lest they be washed out by heavy rainfall.

It is better to have a heart of oak than a wooden head.

MINERALS ABUNDANT.

Every Part of the United States Rich in Various Ores.

No section of the United States has been neglected in the distribution of valuable mineral supplies, says Leslie's Weekly. Where iron ore of one sort is lacking another is given; where iron and coal are denied, and such regions are few in the United States, there is stone or clay or the precious minerals. The mining districts of the east are, broadly speaking, controlled by the general trend of the Appalachian mountains. On the east side of these mountains, from the Hudson river to Georgia, there extends a more or less continuous line of magnetic iron ore deposits. This is paralleled by one of low grade ores and by another of copper ores. West of these regions are found the brown hematites, most valuable in Alabama, Tennessee and Virginia. Passing to the interior basin of the continent, we find the eastern and central part underlaid by vast fields of coal. The metal deposits appear in groups. One such group contains the magnificent copper and red hematite iron ore deposits around the head of Lake Superior. Another group contains the lead and zinc and red oxide of iron of Missouri. In the western part of the United States the grouping of metals is most striking, as it assumes the form of a series of irregular bands or belts extending from north to south and corresponding to the longitudinal trend of the mountain systems. Passing westward, we first note a sharply defined gold belt found in New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming and Montana. West of this and extending through New Mexico, Utah and western Montana, is a line of silver lodes. A second line of silver mines stretches from Mexico to Idaho, through Arizona and Nebraska, while a third chain skirts the eastern slope of the series. The western foothills of the Sierras are so marvelously rich in gold veins and placer deposits as to be known to all the world, while shortly farther down into the valley of California is a copper belt. The region of the coast ranges affords quicksilver and iron.

Ocean Post Offices.

Most of the big liners that carry the mails now have floating postoffices on board, where all letters and postal packets are dealt with while the vessel is plowing her way through the waves. The sorters have by no means an easy time on board, for they are often at work for twelve hours a day during the entire voyage. One sorter on the Kaiser Wilhelm stated the other day that during five months an average of 58,368 letters, 220 sacks of papers and 847 registered articles were handled by four men, or an individual average of 14,592 letters, 50 odd sacks of papers and 212 registered articles. In the same period the average post worked on the voyage of the American liners in 17 trips were 92,400 letters, 144 sacks of papers and 1,164 registered articles, or 46,200 letters, 72 sacks of papers and 582 registered articles per man.

Wedding Gown of Victoria.

The dress worn by Queen Victoria on her marriage would be voted "simple" in these times of wonderful textures and jewel embroideries. It was of rich white satin and had a very long train carried by a dozen bridesmaids, daughters of dukes, marquises and earls. The trimming was composed of that beautiful Honiton lace which has become historical, for it has figured in many portraits of the queen. The headdress consisted of an ordinary wreath of orange blossoms and a lace veil. A brooche, necklace and large, long earrings of diamonds completed the toilet, and to modern ideas the outfit seems gaudy and absurd; but even most brides of today cannot come within gunshot of one ornament which was assumed by right, the collar of the order of the Garter. This emblem hung around Victoria's shoulders, and marked her supreme once and for aye among the brides of this petty world.

Germany's Big Cities.

According to the latest statistics, the population of the eight principal cities is as follows: Berlin, 1,284,345; Hamburg, 767,385; Munich, 498,303; Leipsic, 455,120; Breslau, 422,415; Dresden, 395,349; Cologne 370,685, and Frankfort-on-Main, 267,813. In each case there has been an increase within the last five years.

Shock Restores Girl's Voice.

A phenomenon of rare occurrence, although it is absurd to speak of it as unprecedented, is reported from Northwich. A coachman, who was killed in a gale by a falling tree, left a grown-up daughter, who had been partially dumb for three years as the result of a severe attack of influenza. On learning of her father's death the woman spoke, and is now able to converse freely.

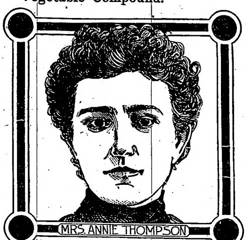
THANKFUL TO MRS. PINKHAM

Letters Proving Positively that there is No Medicine for Woman's Ills Equal to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



MRS. ANNIE THOMPSON

(ALL LETTERS ARE PUBLISHED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION.)

"I cannot say enough in regard to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has done me more good than all the doctors. I have been troubled with female weakness in its worst form for about ten years. I had leucorrhoea and was so weak that I could not do my housework.

I also had falling of the womb and inflammation of the womb and ovaries, and at menstrual periods I suffered terribly. At times my back would ache very hard. I could not lift anything or do any heavy work; was not able to stand on my feet long at a time. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for doctors but they did me no good. My husband's sister wrote what the Vegetable Compound had done for her, and wanted me to try it, but I did not then think it would do me any good. After a time, I concluded to try it, and I can truly say it does all that is claimed for it. Ten bottles of the Vegetable Com- and seven packages of Sanative Wash have made a new woman of me. I have had no womb trouble since taking the fifth bottle. I weigh more than I have in years; can do all my own housework, sleep well, have a good appetite, and now feel that life is worth living. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I feel that it has saved my life and would not be without it for anything. I am always glad to recommend it to all my sex, for I know if they will follow Mrs. Pinkham's directions, they will be cured."

Gratefully yours, MRS. ANNIE THOMPSON, South Hot Springs, Ark.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

MRS. M. A. DENSON

"I was taken sick five years ago with 'The Grippe,' and had a relapse and was given up by the doctor and my friends. Change of Life began to work on me. I flowed very badly until a year ago, then my stomach and lungs got so bad, I suffered terribly; the blood went up in my lungs and stomach, and I vomited it up. I could not eat scarcely anything. I cannot tell what I suffered with my head. My husband got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken half of it I began to improve, and to-day I am another woman. Mrs. Pinkham's medicine has saved my life. I cannot praise it enough."

M. A. DENSON, Millport, N.Y.

PROFUSE PERIODS.

MRS. L. D. HODGE

"I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound about 3 months ago, and cannot express the wonderful good it has done me. Menstruations were so profuse as to leave me very weak for some time after. Was also troubled with leucorrhoea, tired feeling, bearing down sensation, pain across the back and thighs. I felt as though there was a heavy weight in my stomach all the time. I have taken two bottles of the medicine, and now have better health than I have had for four years."

are packed away in your insides and must be kept clean, in order and doing business.

It's a long way, with many turns and pitfalls to catch the refuse and clog the channel if not most carefully cleaned out every day.

When this long canal is blockaded, look out for trouble—furred tongue, bad breath, belching of gases, yellow spots, pimples and boils, headaches, spitting up of food after eating—an all-around disgusting nuisance.

Violent calomel purges or griping salts are dangerous to use for cleaning out the bowels. They force out the obstruction by causing violent spasms of the bowels, but they leave the intestines weak and even less able to keep up regular movements than before, and make a larger dose necessary next time.

Then you have the pill habit, which kills more people than the morphine and whiskey habits combined.

The only safe, gentle but certain bowel cleansers are sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, because they don't force out the foecal matter with violence, but act as a tonic on the whole 30 feet of bowel wall, strengthen the muscles and restore healthy, natural action. Buy and try them! (Look out for imitations and substitutes or you can't get results. Cascarets are never sold in bulk. Look for the trade-mark, the long-tailed "C" on the box.) A GIRL OF SPIRIT.

Attorney General Griggs Ably Assisted by His Daughter.

In all Washington it would be impossible to find a brighter, more cheerful household than that of the judicial head of our government. Attorney General Griggs, like most New Jerseymen, is very domestic in his tastes and likes best to get away from his official cares and worries and seclude himself in his own home. His household consists of eight—himself, his wife, who is his second, his two sons and his four daughters.

MISS HELEN GRIGGS.

Secretary Griggs' four daughters range from Helen, the eldest, a remarkably handsome girl of 21, to Baby Elizabeth, about 5 years of age. They are fond of society, but are very far from being mere butterflies. Miss Helen Griggs is a young woman of the most artistic tastes, which have been carefully cultivated, although she is not a college graduate. Some time ago, to the surprise and amusement of her friends, she took up the study of stenography, in which she speedily became proficient. At the same time she acquired a knowledge of business.

Miss Griggs has turned her accomplishments to good account, for she is her father's "right hand man." She is the invariable companion of her learned parent, who frequently asks her opinion on vexed points and often accepts her suggestions.

BARRIE AND HIS NEW BOOK.

Many and Great Successes of the Brilliant Scotch Author.

James Matthew Barrie, the Scotch author who has delighted so many thousands of Americans with his stories of Scottish life as well as by his dramatized novel, "The Little Minister," has just issued another book. "Tommy and Grizel," his latest work, has been running for some months in an American magazine and has just been issued in book form. It is the literary sensation of the hour. In it the delightful Scotchman continues the adventures of "Sentimental Tommy," and it promises to become as great a favorite with Americans as the former work.

JAMES MATTHEW BARRIE.

Mr. Barrie is a man of 40 and was born among the Scottish scenes which he depicts so well. Kirriemuir, in Forfarshire, is the original of the well beloved town of Thrums and the birthplace of the novelist. There and in the ancient town of Dumfries Barrie obtained his education until he went up to Edinburgh. During his university days and even at an earlier period his pen was kept busy, and after his graduation in 1882 he became a journalist. While writing for the press he gained the experiences described so well in "When a Man's Single."

The maelstrom of London soon sucked him in, as it does almost every author and journalist of note in Britain. Barrie's first book, "Better Dead," which appeared in 1887, attracted little attention, but "Auld Licht Idylls" and "When a Man's Single" in 1888 gained quick recognition. His other works, "My Lady Nicotine," a most delightful volume, and "The Little Minister," too well known to need comment, established his reputation on a firm footing.

A REPENTANT SINNER.

By Count Leo Tolstoi.

Explanation of the cause of Count Leo Tolstoi's excommunication from the Russian church is found by his friends in his latest story entitled "A Repentant Sinner." This story was first published in the Novoe Vremya, St. Petersburg, and such was its unusual nature that it immediately involved all the doctrinaires in heated discussion. Following is a translation of the story:

"There once dwelt on the earth a man 66 years old. He had lived his entire life without virtue and without repentance, and this man became sick, and still he did not repent. And when death approached and his last hour had come he prayed.

"'Lord, as thou didst pardon the thief on the cross, pardon me.'

"After he had spoken he gave up the ghost, and his spirit, beloved of God, had faith in the mercy of the Creator and soared to the threshold of paradise. And the sinner knocked suppliantly for entrance into heaven. From behind the gate came a voice, saying:

"'Who knocks at the gate of paradise? How did he live on earth?'

"The voice of the judge replied, enumerating all the sins of the man. There was not one virtue to his credit. And the voice from behind the gate said:

"'Sinners cannot enter the portals of heaven. Depart!'

"But the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am Peter, the apostle.'

"And the sinner said: 'Have pity on me, Peter. Remember the weakness of men and the great heart of God. Were you not a disciple of Christ? Was it not you who received the doctrines from his lips? You have had the example of his life. Oh, remember! He was in trouble and asked you three times not to sleep, but to pray, and you slept because your eyelids were heavy with sleep, and thrice he came and found you asleep. Even so have I done. Recall also that you renounced him three times before Caiaphas after promising him thrice never to deny him. This also have I done. You will not keep me out of heaven, will you?'

"And the voice died away behind the gates of paradise, and at the same instant the sinner ceased knocking, for the gate of heaven opened. But another voice was heard from behind an inner door, which demanded:

"'Who is this man, and how did he live on earth?'

"Once more the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating all the sins of the man, and there was not a single meritorious action to his credit, and the voice replied from behind the inner door:

"'Depart. So ignoble a sinner cannot live among us in paradise.'

"And the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, nor do I know thy name.'

"'I am the royal prophet David.'

"The sinner did not despair. He did not recede, but said:

"'Have pity on me, King David. Remember the weakness of man and the large heart of God. God loved you. He gave you a place above other men. You had everything—royalty, glory, gold, favorites and children. But from the infinite height of your position you saw the wife of a poor man. Sin surrounded you. You yielded to temptation, and you took the wife of Uri and delivered her husband to the avenging sword of the Ammonites. You, the king, took from the poor man his last ewe. Even so have I done. And remember how you repentantly said, "I remember my sins, and I repent of them." Even so have I done, and surely you will not bar the door of heaven for me.'

"And the voice died away from behind the inner door of heaven. At that moment the sinner ceased knocking, for the door was opened half way. Then a third voice came from behind the door and said:

"'Who is this man and how did he live on the earth?'

"And for the third time the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating the man's sins without recounting a single virtue, and the voice replied:

"'Get thee hence! Such sinners cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.'

"And the man said, 'I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am John the Evangelist, the favorite disciple of Christ.'

"At that the sinner rejoiced and said: 'Now they surely cannot keep me out. Peter and David let me enter because they knew the weakness of human nature and the great heart of God. You, John, will surely let me enter, because you are filled with love. Was it not you, O John the Evangelist, who exclaimed in your lifetime, "God is love, and who does not love cannot know God?" Was it not you who, in your weakness, but repentance, exclaimed, "Brothers, love ye one another?" How will you then refuse me; how will you deny me entrance? Either renounce what you have said or love me and open for me the inner door of heaven.'

"And the door opened wide, and John the Evangelist embraced the sinner and allowed him to enter the kingdom of heaven."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Rich Uncle.

Old Lawyer—How'd I get my start? Well, shortly after I was called to the bar a rich uncle died, and I came into possession of a cool hundred thousand.

Young Lawyer (in surprise)—But I never knew you had a rich uncle!

CARLISTS BOB UP AGAIN

The Revolution Which Ever Haunts Poor Spain.

PERSISTENCE OF THE PRETENDER

Origin of the Claim That Keeps the Iberian Kingdom in a Turmoil—The Salic Law and How It Was Originally Broken.

After Spain had received its whipping at the hands of Uncle Sam, it seemed that the unhappy kingdom was about to settle down to a condition of peace. With their vexatious colonial problems solved in so summary a manner, nothing remained for the volatile Iberians to raise a fuss about but their internal affairs, and this they have proceeded to do. That long standing and ever present menace to Spanish peace, Carlism, or the dispute about the throne, has again raised its ugly head, if indeed it could ever have been said to have been scotched, and there is every chance of a general upheaval.

DON CARLOS.

Most Americans know that there is some dispute about the Spanish throne, but few can give its grounds. The main cause of the trouble is the Salic law, which is very ancient and which declares that the throne may not descend to or through a woman. This law was established in Spain by Philip V, who died in 1746. He declared that no woman could reign in Spain while there lived a male descendant of Philip IV. This law worked fairly well without any serious dispute as to its authority for about a century. Ferdinand VII held the throne of Spain under Napoleon from 1813 until 1815, and then in his own right. Like most Spanish monarchs he was a weakling and was completely under the domination of his energetic fourth wife, Queen Maria Christina, daughter of Francis, king of the two Sicilies. This queen was a handsome, energetic, ambitious, unprincipled woman.

Ferdinand VII and Maria Christina had two daughters, who by the Salic law were barred from the throne. Had the royal pair possessed a son much misery and bloodshed would have been spared to their unhappy kingdom. Queen Maria was not satisfied, therefore, with the law, and under her influence the king in 1830 ordered it set aside. This action was vigorously resisted by the Bourbons, to which family the king belonged and who were jealous of the influence of the queen. After juggling with the law for some time Ferdinand settled the question as far as he was concerned by dying in 1833. Thereupon his elder daughter, Queen Isabella II, became queen under the regency of her mother, for she was only 3 years of age. Isabella's claim to the throne was disputed under the troublesome law by the brother of the late king, Don Carlos I. The dispute culminated in a civil war, which was settled for a time by the defeat of the Carlists in 1840. Queen Isabella's reign was disturbed by many revolutions, coups d'etat and changes of constitution, and in 1868 her outraged subjects, alienated by the flagrancy of her private life, deposed her. She is still living in Paris.

WIFE OF DON CARLOS.

From 1868 to 1874 the state of Spain was pitiable. The country was torn by internal revolution, dissension and revolt by its colonies. A republic was tried, but it proved a failure, and the monarchy was restored in 1875 under Alfonso XII, father of the present king. Alfonso died in November, 1885, six months before the birth of the present king, Alfonso XIII. In the interim the throne was occupied by the Infanta Maria Mercedes, the elder sister of the little king. The wife of Alfonso XII, Maria Christina, an Austrian princess by birth, acted as queen regent for both her children.

Don Carlos I, who was defeated in 1840, abdicated in favor of his son, Don Carlos II, in 1845. The second pretender to the throne renewed the quarrel in 1848 without success, although his followers made a stubborn fight. The Carlist strength lay principally in the north of Spain, in Catalonia and among the Pyrenees, as it still does. The second Don Carlos died in 1861, and his claims descended to his son, Don Juan. The latter in 1868 abdicated in favor of his own son, the present Don Carlos and the third of the name. He also has a son called Don Jaime, or James, to continue the fight that has so long torn the distressed country. There was fighting in the Carlos interest all the time, especially between 1873 and 1878. Since then there has been a continual series of small risings and threatened revolutions.

Don Carlos II, the present pretender to the throne and the man in whose interest the present uprisings are taking place, is variously described. By his followers, and he has many in Europe, he receives the highest meed of praise, for he is said by them to be a kindly, knightly personage. They assert, and it cannot be gainsaid if the Salic law be admitted to hold, that he is deprived of his rightful heritage, the throne of Spain. He has also, besides his pretensions to the Spanish throne, a very good claim to that of France, for he is the head of the ancient house of Bourbon. The pretender, who calls himself the Duke of Madrid, is tall, dark and of commanding presence. He is now 52 years of age.

By his enemies Don Carlos is denounced for meanness and love of money. During his early years he was quite poor, and some of his acts in obtaining money to carry on his cause were scarcely such as to commend him to his desperately proud countrymen. His wife, by whom he had four daughters and one son, was a French princess of a younger branch of the house of Bourbon and so related to her husband. She died in 1893. In 1897 he married a daughter of the princely French house of De Rohan, and his enemies say that he did so for her money. It is certain that without it he could not prosecute his cause. He is accused of being an ingrate and a libertine, though of late years he has been much quieter than formerly. He does not, of course, reside in Spain.

DON JAIME.

It has been reported several times that Don Carlos, following the example set by his grandfather and father, had abdicated in favor of his son. The latter is now about 30 years of age and quite rich through inheritance. He is blond haired, full faced and middle sized and was educated in England and Austria. Don Jaime received a military education and is said to be very popular in Spain. Undoubtedly he and the cause of which he is the representative and possible head form the most serious menace to the welfare and peace of Spain.

Society at Its Best.

Mrs. Ronald Stuart is a fair and prominent member of the society circles of Gotham. She does not, however, allow her social duties to distract her from the calls of humanity, and her generous purse is open to all worthy causes. At the recent bazaar held in the Waldorf-Astoria for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the Galveston disaster she was one of the most prominent workers. The raising of the large sum of money collected was largely due to her efforts in the cause.

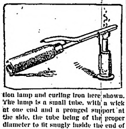
THE HOUSEHOLD.

Women and Bric-a-brac—Self Heating Hair Curler—Salted Almonds.

"There are no people on the face of the earth who litter up the rooms of their homes with so much useless and consequently bad furnishing as do the Americans," writes Edward Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal. "The curse of the American home today is useless bric-a-brac. A room in which we feel that we can freely breathe is so rare that we are instinctively surprised when we see one. It is the exception rather than the rule that we find a restful room. As a matter of fact, to this common error of overfurnishing so many of our homes are directly due many of the nervous breakdowns of our women. The average American woman is a perfect slave to the useless rubbish which she has in her rooms. This rubbish, of a costly nature where plenty exists and of a cheap and tawdry character in homes of moderate incomes, is making housekeeping a nerve racking burden. A serious phase of this furnishing is that hundreds of women believe these gimcracks ornament their rooms. They refuse to believe that useless ornamentation always disfigures and never ornaments. Simplicity is the only thing that ornaments. It does more; it dignifies. The most artistic rooms are made not by what is in them, but by what has been left out of them. One can never quarrel with simplicity, and nothing goes to make for perfect good taste so surely as a simple effect. A tasteful effect is generally reached by what has been left undone. And that is the lesson most needed in America today—not what we can put into a room, but what we can leave out of it."

Self Heating Hair Curler.

A flame to heat the hair curler is not always at hand, especially when travelling, and rather than ask for a light the hair is often allowed to remain in a disheveled state when a few minutes' work would greatly add to the neat appearance of the wearer. With the idea of providing an apparatus which will be ready for use in an instant Albert C. Moore has designed the combination lamp and curling iron here shown. The lamp is a small tube, with a wick at one end and a pronged support at the side, the tube being of the proper diameter to fit snugly inside the end of the handle, being held in place by a snap spring. The reservoir is provided with a screw cap to prevent leakage or evaporation of the alcohol or other liquid, and the supporting fork turns in against the side of the reservoir when not in use. To heat the iron the lamp is removed from the handle and ignited, when the fork is turned outward and the iron rested in the prongs until it becomes sufficiently heated for use.



Almonds as an Appetizer.

Salted almonds still hold the place of honor as an appetizer to serve at dinner with the cheese and crackers or at an afternoon tea. Purchased of first class confectioners they may be classed as luxuries. Prepared at home—and they are very little trouble—they are not at all expensive. Select the best Jordan almonds. These are not the expensive paper skinned nut, but a hard shelled sweet almond that retails at 25 cents per pound in the streets. Crack and blanch by pouring boiling water over them. Let them stand covered for five minutes, then rub off the skins of the nuts one by one with the finger and thumb. This is easily done if the water was actually boiling. Dry the blanched nuts with a coarse towel, then set in the warming oven until all the moisture is absorbed. Measure and allow two tablespoonfuls of the best olive oil or the same amount of melted butter to each pint. Toss the nuts in this until evenly and thoroughly coated and set back in the warming oven for a half hour or until the oil is partly absorbed. Spread the almonds on a dripping pan and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of fine salt, taking pains to distribute it evenly. Set in a moderately hot oven until crisp and slightly colored, stirring frequently. If temperature is right, it will not take over 10 or 12 minutes.

To Preserve Stale Bread.

When stale bread has become so hard that it cannot be eaten, it should be grated into a coarse powder and put into jars the same as those used for preserves. If kept well covered from the air and in a dry place, it will keep for a considerable time without becoming moldy or bad. It is not always convenient to obtain stale bread just when one wants it, and these powdered crumbs are very handy to have on such occasions as when a bread pudding is being made, when desired for fowl dressings or in forming meat balls, fish croquettes, etc.

Spiced Grapes.

A good recipe for spiced grapes is as follows: Put five pounds of grapes into a preserving kettle with four pounds of brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, a little pepper and one tablespoonful each of cloves and allspice. Place the kettle where it will be subject to a moderate heat and cook slowly for three or four hours.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

The Duke Got the Cigar—Gave Way to His Impulse—A Novel Foot Warmer.

Some months ago W. H. Knowles, registrar of births and deaths, Great Harwood, England, addressed an envelope as follows:

"To the Officer Who Hoists the Union Jack (when that happy event takes place), Pretoria, South Africa."

Mr. Knowles inclosed a cigar and a note, "Thanks; have a cigar."

As the war was so protracted he feared the envelope and contents had fallen into the hands of the Boers and that one of them had enjoyed a good cigar at his expense. The other day, however, he received the following autograph letter from the Duke of Westminster, dated Government House, Pretoria, June 7:

> Dear Sir—I write to say that I was the officer who hoisted the union jack over Pretoria, in consequence of which I received an excellent cigar, which Lord Roberts gave to me, having been forwarded by you. I thank you both for the cigar and congratulations and remain, yours truly,

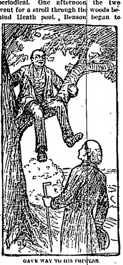
Gave Way to His Impulse.

When Dr. Temple, the present primate, was head master of Rugby school, he paid a visit to Dr. Benson, his predecessor in the see of Canterbury, who was at that time the master of Wellington college, says a London periodical. One afternoon the two went for a stroll through the woods behind Heath pool. Benson began to point out to his companion the sylvan beauties of the place, calling his special attention to a magnificent beech tree. For awhile Temple admired it in silence, then suddenly crying:



GAVE WAY TO HIS IMPULSE.

"I can't resist the temptation. Look out!" made a rush for the tree and ere his amazed friend could quite grasp the situation had scrambled up the trunk and seated himself among the branches.

Then the two future archbishops, looking at each other, broke into a burst of schoolboy merriment.

Hot Coffee as a Foot Warmer.

An amusing story is told in connection with a German baker, M. von Cohn, who has just died in Berlin at the age of 87. Years ago he was honored by the friendship of several members of the German royal family, and a tale is told of how on one occasion he managed by his wits to do the Empress Augusta a service.

On an icy day in winter the empress was passing by train through Dessau, and Von Cohn was at the station to pay his duty to the sovereign lady. At that time the arrangements for heating the imperial carriage were of the most primitive order, and the empress complained of the cold, the hot water supply on board the train having given out entirely. Nor was there any hot water to be had at the Dessau station. But Cohn, who was a man of resource, was not to be beaten, bought up the entire supply of hot coffee in the station restaurant and caused the warming tins in the imperial carriage to be filled therewith. Thus the German empress sped away with the unique distinction of having her feet warmed by means of a plentiful supply of hot coffee.

A Mummied Cat.

Miss Agnes Repplier, who is a prominent figure in Philadelphia's coterie of literary people, has a passion for cats. But, strange to say, the deader they are the better she likes them. She has 39 altogether, and there isn't a live one in the lot. They are mostly plaster casts and images that have been presented to her by friends. Even on her doorplate outside her apartments is a framed picture of a cat. The greatest of all is Rameses. Rameses was once a real live cat in Egypt centuries ago. He's a mummy now and is Miss Repplier's choicest treasure. When she went abroad a short time ago, in the excitement of getting off Rameses was left behind. Now, this was a catastrophe, and no pun is intended either. Miss Repplier never goes anywhere without Rameses, and when she found that he had been left behind she was much concerned. As soon as she reached her port of destination she cabled to Philadelphia for Rameses. The mummy was accordingly packed securely and shipped to her.—Philadelphia Record.

The new Academy of Art in Munich is a fine building, situated in the north end of the city. Its pupils come from all countries. Four scholarships have been founded for the assistance of poor students. The half yearly fees are $7.61 for Germans, but foreigners pay $14.17.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
County of Red Lake—ss.

I, Adam Zeh, County Auditor in and for said county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, do solemnly swear that the above and foregoing list of real estate taxes and penalties for the year 1899, delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1901, in said county and state, consisting of pages numbered from 1 to 287 both inclusive, is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

(Signed) ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor of Red Lake County, Minn.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of January, A. D. 1901.

JOSEPH PERRAULT,
Clerk of the District Court, Red Lake County, Minn.
[SEAL]

DISTRICT COURT,
Red Lake County, Minn.

Filed this 10th day of January, 1901.

JOSEPH PERRAULT,
Clerk District Court.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,

County of Red Lake—ss

I, Adam Zeh, Auditor of said County, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the list of real estate taxes delinquent on the first Monday in January, A. D. 1901, hereto attached, was this day received from the Clerk of the District Court in and for said County of Red Lake.

Witness my hand and official seal this 4th day of February, A. D. 1901.

ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor, Red Lake County, Minn.

Steamed Nut Pudding.

To half a cup of granulated sugar add one gill of melted butter. When well blended, add two beaten eggs and one cup of milk. Mix two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cups of flour and add to the other ingredients. Sprinkle a saltspoonful of salt over 1½ cups of any kind of nut meats broken into bits and add them to the mixture. Butter a mold or pudding dish, turn the mixture in and steam three hours. Serve with wine sauce.

Popcorn Candy.

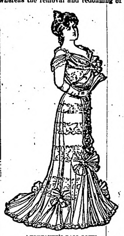
Having popped the corn nicely, salt it and sift it through the fingers, that the extra salt and the unpopped corn may escape. Have ready some candy, made by cooking together one pound of molasses, one-half pound brown sugar, one tablespoonful of vinegar and from 1½ to 2 ounces of fresh butter. When this is all but ready, stir into it as much of the popcorn as it will take up; then turn it out on to buttered or oiled dishes or shape it into balls.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

IN EVENING GOWNS, LUXURIOUS WRAPS AND SMALL ACCESSORIES.

Girl's Ball Gown—Three-quarter Sealskin Coat and Eton Jacket In Broadtail—Crepe de Chine Popular. A Glory of Gold.

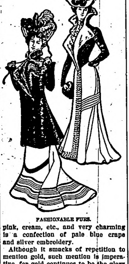
The popularity of the plain short coat in the midst of so much that is ornate and heavily garnished is in part accounted for by the fact that it accommodates the fur collarettes and boas nicely, and these are quickly thrown off when one enters a warm room and the jacket is thrown open, whereas the removal and redonning of a large fur trimmed wrap are affairs of which one thinks twice. However, the truly luxurious woman must have her heavy furs, and a better example of all that is delicious in this line would be far to seek than a three-quarter sealskin coat of today; for instance, one with the new rolled collar, lined with sable, immense soft revers of sable, scalloped bell shaped sleeves and handsome large tortoise shell buttons. Less imposing but equally stylish is an Eton jacket of black broadtail with great revers and collar of white broadtail and broadtail muff to match.



DEBUTANTE'S BALL GOWN.

It is to evening styles that the magic fashion draws us most irresistibly just at this season, for among all vanity's visions are no greater dreams of delight than the confections for the fair young girls whose debut society is now celebrating. One of these appears in the cut—a fascinating first ball gown of net with choux of illusion and pale pink wild roses with dark glossy foliage and garlands of flowers serving as epaulets, while the actual sleeves are in one with the draped bertha. A girdle and ribbon of pale pink satin complete the corsage.

Crepe de chine is the popular evening gown material in soft shades of blue, pink, cream, etc., and very charming is a confection of pale blue crape and silver embroidery.



FASHIONABLE FURS.

Although it smacks of repetition to mention gold, such mention is imperative, for gold continues to be the glory of the toilet.

One seam in front and one in the middle of the back mark the newest skirt model.

A welcome revival reported is that of "pinked out" taffeta ruchings among stylish trimmings for gowns in gauze fabrics.

Vegetables Rechauffes.

Cold vegetables, such as peas, beans, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers, etc., can all be warmed up and served a la maitre d'hotel by tossing them in butter over a moderate fire, with a sprinkling of chopped parsley, pepper and salt and the squeeze of a lemon. Boiled potatoes are best served cut in slices and fried as pommes de terre sautees.

Scalloped Turkey.

One of the ways to manage the "left over" portions of the noble bird now in season is as follows: In a buttered baking dish, lined with crumbs, put alternate layers of half inch bits of cold turkey, stuffing and gravy (or white sauce and crumbs, if there be no stuffing and gravy), cover with crumbs and bake 15 minutes.

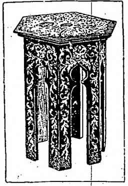
ART OF PYROGRAPHY.

A VERSATILE DECORATION CAPABLE OF MANY APPLICATIONS.

The Necessary Instruments, Including Platinum Points, and How to Use Them—Preliminary Practice. Taboret In Poker Work.

The variety of uses to which pyrography may be applied is endless. It lends itself especially to the broad treatment of large surfaces, but it can also be used in the adornment of the most dainty articles by delicate lines and soft shadings, says a Good Housekeeping writer in preface to the following practical instructions:

The iron style of earlier days has been replaced by a point of platinum. Platinum is used for poker work, because it is the only metal that will absorb the gas of the naphtha by which the supply of heat is sustained. The complete outfit consists of platinum points, a cork covered handle, a length of rubber tubing, a naphtha bottle provided with connections for tubing, a spirit lamp and a rubber bulb with tubing attached. It is also necessary to have some alcohol and naphtha. Be sure to have the naphtha bottle tightly corked and never open it in a room where there is a light or the smallest spark of fire, as it is very inflammable. The alcohol also should be handled with care. To do a variety of poker work an outfit of several points is necessary, but it is well for the beginner to have at least two, as illustrated in Figs. c and d. The first of these, c, is the more important, as with it both outlining and shading can be done, but the second is better for backgrounds.

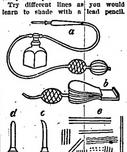


DECORATED TABORET.

Before attempting a design the beginner should practice on a smooth pine board or a piece of whitewood, which is better, as the finer grain makes practice easier. To light the point put some cotton wool in the naphtha bottle and fill the bottle about one-third full of naphtha. Connect the bottle with the cork handle and the bulb by the rubber tubing, hold the point in the flame of the spirit lamp until it is thoroughly heated and blow gently by pressing the bulb until the point becomes redhot. The point may now be withdrawn from the flame, and its heat can be kept up and regulated by the pressure on the bulb, which forces the vapor of the naphtha through the tubing into the point, where it burns. The lamp may now be extinguished. The object of the cotton wool in the bottle is to give more evaporating surface. Fig. a shows the apparatus. Sometimes a foot bellows (Fig. b) is used instead of the hand bellows. This is less tiresome and gives the operator both hands for work.

Now grasp the cork handle, not too near the hot point, and try to make true, even lines on the pine board. This at first is very difficult, for an instant's delay in the touch of the point will make a hole or deep dot in the wood, and the line will resemble a smudge. To overcome this first trouble bring the point upon the board with a sweep of the hand and lift it off in the same way. Keep this sweep as even and light as possible until you have a firm, clean line. The beginner will succeed more easily if the point is not too hot.

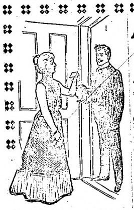
Try different lines as you would learn to shade with a lead pencil. Make parallel lines, long and short, broad and narrow, even and graded, straight and curved, as shown in Fig. e.



INSTRUMENTS USED IN THE ART.

Designs are to be used in the following manner: Draw them on the wood and burn in firmly and lightly. A quick mode is to trace and design on a piece of tracing paper and then transfer it to the wood by means of impression paper, then burn as described.

Opera cloaks are now almost smothered in chiffon, lisse or mousseline de sole. Ermine and sable mink are the most fashionable furs, and mink is quite charming on strawberry and pastel blues or heliotrope.



A CAREER ...BY... ACCIDENT

By HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1900,
By CHARLES W. HOOKE.

Jane Lestrell is a name that one hears with increasing frequency. The lady has achieved something that may almost be called fame, though she is not yet 24.

I happen to know that her success is due to a singular chance, and as the revelation of this fact may please the envious and will not worry Jane in the least it is here set forth.

At the age of 20, when Jane found that she would have to make a living, she turned naturally to literature. So many people do! Jane had written (uncompleted) romances in blank books with black covers and had once sold a poem to a comic weekly for the generous sum of $2. She felt that she had the gift.

It chanced that she enjoyed the acquaintance of an estimable old maid—Miss Prudence Whistler—who earned $20 a week as a reader of manuscripts for a publishing firm, and with this lady she found a haven when dependence upon her dead father's relatives became no longer tolerable.

Miss Whistler occupied quaint apartments in a building that harbored a salesroom for secondhand pianos on the ground floor and a strange collection of artistic people—most of them damaged by wear, like the pianos—in the rooms above.

Her friend was away all the day, and Jane sat alone with the muses. Permit me to say, out of the fullness of my heart, that these mythical ladies are very distressing company. Moreover, Prudence Whistler's little parlor was furnished in a style to wear upon the spirits of youth. The chairs and the sofa had come from the ancestral home. They were stiff and straight and upholstered in haircloth. The center table was a strange thing, long and black. Jane thought it must have served an undertaker as a rest for coffins. The pictures were not bad, being mostly details reproduced from famous paintings—faces and figures expressing woe.

The condition of Jane's nerves after a month in this place was such that if any one who suddenly dropped a feather pillow behind her she would have jumped right up through the ceiling into the studio of Diomed Guerin, the animal painter.

It may be that this state of the nervous system is favorable to literary work; I have heard that theory advocated. On the other hand, there is unquestionably a fatality in first stories similar to the so called "beginner's luck" that lures men into the vice of gambling. Let philosophy wrestle with the explanation while history records the fact that Miss Lestrell sold her first story without any trouble at all and received $25 for it.

"Don't lose your head, my dear," said the experienced Miss Whistler. "It may be 97 years before you sell another one."

Jane did not put any faith in this gloomy prophecy, and she went to work upon her second romance with high hope and fierce determination. But she was nervous, as I have already remarked, and her condition was aggravated by the performances of a gentleman named Franz Reinhardt, whose studio of music was directly beneath Miss Whistler's abode.

The tenants in this building knew little of one another, yet there was a rather definite rumor that Reinhardt was an excellent musician in exceptionally hard luck. It was said that he accepted pupils at the absurd rate of 50 cents an hour, and that most of them never paid him.

Jane, who was very fond of music, believed, during the first days of her residence there, that she should enjoy hearing Reinhardt and his pupils sing. There was a register in the wall—a relic of the days when the building had been a private residence heated by a furnace—and it admitted sounds from the studio of music with remarkable distinctness. They did not annoy Jane in the least until she began to be bothered with that second story, and then she suddenly awoke to the fact that Reinhardt sang only one song—"Palm Branches"—and drilled all his pupils—men, women and children—in one single vocal exercise.

Every morning at 9 precisely he would put himself into condition for the day's labors by singing "Palm Branches" four times, using the Italian words, which he pronounced with a strong German accent. "Palm Branches" is a beautiful hymn of praise, but enough of it is enough. It became so familiar in Miss Whistler's apartment that the lady's canary bird used to sing it. The top of the long black table echoed it like a sounding board, and the legs of the haircloth chairs danced solemnly in perfect time.

It rang in Jane's head until she simply had to sing it. There was no other way to get it out of her mind. In the earlier days she would hum it gently. Later, when the habit had grown upon her, she found no relief except by singing it right out at the top of her voice. At first she was afraid that Mr. Reinhardt would hear her and take offense, but afterward she was afraid that he wouldn't.

She found herself imitating his vocal methods. It was mimicry, and it was very rude, but she absolutely could not help it. When the professor was drilling that song into one of his pupils and Jane was struggling with her story, she would find nothing in her mind at last but "Palm Branches" and only by singing it once, good and strong, could she get into condition to resume her work.

It was nearly as bad with the vocal exercise. In fact, after a time it was in one respect worse, for she began to associate it with a particular individual of whom she knew nothing except that he had a voice like 50 mad bulls. He was a diligent person, with plenty of leisure, for he came almost every afternoon and usually remained about two hours. He devoted himself entirely to the vocal exercise, and he always made precisely the same mistake in it.

That is very harrowing to the nerves of the listener. One must have an iron constitution to stand it.

"If he makes that mistake again today," Jane would say to herself, "I shall certainly go down stairs and beat his brains out. No, no; he can't have any! He's done it again for the forty millionth time! Oh, you idiot!"

Then she would sing the exercise herself, sometimes with her head out of the window, for politeness' sake, sometimes defiantly, desperately. And one day, when the story was particularly annoying and the roaring basso more stupid than usual, she went in a frenzy directly to the register and yelled that vocal exercise into it until the antique, dilapidated furnace far down in the cellar rang like the cymbals in a band.

This really frightened her, not only because it was so very rude, but because it was the final convincing proof that she was going mad. For a month she had suspected it. There could no longer be any doubt. She walked to the black table and tore up all that she had written on her story that day; then she lay down on the fur rug in front of the grate fire and began to cry in a very childish and enjoyable fashion.

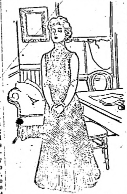
She was interrupted by a knock at the door. Such an event was practically unprecedented. In her surprise Jane forgot all about the worries of a literary life and the inconveniences of going crazy. She jumped up from the rug and ran to the looking glass, where she performed those feats of prestidigitation common to her sex under such circumstances. Then she opened the door and beheld a slender and graceful young man, bright eyed and magnetic. He was dressed with elegance and good taste, and his manner appealed at once to Jane, who had an especial liking for earnest, hearty, energetic people.

"I beg your pardon," said he. "May I venture to present my card and ask for just one minute of your time?"

"Won't you come in, Mr. Norton?" said the girl, glancing at the card. "I am Jane Lestrell."

He saluted the mention of her name very gracefully as he stepped into the room.

"This is an attempt," said he, "to make a right of two wrongs. The books say that that can't be done, but I'm not dismayed. I am the fellow who sings so atrociously in Mr. Reinhardt's studio down stairs. Sings? Let me say bellows and be truthful about it. I can't sing any more than a cow, and I know it."



SHE FOUND HERSELF IMITATING HIS VOCAL METHODS

"I think you have a great voice," said Jane. "I can hardly believe"—

"That I'm not as big as an elephant? I don't wonder you're surprised. But really, I don't pretend to sing; I come here to help out my friend, Mr. Reinhardt. He's a splendid fellow, and he is very poor. I'm sure he's an excellent teacher of singing, but he doesn't have a bit of luck. None of his pupils can sing. I'm the only one that can even make much of a noise. Now, it's really necessary for a teacher to have some pupils that can become known and attract others. Of course I can never do that, but I can pay for my lessons, which is more than most of them can do. You'll pardon me for mentioning it, but I'm quite well off, and Reinhardt won't take a cent from me except in this way. He's such a good fellow! If you knew him, you'd forgive me for annoying you the way I have with my awful howling. And—and that's what I came up here to say."

"Mr. Norton," said Jane, with her face as red as fire, "did you hear me just now?"

"Why, yes," said he. "We heard you singing the exercise. We've heard you before, and you sing it beautifully. Mr. Reinhardt says that you have a voice like all the nightingales in paradise—that's the way he puts it, and the tears come into his eyes every time he mentions you. He says that you could make your everlasting fortune in concert or opera and win a fame that would reach around the world three times and tie in a double bowknot. That was the way he expressed it, very respectfully, but with his peculiar enthusiasm. I wish you could take a course with him."

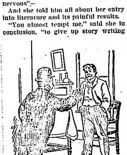
"I am taking a course with him," responded Jane. "I sing 'Palm Branches' 25 times a day, and I go through that exercise in my sleep—I really do. I wake myself up with it. And now I'm going to say something perfectly absurd, but it's true. My voice has improved! I really have learned Mr. Reinhardt's method without in the least meaning to do so, and I know that I sing a good deal better for it."

"If I should tell him that," said Norton, "he would die of joy."

"Then please don't tell him," she rejoined. "It's hardly honest to get instruction in that way, and I'm quite ashamed of it. But I'm much more ashamed of having been so childish as to let you and him know that the music annoyed me. I have been so very, very nervous"—

And she told him all about her entry into literature and its painful results.

"You almost tempt me," said she in conclusion, "to give up story writing and try to do something with my voice. I have been told once or twice that I sing quite well."



"FRANZ," SAID HE, "SHE'S COMING DOWN."

"Well!" echoed Norton. "Why, Reinhardt swears that the cherubim and seraphim aren't fit to hum an accompaniment when you are singing! Won't you please come down and sing for him just once? I tell you in the calmest possible manner that Reinhardt would be willing to be burned alive the next minute if you would sing the half of one song for him—the shortest one ever written."

"I suppose that is the way he expressed it," said Jane, with a smile. "I begin to perceive where this extravagant language originates. I don't believe that Mr. Reinhardt is so enthusiastic."

Norton laid his hand upon his heart solemnly, while his fine, dark eyes shone with earnestness.

"If you will think of the most terrible and binding pledge ever uttered by man or woman since the world began," said he, "I will vow to you by it that Reinhardt"—

"I will take your simple word," said she, laughing, "and I will sing for Mr. Reinhardt within ten minutes. Will you please prepare him for the ordeal?"

Norton made a graceful exit, and the next moment he burst into his friend's studio.

"Franz," said he, "she's coming down. In one minute you will see what nature was trying to do when she made all the other beautiful women that ever walked the earth. They were mere experiments, Franz, and Miss Lestrell is the first perfect and complete success."

"I am glad she will come," said the blond young German gravely. "She has a good voice, as it sounds through the floor."

Probably Reinhardt's absence of enthusiasm, after Norton's superabundance, piqued Jane somewhat. She is an obstinate girl, with a touch of vanity in her composition. Whatever the cause, she determined to make Reinhardt understand that she really had a voice. So she went to his studio three times a week for many months and worked like a little slave, subsisting meanwhile on the proceeds of a story or two and her own grit.

The result is well known in musical circles. Jane is a full fledged prima donna, and Reinhardt is the rage as a teacher. And, incidentally, Mr. Willis Norton has found out what love is—the one thing in this universe that is too big even for his powers of exaggeration. At present his fate is uncertain, but if protestations of devotion can win a woman Norton cannot possibly lose.

A CASE FOR AN EXPERT

By Peter McArthur.

Copyright, 1900, by Peter McArthur.

"Hello!" exclaimed Dr. Bascomb as he entered his office, where Jack Kenly was walking back and forth while waiting for him. "What is the matter? You look worried."

"I am worried," said Kenly as he shook hands. "Have you seen Nellie lately?"

"Not since a week ago Thursday, just before you started on your trip to Cincinnati. Is there anything the matter with her?"

"I can't say for certain, but I am afraid there is. She says herself that she is quite well, but she is so silent and irritable that I am afraid her nerves are out of order."

"Well, I'll drop around and see her some time during the day," said the doctor.

"No; I don't think you had better do that," said the young husband. "She protests that there is nothing the matter, and if you made a professional call it might make her angry and increase her nervousness. But, say, can't you come round and have dinner with us and have a smoke with me afterward? And perhaps you could diagnose her case without her suspecting anything, and then you could prescribe something that would help her."

"All right," said the doctor. "Call for me on your way home, and I'll go along."

Having relieved his mind by making this arrangement, Kenly went to his office and during the afternoon telegraphed to his wife that Dr. Bascomb would be with them to dinner. This was not unusual, for he and the bachelor doctor were old college chums and still retained much of the friendship of their student days. As young Mrs. Kenly had made it a point to make herself agreeable to her husband's old friends, so that he would never feel that he had given up too much of his old life when he married, and as she had developed a warm personal friendship for the young doctor, he usually spent at least one evening a week at their house. So there was nothing in the doctor's visit to excite her suspicion.

While Kenly and the doctor were strolling to the house Kenly talked of his wife's ailment, of which he had thoroughly convinced himself. Like many healthy people, he had an almost morbid dread of illness, and his talk had the effect of making Dr. Bascomb very alert for subtle symptoms, for nervous disorders are so elusive.

To their surprise Mrs. Kenly greeted them at the door with her accustomed liveliness, and when dinner was served was the life of the little party, just as she had always been in the past. Indeed her liveliness seemed greater than usual, for her husband was somewhat silent because he was worried and thought that his friend could diagnose the case better if he kept in the background. The doctor, being professionally alert, ascribed her brightness to the elation that so frequently follows dejection and was working up quite a serious case. After dinner Kenly made the excuse that he had no good cigars in the house and went out to buy some so as to leave the doctor and his wife together.

"How are you feeling these days?" inquired the doctor when they were alone, in a tone that he tried hard to make unprofessional.

"Why, I never felt better in my life."

"That's good. You never even have the blues, do you?"

"Of course, I have the blues sometimes. Who doesn't?"

"Um-m! Never see sparks of fire before your eyes when you turn your head suddenly, do you?"

"See here. Are you putting me through a medical examination? Do you want to feel my pulse and see my tongue?"

"Well, that would do no harm," said the doctor, seizing her wrist and taking out his watch. She snatched her hand away almost angrily.

"No, I am not going to let you feel my pulse, and if you are not careful you may feel my tongue instead of seeing it."

The doctor gravely meditated on these symptoms of irritability, and, noticing his silence, Mrs. Kenly looked at him with some alarm.

"Why, you don't think there is anything the matter with me, do you?"

"Oh, no," said the doctor with professional diplomacy, not wishing to excite his patient; "but you know I always look after the health of my friends even when they are not asking me to."

"But I don't see why you should be paying attention to mine just now when I am simply brutally healthy. Has Jack been talking to you? I remember he said something about my not looking well when he got back." And a momentary frown wrinkled her brow. But the arrival of Jack prevented further talk on the subject of health, and the two men retired to the library to smoke.

"Well?" asked the anxious husband after they had lit their cigars.

"Oh, there is nothing serious," said the young doctor, with a wise look. "Her nerves are certainly strung to high pitch, and I should say that her liver is affected somewhat. She probably worried at being left alone while you were away, and that wore on her."

"But what do you suggest?" asked the husband. "Are you going to prescribe for her?"

"Not medicines. She doesn't realize that there is anything the matter with her, and if I ordered drugs it would only tend to make her worse, for, after all, there is something in the contention of the mental scientists that people are sick when they think they are. It is particularly true of people of a nervous temperament. On the other hand, the fact that she does not realize her condition is dangerous, for she might go on thinking herself quite well until something really serious developed."

"But what can we do?" asked Kenly, now thoroughly alarmed.

"Well, I think a change of scene and lively company, with complete rest, would fix her up all right in a few weeks, and that would be a cure she could take without knowing anything about it except that she was having a good time."

"But I am afraid I can't get away with her just now."

"Of course you can't, but she could go to the seaside somewhere near by, and you could spend your Sundays with her, or she could go to the mountains."

"That's so. I'll suggest it to her tonight, for she seems to be in a better mood than she has been of late."

"Yes," said the doctor, "that is one of the strongest signs of her disordered condition. She seesaws from dejection to elation, and tonight she is up. The necessity of playing the hostess lifted her, and, like all people whose nerves are affected, she drew too heavily on her resources, and for that reason was unnaturally bright."

By the time the conversation had ended Kenly was thoroughly alarmed, and he [illegible] with fear the liveliness of his [illegible] they returned to the parlor [illegible] played and sang for them. Not wishing to let her exhaust herself the doctor left early.

They were silent for a few minutes after his departure, and Kenly noticed that the animation died from his wife's face and that she had returned to the mood that had alarmed him. But that only spurred him on to do what he considered his duty.

"I have been thinking, my dear," he began, "that you should really go away somewhere for a rest. Lots of people are going away for their holidays just now, and though I can't go yet, I could arrange to spend my Sundays with you."

"A rest!" she exclaimed with unsuspected energy. "Who told you I was tired?"

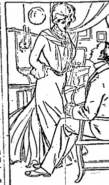
"Oh, I don't exactly mean a rest, but a holiday, a good time."

"I must say you are getting very thoughtful—of late."

He affected not to notice the ironical intonation of her remark and proceeded:

"Then you will go, won't you? Which would you prefer, the seaside or the mountains?"

Instead of replying she walked up to him and, looking into his face with blazing eyes, said slowly, but intensely:



"JOHN KENLY, I WANT YOU TO TELL ME."

"John Kenly, I want you to tell me why you want to get me out of town."

"Want you to go out of town? You wrong me, my dear. I shall be very lonely without you and will be sorry to have you go away, but I really think you should go."

"Why should I go? I haven't asked for a holiday, and I know we can't afford the expense, and I don't need to go."

Suddenly an idea occurred to her.

"Was it you that put Dr. Bascomb up to trying to scare me about my health? I know it was, and he and you have some scheme in mind and want to get rid of me for awhile."

"Oh, my dear, you do not mean that."

"I mean every word of it, and, what is more, I mean to stay right here until you go for your holidays, and then I'll go with you—to watch you."

"Hush, dear, and we will drop the matter for the present."

"Yes, and for the future too," she replied, for she had a temper of her own that was quite sufficient for all requirements.

Kenly was afraid that he would aggravate the trouble if he continued the argument until she became more exhausted than she was, so he let the matter drop, resolving at the same time to ask Dr. Bascomb if it would not be better to gently break to her the news of her condition and get her to allow herself to be properly treated. In the morning her eyes were red with silent weeping, but she did not choose to take her husband into favor again, so he went gloomily to his office.

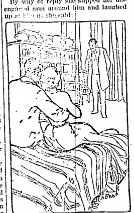
On his way home he called on Dr. Bascomb and told of the failure of his prescription.

"Ah!" said the doctor. "That is serious, and now we must break the matter to her. You had better go home and avoid the subject, and I will drop in during the evening, and we will talk things over quietly. My being there will save her a fright, for I can assure her that there is nothing really serious the matter yet."

The plan was agreed to and Kenly went home. His wife met him at the door in an alarming state of excitement. She was half laughing and half crying, and all the while she kept her hand pressed to her throat.

"Why, what is the matter?" he asked, with ill concealed anxiety.

By way of reply she slipped her disengaged arm around him and laughed up at him as she said:



"OH, IT'S ALL RIGHT," SAID KENLY.

"I suspect we have been a couple of geese, and I will confess to you if you will to me."

"What do you mean?"

"If you will confess to me why you wanted me to go out of town, I will confess why I have been so disagreeable to you ever since you came back from the west."

In spite of his agreement with the doctor Kenly saw that he would have an excellent chance to break things gently to her, so he agreed.

"Go ahead," he said. "Though I did not think you were cross."

"Oh, yes; I was, and it was all because I thought you had forgotten my birthday." And she withdrew her hand from her throat and showed the brooch he had ordered sent to the house for her during his absence.

"Your mother sent it to me today and said there had evidently been a mistake. You had absentmindedly given your old address, and, as your name is the same as your father's, the jeweler naturally sent it to your mother. Why didn't you tell me that you had sent it?"

"I thought that if you didn't think it worth speaking about I would say nothing either, and then you were so different from what you usually were that I got alarmed."

"Alarmed?"

"Yes; I thought you were ill, and when Dr. Bascomb was here he diagnosed your case as one of overstrained nerves and liver complaint, and that was why I wanted you to go out of town, so as to get a change and a rest. We thought it would only make you worse to alarm you by saying anything about your condition, but when you objected so positively we decided to tell you, and Dr. Bascomb is coming around to see you tonight."

It may sound undignified, but Mrs. Kenly simply shrieked with laughter. At last she gasped:

"So—so I have liver complaint, have I, and nerves? Oh, wait until I see him! Why, I was only cool to you and cross because I thought you had forgotten my birthday. But it seems it wasn't enough that we should make fools of ourselves. He had to come in and do the thing scientifically. Oh!"

When Dr. Bascomb came, he found his prospective patient and her foolish looking husband sitting on a sofa in a way that suggested the honeymoon.

"Oh, it is all right," said Kenly. "I have been a doddering idiot, and you"—But his wife's laughter drowned all further remarks.

"I never knew that family rows were now considered pathologically, doctor. I have a number of friends that are ailing in that way, and I shall take pleasure in recommending you."

The doctor looked from one to the other in helpless amazement. They both seemed to have gone crazy.

"It was just this way," said Kenly. "I was having a row with my wife and didn't know it, and all the symptoms we observed were nothing more or less than ordinary temper."

Then they told him the whole story, and now all Mrs. Kenly's friends think it was just lovely of Dr. Bascomb to send her such a beautiful pair of vases. But they don't know the story she has kept a secret.

APPALLING LOSS OF LIFE

STEAMER RIO DE JANEIRO STRIKES A ROCK AND SINKS ALMOST INSTANTLY.

DEATH LIST REACHES 122

Consul Wildman of Hongkong Is Among the Lost — While Off the Golden Gate During a Heavy Fog the Steamer Suddenly Strikes a Hidden Rock—Officers and Crew Make Heroic Efforts to Save Passengers, but the Steamer Sinks Before Much Can Be Accomplished—Captain Goes Down With His Ship.

San Francisco, Feb. 24.—The Pacific Mail steamer Rio de Janeiro ran on a hidden rock while entering the Golden Gate early yesterday morning in a dence fog. She sank a few minutes after striking. One hundred and twenty-two persons were drowned of the two hundred and one on board. At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon ten bodies had been recovered, two white women, one white man and seven Chinese. The most prominent passenger of the steamer was Rounseville Wildman, United States consul at Hongkong, who was accompanied by his wife and two children. It is thought all were drowned. The ship was in command of Pilot Frederick Jordan when she struck. He was rescued. Capt. William Ward Went Down With His Vessel.

As nearly as can be learned there were 201 people on board the Rio de Janeiro. She was three days overdue from Hongkong, via Honolulu, when she arrived off The Heads Thursday night, and the dence fog prevailing at the time induced Pilot Jordan to bring her to anchor until he could see his way clear through the gateway. She laid to until 4:30 o'clock, when the atmosphere cleared and she was started under a slow bell toward Point Bonita. All went well until 5:40 o'clock, when she struck. Most of the passengers were below at the time, and it is believed that many of them were drowned in their berths. The first news of the disaster reached here at 7:30 yesterday morning and soon afterward a boat load of rescued passengers and petty officers arrived at the Mail dock.

Rushed to the Rescue.

Tugs were immediately dispatched to render any service that might be needed, but no living persons were afloat when they reached the wreck. A number of drowning persons were rescued by Italian fishermen, and the bodies of two white women, three Chinese and a Japanese were brought in by the tugs. The search for more of the victims continued all day.

From all accounts it appears that the officers were cool and gave the necessary orders with the least possible excitement. Capt. Ward, who was on deck when the vessel struck, at once gave orders to the crew on watch to hurry the passengers onto the forward deck. At the same time the quartermaster on duty sounded the signal for fire drill, and within five minutes all the men were at their stations. There was no way of telling the extent of the damage to the vessel as she retained of an even keel for fifteen minutes

After Striking the Rock.

But Capt. Ward, with the instinct of one experience, knew the gravest danger threatened the 200 souls in his charge, and, pacing the deck, he gave orders to lower away the life boats and life rafts. There was not much confusion until fifteen minutes after striking, when the bow of the vessel suddenly plunged under water. Then there was a wild rush for the boats. Two boats had already been lowered and others were getting away as rapidly as the trained discipline of the crew could prepare them. A thick fog enveloped everything, and as yet no sign had come from the lifesaving stations. Darkness was all about, and with this added terror, the people on the Rio had to cope. One boat got clear of the vessel without damage and then stood by to help in picking up those who had no time to get into the boats and

Were in the Water.

Another boat, containing Third Officer Holland and J. E. Carpenter, got away but was drifted around close up under the bow of the steamer. As the forward end of the vessel plunged downward the prow caught the small boat and cut it in two. The two men in the boat were uninjured and swam away from the sinking steamer just in time to avoid being caught in the swirl of water caused by the settling of the big ship. Carpenter was picked up by the other boat. The fate of Holland is not known, but he is supposed to have perished. A number of Italian fishermen who were just starting out saw the sinking of the Rio and at once hastened to render every assistance in their power. While all this was going on Capt. Ward was directing the passengers and trying to keep them from panic. He succeeded only partially, as many of rushed to the railing and jumped overboard. Some of these were picked up, others were drowned. The Chinese crew, to the number of over a hundred, was terrorized. Some of them huddled in little groups, chattering in fear. Others crouched close to the deck, moaning pitifully. Many jumped into the sea.

Capt. Ward remained on deck until the vessel had settled to such an extent that the water was engulfing him. Then he went up on the bridge and from there continued to issue directions although by this time the confusion was so great that few paid any attention to his commands.

That the steamer sank almost immediately after striking is the report of a majority of those rescued. Some of the passengers say that she instantly listed forward and that in five minutes she went down, while others say she stayed afloat for half an hour after she struck. The confusion occasioned by such an incident is intense, and it is not surprising to find that there is as to the length of time the vessel remained above water.

The wreck lies about three-fourths of a mile south of Fort Point and about a thousand yards off the rocky shore. The smokestack and a portion of the upper works of the ill fated steamer are visible. There are several conflicting stories concerning the fate of Capt. Ward. The steward of the Rio says that he stood beside the captain when the vessel went down. Two other survivors say they also saw the captain to the last, but Frederick Lindstrom, the quartermaster officer of the Rio, emphatically declared that Capt. Ward emulated Admiral Trion, of Her Majesty's Ship Victoria, in going down to his cabin, where he met his doom behind a locked door.

Capt. Frederick W. Jordan, the pilot of the Rio, was rescued by an Italian fishing boat.

The cargo of the Rio de Janeiro was valued at over $500,000. There was besides $600,000 in treasure in the specie tank. The steamer itself was valued at from $650,000 to $700,000.

PUNISHMENT EDICTS SIGNED.

Von Waldersee's Bluff Worked All Right.

Pekin, Feb. 24.—The foreign ministers have received a message from the Chinese peace commissioners saying the edicts regarding the punishments, the cessation of examinations and the responsibility of the viceroys and governors have been signed, but the text has not yet arrived. Owing to the recent concessions made by China Count von Waldersee has postponed the departure of the punitive expeditions for Singan-fu, the present Chinese capital. The expedition was to have started today.

o—o

London, Feb. 24.—The Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post says that Li Hung Chang asserts that the punishments to be imposed upon Prince Chuang and Fu Hsien has been carried out in accordance with the demands of the foreign envoys.

IRISH SQUABBLE.

Factions in Chicago Will Have Rival Entertainments.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Fierce strife has broken out between the Irish Nationalists and the United Irish societies, both of Chicago. Two Robert Emmet celebrations are at the bottom of the trouble, as they also were upon the occasion of the former anniversary observance. The Nationalists have billed an entertainment at Central Music hall for March 2 and are advertising Maud Gonne, Maj. McBride, who fought for the Boers in South Africa, and John Daly, the lord mayor of Limerick. The United Irish societies, under the leadership of Col. John F. Finnerty, editor of their organ, the Citizen, have announced a Robert Emmet celebration at the same hall on March 4. The speakers secured are Christopher A. Gallagher of Minneapolis and the Rev. Francis L. Reinolds of Chicago.

TWELVE WERE KILLED.

Result of the Collision on the Pennsylvania Railway.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 24—Twelve killed and about thirty injured is the record of the collision of trains Thursday night at Rusling's Siding, near Bordentown, on the Amboy division of the Pennsylvania railway. It is known that all bodies have been removed from the wrecked trains. Of the injured nineteen are now in the Trenton hospitals and five in Cooper hospital at Camden. Some of the other more slightly wounded went to their homes. Of the injured at Trenton eight are Italians, and at Camden all five are Italians.

BLACK EYE FOR JOINTISTS.

Hurrell Temperance Bill Signed by Gov. Stanley.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 24.—Gov. Stanley has signed the Hurrell temperance bill which makes places where liquor is sold common nuisances, and allows county officials to confiscate the illegal stock. Annother temperance bill by Hurrell is in the hands of the judiciary committee. It provides that the county attorneys have the power to compel witnesses to testify in cases involving violation of the prohibitory law. The Hurrell measure is the first of the many temperance bills introduced since the Nation crusade began to become a law.

Americans Cheer Cervera.

London, Feb. 24.—The Gibraltar correspondent of the Daily Express says: On the arrival here of the steamer Fuerst Bismarck, now cruising in the Mediterranean with a large party of Americans, Admiral Cervera, who is staying in Gibraltar, went on board to visit a friend, Mr. Arthur Humphrey. He was vociferously cheered by the Americans, all of whom shook him by the hand.

An Expensive Affair.

London, Feb. 24. — In the house of commons, replying to a question on the cost of the war, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, chancellor of the exchequer, said thus far £31,500,000 of bonds had been issued, and the weekly issue was from £1,000,000 to £1,250,000.

Marquis Marries an Actress.

London, Feb. 24. — The marquis of Headfort is reported to have married Miss Rosa Root, a member of the "Florida" company at the Lyric theater. He was a lieutenant in the First Life Guards and sits in the house of lords as Baron Kenlis.

Run Down on a Bridge.

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 24. — Five men were killed on the Pennsylvania railroad bridge at Sharon, Pa. They were on their way to work and were overtaken on the bridge by a fast freight. escape for them was impossible.

Destroyed by Fire.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Clara F. Bass' sixstory building at Dearborne street and Harrison avenue burned. Loss, $60,000. The principal tenants were the Pitman Printing company and the C. M. Robertson Printing company.

WITH Doings In the State Legislature. THE LAWMAKERS

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Feb. 19.—In joint convention yesterday afternoon the legislature listened to eulogies paid to the memory of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis by four members of either house. The orators on behalf of the senate were Lieut. Gov. Smith, Senators Snyder, McGovern and McCarthy, and on behalf of the house, Representatives Roberts, Riley, Pennington and Hurd.

The senate passed Senator Halvorson's anti-cigarette bill by a vote of 26 to 5. The bill prohibits the selling or giving away of cigarettes or cigarette paper, and if passed by the house will go into effect May 1.

The "negotiable instrument act," adopted in a number of states and now before the legislatures of many others, was advanced from general orders to the calendar.

Two measures affecting probate judges were introduced, one lengthening their terms from two to four years, and another applying a graded scale of salaries.

The senate committee on game and game laws reported out the Melleke bill aimed at pot hunters and the marketing of aquatic fowl, with the recommendation that it pass.

Mr. Winston's bill to demand decisions on all district court cases four months after they were submitted was passed.

Senator Greer's bill to place school teachers on a civil service basis was indefinitely postponed after much debate.

In the House.

Mr. Johnson, Hennepin, reported, on behalf of the committee on roads and bridges, a recommendation for indefinite postponement of about forty bills, carrying with them each a small appropriation for the construction or repair of bridges in country districts throughout the state. Adopted.

Representative Jacobson of Lac qui Parle introduced his now famous 4 per cent gross earnings tax bill, the bill, except for the increase of 1 per cent on the gross earnings tax of railroads operated within the state, both on state and interstate business, is substantially the same as the present law.

Two bills carrying with them appropriations aggregating $333,000 to care for the five state normal schools until July 31, 1903, were introduced.

In the House.

St. Paul, Feb. 20.—Mr. Wilder introduced a bill providing for the appointment of a state board of examiners for grain and flax inspectors.

Mr. Johnson of Hennepin introduced a bill for a state court of arbitration of three members for the purpose of settling labor disputes.

Mr. Barteau presented a bill entitled "To prevent combinations from maintaining insurance rates," which has a provision permitting the formation of local boards of underwriters, who may make schedules for the control of their members in their own villages or cities. The schedules must be open to the inspection of the public.

Mr. Pope of Kanabec secured the passage, under suspension of the rules, of a bill repealing a 2-mill tax of local application, made in 1891.

Speaker Dowling's bill to increase the remuneration of county commissioners from $3 to $4 a day was recommended for passage by the committee of the whole.

The committee of the whole recommended for passage the bill of Mr. Gageng of Otter Tail to amend the election law so that a man who moves within a month before election can vote in the precinct where he lived previously. The law previously provided a limit of ten days.

In the Senate.

The calm of the senate was broken when in committee of the whole Senator Wilson asked for recommendation for passage of his bill to permit weekly garnishment of salaries of laboring men, $9 a week being exempt. This bill was framed by the State Grocers' association.

Senator Schaller strongly opposed the measure as a "club to be held weekly over the heads of the laboring men." On roll call the bill was recommended to pass by a vote of 28 to 19. Senator Schaller then made a motion, which prevailed, that the bill be excepted from the report of the committee. Senator Wilson in return demanded a call of the senate. The bill was then recommended to pass by a close vote of 32 to 26.

A bill was introduced by Senator Thompson to provide for disposition of real estate bid in for the state at forfeited tax sale. Redemption is allowed before May 18 by payment of half the judgment. County auditors are to sell the unredeemed property at public sale May 20.

Senator Greer introduced a bill to appropriate $5,000 for distribution of literature among rural schools to establish a course of agriculture.

In the Senate

St. Paul, Feb. 21. — Senator Brower introduced a bill which, if passed, would compel railways to maintain waiting and freight rooms at every station and agents at all points where their revenue is $8,000 a year.

After a long debate the bill to appropriate $12,000 for a tax commission to report a tax bill in two years was passed.

An appropriation bill carrying $42,300 for the public schools of the state that did not receive their legal apportionment last August. because the funds to be distributed were not sufficient, was introduced by Senator Knatvold.

Senator Gausewitz's ox-eye daisy bill was sent to the senate general orders without recommendation. The house wolf bounty bill was recommended to pass.

A new charter measure has been introduced in the senate providing that any village or city where five per cent of the voters at the preceding election petition the council or town authorities, the question of adopting a charter may be determined at a special election.

In the House.

The Dowling bill to increase the per diem of county commissioners in counties not covered by special laws to $4 passed by a vote of 66 to 23.

The Armstrong eight-hour labor bill, intended to cover state work and contract work done for the state was passed by a vote of 66 to 33.

Only two bills were introduced in the house yesterday. One of the bills provides for the uniform payment of grand and petit jurors in all counties in the state. It provides that jurors shall receive a perdiem of $3 and 10 cents per mile for travel both ways between their homes and the courts. The second bill was introduced by Mr. Hinton and provides for the repeal of the $100 personal property exemption law.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, Feb. 22.—In the senate yesterday morning the Hurd bill to place the office of state oil inspector on a salary basis aroused a stormy discussion when it came up on general orders. It was finally left in the hands of the committee on illuminating oils.

Senator Wilson's bill to permit the garnishment of men holding public offices was defeated. Senator Wilson was also unfortunate in having his bill to permit weekly garnishment of salaries of laborers, $9 per week being exempt, defeated.

Among the bills passed were the following: To cure defects in real estate tax judgment sales; to legalize village bonds; repeal of the bill deducting road tax to farmers using broad-tired wagons; increasing state aid to public schools.

Senator Johnson presented a memorial to congress that no Indian reservation lands in Minnesota be sold until a commission can be appointed to investigate and report as to the advisability of using such lands for a national park.

Senator Grindeland introduced a bill to grant a normal school graduate after a three-year course a first grade teacher's certificate.

Senator Baldwin introduced a bill to make counties stand the expense caused by infectious diseases in towns and villages.

The senate then adjourned till Monday evening.

In the House.

The office of state grain inspector will be abolished if a bill introduced in the house by Representative Reilly of Jackson county becomes a law. The bill provides that the duties of the chief grain inspector shall devolve upon the state grain and warehouse commission.

A joint memorial requesting the federal government to erect postoffice buildings for exclusive government use in all second-class cities was introduced by S. D. Peterson and passed.

The bill, which, in ultimate effect, abolishes the office of court commissioner throughout the state, and confers the power upon the judges of probate, was considered in committee of the whole and recommended to pass.

Representative Hickey's bill purposing the lowering of the interest paid by purchasers of school land from 5 per cent to 4 per cent was recommended to pass.

The insurance bill requiring casualty companies to stamp policies as "assessable" or "old line" was passed.

The house adjourned until Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Northwest News

CONFLICT OVER COAL.

Hill's Orders as to the Crow's Nest Output Resented by Canadian Pacific.

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 24. — The smelter companies in Kootenai, B. C., have recently been unable to get coal and coke from the Crow's Nest Pass coal fields, though they had contracts with the company. Recently J. J. Hill of the Great Northern railway got control of the coal company and ordered shipments to the Canadian smelters stopped in order to supply the refineries in Montana and elsewhere in the United States. The Canadian Pacific directors are deeply interested in the British Columbia smelters and have refused to haul any more coal cars from the Crow's Nest Pass field to United States points until the coal company has supplied the smelters in British Columbia according to agreement. In the meantime the British smelters are obliged to shut down for lack of coal and coke.

WANTS CITY PARK.

Suit for a Waterloo Park Valued at Fifty Thousand.

Waterloo, Iowa, Feb. 24. — A sensation was sprung here by an action commenced by J. L. Cooley, brother of B. M. Cooley, who platted the townsite of East Waterloo, to recover title to Lincoln Park, in the heart of the city. The property is valued at $50,000 and has been used by the city since 1868.

SIOUX CITY FIRE.

Loss Sustained by the American Linseed Oil Company.

Sioux City, Iowa, Feb. 24.—Fire at the plant of the American Linseed company here burned a $3,000 building and $10,000 worth of oil cake. The firemen devoted their entire attention to saving tanks of oil, valued at $50,000, close to the fire. The loss is covered by insurance.

New Richmond, Wis., Feb. 24. — A. Stuessey, a brakeman on main line, passenger train No. 6, was killed at Milston. While making a switch he tripped and fell and was run down by the engine of train No. 9.

Elevator Agent Arrested.

Huron, S. D., Feb. 24. — S. B. Law, late agent for the Interstate Elevator company at Hitchcock, was held to bail in the sum of $800 by Judge Cook to answer a charge of embezzlement preferred against him by F. C. Ballard, traveling auditor for the company. The complaint places the shortage at $1,200, but Mr. Law is confident that he will be able to show that he is innocent of the charge.

Beet Sugar in Ontario.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—The Ontario government has introduced its bill to encourage the refining of beet sugar. The sum of $25,000 a year will be set apart for three years. The bonus to refiners will consist of 1-2 cent per pound for the first year and 1-4 cent for the succeeding two years, the refiners to pay farmers $4 per ton for beets.

New Elevator Completed.

Faribault, Minn., Feb. 24.—The Sheffield Milling company completed an elevator at Ellendale with a capacity of 50,000 bushels. This is the first of a line projected between Albert Lea and St. Paul on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern. There will be twelve or fifteen in all. The company already controls forty-seven elevators.

Hard on the Cattle.

Jamestown, N. D., Feb. 24.—The last week or two of cold weather and the snowfall have been hard on cattle in the hills, and some losses are reported in the northwestern part of Stutsman county. The snow has drifted and feed is so short that serious losses are anticipated unless the weather turns milder.

Celestials Under Arrest.

Grafton, N. D., Feb. 24.—The United States officials have discovered three Chinamen who are said to be in this country illegally, and they were arrested on warrants from United States Commissioner Montgomery. The men are said to have been smuggled across the boundary.

Alonzo At It Again.

New York, Feb. 24.—Alonzo J. Whiteman, ex-state senator from Duluth, and Edward Meyers, alias Clark, were held in $1,000 bail each, charged with passing forged checks in Boston. There is a second charge against Whiteman of passing a bogus check on the Hotel Navarre.

New Redwood Falls Elevator.

Redwood Falls, Minn., Feb. 24.—J. A. Englehart, a local grain dealer, will built an elevator this season of 30,000 bushels capacity. The site is that formerly occupied by the elevator of the Atlas company which burned last August. Work will begin early in the spring.

Murray Is Acquitted.

West Superior, Wis., Feb. 24.—It took the jury in the Murray manslaughter case but a very few minutes to decide that the defendant was not guilty of the charge. The boy had confessed to killing Arthur Thomas, whom he took for a deer.

Shot Her Husband.

Algona, Iowa, Feb. 24. —Mrs. Fred Foster, wife of the barber that was shot here about two weeks ago, has confessed that she was the one that induced Robinson to do the shooting in order to secure the life insurance of $5,000. She is now under arrest.

Roads Blocked and Trains Abandoned—Snow Very Deep.

Jamestown, N. D., Feb. 26. — A blizzard has prevailed north of Jamestown and extending into Canada for forty-eight hours. Trains have been abandoned north of Carrington on the Jamestown & Northern and the Cooperstown branch of the Northern Pacific is blocked. Snow in some places is higher than box cars. It is feared ranchmen will lose very heavily.

DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.

Prominent Duluth Young Man's Mysterious Disappearance.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 26. — The disappearance of Robert Perleberg, the agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, aged twenty-two, is causing uneasiness among his relatives. The young man left home on a bicycle two weeks ago to go down town and has not been seen since.

BOY IS ROASTED TO DEATH.

Little Joe Hodigan Falls Into Burning Strawstack at Peterson.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 26. — Little Joe Hodigen was roasted to death at Peterson, in the southwest part of this county. He was playing on the top of a slowly-burning strawstack when the straw caved in and he was precipitated into a furnace from which it was impossible to rescue him.

Black Hills Mica.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 26.—The mica industry of the Southern Black Hills is rapidly assuming considerable importance. Not until the past year has the real value of the mica deposits become known. The Chicago Mica company which has extensive cutting works at Valparaiso, Ind., has bought up all the old mica dumps around the county, buying in all about nine car loads, for which $40 per ton was paid. The company now has three mines of its own and is shipping about five car loads of mica per month. The largest mica blocks ever found in the Black Hills have been taken out by this company from the Daly mine, located two miles northeast of Custer. The Black hills mica is not as a usual thing very clear, but it is free from iron, which makes it of especial value for electrical purposes.

Settlers From Iowa.

Huron, S. D., Feb. 26.—Half a dozen gentlemen are here from Alton, Iowa, and vicinity negotiating for the purchase of 5,000 acres of land on which to establish cattle ranches. They are also buying cattle to graze upon the lands. Two of the party have already purchased 300 head which they are feeding in the northwest part of the county. Several tracts of land have already been secured, and if unable to get the full 5,000 acres in a body they will buy in as close proximity to each other as possible. They expect to complete contracts within the next ten days, when they will return to Iowa, get their settlers, and come back and at once begin erecting houses and stock buildings.

Farmer Is Killed.

Faribault, Minn., Feb. 26.—William Beyer, a prosperous Millersberg farmer, missing several days, was found a few miles from home. He was intoxicated and his horses went over a steep bank, upsetting the wagon and load on Beyer, pinning him down. He laid out several days and was frozen stiff. His team was found tangled in a wire fence, and were so weak from starvation that they could hardly walk.

To Enlarge Its Plant.

Faribault, Minn., Feb. 26.—The Chicago Vehicle company's branch here is discharging some of its men prior to making new financial arrangements to enlarge its business, the experiment having proved highly successful and the ten vehicles now in hand having been completed. BIG COMBINE FIXED

J. P. MORGAN'S GIGANTIC PROJECT IS COMPLETED

New Combination Will Be Called the United States Consolidated Steel Company and Will Have a Total Capitalization of $1,100,000,000—Stocks of the Companies Merged Will Be Taken in at High Figures —All Parties Interested Greatly Pleased Over the Success of the Deal.

New York, Feb. 26—The Herald says: J. P. Morgan has just completed the project by which another and the greatest consolidation of capital is added to the notable list of the last ten years. The steel combination plan was consummated at a conference in his office late Saturday afternoon, and Sunday the subject was the comment of conversation in the corridors of the up-town hotels. An official announcement is expected to-day from the office of J. P. Morgan & Co. to the effect that the Carnegie company, the Federal steel company, the National Tube company, the American Steel and Wire company, the American Tin Plate company, the National Steel company, the American Steel Hoop company and the American Sheet Steel company are to be combined in one concern, which is to issue its stock in return for theirs, the valuation having been determined upon the assets and the earning power of the respective corporations thus merged. This new combination, it is understood, will be called the United States Consolidated Steel company. It will have a total capitalization of $1,100,000,000. Of this $300,000,000 will be 5 per cent general mortgage bonds, $400,000,000 will be 7 per cent stock, and $400,000,000 will be common stock.

The charter of the company, which has been prepared under the special guidance of William Nelson Cromwell, who promoted the National Tube company, will be filed, it is said, at Trenton, N. J., to-day.

Stocks of the companies to be merged will be taken in at high figures, and yesterday afternoon the Waldorf-Astoria became a sort of miniature and subdued stock exchange, where John W. Gates and his friends bid well above market price for the securities of the corporations which the United States Consolidated company is expected to acquire. Legal details of the project have been in the hands of a law committee consisting of William Nelson Cromwell, a director in the National Tube company; Francis Linde Stetson, Mr. Morgan's personal counsel; Judge Elbert H. Garey, president of the Federal Steel company; Max Pam of Chicago, director in and counsel for the American Steel and Wire company, and Victor Morawetz.

These five men represent Mr. Morgan's interests in the matter. They and Mr. Morgan, H. C. Frick and President Charles M. Schwab, of the Carnegie company; Chairman John W. Gates, of the American Steel and Wire company; Judge William H. Moore of Chicago, who has promoted a large number of steel companies, and President E. C. Converse, of the National Tube company, met Saturday in Mr. Morgan's private office and after a prolonged conference, agreed to final details. All of the persons directly interested in the Morgan-Carnegie steel deal seemed greatly pleased last night over the successful termination of their labors.

DEWET A FUGITIVE.

Boer General Fleeing With a Handful of Followers.

London, Feb. 26.—Gen. Dewet is now practically a fugitive. He met a reverse at the hands of Col. Owen, after which the Boer general escaped across the Orange river with a handful of his followers and is fleeing from the British. It is reported from a Boer source at Zerust that Gen. Delarrey has been captured. Gen. Kitchener, in a dispatch dated Middleburg, Feb. 24, reports to the war office as follows:

"Gen. French, who was at Piet Retief Feb. 22, reports that the result of his column sweeping the country to the east is that the Boers are retreating and scattering in disorganized parties, totalling some 5,000 men, in front of him. Amsterdam and Piet Retief have been occupied. Troops are protecting the Swasi frontier. Gen. French will push on, but he is much hampered by continuous heavy rains.

"A summary of the losses inflicted on the enemy Feb. 16 shows that 282 Boers were killed or wounded in action; 56 are prisoners of war; 183 surrendered. One fifteen-pounder, 462 rifles, 160,000 rounds of ammunition, 3,700 horses, 75 mules, 3,000 trek oxen, 18,700 cattle, 155,000 sheep and 1,000 carts were captured. The British casualties were 5 officers and 41 men killed, 4 officers and 108 men wounded. I regret to say that Maj. Howard, a very gallant officer of the Canadian scouts, was killed on Feb. 17.

"Col. Plumer reports that on Feb. 23 Col. Owen captured Dewet's fifteen-pounder, a pompom, some carts full of ammunition and fifty prisoners. We sustained no casualties. The enemy is in full retreat and dispersing. They are being pursued vigorously. Dewet's attempt to invade Cape Colony has evidently completely failed."

Must Shift For Themselves

The Daily Telegraph publishes the following from De Aar, dated Feb. 21: "Mr. Steyn addressed the Boers yesterday and told them they must all shift for themselves, returning to Orange River colony as best they could. He and Gen. Dewet took 300 of the best horses with which to escape.

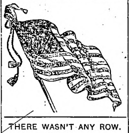
WEDNESDAY, FEB., 27, 1901.



THERE WASN'T ANY ROW.

It Was Simply a Case of Spontaneous Combustion.

He was a very young man, almost too young to be out on the street at that time of the night, 8:30 p. m., and his general appearance indicated that he had been picked up by a cyclone somewhere during his meanderings. He was not utterly demoralized, but there was something in his manner that would lead the close observer to the conclusion that all had not been well with him.

"Gee!" he exclaimed as he spun around the corner and went bump into a policeman.

"Hello," ejaculated that worthy, instinctively grabbing at him; "what's the row?"

"There wasn't any," responded the youth.

"What are you running like that for?" persisted the policeman.

"I've just been up against a case of spontaneous combustion."

"You look too green to burn," chuckled the bluecoat.

"It's on me, just the same. My girl lives around the corner, and I went to see her. I thought it was all"—

"Where does the combustion come in?" interrupted the officer.

"Come out, you mean," corrected the youth.

"Come off!" exclaimed the officer. "Tell me what the row is before I chase you."

"Well, that's what I'm trying to do," pleaded the boy. "The girl's old man and I don't harmonize a little bit, and when he met me at the door he fired me so suddenly that I had vertigo. If you don't call that spontaneous combustion, what the dickens do you call it?"

"Oh, excuse me," apologized the policeman, "you run along home and get into your trundle bed!" and the bluecoat gently wafted the remnant on its way.—Detroit Free Press.

Golf Before a Mirror.

One of the chief teachings in the religion of style is that to attain to orthodoxy it is necessary or at least desirable to practice daily in front of a looking glass so as to make sure that all the motions of the true style are being correctly carried out.

This always appeared to me a very "hard saying" until I had consulted W. G. Grace, John Roberts, C. B. Fry, K. S. Ranjitsinjhi, H. K. Foster, Kraenzlein, E. C. Bredin and other champion of sport.

All the above were unanimous in attributing the high degree of skill to which they have attained in various games and sports to the fact of their having devoted many hours a day from a very early stage of their careers to attitudinizing in front of looking glasses in their bedrooms.—Golf Illustrated.

The Oldest Visiting Card.

The state archives of Venice are said to possess the oldest visiting card of which there is any record, of course leaving aside the probable use of such articles for some thousands of years in China. Giacomo Contarini, professor at the University of Padua, sent the card in question as a curiosity to a Venetian friend, saying that the German students who came to Italy had the elegant and laudable custom of leaving such little cards, with their name and place of origin, at the houses of friends when they called and found them absent. The card referred to bears a coat of arms with the motto, "Espoir me confort," and beneath, "Joannes Westerhof Westphalus scribebat Patavii 4 Martii 1560."—London Tablet.

His Idea of an Alibi.

A talesman who was called in a murder trial in a certain state was asked whether he had any prejudice against an alibi plea on the part of a man accused of crime. The talesman replied that he had not.

"Do you fully understand what is meant by the term alibi?" he was asked.

"I think I do; yes, sir."

"What do you understand by it?"

The talesman reflected a moment and then, with a hesitancy indicative of graveness, replied, "An alibi is when the fellow who did it wasn't there."

"The Blues."

The origin of the term "blues" has been traced to the belief that persons in indigo dyeing establishments are peculiarly subject to melancholy. Another belief is that the expression is derived from the German blau, or lead, as lead by its heaviness has always been held to typify gloom and depression.

A Mean Slap.

"Very well," exclaimed Dr. Quick after his quarrel with the undertaker "I'll make you sorry for this!"

"What are you going to do," retorted the undertaker—"retire from practice?" —Philadelphia Press.

HE WON IN A CANTER.

"LUCKY" BALDWIN MADE HIS JOCKEY RIDE SQUARE.

The Horseman Used an Argument That Made the Crooked Rider's Teeth Chatter While He Got Out All the Speed In the Animal.

In the lobby of a hotel the other evening a number of men were discussing sports and sporting men when the subject of nerve and grit came up. One of the party, a well known Californian, who knew "Lucky" Baldwin in the old days, said:

"Baldwin was about the hardest man to be chiseled out of anything he set his heart on getting that I ever met up with. A whole lot of people tried to put it on him in business and other sort of deals, but none of these ever succeeded in catching 'Lucky' Baldwin sufficiently asleep to make their plans stick.

"Horsemen still talk about a funny game in which Baldwin figured on one of the Chicago race tracks a number of years ago. Baldwin had brought his magnificent string of thoroughbreds to Chicago to make an effort to annex the swell stakes that were then on tap on the tracks in the windy town, and he got them home first or in the money in many of the biggest events. Well, he had one of his finest horses entered in a valuable long distance event, and Baldwin was particularly anxious to win this race, not so much for the purse end of it as for the glory of capturing the stake. His horse just about figured to win, too, and Baldwin intended to 'go down the line' on the animal's chances, not only at the track, but at all of the big poolrooms in the country. He stood to clean up considerably more than $100,000 on the horse if the brute got under the wire first. Baldwin's regular stable jockey was taken sick on the morning of the race, and the old man had to hustle around for another boy to ride his horse in the big event. From another horseman he bought for a big round sum the release of a high grade rider, who was to have taken the mount on a thoroughbred that didn't figure to get near the money in the stake race. Baldwin gave the jockey his instructions as to the way he wanted the horse ridden, and then, when the betting opened, his commissioners dumped Baldwin's money into the ring in such large quantities that the horse became an overwhelming favorite.

"A quarter of an hour before the horses were due to go to the post a well known bookmaker, to whom Baldwin had often exhibited kindness in less prosperous days, ran to where the old man was standing, chewing a straw, in his barn.

"'Baldwin,' said the bookie to the old man, 'there's a job to beat you, and you're going to get beat. They wanted me to go in with 'em, but you've always been on the level with me, and I wouldn't stand for it. The ring has bought up your jock, and your horse is going to be snatched.'

"'Much obliged for telling me that,' replied the old man. 'I'll just make a stab to see that the boy doesn't do any snatching, though.'

"Baldwin borrowed another gun from one of his stable hands (in those days he always carried one of his own about as long as your arm), and with his artillery he strolled over the infield and took up his stand by the fence at the turn into the stretch. He hadn't mentioned to anybody what he was going to do, and the folks who saw the old man making for the stretch turn simply thought that Baldwin wanted to watch the race from that point of view. He did, for that matter, but he happened to have another end in view.

"Well, the horses got away from the post in an even bunch, and then Baldwin's horse went out to make the running. The jockey's idea was to race the horse's head off and then pull him in the stretch, making it appear as if the animal had tired. Baldwin had instructed the jock to play a waiting game and make his bid toward the finish. The horse simply outclassed his company, however, and he didn't show any indications of leg weariness whatever as he rounded the backstretch on the rail a couple of lengths in front of his field. Baldwin could see, however, that the crooked jock was sawing the horse's head off in his effort to take him back to the ruck. When the horses were still a hundred feet from him, Baldwin let out a yell to attract his jockey's attention, and then he flashed his two guns in the sunlight and bawled at the jock:

"'Leggo that horse's head, you monkey devil, and go on and win or I'll shoot you so full of holes that you won't hold molasses!'

"The jock gave one look at those two guns that Baldwin was pointing straight at him. Then he gave Baldwin's horse his head, sat down to ride for all that was in him, and the horse under him cantered in ten lengths to the good on the bit. As long as 'Lucky' Baldwin was on the eastern turf after that no jockey ever tried to yank one of his horses."—Washington Post.

The Right Word.

"Why do you speak of him as a finished artist?"

"Because he told me he was utterly discouraged and was going to quit the profession. If that doesn't show that he's finished, I don't know what does." —Chicago Post.

(Feb 27-4t-Mar 20)

To Romould Sylvester:—

You are hereby notified that on the 11th day of May A. D. 1895 in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgement, which was entered in the District Court in and for the county of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March A. D. 1895 the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county) state of Minnesota, to-wit: SE¼ section 25, town 150, range 42 was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgement, interests and costs, for the sum of Twenty-six dollars and eleven cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the absolute property of the State.

That on the 13th day of April A. D. 1900 the above described real estate was sold by the undersigned County Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor in accordance with section 101 of chapter 11, of the general statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of Sixty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is Sixty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from said 13th day of April A. D. 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 18th day of August A. D. 1900.

During the year 1900, the Modern Woodmen society levied eleven assessments, and the total receipts to its benefit fund were $1,525,217.50. The disbursements aggregated $4,179,364.30, leaving a balance in the society's death fund on January 1, of $345,853.20. On the last assessment levied, December 2, 1900, 525,745 members paid. This was the highest number of members paying during the year on any single assessment.

The special train from Crookston last Saturday evening that carried two coaches of masons and the Crookston band stopped here long enough to allow the band to get out on the platform and play one of their select pieces of music which was very much enjoyed by our townspeople. The band boys were to give a concert at Thief River Falls that night while the masons went up for the purpose of instituting a lodge at that place.

The ability of a housekeeper is never better shown than when her pantry and closets are opened for inspection. When the household reins are in the hands of a practical, clear-headed woman, one glance along the shelves of either closet or pantry will give a definite idea of the general management. There will be a place for everything, and everything will be in its proper place. There will be no overcrowding, but room to take out each article and return it without disturbing anything else. The articles most in use will be in the position most convenient for handling.

Regular Correspondent

The coming inaugural ceremonies will be worth coming miles to see, even by those who believe that the beginning of McKinley's second term marks the entry on new and most dangerous principles of action. For one thing, there will be over 30,000 troops in line, to say nothing of civil organizations. The number of visitors expected is about 130,000 based on the attendance at previous inaugurations and on the number of applications for seats along the line of parade and for tickets to the ball that have already been received. Ample accommodations for the comfort of these visitors, during their average stay of three days, have been secured and no one need fear not being able to get food and shelter at reasonable prices. There is doubt whether all who wish will be able to attend the ball, the demand for tickets having been phenominal. Orders for from ten to fifty are received daily, and such has been the demand that the committee has decided to limit the number of tickets to be sold to 12,000. This is the outside capacity of the Pension Office. It closely approximates the number of tickets sold in 1885, when the largest attendance in the history of the event was present at the inaugural ball of the first Cleveland administrations. On that occasion the approaches to the Pension Office were thronged till late at night, and the swarms of would-be guests were checked at the doors. Hundreds were not admitted until the first rush was over, and those who had come only to see the arrival of the President, who came very early, had left the ballroom.

Chairman Victor E. Lawson of the Peoples Party State Central Committee has called a meeting of the committee to convene at the Merchants Hotel at St. Paul on Friday evening March 1st at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of discussing and taking some action in the matter of the work of party organization. He expresses the hope that every county in the state will be represented. It is believed that some action for a more compact and close organization is necessary before the next State campaign.

An editor who has had considerable experience with springs and Easter Sunday figures it our this way: This will be an early spring, as Easter Sunday comes on April 7th. An early Easter is a sign of an early spring and it is one of the signs that never fails. Do you know why, or do you know how to tell when Easter comes? It is easy if you look up the history and teachings of ancient erudites. According to their teachings Easter is the first Sunday after the first full moon after the sun crosses the equinox on March 21, and the first full moon after that date is April 3, and the first Sunday after April 3, is April 7. Easter Sunday comes this year very early, and consequently an early spring will follow.

ROCKSBURY.

Quite a lot of rock is coming in to the St. Hilaire dam from town of Rocksbury.

Norland's and Engelstad's visited with Chas Wilson last Sunday. A good time was enjoyed.

C. J. Eckwall disposed of his land to McAndress of St. Hilaire for a consideration of $2,000.

Henry Norland with a crew of men has been driving piles at the dam between St. Hilaire and Thief River.

A caucus will be held at Hans Rods residence on Saturday the 2nd day of March at 2 o'clock p. m. for the purpose to put up a ticket for the coming spring election.

The editor that wrote the following is probably the possessor of a new nerves himself, and may have been a school teacher and taught the young ideas how to shoot and knows how it is himself; at any rate he hits the nail squarley on the head: "Before you listen to the children about the fiendishness of the teacher and get all worked up and excited over it is better to reflect a little. Remember your one or half dozen cherubs drive you crazy about all the time, and bear with the teacher who is making for you intelligent men and women of as unpromising material as you were twenty and thirty years ago. Remember that besides your child, who, of course, every one knows is an angel, she has to contend with your neighbor's, and you know full well what a terror he is."

—If you are looking for a good smoke, why call for the "J. B."

It is possible that congress will make no reduction of war revenue taxes this session. The house bill was generally satisfactory, but when it got to the senate that body slashed it here and patched it there until nobody now has a good word for the measure, except, maybe, the brewers and cigar makers, whose interests seem to have been looked after most tenderly by the know-it-alls of the senate. They vote to abolish the army canteen to please the prohibitionists and then vote to abolish or reduce the taxes on beer to please the brewers. There are a lot of awfully foxy fellows in the senate! If the country shall get no relief from the burdens imposed by the war revenue law, it should hold the senate strictly to account for a gross dereliction of duty. It saw its duty, but it refused to do it.—Warren Sheaf.

ST. HILAIRE.

O. C. Knappen, editor of the Crookston Press and Gateway magazine was here a few hours one day last week on business matters and when he got home the "devil" hollered "copy" and he produced the following pen picture of St. Hilaire.

A Press scribe, having been deligent and acquired enough surplus "penga" to buy one first-class passage over Jim Hill's line to St. Hilaire, procured the necessary pasteboard Tuesday morning and boarded conductor Lockman's train which in due time landed him at the hustling village of St. Hilaire in Red Lake county.

St. Hilaire is principally famous for being the home of Harry Ives and Jack Soll, the two heavy weight editors of the Spectator and Julius Pleth the energetic and aggressive land man.

The first thing the traveler is up against upon alighting from the train is a great big sign in varegated colors, and letters so big that "he who runs may read" without any effort, informing the stranger that "Julius Pleth hath bargains in lands"—Verily Pleth believes in hanging his banner on the outer walls. If the stranger remains very long in the city he is sure to find out that Ives & Soll are pretty much in evidence, marked "exhibit A."

Of course, after having your interior department jarred up by your ride over Hill's "rocky road" you will want to find a hotel where you can satisfy the inner man, and naturally you will go to the Markham—we do—and after Landlord McAndress has made you welcome, and you have got your knees under the mahogany of the dining room and successfully stood off the bill of fare, you will probably want to see what there is in St. Hilaire. You will find a city of about 1,000 population and rapidly growing. Besides its agricultural resourses St. Hilaire has the largest saw mill in northwestern Minnesota. The St. Hilaire Lumber Company in their mill, planing mill shops, yard and boom, employ about 300 men cutting and shipping 40 million feet of lumber annually. Many of these men have already built fine homes here and more will undoubtedly follow as the policy of the lumber company is to give employment to men with homes and on their part adhering strictly to the lumber business only.

Besides this she has a splendid water power all developed which could be advantageously used to run a flour mill and other manufacturing industries. There is a growing demand for land in the neighborhood of St. Hilaire and the knowing ones say that there is going to be the biggest rush of land seekers this coming spring ever witnessed and a good share of them will invest near St. Hilaire.

—Do you want to sell your farm? Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

"The Anecdotal Side of Theodore Roosevelt" gives sharp, clear views of the strenuous life of our many-sided Vice-President-Elect in the March Ladies' Home Journal. These anecdotes reveal the characteristics of his remarkable personality, and are freshly told by his closest friends. The witching "Widow and her friends," of Chas Dana Gibson's creation are vivified into stage personages and introduced in a two-act comedy by Marguerite Merington—a Gibson play with Gibson men and women and Gibson illustrations. "The only American girl who ever married a King" recalls the almost forgotten romance of a New England girl who come near to wearing a crown and "The loveliest of all Kentucky Girls" recounts the social triumphs of a Southern beauty. Edward Bok writes on topics of widespread interest, and Helen Watterson Moody discussess "girls who go in forsomething." The fiction feature of the March Journal, "The Author's reading at Bixby Centre," is in Kate Douglas Wiggin's best vein. "A successful country house at Bryn Mawr" and "A Suburban house for $9,500" shows the beauties of good architecture. Music lovers will be delighted with with musical setting of Eugene Field's "Armenian Lullaby," and all women with the showing of feminine fashions, apropos of Easter. By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a copy.

How to Drink Water.

Professor Silkhem says slowly sipping water makes it a very beneficial beverage. The results vary with the temperature and the way it is drunk. Sipping is a powerful stimulant to the circulation, which ordinary drinking is not. That is why the German way of drinking beer is universally regarded as very healthy. Water is liable to be impure; besides it can be very much improved when mixed with the proper proportion of the essence of barley malt and seasoned with hops, in other words made into "Golden Grain Belt" beer. Sip that instead of water and your health will be greatly improved. It is a splendid tonic for tired men and women and should be in every home. Order from your nearest dealer or you can be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit or money refunded Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

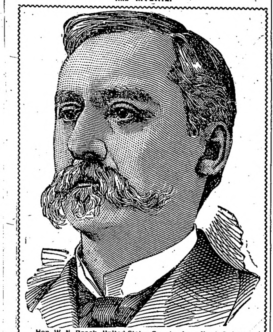
A UNITED STATES SENATOR

SAYS THAT PE-RU-NA, THE CATARRH CURE, GIVES STRENGTH AND APPETITE.



Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota.

Hon. W. N. Roach, United States Senator from North Dakota, personally endorses Peruna, the great catarrh cure and tonic. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company, at Columbus, Ohio, written from Washington, D. C., Senator Roach says:

"Persuaded by a friend I have used Peruna as a tonic, and I am glad to testify that it has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite. I have been advised by friends that it is remarkably efficatious as a cure for the almost universal complaint of catarrh."—W. N. Roach, Larimore, North Dakota.

No other remedy can take the place of Peruna.

Mr. Ed J. Makinson, contractor and builder, 610 Grand Block, Wabash street, St. Paul, Minn., says:

Mr. E. J. Makinson, Contractor and Builder.

"Many doctor bills can be saved by the use of Peruna. I have all my friends taking Peruna, and I have heard nothing but praise from them. Last fall I had a bad cough. I took four bottles of Peruna and it cured me. I am inclined towards consumption, as all my family have died with it. I weight 185 pounds, and I believe it is Peruna that has given me such good health."—J. Makinson.

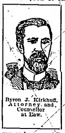
As a result of the changeable climate, catarrh has become one of the most prevalent and universal diseases known to man. Nearly one-third of the people of the United States are afflicted with catarrh in some of its many phases and stages. Add to this the fact that catarrh rapidly tends to become fixed or chronic, also the further fact that it is capable of producing a great many other diseases, and we begin to realize the true nature of this dread disease.

So formidable has catarrh become that in every city or town of any size numerous doctors are to be found who make the treatment of catarrh a specialty. Of course a great deal of good is accomplished in this way, but as yet a comparatively small number of the people can avail themselves of this treatment because of the great expense necessarily attached to it.

To all such people Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, comes as a great boon. Not only is it more successful in curing catarrh than the treatment of the catarrh specialists, but it is within the reach of every person in this land. Peruna can be bought at any drug store, and is a remedy without equal for catarrh in all forms, coughs, colds, bronchitis, consumption, and all climatic diseases of winter.

Peruna is not a guess, nor an experiment; it is an absolute, scientific certainty. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Peruna has no substitutes—no rivals. Insist upon having Peruna. Let no one persuade you that some other remedy will do nearly as well. There is no other systemic remedy for catarrh but Peruna.

Mr. Byron J. Kirkhuff, attorney, counsellor-at-law writes from 691 Gates ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., the following:



Byron J. Kirkhuff, Attorney and Counsellor at Law.

"I have used your Peruna for catarrh and find its curative powers all you recommend. It cured me of a very bad attack and though I suffered for years I feel entirely relieved, and if it will benefit others, I gladly give it my endorsement."—B. J. Kirkhuff.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, president of the Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus Ohio.

TURNING TO LEFT.

Instinct Possessed Both by Man and the Lower Animals.

Instinct has been defined as a sort of inherited knowledge peculiar to the lower animals. That man possesses many analagous traits we all know; but there is one so subtly engrafted in his nature that, under certain circumstances, he is unconsciously made to act in precisely the same manner as the wild animal, and that is in circle-traveling. It is a peculiar instinct which causes wild animals, when pursued for any considerable distance, always to travel in a circle; and man, when lost on the veldt, the prairies, or in the forest, unconsciously becomes controlled by the same instinct and is made to bend his course and travel in a circle, and return to the same place from whence he started. A notable instance of this is mentioned by Mr. Catlin, an American traveler of repute, which occurred while ascending the upper Missouri. He had left the steamer on which he had been sailing up the river, with the object of reaching an Indian village by making a short-cut across a prairie on foot, accompanied only by a single attendant. "In our course," said Mr. Catlin, "we had a prairie of some thirty miles to cross; and the second day, being dark and cloudy, we had no object by which to guide our course, having no compass with me at the time. During the first day the sun shone, and we kept our course very well; but on the next morning, though we started right (laid our course), we no doubt soon began to bend, notwithstanding that we appeared to be progressing in a straight line. There was nothing to be seen about us but short grass, everywhere the same; and in the distance a straight line, the horizon, all around us. Late in the afternoon, and when we were very much fatigued we came upon the very spot, to our surprise, where we had bivouacked the night before, and which we had left on that morning. We had turned to the left and no doubt had traveled all day in a circle. The next day, having the sunshine, we laid (and kept) our course without any difficulty. On arriving at the Sioux village and relating our singular adventure, the Indians laughed at us very heartily, and all the chiefs united in assuring me that whenever a man is lost on the prairies he travels in a circle, and also that he invariably turns to the left; of which singular fact I have become doubly convinced by subsequent proofs similar to the one mentioned.—Chamber's Journal.

IN A TRASH PILE.

Old King George Coin Found in Knoxville, Tenn.

Walter Cheatham, an employe of the city stables, has had the good fortune to find a very old coin of the realm of Great Britain in a trash pile, says the Knoxville Journal and Tribune. The coin is of the same size as an American dollar and weighs just the same. Walter did not realize that the coin might have a big price offered for it, and while showing it to Stable Boss William Kellar, asked that official what he would give for the coin. Mr. Kellar does not know the value of old coins, and offered ten cents. Mr. Cheatham declined and Mr. Kellar proffered twenty-five cents and the bargain was struck. Mr. Kellar decided he would keep the coin as a rare novel keepsake, but now he would probably refuse an offer of $500 for it, pending a thorough investigation of its value to numismatic collectors. On yesterday Mr. Cheatham returned to Mr. Kellar and tried to buy back the coin for a quarter of a dollar. Mr. Kellar refused, but jokingly said he would take $5 for it. Cheatham was about to take him at his word, when Mr. Kellar said he intended to keep the coin. Its owner was then informed that according to a coin collector's manual, King George's dollar was quoted as being worth $1,500. The coin is much worn and the date is effaced, but King George's profile is stamped on the face of the coin, while on the back his majesty is pictured astride a horse in the act of slaying a dragon. "George III., G. B.," are some of the letters easily deciphered around the margin of the coin. The edge is worn smooth.

JAPANESE BABIES.

They Get Good Doses of Nature and Thrive Well.

According to our modern scientific ideas as to the careful treatment of babies, those of Japan would seem to have a hard time, and yet there are no healthier, nor fatter looking little mortals on the face of the earth. We insist on a fixed temperature, on sterilized milk, on all sorts of improved things, while the Japanese baby gets a good dose of nature, and seems to thrive on it. It is dressed and undressed in a frigid temperature in winter, and in summer its tender little eyes are always exposed to the full glare of the sun, as it is carried on its mother's back. It is to be feared, however, that this latter treatment often does affect the eyes of the children though they get over it later in life. At Nagasaki, amongst the women coalers who coal the ship, you may see many with babies on their backs. The mothers work all day in the rain, or in the sun, or the snow, and there baby sleeps, indifferent to everything, the top of its head alone visible, while the movements of the mother do not seem in the least hindered, and she accomplishes as much work as the men. It seems as if the babies of this class were born stoics!—Anna Northend Benjamin in San Francisco Bulletin.

Singer Stops Priest's Sermon.

Sig. Brignoli once agreed to sing a solo at St. Agnes' church, in New York. He arrived late, and the sermon had commenced, but Brignoli, unabashed, leaned over the choir railing and tried to attract the attention of the preacher by shaking his head and gesticulating wildly. At last he yelled out in a voice that reached every corner of the church: "Me ready for ze sing. Stoppe ze preach! Stoppe ze preach!" And the priest actually cut the sermon short in order to accommodate the impatient tenor, whose voice now rang out with such fervor as to thrill the worshipers and justify the sacrifice.

Simplicity.

There is still now and then a man simple enough to go gunning for an office without a barrel.—Detroit Journal.

The Trust Problem.

To a thoughtful mind, the trust problem is one of serious import. It must be firmly grappled with, for it creeps upon society before you are aware of its existence, in this respect much resembling the various disorders which attack the stomach, such as constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure all such ailments, and prevent la grippe, malarial fever and ague. Be sure to give it a trial.

"Man is as old as he feels, and Woman as old as she looks."

Dr. Greene's Nervura

Makes Health and Beauty for Women.

Remember! Not Age, but Disease, Weakness and Ill Health Make Women Look Old!

You cannot look your best unless you feel your best—that is, unless you feel well, strong, vigorous, with pure blood, strong and steady nerves.

If you have no appetite, poor digestion, are bilious and constipated, your skin will be dark, sallow, pimply, with unhealthy pallor.

If you are sleepless, nervous, irritable, despondent, with nerves all on edge, feel as if you could fly, and are startled at every sound,—these nervous troubles will certainly line your face with wrinkles like age, make you look haggard, hollow-eyed, take the lustre from your eyes and the elastic spring from your step.

If you suffer from female troubles, the dragging pain, the aching head, the tired limbs, the utter weakness, prostration and misery will turn youth to old age unless cured at once.

Beauty Means Good Health, and Good Health Always Means Beauty for Women.

DR. GREENE'S NERVURA BLOOD AND NERVE REMEDY

Always Makes Good Looks Because It Always Makes Good Health.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will make you look and feel young. It will restore your energies, vivacity and enjoyment of life. It will make rosy cheeks, bright eyes, and fine complexion. It will give a rounded form, the grace and elasticity of perfect womanhood, and the kind of youth that is not measured by years, and which ought to last till past fifty. It is a veritable fountain of youth for weak, fading and despondent women.

"Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured That Dark and Sallow Look."

Mrs. William Bartels,
239 East 87th St.,
New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained in flesh, and am like a different person."

"My Face Broke Out with Pimples, but Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Me."

Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, of 236 Hartwell's Ave.,
Providence, R. I., says:

"My face broke out with pimples, and I was almost giving up in despair when I got Dr. Greene's Nervura. Now I am well and strong, thanks to this wonderful remedy."

Take Dr. Greene's Nervura

For Your Health, Your Strength, Your Beauty.

Beauty of face, of form and feature belong only to good health. It is possible to every woman who takes the matter in hand intelligently. Use the wonderful restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura, and get advice from Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in these matters. He will tell you why all this is so, and show you how to avoid the stumbling blocks that bar woman's way to happiness. You may consult Dr. Greene without cost by calling or writing to him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Don't throw away your health and beauty. Write to Dr. Greene to-day.

Sour Stomach?

Back up a sewer, and you poison the whole neighborhood. Clog up liver and bowels, and your stomach is full of undigested food, which sours and ferments, like garbage in a swill-barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, headache, furred tongue, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. CASCARETS quietly, positively stop fermentation in the stomach, make the liver lively, tone up the bowels, set the whole machinery going and keep it in order.

Don't hesitate! Take CASCARETS to-day and be saved from suffering!

"After I was induced to try CASCARETS, I will never be without them in the house. My liver was in a very bad shape, and my head ached and I had stomach trouble. Now, since taking Cascarets, I feel fine. My wife has also used them with beneficial results for sour stomach."

A GIRL OF SPIRIT.

Attorney General Griggs Ably Assisted by His Daughter.

In all Washington it would be impossible to find a brighter, more cheerful household than that of the judicial head of our government. Attorney General Griggs, like most New Jerseymen, is very domestic in his tastes and likes best to get away from his official cares and worries and seclude himself in his own home. His household consists of eight—himself, his wife, who is his second, his two sons and his four daughters.

Secretary Griggs' four daughters range from Helen, the eldest, a remarkably handsome girl of 21, to Baby Elizabeth, about 5 years of age. They are fond of society, but are very far from being mere butterflies. Miss Helen Griggs is a young woman of the most artistic tastes, which have been carefully cultivated, although she is not a college graduate. Some time ago, to the surprise and amusement of her friends, she took up the study of stenography, in which she speedily became proficient. At the same time she acquired a knowledge of business.

Miss Griggs has turned her accomplishments to good account, for she is her father's "right hand man." She is the invariable companion of her learned parent, who frequently asks her opinion on vexed points and often accepts her suggestions.

BARRIE AND HIS NEW BOOK.

Many and Great Successes of the Brilliant Scotch Author.

James Matthew Barrie, the Scotch author who has delighted so many thousands of Americans with his stories of Scottish life as well as by his dramatized novel, "The Little Minister," has just issued another book. "Tommy and Grizel," his latest work, has been running for some months in an American magazine and has just been issued in book form. It is the literary sensation of the hour. In it the delightful Scotchman continues the adventures of "Sentimental Tommy," and it promises to become as great a favorite with Americans as the former work.

JAMES MATTHEW BARRIE.

Mr. Barrie is a man of 40 and was born among the Scottish scenes which he depicts so well. Kirriemuir, in Forfarshire, is the original of the well beloved town of Thrums and the birthplace of the novelist. There and in the ancient town of Dumfries Barrie obtained his education until he went up to Edinburgh. During his university days and even at an earlier period his pen was kept busy, and after his graduation in 1882 he became a journalist. While writing for the press he gained the experiences described so well in "When a Man's Single."

The maelstrom of London soon sucked him in, as it does almost every author and journalist of note in Britain. Barrie's first book, "Better Dead," which appeared in 1887, attracted little attention, but "Auld Licht Idylls" and "When a Man's Single" in 1888 gained quick recognition. His other works, "My Lady Nicotine," a most delightful volume, and "The Little Minister," too well known to need comment, established his reputation on a firm footing.

A REPENTANT SINNER.

By Count Leo Tolstoi.

Explanation of the cause of Count Leo Tolstoi's excommunication from the Russian church is found by his friends in his latest story entitled "A Repentant Sinner." This story was first published in the Novoe Vremya, St. Petersburg, and such was its unusual nature that it immediately involved all the doctrinaires in heated discussion. Following is a translation of the story:

"There once dwelt on the earth a man 66 years old. He had lived his entire life without virtue and without repentance, and this man became sick, and still he did not repent. And when death approached and his last hour had come he prayed.

"'Lord, as thou didst pardon the thief on the cross, pardon me.'

"After he had spoken he gave up the ghost, and his spirit, beloved of God, had faith in the mercy of the Creator and soared to the threshold of paradise. And the sinner knocked suppliantly for entrance into heaven. From behind the gate came a voice, saying:

"'Who knocks at the gate of paradise? How did he live on earth?'

"The voice of the judge replied, enumerating all the sins of the man. There was not one virtue to his credit. And the voice from behind the gate said:

"'Sinners cannot enter the portals of heaven. Depart!'

"But the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am Peter, the apostle.'

"And the sinner said: 'Have pity on me, Peter. Remember the weakness of men and the great heart of God. Were you not a disciple of Christ? Was it not you who received the doctrines from his lips? You have had the example of his life. Oh, remember! He was in trouble and asked you three times not to sleep, but to pray, and you slept because your eyelids were heavy with sleep, and thrice he came and found you asleep. Even so have I done. Recall also that you renounced him three times before Caiaphas after promising him thrice never to deny him. This also have I done. You will not keep me out of heaven, will you?'

"And the voice died away behind the gates of paradise, and at the same instant the sinner ceased knocking, for the gate of heaven opened. But another voice was heard from behind an inner door, which demanded:

"'Who is this man, and how did he live on earth?'

"Once more the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating all the sins of the man, and there was not a single meritorious action to his credit, and the voice replied from behind the inner door:

"'Depart. So ignoble a sinner cannot live among us in paradise.'

"And the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, nor do I know thy name.'

"'I am the royal prophet David.'

"The sinner did not despair. He did not recede, but said:

"'Have pity on me, King David. Remember the weakness of man and the large heart of God. God loved you He gave you a place above other men. You had everything—royalty, glory, gold, favorites and children. But from the infinite height of your position you saw the wife of a poor man. Sin surrounded you. You yielded to temptation, and you took the wife of Uri and delivered her husband to the avenging sword of the Ammonites. You, the king, took from the poor man his last ewe. Even so have I done. And remember how you repentantly said, "I remember my sins, and I repent of them." Even so have I done, and surely you will not bar the door of heaven for me.'

"And the voice died away from behind the inner door of heaven. At that moment the sinner ceased knocking, for the door was opened half way. Then a third voice came from behind the door and said:

"'Who is this man and how did he live on the earth?'

"And for the third time the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating the man's sins without recounting a single virtue, and the voice replied:

"'Get thee hence! Such sinners cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.'

"And the man said, 'I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am John the Evangelist, the favorite disciple of Christ.'

"At that the sinner rejoiced and said: 'Now they surely cannot keep me out. Peter and David let me enter because they knew the weakness of human nature and the great heart of God. You, John, will surely let me enter, because you are filled with love. Was it not you, O John the Evangelist, who exclaimed in your lifetime, "God is love, and who does not love cannot know God?" Was it not you who, in your weakness, but repentance, exclaimed, "Brothers, love ye one another?" How will you then refuse me; how will you deny me entrance? Either renounce what you have said or love me and open for me the inner door of heaven.'

"And the door opened wide, and John the Evangelist embraced the sinner and allowed him to enter the kingdom of heaven."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Rich Uncle.

Old Lawyer—How'd I get my start? Well, shortly after I was called to the bar a rich uncle died, and I came into possession of a cool hundred thousand.

Young Lawyer (in surprise)—But I never knew you had a rich uncle!

CARLISTS BOB UP AGAIN

The Revolution Which Ever Haunts Poor Spain.

PERSISTENCE OF THE PRETENDER.

Origin of the Claim That Keeps the Iberian Kingdom in a Turmoil—The Salic Law and How It Was Originally Broken.

After Spain had received its whipping at the hands of Uncle Sam, it seemed that the unhappy kingdom was about to settle down to a condition of peace. With their vexatious colonial problems solved in so summary a manner, nothing remained for the volatile Iberians to raise a fuss about but their internal affairs, and this they have proceeded to do. That long standing and ever present menace to Spanish peace, Carlism, or the dispute about the throne, has again raised its ugly head, if indeed it could ever have been said to have been scotched, and there is every chance of a general upheaval.

DON CARLOS.

Most Americans know that there is some dispute about the Spanish throne, but few can give its grounds. The main cause of the trouble is the Salic law, which is very ancient and which declares that the throne may not descend to or through a woman. This law was established in Spain by Philip V, who died in 1746. He declared that no woman could reign in Spain while there lived a male descendant of Philip IV. This law worked fairly well without any serious dispute as to its authority for about a century. Ferdinand VII held the throne of Spain under Napoleon from 1813 until 1815, and then in his own right. Like most Spanish monarchs he was a weakling and was completely under the domination of his energetic fourth wife, Queen Maria Christina, daughter of Francis, king of the two Sicilies. This queen was a handsome, energetic, ambitious, unprincipled woman.

Ferdinand VII and Maria Christina had two daughters, who by the Salic law were barred from the throne. Had the royal pair possessed a son much misery and bloodshed would have been spared to their unhappy kingdom. Queen Maria was not satisfied, therefore, with the law, and under her influence the king in 1830 ordered it set aside. This action was vigorously resisted by the Bourbons, to which family the king belonged and who were jealous of the influence of the queen. After juggling with the law for some time Ferdinand settled the question as far as he was concerned by dying in 1833. Thereupon his elder daughter, Queen Isabella II, became queen under the regency of her mother, for she was only 3 years of age. Isabella's claim to the throne was disputed under the troublesome law by the brother of the late king, Don Carlos I. The dispute culminated in a civil war, which was settled for a time by the defeat of the Carlists in 1840. Queen Isabella's reign was disturbed by many revolutions, coups d'etat and changes of constitution, and in 1868 her outraged subjects, alienated by the flagrancy of her private life, deposed her. She is still living in Paris.

WIFE OF DON CARLOS.

From 1868 to 1874 the state of Spain was pitiable. The country was torn by internal revolution, dissension and revolt by its colonies. A republic was tried, but it proved a failure, and the monarchy was restored in 1875 under Alfonso XII, father of the present king. Alfonso died in November, 1885, six months before the birth of the present king, Alfonso XIII. In the interim the throne was occupied by the Infanta Maria Mercedes, the elder sister of the little king. The wife of Alfonso XII, Maria Christina, an Austrian princess by birth, acted as queen regent for both her children.

Don Carlos I, who was defeated in 1840, abdicated in favor of his son, Don Carlos II, in 1845. The second pretender to the throne renewed the quarrel in 1848 without success, although his followers made a stubborn fight. The Carlist strength lay principally in the north of Spain, in Catalonia and among the Pyrenees, as it still does. The second Don Carlos died in 1861, and his claims descended to his son, Don Juan. The latter in 1868 abdicated in favor of his own son, the present Don Carlos and the third of the name. He also has a son called Don Jaime, or James, to continue the fight that has so long torn the distressed country. There was fighting in the Carlos interest all the time, especially between 1873 and 1878. Since then there has been a continual series of small risings and threatened revolutions.

Don Carlos II, the present pretender to the throne and the man in whose interest the present uprisings are taking place, is variously described. By his followers, and he has many in Europe, he receives the highest meed of praise, for he is said by them to be a kindly, knightly personage. They assert, and it cannot be gainsaid if the Salic law be admitted to hold, that he is deprived of his rightful heritage, the throne of Spain. He has also, besides his pretensions to the Spanish throne, a very good claim to that of France, for he is the head of the ancient house of Bourbon. The pretender, who calls himself the Duke of Madrid, is tall, dark and of commanding presence. He is now 52 years of age.

By his enemies Don Carlos is denounced for meanness and love of money. During his early years he was quite poor, and some of his acts in obtaining money to carry on his cause were scarcely such as to commend him to his desperately proud countrymen. His wife, by whom he had four daughters and one son, was a French princess of a younger branch of the house of Bourbon and so related to her husband. She died in 1893. In 1897 he married a daughter of the princely French house of De Rohan, and his enemies say that he did so for her money. It is certain that without it he could not prosecute his cause. He is accused of being an ingrate and a libertine, though of late years he has been much quieter than formerly. He does not, of course, reside in Spain.

DON JAIME.

It has been reported several times that Don Carlos, following the example set by his grandfather and father, had abdicated in favor of his son. The latter is now about 30 years of age and quite rich through inheritance. He is blond haired, full faced and middle sized and was educated in England and Austria. Don Jaime received a military education and is said to be very popular in Spain. Undoubtedly he and the cause of which he is the representative and possible head form the most serious menace to the welfare and peace of Spain.

Society at Its Best.

Mrs. Ronald Stuart is a fair and prominent member of the society circles of Gotham. She does not, however, allow her social duties to distract her from the calls of humanity, and her generous purse is open to all worthy causes. At the recent bazaar held in the Waldorf-Astoria for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the Galveston disaster she was one of the most prominent workers. The raising of the large sum of money collected was largely due to her efforts in the cause.

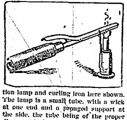
THE HOUSEHOLD.

Women and Bric-a-brac—Self-Heating Hair Curler—Salted Almonds.

"There are no people on the face of the earth who litter up the rooms of their homes with so much useless and consequently bad furnishing as do the Americans," writes Edward Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal. "The curse of the American home today is useless bric-a-brac. A room in which we feel that we can freely breathe is so rare that we are instinctively surprised when we see one. It is the exception rather than the rule that we find a restful room. As a matter of fact, to this common error of overfurnishing so many of our homes are largely due many of the nervous breakdowns of our women. The average American woman is a perfect slave to the useless rubbish which she has in her rooms. This rubbish, of a costly nature where plenty exists and of a cheap and tawdry character in homes of moderate incomes, is making housekeeping a nerve racking burden. A serious phase of this furnishing is that hundreds of women believe these gimcracks ornament their rooms. They refuse to believe that useless ornamentation always disfigures and never ornaments. Simplicity is the only thing that ornaments. It does more; it dignifies. The most artistic rooms are made not by what is in them, but by what has been left out of them. One can never quarrel with simplicity, and nothing goes to make for perfect good taste so surely as a simple effect. A tasteful effect is generally reached by what has been left undone. And that is the lesson most needed in America today—not what we can put into a room, but what we can leave out of it."

Self Heating Hair Curler.

A flame to heat the hair curler is not always at hand, especially when traveling, and rather than ask for a light the hair is often allowed to remain in a disheveled state when a few minutes' work would greatly add to the neat appearance of the wearer. With the idea of providing an apparatus which will be ready for use in an instant Albert C. Moore has designed the combination lamp and curling iron here shown. The lamp is a small tube, with a wick at one end and a pronged support at the side, the tube being of the proper diameter to fit snugly inside the end of the handle, being held in place by a snap spring. The reservoir is provided with a screw cap to prevent leakage or evaporation of the alcohol or other liquid, and the supporting fork turns in against the side of the reservoir when not in use. To heat the iron the lamp is removed from the handle and ignited, when the fork is turned outward and the iron rested in the prongs until it becomes sufficiently heated for use.



Almonds as an Appetizer.

Salted almonds still hold the place of honor as an appetizer to serve at dinner with the cheese and crackers or at an afternoon tea. Purchased of first class confectioners they may be classed as luxuries. Prepared at home—and they are very little trouble—they are not at all expensive. Select the best Jordan almonds. These are not the expensive paper skinned nut, but a hard shelled sweet almond that retails at 25 cents per pound in the streets. Crack and blanch by pouring boiling water over them. Let them stand covered for five minutes, then rub off the skins of the nuts one by one with the finger and thumb. This is easily done if the water was actually boiling. Dry the blanched nuts with a coarse towel, then set in the warming oven until all the moisture is absorbed. Measure and allow two tablespoonfuls of the best olive oil or the same amount of melted butter to each pint. Toss the nuts in this until evenly and thoroughly coated and set back in the warming oven for a half hour or until the oil is partly absorbed. Spread the almonds on a dripping pan and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of fine salt, taking pains to distribute it evenly. Set in a moderately hot oven until crisp and slightly colored, stirring frequently. If temperature is right, it will not take over 10 or 12 minutes.

To Preserve Stale Bread.

When stale bread has become so hard that it cannot be eaten, it should be grated into a coarse powder and put into jars the same as those used for preserves. If kept well covered from the air and in a dry place, it will keep for a considerable time without becoming moldy or bad. It is not always convenient to obtain stale bread just when one wants it, and these powdered crumbs are very handy to have on such occasions as when a bread pudding is being made, when desired for fowl dressings or in forming meat balls, fish croquettes, etc.

Spiced Grapes.

A good recipe for spiced grapes is as follows: Put five pounds of grapes into a preserving kettle with four pounds of brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, a little pepper and one tablespoonful each of cloves and allspice. Place the kettle where it will be subject to a moderate heat and cook slowly for three or four hours.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

The Duke Got the Cigar—Gave Way to His Impulse—A Novel Foot Warmer.

Some months ago W. H. Knowles, registrar of births and deaths, Great Harwood, England, addressed an envelope as follows:

"To the Officer Who Hoists the Union Jack (when that happy event takes place), Pretoria, South Africa."

Mr. Knowles inclosed a cigar and a note, "Thanks; have a cigar."

As the war was so protracted he feared the envelope and contents had fallen into the hands of the Boers and that one of them had enjoyed a good cigar at his expense. The other day, however, he received the following autograph letter from the Duke of Westminster, dated Government House, Pretoria, June 7:

> Dear Sir—I write to say that I was the officer who hoisted the union jack over Pretoria, in consequence of which I received an excellent cigar, which Lord Roberts gave to me, having been forwarded by you. I thank you both for the cigar and congratulations and remain, yours truly,

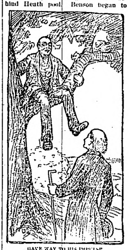
Gave Way to His Impulse.

When Dr. Temple, the present primate, was head master of Rugby school, he paid a visit to Dr. Benson, his predecessor in the see of Canterbury, who was at that time the master of Wellington college, says a London periodical. One afternoon the two went for a stroll through the woods behind Heath pool. Benson began to point out to his companion the sylvan beauties of the place, calling his special attention to a magnificent beech tree. For awhile Temple admired it in silence, then suddenly crying:



GAVE WAY TO HIS IMPULSE.

"I can't resist the temptation. Look out!" made a rush for the tree and ere his amazed friend could quite grasp the situation had scrambled up the trunk and seated himself among the branches.

Then the two future archbishops, looking at each other, broke into a burst of schoolboy merriment.

Hot Coffee as a Foot Warmer.

An amusing story is told in connection with a German baker, M. von Cohn, who has just died in Berlin at the age of 87. Years ago he was honored by the friendship of several members of the German royal family, and a tale is told of how on one occasion he managed by his wits to do the Empress Augusta a service.

On an icy day in winter the empress was passing by train through Dessau, and Von Cohn was at the station to pay his duty to the sovereign lady. At that time the arrangements for heating the imperial carriage were of the most primitive order, and the empress complained of the cold, the hot water supply on board the train having given out entirely. Nor was there any hot water to be had at the Dessau station. But Cohn, who was a man of resource, was not to be beaten, bought up the entire supply of hot coffee in the station restaurant and caused the warming tins in the imperial carriage to be filled therewith. Thus the German empress sped away with the unique distinction of having her feet warmed by means of a plentiful supply of hot coffee.

A Mummied Cat.

Miss Agnes Repplier, who is a prominent figure in Philadelphia's coterie of literary people, has a passion for cats. But, strange to say, the deader they are the better she likes them. She has 39 altogether, and there isn't a live one in the lot. They are mostly plaster casts and images that have been presented to her by friends. Even on her doorplate outside her apartments is a framed picture of a cat. The greatest of all is Rameses. Rameses was once a real live cat in Egypt centuries ago. He's a mummy now and is Miss Repplier's choicest treasure. When she went abroad a short time ago in the excitement of getting off Rameses was left behind. Now, this was a catastrophe, and no pun is intended either. Miss Repplier never goes anywhere without Rameses, and when she found that he had been left behind she was much concerned. As soon as she reached her port of destination she cabled to Philadelphia for Rameses. The mummy was accordingly packed securely and shipped to her.—Philadelphia Record.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,
County of Red Lake—ss.

I, Adam Zeh, County Auditor in and for said county of Red Lake, in the state of Minnesota, do solemnly swear that the above and foregoing list of real estate taxes and penalties for the year 1899, delinquent and unpaid on the first Monday in January, 1901, in said county and state, consisting of pages numbered from 1 to 287 both inclusive, is true and correct to the best of my knowledge and belief.

(Signed) ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor of Red Lake County, Minn.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 10th day of January, A. D. 1901.

JOSEPH PERRAULT,
Clerk of the District Court, Red Lake County, Minn.
[SEAL]

DISTRICT COURT,
Red Lake County, Minn.

Filed this 10th day of January, 1901.

JOSEPH PERRAULT,
Clerk District Court.

STATE OF MINNESOTA,

County of Red Lake—ss

I, Adam Zeh, Auditor of said County, do hereby certify that the foregoing copy of the list of real estate taxes delinquent on the first Monday in January, A. D. 1901, hereto attached, was this day received from the Clerk of the District Court in and for said County of Red Lake.

Witness my hand and official seal this 4th day of February, A. D. 1901.

ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor, Red Lake County, Minn.

Steamed Nut Pudding.

To half a cup of granulated sugar add one gill of melted butter. When well blended, add two beaten eggs and one cup of milk. Mix two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cups of flour and add to the other ingredients. Sprinkle a saltspoonful of salt over 1½ cups of any kind of nut meats broken into bits and add them to the mixture. Butter a mold or pudding dish, turn the mixture in and steam three hours. Serve with wine sauce.

Popcorn Candy.

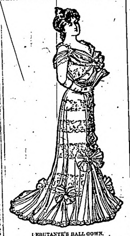
Having popped the corn nicely, salt it and sift it through the fingers, that the extra salt and the unpopped corn may escape. Have ready some candy, made by cooking together one pound of molasses, one-half pound brown sugar, one tablespoonful of vinegar and from 1½ to 2 ounces of fresh butter. When this is all but ready, stir into it as much of the popcorn as it will take up; then turn it out on to buttered or oiled dishes or shape it into balls.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

IN EVENING GOWNS, LUXURIOUS WRAPS AND SMALL ACCESSORIES.

Girl's Ball Gown—Three-quarter Sealskin Coat and Eton Jacket In Broadtail—Crepe de Chine Popular. A Glory of Gold.

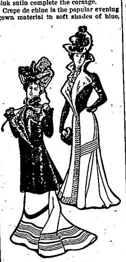
The popularity of the plain short coat in the midst of so much that is ornate and heavily garnished is in part accounted for by the fact that it accommodates the fur collarettes and boas nicely, and these are quickly thrown off when one enters a warm room and the jacket is thrown open, whereas the removal and redonning of a large fur trimmed wrap are affairs of which one thinks twice. However, the truly luxurious woman must have her heavy furs, and a better example of all that is delicious in this line would be far to seek than a three-quarter sealskin coat of today; for instance, one with the new rolled collar, lined with sable, immense soft revers of sable, scalloped bell shaped sleeves and handsome large tortoise shell buttons. Less imposing but equally stylish is an Eton jacket of black broadtail with great revers and collar of white broadtail and broadtail muff to match.



DEBUTANTE'S BALL GOWN.

It is to evening styles that the magic fashion draws us most irresistibly just at this season, for among all vanity's visions are no greater dreams of delight than the confections for the fair young girls whose debut society is now celebrating. One of these appears in the cut—a fascinating first ball gown of net with choux of illusion and pale pink wild roses with dark glossy foliage and garlands of flowers serving as epaulets, while the actual sleeves are in one with the draped bertha. A girdle and ribbon of pale pink satin complete the corsage.

Crepe de chine is the popular evening gown material in soft shades of blue, pink, cream, etc., and very charming is a confection of pale blue crape and silver embroidery.



FASHIONABLE FURS.

Although it smacks of repetition to mention gold, such mention is imperative, for gold continues to be the glory of the toilet.

One seam in front and one in the middle of the back mark the newest skirt model.

A welcome revival reported is that of "pinked out" taffeta ruchings among stylish trimmings for gowns in gauze fabrics.

Vegetables Rechauffes.

Cold vegetables, such as peas, beans, asparagus, Brussels sprouts, cauliflowers, etc., can all be warmed up and served a la maitre d'hotel by tossing them in butter over a moderate fire, with a sprinkling of chopped parsley, pepper and salt and the squeeze of a lemon. Boiled potatoes are best served cut in slices and fried as pommes de terre sautees.

Scalloped Turkey.

One of the ways to manage the "left over" portions of the noble bird now in season is as follows: In a buttered baking dish, lined with crumbs, put alternate layers of half inch bits of cold turkey, stuffing and gravy (or white sauce and crumbs, if there be no stuffing and gravy), cover with crumbs and bake 15 minutes.

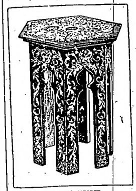
ART OF PYROGRAPHY

A VERSATILE DECORATION CAPABLE OF MANY APPLICATIONS.

The Necessary Instruments, Including Platinum Points, and How to Use Them—Preliminary Practice. Taboret In Poker Work.

The variety of uses to which pyrography may be applied is endless. It lends itself especially to the broad treatment of large surfaces, but it can also be used in the adornment of the most dainty articles by delicate lines and soft shadings, says a Good Housekeeping writer in preface to the following practical instructions:

The iron style of earlier days has been replaced by a point of platinum. Platinum is used for poker work, because it is the only metal that will absorb the gas of the naphtha by which the supply of heat is sustained. The complete outfit consists of platinum points, a cork covered handle, a length of rubber tubing, a naphtha bottle provided with connections for tubing, a spirit lamp and a rubber bulb with tubing attached. It is also necessary to have some alcohol and naphtha. Be sure to have the naphtha bottle tightly corked and never open it in a room where there is a light or the smallest spark of fire, as it is very inflammable. The alcohol also should be handled with care. To do a variety of poker work an outfit of several points is necessary, but it is well for the beginner to have at least two, as illustrated in Figs. c and d. The first of these, c, is the more important, as with it both outlining and shading can be done, but the second is better for backgrounds.

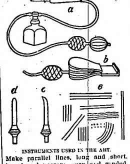


DECORATED TABORET.

Before attempting a design the beginner should practice on a smooth pine board or a piece of whitewood, which is better, as the finer grain makes practice easier. To light the point put some cotton wool in the naphtha bottle and fill the bottle about one-third full of naphtha. Connect the bottle with the cork handle and the bulb by the rubber tubing, hold the point in the flame of the spirit lamp until it is thoroughly heated and blow gently by pressing the bulb until the point becomes redhot. The point may now be withdrawn from the flame, and its heat can be kept up and regulated by the pressure on the bulb, which forces the vapor of the naphtha through the tubing into the point, where it burns. The lamp may now be extinguished. The object of the cotton wool in the bottle is to give more evaporating surface. Fig. a shows the apparatus. Sometimes a foot bellows (Fig. b) is used instead of the hand bellows. This is less tiresome and gives the operator both hands for work.

Now grasp the cork handle, not too near the hot point, and try to make true, even lines on the pine board. This at first is very difficult, for an instant's delay in the touch of the point will make a hole or deep dot in the wood, and the line will resemble a smudge. To overcome this first trouble bring the point upon the board with a sweep of the hand and lift it off in the same way. Keep this sweep as even and light as possible until you have a firm, clean line. The beginner will succeed more easily if the point is not too hot.

Try different lines as you would learn to shade with a lead pencil.



INSTRUMENTS USED IN THE ART.

Make parallel lines, long and short, broad and narrow, even and graded, straight and curved, as shown in Fig. e.

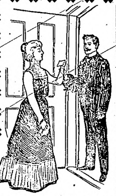
Designs are to be used in the following manner: Draw them on the wood and burn in firmly and lightly. A quick mode is to trace and design on a piece of tracing paper and then transfer it to the wood by means of impression paper, then burn as described.

Opera cloaks are now almost smothered in chiffon, lisse or mousseline de sole. Ermine and sable mink are the most fashionable furs, and mink is quite charming on strawberry and pastel blues or heliotrope.

A CAREER ....BY.... ACCIDENT

By HOWARD FIELDING.

Copyright, 1900,
By CHARLES W. HOOKE.



Jane Lestrell is a name that one hears with increasing frequency. The lady has achieved something that may almost be called fame, though she is not yet 24.

I happen to know that her success is due to a singular chance, and as the revelation of this fact may please the envious and will not worry Jane in the least it is here set forth.

At the age of 20, when Jane found that she would have to make a living, she turned naturally to literature. So many people do! Jane had written (uncompleted) romances in blank books with black covers and had once sold a poem to a comic weekly for the generous sum of $2. She felt that she had the gift.

It chanced that she enjoyed the acquaintance of an estimable old maid—Miss Prudence Whistler—who earned $20 a week as a reader of manuscripts for a publishing firm, and with this lady she found a haven when dependence upon her dead father's relatives became no longer tolerable.

Miss Whistler occupied quaint apartments in a building that harbored a salesroom for secondhand pianos on the ground floor and a strange collection of artistic people—most of them damaged by wear, like the pianos—in the rooms above.

Her friend was away all the day, and Jane sat alone with the muses. Permit me to say, out of the fullness of my heart, that these mythical ladies are very distressing company. Moreover, Prudence Whistler's little parlor was furnished in a style to wear upon the spirits of youth. The chairs and the sofa had come from the ancestral home. They were stiff and straight and upholstered in haircloth. The center table was a strange thing, long and black. Jane thought it must have served an undertaker as a rest for coffins. The pictures were not bad, being mostly details reproduced from famous paintings—faces and figures expressing woe.

The condition of Jane's nerves after a month in this place was such that if any one who suddenly dropped a feather pillow behind her she would have jumped right up through the ceiling into the studio of Diomed Guerin, the animal painter.

It may be that this state of the nervous system is favorable to literary work; I have heard that theory advocated. On the other hand, there is unquestionably a fatality in first stories similar to the so called "beginner's luck" that lures men into the vice of gambling. Let philosophy wrestle with the explanation while history records the fact that Miss Lestrell sold her first story without any trouble at all and received $25 for it.

"Don't lose your head, my dear," said the experienced Miss Whistler. "It may be 97 years before you sell another one."

Jane did not put any faith in this gloomy prophecy, and she went to work upon her second romance with high hope and fierce determination. But she was nervous, as I have already remarked, and her condition was aggravated by the performances of a gentleman named Franz Reinhardt, whose studio of music was directly beneath Miss Whistler's abode.

The tenants in this building knew little of one another, yet there was a rather definite rumor that Reinhardt was an excellent musician in exceptionally hard luck. It was said that he accepted pupils at the absurd rate of 50 cents an hour, and that most of them never paid him.

Jane, who was very fond of music, believed, during the first days of her residence there, that she should enjoy hearing Reinhardt and his pupils sing. There was a register in the wall—a relic of the days when the building had been a private residence heated by a furnace—and it admitted sounds from the studio of music with remarkable distinctness. They did not annoy Jane in the least until she began to be bothered with that second story, and then she suddenly awoke to the fact that Reinhardt sang only one song—"Palm Branches"—and drilled all his pupils—men, women and children—in one single vocal exercise.

Every morning at 9 precisely he would put himself into condition for the day's labors by singing "Palm Branches" four times, using the Italian words, which he pronounced with a strong German accent. "Palm Branches" is a beautiful hymn of praise, but enough of it is enough. It became so familiar in Miss Whistler's apartment that the lady's canary bird used to sing it. The top of the long black table echoed it like a sounding board, and the legs of the haircloth chairs danced solemnly in perfect time.

It rang in Jane's head until she simply had to sing it. There was no other way to get it out of her mind. In the earlier days she would hum it, gently. Later, when the habit had grown upon her, she found no relief except by singing it right out at the top of her voice. At first she was afraid that Mr. Reinhardt would hear her and take offense, but afterward she was afraid that he wouldn't.

She found herself imitating his vocal methods. It was mimicry, and it was very rude, but she absolutely could not help it. When the professor was drilling that song into one of his pupils and Jane was struggling with her story, she would find nothing in her mind at last but "Palm Branches," and only by singing it once, good and strong, could she get into condition to resume her work.

It was nearly as bad with the vocal exercise. In fact, after a time it was in one respect worse, for she began to associate it with a particular individual of whom she knew nothing except that he had a voice like 50 mad bulls. He was a diligent person, with plenty of leisure, for he came almost every afternoon and usually remained about two hours. He devoted himself entirely to the vocal exercise, and he always made precisely the same mistake in it.

That is very harrowing to the nerves of the listener. One must have an iron constitution to stand it.

"If he makes that mistake again today," Jane would say to herself, "I shall certainly go down stairs and beat his brains out. No, no; he can't have any! He's done it again for the forty millionth time! Oh, you idiot!"

Then she would sing the exercise herself, sometimes with her head out of the window, for politeness' sake, sometimes defiantly, desperately. And one day, when the story was particularly annoying and the roaring basso more stupid than usual, she went in a frenzy directly to the register and yelled that vocal exercise into it until the antique, dilapidated furnace far down in the cellar rang like the cymbals in a band.

This really frightened her, not only because it was so very rude, but because it was the final convincing proof that she was going mad. For a month she had suspected it. There could no longer be any doubt. She walked to the black table and tore up all that she had written on her story that day; then she lay down on the fur rug in front of the grate fire and began to cry in a very childish and enjoyable fashion.

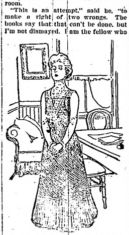
She was interrupted by a knock at the door. Such an event was practically unprecedented. In her surprise Jane forgot all about the worries of a literary life and the inconveniences of going crazy. She jumped up from the rug and ran to the looking glass, where she performed those feats of prestidigitation common to her sex under such circumstances. Then she opened the door and beheld a slender and graceful young man, bright eyed and magnetic. He was dressed with elegance and good taste, and his manner appealed at once to Jane, who had an especial liking for earnest, hearty, energetic people.

"I beg your pardon," said he. "May I venture to present my card and ask for just one minute of your time?"

"Won't you come in, Mr. Norton?" said the girl, glancing at the card. "I am Jane Lestrell."

He saluted the mention of her name very gracefully as he stepped into the room.

"This is an attempt," said he, "to make a right of two wrongs. The books say that that can't be done, but I'm not dismayed. I am the fellow who sings so atrociously in Mr. Reinhardt's studio down stairs. Sings? Let me say bellows and be truthful about it. I can't sing any more than a cow, and I know it."



SHE FOUND HERSELF IMITATING HIS VOCAL METHODS

"I think you have a great voice," said Jane. "I can hardly believe"—

"That I'm not as big as an elephant? I don't wonder you're surprised. But really, I don't pretend to sing; I come here to help out my friend, Mr. Reinhardt. He's a splendid fellow, and he is very poor. I'm sure he's an excellent teacher of singing, but he doesn't have a bit of luck. None of his pupils can sing. I'm the only one that can even make much of a noise. Now, it's really necessary for a teacher to have some pupils that can become known and attract others. Of course I can never do that, but I can pay for my lessons, which is more than most of them can do. You'll pardon me for mentioning it, but I'm quite well off, and Reinhardt won't take a cent from me except in this way. He's such a good fellow! If you knew him, you'd forgive me for annoying you the way I have with my awful howling. And—and that's what I came up here to say."

"Mr. Norton," said Jane, with her face as red as fire, "did you hear me just now?"

"Why, yes," said he. "We heard you singing the exercise. We've heard you before, and you sing it beautifully. Mr. Reinhardt says that you have a voice like all the nightingales in paradise—that's the way he puts it, and the tears come into his eyes every time he mentions you. He says that you could make your everlasting fortune in concert or opera and win a fame that would reach around the world three times and tie in a double bowknot. That was the way he expressed it, very respectfully, but with his peculiar enthusiasm. I wish you could take a course with him."

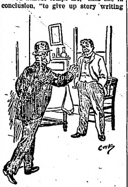
"I am taking a course with him," responded Jane. "I sing 'Palm Branches' 25 times a day, and I go through that exercise in my sleep—I really do. I wake myself up with it. And now I'm going to say something perfectly absurd, but it's true. My voice has improved! I really have learned Mr. Reinhardt's method without in the least meaning to do so, and I know that I sing a good deal better for it."

"If I should tell him that," said Norton, "he would die of joy."

"Then please don't tell him," she rejoined. "It's hardly honest to get instruction in that way, and I'm quite ashamed of it. But I'm much more ashamed of having been so childish as to let you and him know that the music annoyed me. I have been so very, very nervous"—

And she told him all about her entry into literature and its painful results.

"You almost tempt me," said she in conclusion, "to give up story writing and try to do something with my voice. I have been told once or twice that I sing quite well."



"FRANZ," SAID HE, "SHE'S COMING DOWN."

"Well!" echoed Norton. "Why, Reinhardt swears that the cherubim and seraphim aren't fit to hum an accompaniment when you are singing! Won't you please come down and sing for him just once? I tell you in the calmest possible manner that Reinhardt would be willing to be burned alive the next minute if you would sing the half of one song for him—the shortest one ever written."

"I suppose that is the way he expressed it," said Jane, with a smile. "I begin to perceive where this extravagant language originates. I don't believe that Mr. Reinhardt is so enthusiastic."

Norton laid his hand upon his heart solemnly, while his fine, dark eyes shone with earnestness.

"If you will think of the most terrible and binding pledge ever uttered by man or woman since the world began," said he, "I will vow to you by it that Reinhardt"—

"I will take your simple word," said she, laughing, "and I will sing for Mr. Reinhardt within ten minutes. Will you please prepare him for the ordeal?"

Norton made a graceful exit, and the next moment he burst into his friend's studio.

"Franz," said he, "she's coming down. In one minute you will see what nature was trying to do when she made all the other beautiful women that ever walked the earth. They were mere experiments, Franz, and Miss Lestrell is the first perfect and complete success."

"I am glad she will come," said the blond young German gravely. "She has a good voice, as it sounds through the floor."

Probably Reinhardt's absence of enthusiasm, after Norton's superabundance, piqued Jane somewhat. She is an obstinate girl, with a touch of vanity in her composition. Whatever the cause, she determined to make Reinhardt understand that she really had a voice. So she went to his studio three times a week for many months and worked like a little slave, subsisting meanwhile on the proceeds of a story or two and her own grit.

The result is well known in musical circles. Jane is a full fledged prima donna, and Reinhardt is the rage as a teacher. And, incidentally, Mr. Willis Norton has found out what love is—the one thing in this universe that is too big even for his powers of exaggeration. At present his fate is uncertain, but if protestations of devotion can win a woman Norton cannot possibly lose.

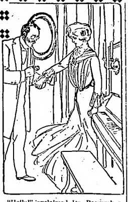
A CASE FOR AN EXPERT

By Peter McArthur.

Copyright, 1900, by Peter McArthur.



"Hello!" exclaimed Dr. Bascomb as he entered his office, where Jack Kenly was walking back and forth while waiting for him. "What is the matter? You look worried."

"I am worried," said Kenly as he shook hands. "Have you seen Nellie lately?"

"Not since a week ago Thursday, just before you started on your trip to Cincinnati. Is there anything the matter with her?"

"I can't say for certain, but I am afraid there is. She says herself that she is quite well, but she is so silent and irritable that I am afraid her nerves are out of order."

"Well, I'll drop around and see her some time during the day," said the doctor.

"No; I don't think you had better do that," said the young husband. "She protests that there is nothing the matter, and if you made a professional call it might make her angry and increase her nervousness. But, say, can't you come round and have dinner with us and have a smoke with me afterward? And perhaps you could diagnose her case without her suspecting anything, and then you could prescribe something that would help her."

"All right," said the doctor. "Call for me on your way home, and I'll go along."

Having relieved his mind by making this arrangement, Kenly went to his office and during the afternoon telegraphed to his wife that Dr. Bascomb would be with them to dinner. This was not unusual, for he and the bachelor doctor were old college chums and still retained much of the friendship of their student days. As young Mrs. Kenly had made it a point to make herself agreeable to her husband's old friends, so that he would never feel that he had given up too much of his old life when he married, and as she had developed a warm personal friendship for the young doctor, he usually spent at least one evening a week at their house. So there was nothing in the doctor's visit to excite her suspicion.

While Kenly and the doctor were strolling to the house Kenly talked of his wife's ailment, of which he had thoroughly convinced himself. Like many healthy people, he had an almost morbid dread of illness, and his talk had the effect of making Dr. Bascomb very alert for subtle symptoms, for nervous disorders are so elusive.

To their surprise Mrs. Kenly greeted them at the door with her accustomed liveliness, and when dinner was served was the life of the little party, just as she had always been in the past. Indeed her liveliness seemed greater than usual, for her husband was somewhat silent because he was worried and thought that his friend could diagnose the case better if he kept in the background. The doctor, being professionally alert, ascribed her brightness to the elation that so frequently follows dejection and was working up quite a serious case. After dinner Kenly made the excuse that he had no good cigars in the house and went out to buy some so as to leave the doctor and his wife together.

"How are you feeling these days?" inquired the doctor when they were alone, in a tone that he tried hard to make unprofessional.

"Why, I never felt better in my life."

"That's good. You never even have the blues, do you?"

"Of course, I have the blues sometimes. Who doesn't?"

"Um-m! Never see sparks of fire before your eyes when you turn your head suddenly, do you?"

"See here. Are you putting me through a medical examination? Do you want to feel my pulse and see my tongue?"

"Well, that would do no harm," said the doctor, seizing her wrist and taking out his watch. She snatched her hand away almost angrily.

"No, I am not going to let you feel my pulse, and if you are not careful you may feel my tongue instead of seeing it."

The doctor gravely meditated on these symptoms of irritability, and, noticing his silence, Mrs. Kenly looked at him with some alarm.

"Why, you don't think there is anything the matter with me, do you?"

"Oh, no," said the doctor with professional diplomacy, not wishing to excite his patient; "but you know I always look after the health of my friends even when they are not asking me to."

"But I don't see why you should be paying attention to mine just now when I am simply brutally healthy. Has Jack been talking to you? I remember he said something about my not looking well when he got back." And a momentary frown wrinkled her brow. But the arrival of Jack prevented further talk on the subject of health, and the two men retired to the library to smoke.

"Well?" asked the anxious husband after they had lit their cigars.

"Oh, there is nothing serious," said the young doctor, with a wise look. "Her nerves are certainly strung to high pitch, and I should say that her liver is affected somewhat. She probably worried at being left alone while you were away, and that wore on her."

"But what do you suggest?" asked the husband. "Are you going to prescribe for her?"

"Not medicines. She doesn't realize that there is anything the matter with her; and if I ordered drugs it would only tend to make her worse, for, after all, there is something in the contention of the mental scientists that people are sick when they think they are. It is particularly true of people of a nervous temperament. On the other hand, the fact that she does not realize her condition is dangerous, for she might go on thinking herself quite well until something really serious developed."

"But what can we do?" asked Kenly, now thoroughly alarmed.

"Well, I think a change of scene and lively company, with complete rest, would fix her up all right in a few weeks, and that would be a cure she could take without knowing anything about it except that she was having a good time."

"But I am afraid I can't get away with her just now."

"Of course you can't, but she could go to the seaside somewhere near by, and you could spend your Sundays with her, or she could go to the mountains."

"That's so. I'll suggest it to her tonight, for she seems to be in a better mood than she has been of late."

"Yes," said the doctor, "that is one of the strongest signs of her disordered condition. She seesaws from dejection to elation, and tonight she is up. The necessity of playing the hostess lifted her, and, like all people whose nerves are affected, she drew too heavily on her resources, and for that reason was unnaturally bright."

By the time the conversation had ended Kenly was thoroughly alarmed, and he [illegible] with fear the liveliness of his [illegible] they returned to the parlor [illegible] played and sang for them. Not wishing to let her exhaust herself the doctor left early.

They were silent for a few minutes after his departure, and Kenly noticed that the animation died from his wife's face and that she had returned to the mood that had alarmed him. But that only spurred him on to do what he considered his duty.

"I have been thinking, my dear," he began, "that you should really go away somewhere for a rest. Lots of people are going away for their holidays just now, and though I can't go yet, I could arrange to spend my Sundays with you."

"A rest!" she exclaimed with unsuspected energy. "Who told you I was tired?"

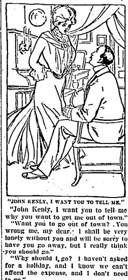
"Oh, I don't exactly mean a rest, but a holiday, a good time."

"I must say you are getting very thoughtful—of late."

He affected not to notice the ironical intonation of her remark and proceeded:

"Then you will go, won't you? Which would you prefer, the seaside or the mountains?"

Instead of replying she walked up to him and, looking into his face with blazing eyes, said slowly, but intensely:



"JOHN KENLY, I WANT YOU TO TELL ME."

"John Kenly, I want you to tell me why you want to get me out of town."

"Want you to go out of town? You wrong me, my dear. I shall be very lonely without you and will be sorry to have you go away, but I really think you should go."

"Why should I go? I haven't asked for a holiday, and I know we can't afford the expense, and I don't need to go."

Suddenly an idea occurred to her.

"Was it you that put Dr. Bascomb up to trying to scare me about my health? I know it was, and he and you have some scheme in mind and want to get rid of me for awhile."

"Oh, my dear, you do not mean that."

"I mean every word of it, and, what is more, I mean to stay right here until you go for your holidays, and then I'll go with you—to watch you."

"Hush, dear, and we will drop the matter for the present."

"Yes, and for the future too," she replied, for she had a temper of her own that was quite sufficient for all requirements.

Kenly was afraid that he would aggravate the trouble if he continued the argument until she became more exhausted than she was, so he let the matter drop, resolving at the same time to ask Dr. Bascomb if it would not be better to gently break to her the news of her condition and get her to allow herself to be properly treated. In the morning her eyes were red with silent weeping, but she did not choose to take her husband into favor again, so he went gloomily to his office.

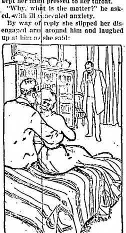
On his way home he called on Dr. Bascomb and told of the failure of his prescription.

"Ah!" said the doctor. "That is serious, and now we must break the matter to her. You had better go home and avoid the subject, and I will drop in during the evening, and we will talk things over quietly. My being there will save her a fright, for I can assure her that there is nothing really serious the matter yet."

The plan was agreed to and Kenly went home. His wife met him at the door in an alarming state of excitement. She was half laughing and half crying, and all the while she kept her hand pressed to her throat.

"Why, what is the matter?" he asked, with ill concealed anxiety.

By way of reply she slipped her disengaged arm around him and laughed up at him as she said:



"OH, IT'S ALL RIGHT," SAID KENLY.

"I suspect we have been a couple of geese, and I will confess to you if you will to me."

"What do you mean?"

"If you will confess to me why you wanted me to go out of town, I will confess why I have been so disagreeable to you ever since you came back from the west."

In spite of his agreement with the doctor Kenly saw that he would have an excellent chance to break things gently to her, so he agreed.

"Go ahead," he said. "Though I did not think you were cross."

"Oh, yes, I was, and it was all because I thought you had forgotten my birthday." And she withdrew her hand from her throat and showed the brooch he had ordered sent to the house for her during his absence.

"Your mother sent it to me today and said there had evidently been a mistake. You had absentmindedly given your old address, and, as your name is the same as your father's, the jeweler naturally sent it to your mother. Why didn't you tell me that you had sent it?"

"I thought that if you didn't think it worth speaking about I would say nothing either, and then you were so different from what you usually were that I got alarmed."

"Alarmed?"

"Yes; I thought you were ill, and when Dr. Bascomb was here he diagnosed your case as one of overstrained nerves and liver complaint, and that was why I wanted you to go out of town, so as to get a change and a rest. We thought it would only make you worse to alarm you by saying anything about your condition, but when you objected so positively we decided to tell you, and Dr. Bascomb is coming around to see you tonight."

It may sound undignified, but Mrs Kenly simply shrieked with laughter. At last she gasped:

"So—so I have liver complaint, have I, and nerves? Oh, wait until I see him! Why, I was only cool to you and cross because I thought you had forgotten my birthday. But it seems it wasn't enough that we should make fools of ourselves. He had to come in and do the thing scientifically. Oh!"

When Dr. Bascomb came, he found his prospective patient and her foolish looking husband sitting on a sofa in a way that suggested the honeymoon.

"Oh, it is all right," said Kenly. "I have been a doddering idiot, and you"—But his wife's laughter drowned all further remarks.

"I never knew that family rows were now considered pathologically, doctor. I have a number of friends that are ailing in that way, and I shall take pleasure in recommending you."

The doctor looked from one to the other in helpless amazement. They both seemed to have gone crazy.

"It was just this way," said Kenly. "I was having a row with my wife and didn't know it, and all the symptoms we observed were nothing more or less than ordinary temper."

Then they told him the whole story, and now all Mrs. Kenly's friends think it was just lovely of Dr. Bascomb to send her such a beautiful pair of vases. But they don't know the story she has kept a secret.

A HITCH IN CHINA

NEGOTIATIONS ON THE INDEMNITY QUESTION BLOCKED.

France, Spain and Italy Insist Upon the Payment of Sentimental and Indirect Claims — Mr. Rockhill's Efforts to Formulate Some Definite Rule for the Assessment of Indemnities Fails — American Preparations for Departure Are Going Rapidly Forward.

Pekin, March 5.—Action on the indemnity matter has been blocked by the French, Spanish and Italians, who insist upon the payment of sentimental and indirect claims by the Chinese. At a meeting of the ministers Mr. Rockhill, the American representative, made strenuous but fruitless efforts to formulate some definite rule for the assessment of the indemnities. It is believed that a week will elapse before an agreement is reached.

The question of payment for the private property that it is proposed to take for a legation quarter, which question was raised by the American representative, is belittled by the other ministers, who say now that the owners of the property cannot be found. Reports reach here that the Chinese new year has been distinguished by quarrels among the court cliques at Singanfu. The remains of the missionaries belonging to the China inland mission and the American board at Paoting-fu have been recovered and identified. They will be reinterred with Christian services on March 10. The American preparations for departure are going actively forward. All supplies except enough for two companies have been packed and marked for Manila.

The British contemplate a summer along the Pei ho and a gradual withdrawal of forces to India, leaving behind by next winter half a battalion of Welsh Fusileers as a legation guard in Pekin, together with an Indian regiment to guard the railway. The Germans show few signs of intention to depart, but they are endeavoring to sell 50,000 American and Australian horses as well as a quantity of camels. It is reported that the French intend to withdraw most of their forces, leaving one infantry brigade, a regiment of cavalry and some artillery to protect the French legation and to guard the lines of communication.

THE ELUSIVE DEWET.

Makes Another Clever Escape From the British.

London, March 5.—Gen. Dewet lost heavily in men and stores by his incursion into Cape Colony, but he seems to have made a clever escape with the bulk of his commando. Apparently Hertzog crossed the Orange river with him. Gen. Hamilton, who was pursuing, heard that Gen. Dewet was surrounded at Phillipstown, north of Colesberg. On arriving there he found the Boers had not been at Phillipstown at all, but had doubled back and were struggling across the river at Colesberg. Apparently this is another instance of defective intelligence regarding the doings of the Boers. The Daily Telegraph has a dispatch from Colesberg, dated yesterday, which says: "Our numerous columns are still hunting for Dewet. This place is in a hubbub and the troops are marching off in various directions to press the pursuit further."

-o-

Colesberg, March 5. — Fifteen hundred Boers with whom, it is alleged, were Gen. Dewet and Former President Steyn, found a spot at Lilliefontein, near Colesberg Bridge, where the Orange river widens and the current is slow, and they crossed Thursday, both men and horses by swimming.

PORTO RICANS ARE HOSTILE.

British Coast Steamer Stopped and Passenger Put Ashore.

San Juan, Porto Rico, March 5.—The British steamer Oldborough, which was to have sailed last night from Ponce with 400 immigrants for the Daiquiri iron mines in Cuba, was stopped by the customs authorities on the ground that she was a freight vessel and had no license to carry passengers between American ports. The immigrants were put ashore and became riotous. They marched to Ponce, where they are now encamped in the plaza awaiting the action of the city authorities. They demand that they be paid four days' wages. They are more quiet now.

The steamer California, with 500 immigrants for Hawaii, was also held up yesterday by the Ponce custom officers. The stopping of this steamer was due to the fact that a number of the wives and other members of the immigrants' families complained that the men were deserting them. The vessel will probably be released today.

WAR HERO AGAIN IN FAVOR.

Capt. Lambton, Who Offended Many High Personages, Said to Have Resigned.

London, March 5. — The resignation of Capt. Lambton, former commander of the British cruiser Powerful, whose bluejackets rendered good service at the siege of Ladysmith, is now definitely, though unofficially, announced, and restores to favor a war hero who offended many high personages by his vigorous anti-government speeches at the time of the last election. It may be inferred that Capt. Lambton has now decided to leave politics alone.

ITALIANS RIOTOUS.

Palermo Police and Firemen Had Their Hands Busy.

Rome, March 5.—According to the press manifestations in Palermo prevented the operation of the tramways by the placing of obstructions on the tracks and the cutting of overhead wires. The crowd attempted to enter the Olympia theater but was unsuccessful. On Candelia street bill boards were overturned and set on fire. The firemen were called out to extinguish the flames. Agitators were most active in the crowd.

PENITENTIARY FIRE.

Nebraska's State Prison at Lincoln Is Destroyed by Fire.

Lincoln, Neb., March 3. — The Nebraska state penitentiary is in ruins. The fire which started yesterday morning shortly after midnight destroyed the cell house and the entire main building and the loss will not be less than $300,000 and will probably exceed that amount. The building was practically new. The only building saved was the east wing, occupied by the warden, the chapel and a small reserve cell room.

Precautions have been taken to guard the prisoners, who were removed under extra guard without difficulty. Lieut. Gov. Savage has arranged to have a sufficient numer of the national guard sent to the penitentiary to prevent any escapes being made. One convict, George Pfeuger, last his life. He was released from his cell with the other convicts and had marched out with them, but had gone back to get some personal effects. His body was found in the ruins of his cell.

QUARREL ENDS IN TRAGEDY.

Negro Commits a Murder and May Be Lynched.

Richmond, Mo., March 3. — Chester Stanley was shot and killed by a negro named McNiel at Mine No. 4, four miles south of here. Both men were employes of the mine. They quarreled over a trivial matter and the tragedy resulted. The negro is at large but will probably be arrested soon, and it is believed he will be lynched. A Brown, a section foreman, was recently killed in a fight with a negro and the feeling against the negroes is very strong here. The trouble between the whites and the negroes started when it became necessary to quarantine the negroes on account of smallpox.

PLAGUE SPREADS.

Disease Appears Among Natives in a Village Near Cape Colony.

Cape Town, March 3.—The bubonic plague has appeared among the natives employed in the DeBeers dynamite factory at Somerset West Strand, a village on False bay, about thirty miles from Cape Town. An official plague report shows that four patients were admitted to the hospital here yesterday. Two cases are under observation in ward 78 of the contact camp.

FORTUNE IN RAGS.

Buyer Supposed to Have Found Nearly $4,000 Has Departed.

Chicago, March 3. — Detectives are confident they have sufficient evidence to show that Mandel Feltman, 154 Maxwell street, was the rag buyer to whom Mrs Thomas Conley inadvertently sold $3,760 in a bundle of rags last Friday. It is believed that Feltman is now on his way to Germany. Cablegrams have been sent to the Bremen police asking them to arrest him.

BURGLARS WERE BLOCKED.

Attempt to Rob Poker Rooms Nearly Succeeded.

Parkersburg, W. Va., March 3.—Four masked men attempted to blow open a safe containing several thousand dollars and a lot of diamonds in Johnson's poker room. The attendant was covered with a gun and forced to lie on his face while the work proceeded. The quartet worked for an hour and were frightened away just as the job was about finished.

DISCLAIMS ALL KNOWLEDGE.

Sampson Does Not Know How Morgan's Letter Got Out.

Washington, March 3.—In answer to an inquiry as to how the much-discussed application of Gunner Morgan and the accompanying papers were made public property, Secretary Long has received a reply from Rear Admiral Sampson disclaiming all knowledge concerning the means by which the papers were obtained by the press.

HEADFORT AND MISS BOOTE.

Marquis Announces His Engagement to the Gaiety Girl.

London, March 3.—The Daily Telegraph is desired by the Marquis of Headfort to announce that he is engaged to be married to Miss Boote, the Gaiety girl. Miss Boote has already stated that she has given up theater engagements owing to her forthcoming marriage. It looks as if the romance was not yet at an end.

ANOTHER ROAD TO MONTANA.

Milwaukee to Build From Evarts to Helena.

Chicago, March 3.—Plans have been made for complete extensions of the St. Paul system. The most extensive project is to build a line of 700 miles from Evarts, S. D., to Helena, Mont. This line would practically parallel the Northern Pacific, and the building of it is strongly urged by the cattle growers of the region.

AMERICAN ENTERPRISE.

Wholesale Meat Business in London Passes Into Our Hands.

London, March 3.—Another symptom of American commercial invasion has appeared here. Thirty wholesale meat depots have been opened by American firms, replacing English firms which formerly handled the business.

WILSON AND LEE OUT.

Two Veteran Brigadier Generals Are Placed on Retired List.

Washington, March 3.—An order has been issued at the war department placing Brig. Gen. James H. Wilson and Brig. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee on the retired list of the army.

Ill Health Caused Despondency.

Leadville, March 3. — W. T. Bond, who served in the Philippines as a member of the First Colorado volunteers, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid while in church. Ill health caused despondency.

Deserters Break Prison.

Cincinnati, March 3. — Charles Burban, George J. McDowell and Joseph Joseph escaped from Fort Thomas after seriously wounding Guard Ballard. The three men had been convicted of desertion.

VOLUNTEERS COMING HOME.

Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth Regiments Sail From Manila.

Manila, March 3.—The thirty-third and Thirty-fourth volunteer infantry regiments and Gen. S. M. B. Young and Gen. Hare, formerly colonel of the Thirty-third infantry, sailed for San Francisco to-day on the transport Logan. The Thirty-third regiment originally consisted of 50 officers and 1,030 men. Of this number 26 officers and 785 men took passage on the transport to-day. Twenty officers and 130 men remain here. The regiment had in casualties 2 officers and 27 men killed or died of their wounds. The balance of the men are absent on sick leave or have been discharged. The Thirty-fourth regiment originally consisted of 40 officers and 1,288 men. Of this number 29 officers and 783 men sailed for home to-day. Twenty-six officers and 145 men remain here. The regiment lost ten men in action. A number are on sick leave and others have been discharged.

Balangu, Luzon, March 3.—The members of the Philippine commission arrived here to-day in their tour for the purpose of establishing civil governments in the various provinces. They were given a very enthusiastic reception by the natives. Four hundred galleys and houseboats were decorated in honor of the visit. A dozen bands and a number of native girl serenaders welcomed the commissioners as they landed from their launch. A detachment of scouts escorted them from the beach to headquarters. The route was through streets that have been given American names. Thousands of persons assembled on the house tops to witness the procession. On many of the houses American flags were displayed. Later in the day there were processions of police, citizens and school children. Extensive rebuilding is being carried on, and the town shows other evidences of prosperity.

DEWET DEMENTED.

Boer Commander Is Said to Have Become a Fanatic.

London, March 3.—The Hopetown correspondent of the Times, in a dispatch dated Feb. 27, which describes Col. Plumer's pursuit of Gen. Dewet, which has been continually hampered by heavy rains, says: "Dewet, in his fanaticism, is reported as demented. It is said that he flogs everybody, and that Hasbrook, who still has a compact commando, refuses to co-operate with him."

Mr. Brodrick, the war secretary, has issued a statement of the army estimates for 1901-02. The total is £87,915,000, of which £50,250,000 comes under the heading of war services, and is based on the assumption that for the first four months of the new fiscal year the field force in South Africa will be maintained at its full strength, and that thereafter a general diminution will occur.

CHECKMATE FOR RUSSIA.

Protest Against the Manchurian Treaty.

Pekin, March 3.—The representatives of the foreign powers have sent a protest to the Chinese peace commissioners against the action of Yank Yu, the Chinese minister at St. Petersburg, in carrying on negotiations with Russia in regard to Manchuria at the Russian capital. They have requested the Chinese envoys to ask Emperor Kwang Su to withdraw Yang Yu's power to negotiate this treaty and to commit the affair to the concert of the ministers. The missionaries are returning to the interior of the province of Santung. Sir Ernest Satow, the British minister, gave his consent to this movement.

ANCIENT NECKLACE.

Rich Discovery Made by an Antiquarian in Prehistoric Ruins.

Fort Worth, Tex., March 3.—Prof. C. H. Shaw, an antiquarian of Chicago, and now a resident of Phoenix, Ariz., recently discovered a necklace consisting of twenty-eight large blue turquoise stones, unusually rare for size, beauty and value. The stones were discovered in an apartment in a ruin near Casa Granda, containing stone slabs with inscriptions and writings. The necklace, stone slabs and crude implements buried in the ruins, as well as many other turquoise stones interspersed in the mound have been moved to Shaw's private museum. Prof. Shaw believes his necklace to have been only a feature of a royal prehistoric treasury, discovered in the dwelling of a king.

CUBANS UNDECIDED.

They Are Guessing as a Result of the Action of Congress.

Havana, March 3—The constitutional convention is debating the question of the best course to pursue in view of the action of the American congress. It is claimed that some of the delegates are in favor of breaking up the convention, while others wish to complete the work for which they are convened by formulating an election law. The opinion is expressed that the convention might have proved less radical if the administration had offered a prospect of a reduction in the tarriffs on Cuban sugar and tobacco. It is thought that the convention has gone to far now to recede, even if congress supports President McKinley.

LIPTON CONFIDENT.

Result of Discoveries Made by Designer Watson.

Greenock, March 3. — Sir Thomas Lipton said that Designer Watson had made discoveries that would have an important effect in the future building of yachts on both sides of the Atlantic. He added that the shape of the Shamrock's hull was totally unlike anything ever before launched. This, it is believed, refers to her great beam, which is well forward. Mr. Watson is sanguine and Sir Thomas is absolutely confident that the yacht will prove the victor in the coming races. Both Shamrocks will take part in the exhibition races on the Clyde.

Defeated by Creedon.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 3.—Fifteen hundred people saw Dan Creedon defeat Jim Scanlan. There was no time after Creedon put a left hook to Scanlan's jaw in the first round that the latter had a chance to win.

Murdered a Woman.

San Francisco, March 3. — Adolph Bietz shot and killed a woman known as Rose Thomas and Rose Temple in a Taylor street lodging house. He fired three bullets into her head. Bietz then shot himself.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, Feb. 27.—In a special message to the legislature Gov. Van Sant transmitted the report of the special commission appointed to investigate the workings of the single boards of control for state institutions in other states.

The commission finds that, in general, there is a decrease in the cost of maintenance of institutions, and an elimination of political interference with them, giving a wider latitude for efficiency in their conduct. The committee recommends certain amendments to the bill now before the Minnesota legislature.

In the house there was an animated discussion of Representative Hickey's bill to lower the rate of interest on deferred school land funds from 5 to 4 per cent. The bill was passed by a vote of 75 to 39.

One of the new bills, introduced by Representative Butler of Ramsey, places all street railways and electric railways throughout the state under the control of the state railroad and warehouse commission.

The bill that in effect wipes out the office of court commissioner and confers the powers of this office upon the judges of probate was passed without a dissenting vote.

Representative Laybourn introduced a bill to restore persons convicted of a felony to citizenship upon payment of the fine imposed or serving the jail sentence.

A bill providing for a primary election law, in general the same as a like bill introduced by Representative Hillman, for which it is proposed as a substitute was introduced by Representative Dunn of Ramsey.

Representative J. A. Peterson introduced a bill to submit a proposition for a convention for the revision of the state constitution to the voters at the next general election.

Representative Oppegaard introduced into the house a bill prohibiting the use of repeating shotguns in hunting any kind of game.

In the Senate.

At the opening of the senate session Senator Young presented a resolution authorizing the governor to call a special session of the legislature when necessary to consider the report of the tax commission. The motion, which was tabled at the request of its author, also provides for an adjournment twenty days inside the constitutional limit this year.

The state university appropriation bills were referred. Senator McGill fathered a bill to appropriate $294,500 for new university buildings. Of this sum $200,000 is for a new main building for the agricultural school. Senator McGill also presented a bill to appropriate $31,000 for the university substations. Senator Thompson introduced a bill providing that the state university regents establish a college of pedagogy for normal advanced course graduates and appropriating $10,000 for the necessary expense.

In the House.

St. Paul, Feb. 28. —The house passed the bill prohibiting the improper use of the badges of the Loyal Legion and the Grand Army. The bill declaring the making of false cards or receipts of labor organizations forgery in the third degree was also passed.

The bill providing for the extension of the Minneapolis primary election law to the entire state was made the special order of business for Tuesday.

A bill introduced by Representative S. D. Peterson provides for a 10 per cent gross income tax upon all telegraph companies doing business in the state in lieu of all other taxes.

Bills appropriating funds aggregating $75,330 for the state training school were introduced by Representative Brush.

Representative Ferris introduced, by request, a bill providing that where minors deposit in banks, a receipt, check or quittance in any form from such minor shall be a valid release until a guardian is appointed in this state.

In the Senate.

The senate in committee considered the bill by Senator Horton to establish a state board of five osteopathic examiners and to regulate the practice in this state. Senator Jepson moved to indefinitely postpone; lost, 22 to 24. A motion by Senator Horton to pass was lost by a tie vote, 24 to 24. A suggestion of Senator Ives was then adopted to report progress.

Considerable discussion was indulged in over Representative Burns' house bill relating to use of public roads for telephone poles. The bill was recommended to pass.

Senator J. D. Jones introduced an amendment to the anti-trust law providing for the forfeiture of the charters of all companies which enter a combination.

The negotiable instrument act, adopted in sixteen states and before the legislatures of many others, was passed by the senate. It makes few changes in the present Minnesota law. It was drawn by the American Bank association and approved by legal organizations subsequently.

Senator Wilson's bill making the wages of officers and employes of cities and villages and city municipal departments subject to garnishment was also passed.

The Chilton marriage bill and the Brown bill, enabling boards of county commissioners to issue bonds to fund the floating indebtedness of their counties were not acted upon.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 1.—The consolidation of the St. Paul & Duluth with the Northern Pacific, which at the time of the transaction was questioned by the state railroad and warehouse commission, is likely to be investigated by the legislature. Representative Jacobson introduced a resolution with this end in view. The resolution authorizes the appointment of a committee of investigation with power to summon witnesses and administer oaths.

A bill contemplating the construction of extensive bicycle paths throughout the state was introduced by Representative Hurd. The measure provides for the appointment of a bicycle commission of five in each county to serve for five years, which shall be empowered, with the consent of boards of county commissioners, to construct and maintain cycle paths along any street or road.

Representative Rich introduced a bill appropriating $90,400 for new buildings and other improvements for the state fair grounds.

An amendment proposed for the pure food law provides a jail penalty of from thirty to ninety days where the law now only provides a fine.

A bill regulating corporations that have not made settlement within five years, whereby the proceedings may be taken through the district court, instead of through the attorney general, was introduced by Representative Grass.

In the Senate.

Senator Snyder presented a bill to appropriate $207,500 for the academic department of the state university. Of this sum $50,000 is for a new physics building, $47,500 for a new hall for mines and mining, $3,500 for an artesian well and the balance divided among the various departments.

Senator Gausewitz introduced a measure to create a state immigration board of five, the governor and secretary of state to be additional members ex-officio. Its intent is to induce immigration to unsettled lands of the state and cause their cultivation.

Among the bills passed was that of Senator Mellicke, making illegal the selling of aquatic fowl in this state, and also that of Senator Jepson, making it a crime of forgery in the third degree to falsify a labor organization certificate or card.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 2.—A bill to establish a liquor dispensary system in Minnesota similar to the South Carolina dispensary system in counties having no cities of 10,000 inhabitants was introduced in the legislature yesterday by Representative Johnsrud. The bill provides that in those counties having no cities of 10,000 the question of granting liquor licenses within the counties shall be submitted to a popular vote on the second Tuesday in March, 1902. If the county votes against licenses, dispensaries may, upon petition of two-thirds of the voters be established in any city, town or village within the county on and after May 1, 1902. The proposed dispensaries are to be stocked and controlled by the municipalities in which they are located. Cities or towns of less than 10,000 inhabitants may maintain only one such establishment. The liquors dispensed are to be sold in packages of not less than one-half pint each, and all liquors must before purchase for dispensation have the approval of the state dairy and food commission. The dispensaries are to be under the control of the city or village councils. The bill, if enacted, would affect all the counties in the state except Ramsey, Hennepin, St. Louis, Winona, Washington, Stearns and Blue Earth.

The Jacobson resolution for a joint committee to investigate the sale of the St. Paul & Duluth railroad to the Northern Pacific was defeated in the house. The resolution was not defeated without a bitter struggle, in which the leaders on both sides exchanged remarks caustic rather than complimentary.

Representative Rich of Ramsey introduced a bill to increase the salaries of members of the railroad and warehouse commission from $3,000 to $3,600 per year.

In the Senate.

The opponents of the Burns telephone bill won a victory in the senate in preventing its passage, and referring it to a committee consisting of the delegation of the three large cities and Senator Thompson for revision.

All the road and bridge bills before the senate were killed on the recommendation of Chairman Underleak of the roads and bridge committee. The action was taken on an opinion of the attorney general holding such appropriations invalid.

Senator Jepson introduced a bill fixing coroners' fees at the rate allowed sheriffs. For viewing a body the coroner is to be allowed $5 and for an inquest $10. Mileage at 10 cents a mile is allowed.

Senator McGovern introduced a bill prohibiting the use of torches in spearing or catching fish.

The state library is given $3,500 for 1901 and every year thereafter by a bill Senator McGovern introduced:

The Hunt wolf bounty bill passed the senate without opposition.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 4.—Senator Lord introduced a bill Saturday placing greater restrictions upon people who desire to sever the marital relation. He proposes among other things that proceedings be conducted with more publicity than at present, and makes the actual appearance of defendants imperative.

The senate recommended the Horton bill, allowing an extra million dollars for the completion of the new capitol, to pass.

Senator Halvorsen hopes to authorize the confiscation of "blind pig" social club and other property where liquor is sold unlawfully by a bill he introduced.

Senator Jepson introduced a counterpart of the house dispensary bill and had it referred to the committee on temperance for consideration.

In the House.

Representative D. S. Peterson of New Ulm introduced a bill to regulate the tolls charged upon messages transmitted over lines wholly within the state.

The Sweet five-sixths jury bill was defeated by a vote of 55 to 50 after one of the most exciting and stubbornly contested struggles of the thirty-second session. The lawyers of the house almost without exception, were arrayed on the losing side.

A bill calculated to stop evasion of legal service by foreign corporations operating in Minnesota was introduced in the house by Mr. Rich of Ramsey.

Senator Wilson's bill to destroy the wife's dower interest, other than homestead exemptions, is property sold under creditor's execution was passed by the house.

CONGRESS

Resume of the Week's Proceedings.

In the Senate.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The real struggle for insular legislation at this session began yesterday in the senate. The army appropriation bill was under consideration and the Philippine amendment was reached. In addition the Cuban amendment was introduced, and the general debate on these propositions began. Sharp opposition to the Philippine amendment developed on the Democratic side, beginning with a point of order which the senate overruled and followed with speeches by Senators Tillman, Rawlins, Caffery, Bacon and Morgan. The amendment was defended by its author, Mr. Spooner, who pointed out the necessity for the legislation. Senators Vest, Hoar, Bacon and Rawlins offered amendments tending to limit the powers conferred by the Spooner amendment. An evening session was held to allow time to continue the debate.

In the House.

The house jettisoned the authorizations for two battleships and two cruisers which were in the naval appropriation bill as it passed that body. The senate had rejected the proposition and against the appeals of the house conferees the house yesterday voted by a big majority to agree to the senate amendment striking out the authorizations. Chairman Cannon, of the appropriations committee contributed largely to this result by a vigorous speech in favor of the senate amendment. A partial conference report on the naval bill was agreed to and the bill went back to conference. The house also agreed to the conference report on the bill to create a commission of five to adjudicate the claims of United States citizens against Spain, assumed by the United States under the treaty of Paris. Just before adjournment Mr. Tawney, chairman of the St. Louis exposition committee, asked unanimous consent to disagree to the senate amendments to the exposition bill, but Mr. Shepherd of Texas objected.

In the House.

Washington, Feb. 27. — The house was the scene of a sensational incident late yesterday afternoon which threw that body into a violent state of excitement. For an hour the storm raged, ending abruptly when an adjournment was taken upon motion of Mr. Payne, the floor leader of the majority. Mr. Lentz, an Ohio Democrat, stirred the Democrats to a fever pitch by rising to a question of privilege and alleging that a speech he had turned over to the public printer under general leave to print had been withheld from the Record, and had been turned over to Gen. Grosvenor of Ohio by the speaker. The nature of the speech was not developed during the events that followed, but is was learned it was an attack upon Senator Hanna and the methods by which he was elected to the senate. The speaker explained that it had been represented to him that the speech violated the privileges of the house and he had directed that it should be withheld until he could look it over. Pressure of business had prevented him from doing so, however, and only twenty minutes before, he said, he had directed that the speech go into the Record, believing that if it contained anything offensive it could be stricken out of the Record by the house later. Intense excitement followed. Several points of order were made by Republicans, but the speaker declined to side-track the matter in that way, holding, however, that to proceed a proposition of some kind must be before the house. Thereupon Mr. Richardson, the Democratic leader, offered a resolution declaring that the speaker had no right to withhold speeches, and by a strict party vote the house decided not to consider it. Amid still greater excitement and confusion Mr. Richardson offered another resolution condemning the speaker's action in severe terms, and directing that the speech be "delivered forthwith" to the public printer. Again by a strict party vote the house refused to consider it. At this point further proceedings were cut off by adjournment.

Earlier in the day a partial conference report on the Indian appropriation bill was agreed to and the bill was sent back to conference.

In the Senate.

An important amendment to the Philippine amendment to the army appropriation bill was agreed to in the senate yesterday. It was an amplification of the amendment previously offered by Mr. Hoar, laying restrictions upon the sale of public lands and the granting of franchises and concessions in the Philippines. It was accepted by the committee in charge of the measure and is now a part of the committee amendment.

Mr. Morgan of Alabama continued his speech begun Monday and occupied the flood during the greater part of the day. He concluded his address just before the afternoon recess after having discussed comprehensively both the Cuban and Philippine amendments. He appealed to the committee to withdraw both propositions, maintaining that congress was treading upon dangerous ground and trifling with edged tools in acting upon them without ample information.

During the afternoon Mr. Allen obtained the floor from Mr. Morgan and severely arraigned Admiral Sampson for some statements he is alleged to have made upon an application of Chief Gunner Charles Morgan of the navy for promotion to the grade of commissioned officer. Mr. Allen's denunciation of Admiral Sampson was sensational. During the day the conference report upon the district of Columbia appropriation bill was agreed to, as was also a partial report of the conferees on the postoffice appropriation bill.

In the Senate

Washington, Feb. 28. — The senate passed the army appropriation bill at 12:25 o'clock containing the propositions of the majority for a temporary government of the Philippines and for the future relations between the United States and Cuba. Many amendments were offered to both propositions but were voted down. The original Spooner amendment was amended regarding franchises, as proposed by Mr. Hoar, the latter proposition having been accepted by the majority Tuesday.

Not since the enactment of the resolutions declaring a state of war to exist between the United States and Spain has there been such an avalanche of passionate oratory as the senate listened to yesterday. Throughout the session the army appropriation bill was under discussion, the controverted question being the Spooner Philippine amendment and the Platt Cuban amendment. Curiously enough the debate was confined entirely to the Democratic side of the chamber with one exception. Both amendments were denounced as vicious and pernicious legislation, subversive of the constitution of the United States and unparalleled in the history of legislative enactments. The most noted speech of the day was delivered by Mr. Bacon of Georgia. Senators Turner of Washington, Tillman of South Carolina, Pettigrew of South Dakota, Hoar of Massachusetts, Teller of Colorado, Mallory of Florida, Lindsay of Kentucky, Culberson of Texas, Jones of Arkansas, Simon of Mississippi, Allen of Nebraska and others addressed the senate, all of whom denounced the proposed legislation.

In the House.

The house had a busy day of routine, agreeing to the conference reports on the fortification, District of Columbia and the military academy bills, the last named containing the anti-hazing legislation. The naval appropriation bill was sent back to conference after the defeat of a motion to concur in the senate's provision for three more sub-marine torpedo boats. The Louisiana purchase exposition bill, which has been in a precarious preliminary state, was finally sent to conference for an adjustment of differences. Several bills for statues were disposed of by preliminary maneuvers. The revenue cutter bill also received a reverse, the house adjourning when an effort was made to take it up.

In the Senate.

Washington, March 1.—The serenity in yesterday's session of the senate was in sharp contrast with the tempestuous nature of Wednesday's session. A number of bills were passed. The river and harbor appropriation bill carrying appropriations of more than $50,000,000 was passed without a word of discussion, and the senate adopted the conference report on the war revenue reduction measure without disturbing in the least the millpond smoothness of the proceedings. Final conference reports were made and agreed to on the diplomatic and consular and agricultural appropriation bills and another conference on the postoffice bill was ordered. Conference reports on several other measures were agreed to and several bills of a minor character were passed. The last hour and a half of the session was devoted to the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

In the House.

The house cleared the decks yesterday of a number of important conference reports without much difficulty. The conference report on the war revenue reduction bill proved generally acceptable to both sides and was adopted without division. Mr. Richardson, the minority leader, acquiesced in it as the best thing that could be done, although he stated that the minority still believed the war taxes should be reduced $70,000,000. Final reports on the diplomatic and consular and agricultural appropriation bills were accepted. The major part of the day was devoted to the bill to promote the efficiency of the revenue cutter service. Although the bill was a house measure, its friends were very persistent, and in the face of many difficulties hung on to it with bull dog tenacity and finally forced the bill into such a parliamentary situation that it will be voted upon after five minutes debate this morning.

Washington, March 2. -- The house removed all possibility of an extra session yesterday by concurring in the senate amendments to the army appropriation bill. The vote stood 159 to 134. It was a strict party vote with the exception of Mr. McCall of Massachusetts, Mr. Loud of California, Mr. Driscoll of New York, Mr. Mann of Illinois, who voted with the Democrats. Mr. Cooper of Wisconsin answered present and was not paired. The bill now goes to the president.

The house was brought to a vote by a special order prepared by the committee on rules which permitted an hour's debate on a side. The Democrats attempted to filibuster but they were overwhelmed. The debate was not especially noteworthy. The Philippine and Cuban amendments were defended by the Republicans and assailed by the Democrats. The only exciting incident occurred at the close of the debate when Mr. Hull of Iowa, whose name had been connected with a lumber development company in the Philippines, frankly acknowledged that he had invested money in it. He said it was a legitimate enterprise which was not looking for government favors. The final conference report upon the Indian appropriation bill was adopted and a number of minor bills were put through the final stages. The conference report on the St. Louis exposition bill, which agreed to Sunday closing, was agreed to and the bill was sent back to conference. A motion to concur in the Charleston exposition amendment, was defeated—84 to 132. The revenue cutter service bill was side-tracked early in the day by a vote of the house.

In the Senate.

During the great part of a long, tiresome session of the senate yesterday the sundry civil appropriation bill was under consideration. An interesting and at times lively debate was precipitated in the first two hours of the session on a resolution to discharge the committee on interstate commerce from consideration of the bill requiring railway companies to make detailed investigations of all accidents involving loss of life on their lines and to report to the interstate commerce commission. No action was taken. The old question as to the reclamation of public lands in the arid and semi-arid sections of the country were brought up, but the effort to attach an amendment to the measure appropriating money for the wark was defeated.

JACK TAR'S GROWL.

A Story Illustrating the Sailor's Habit of Grumbling.

The author of "From Edinburgh to the Antarctic," writing of the sailor's habit of grumbling, says: "The dinners are all the same—that is to say, Monday's dinners are all alike, and what we have today we shall have this day six months hence. Jack's forefather this day 100 years ago had the same menu and made the same uncomplimentary remarks about the dishes, and 100 years hence on this day Jack's children will growl over their salt horse and plumless duff." The author also tells this "yarn" to illustrate that Jack's habit of grumbling can't be cured and must be endured:

Once upon a time there lived a skipper whose wife said to him that if she went to sea the poor men would never find fault with their food. Her husband took her with him on a voyage, and the good woman attended to the cooking in the galley herself.

The scouse was thick with fresh vegetables, the bread was white and without weevils, the meat was good, and the duff was almost half plums, but still the men growled.

Then the skipper's wife thought of the hens she had brought on board to lay eggs for her husband's breakfast. She took them out of the coop, wrung their necks with her own fair hands, plucked them, roasted them and sent them to the forecastle on the cabin china.

"Now the men," she said to herself, "will know how much we think of their comfort."

At eight bells she stole forward to the forecastle to listen to the praise of her skill as a cook. She looked down the hatch and saw a big black fist plunge a fork into the hen and heard a hoarse voice growl, "I say, Bill, what d'ye think this 'ere bloody fowl died of?"

A DOMESTIC JAR.

The Little Dialogue With Which the Proceedings Were Enlivened.

Here's a little dolly dialogue that was overheard in a $24 a month Capitol hill mansion one evening last week:

She—Why, oh, why, did I ever marry you?

He—Because I was a good thing.

She—You are becoming positively coarse.

He—Association.

She—You pay no attention whatever to my little wishes.

He—What's the use of chasing a car after you've caught it?

She—I believe you have been drinking again.

He—No such luck.

She—I'm in rags.

He—Well, we'll do a sketch. So'm I.

She—I haven't been to the theater for two weeks.

He—Yours is a sad story.

She—Brute!

He—Ours is a peaceful home.

She—Are you going down town tonight?

He—If I can swing you for car fare.

She—I have only $3 in my purse.

He—Hetty Green!

She—I saw a pair of high heeled patent leathers today, reduced to $8, that I must and shall have.

He—D'je see any men's brogans for $1.39?

She—Why don't you get shaved?

He—Waiting for pay day.

She—Don't you know the rent and the gas will be due this pay day?

He—Then I'll cut out the shave.

She—I wish I had never left mamma, so I do.

He—Others, others!

She—I have a good notion to go right back to her this minute.

He—Have you got an umbrella?

She—Oh, you—you—g-g-government c-c-clerk! (Tears. Curtain.)—Washington Post.

The Neglected Voice.

The voice is the most common and at the same time the most complex of human faculties. When we listen to it we realize nothing of the many influences at work in its use. Yet it represents the character, the mood, the temperament and the health of the individual when left to run in its own way. If uncontrolled, it will develop much as a flower garden will develop; the rank and weedy nature will come to the front, and the tones of exquisite beauty will be obscured. Bad daily habits in the use of the voice will give it many disagreeable qualities. If controlled, the voice will keep its weeds in the background and permit only its beauties to be known. If cultivated, the weeds will be taken out and the flowers developed.—Pittsburg Press.

"By hook and by crook" is an allusion to an ancient manorial custom which permitted the neighboring poor to take all the wood that they could reach and pull down from the forest trees, using only their shepherds' crooks.

WANTED A RECEIPT.

The Old Lady Insisted Upon Following Instructions.

The old lady was not used to traveling on the Broadway cars. She had evidently spent her youth and middle age in the rural regions, but doubtless she called old Ireland home. The conductor, who differed little from the rest of his kind, came through the car calling for fares. The old woman held out her hand, in which a nickel was tightly clutched, then drew it suddenly back as if she had made some mistake.

"I want my 'resate' first," she said in a rich Doolin dialect.

The conductor paid no heed; but, holding out his hand, demanded, "Fare, please."

"But I want my 'resate,'" she repeated.

"No receipts, lady," said the stolid conductor. "I'll have to have your fare."

"My son told me not to give up any money without getting a 'resate,'" insisted the old woman stoutly.

The kind lady with the sweet face and Paris clothes proffered the assurance that it was "all right," that nobody got receipts.

"See, I pay my fare without one," she said, giving the conductor a dime and the woman a reassuring smile.

But the woman was stubborn. "I want my 'resate,'" she reiterated.

The conductor mechanically held out a nickel to the kind lady of the Paris gown, but she shook her head, nodded toward the old woman and smiled. The conductor without a word passed on through the car, which lurched and swayed through Union square. She of the "resate" shook her head grimly, settled herself back in her seat and held on to the nickel, determined not to relinquish it without the necessary acknowledgment.—New York Mail and Express.

BEAUTIES OF A GLACIER.

Scenes That Are Likened to Visions of a Glorified City.

The fascinations of a glacier are as witching as they are dangerous. Apostolic vision of a crystal city glorified by light "that never was on land or sea" was not more beautiful than these vast ice rivers, whose onward course is chronicled, not by years and centuries, but by geological ages, says a British Columbia correspondent of the New York Post. With white domed snow cornices wreathed fantastic as arabesque and with the glassy walls of emerald grotto reflecting a million sparkling jewels, one might be in some cavernous dream world or among the tottering grandeur of an ancient city. The ice pillars and silvered pinnacles, which scientists call seracs, stand like the sculptured marble of temples crumbling to ruin. Glittering pendants hang from the rim of bluish chasm. Tints too brilliant for artists' brush gleam from the turquoise of crystal walls. Rivers that flow through valleys of ice and lakes, hemmed in by hills of ice, shine with an azure depth that is very infinity's self.

In the morning, when all thaw has been stopped by the night's cold, there is deathly silence over the glacial fields, even the mountain cataracts fall noiselessly from the precipice to ledge in tenuous, wind blown threads. But with the rising of the sun the whole glacial world bursts to life in noisy tumult. Surface rivulets brawl over the ice with a glee that is vocal and almost human. The gurgle of rivers flowing through subterranean tunnels becomes a roar, as of a rushing, angry sea. Ice grip no longer holds back rock scree loosened by the night's frost, and there is the reverberating thunder of the falling avalanche.

Made Up For Lost Time.

When President Kruger sailed for England some years ago, he was the object of much concern to his fellow passengers on board the liner from Cape Town, many of whom were consumed with curiosity when they noticed his absence from the dinner table for the first four days out.

On inquiry they found that the careful Transvaaler spent the dinner hour on deck, where he ate biltong and biscuits. When asked his reason, he testily replied, "I have no money to fool away on expensive eating, like you Englishmen."

The correspondent who tells the story and who was on board at the time adds, "You should have seen the old man trying to make up for lost time when it was explained to him that his passage money included his meals on board."

A Skeleton In Every Closet.

The expression "There is a skeleton in every closet" is said to have its origin in the fact that a soldier once wrote to his mother, who complained of her unhappiness, to have some sewing done for him by some one who had no cares or troubles. At last the mother found a woman who seemed to have no troubles, but when she told her business the woman took her to a closet containing a skeleton and said: "Madam, I try to keep my troubles to myself, but every night I am compelled by my husband to kiss this skeleton, who was once his rival. Think you, then, I can be happy?"

To Romould Sylvester:—

You are hereby notified that on the 11th day of May A. D. 1896 in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgement, which was entered in the District Court in and for the county of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March A. D. 1896 the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county) state of Minnesota, to-wit: SE¼ section 25, town 150, range 42 was bid in to the State to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgement, interests and costs, for the sum of Twenty-six dollars and eleven cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the absolute property of the State.

That on the 18th day of April A. D. 1900 the above described real estate was sold by the undersigned County Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor in accordance with section 101 of chapter II of the general statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of Sixty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents: that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is Sixty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from said 18th day of April A. D. 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 18th day of August A. D. 1900.

50 cents per year. Read by a greater number of Northwestern farmers than any other agricultural paper published. Are you among the number? If not, Why not? Every department in the hands of a specialist. Short talks department. A department where all kinds of questions are answered for the benefit of subscribers, is a leading feature of the paper. No northwestern farmers list of papers is complete without it. This paper and Spectator one year for $1.35.

Cosmopolitan, New York World and The Spectator.

You wish to keep in touch with metropolitan life, through the medium of a great daily. The Thrice-a-Week World of New York is the equivalent of a daily and is a marvellous fund of knowledge concerning the happenings of the day. Each issue contains six to eight pages of eight columns each or over eight thousand columns of reading matter a year. In former days this would have cost you probably as much as $8.00 a year, by itself. Now you can have it, if you wish, in connection with your home paper and The Cosmopolitan Magazine. Three together one year for only $2.50.

A GIRL OF SPIRIT.

Attorney General Griggs Ably Assisted by His Daughter.

In all Washington it would be impossible to find a brighter, more cheerful household than that of the judicial head of our government. Attorney General Griggs, like most New Jerseymen, is very domestic in his tastes and likes best to get away from his official cares and worries and seclude himself in his own home. His household consists of eight—himself, his wife, who is his second, his two sons and his four daughters.

MISS HELEN GRIGGS.

Secretary Griggs' four daughters range from Helen, the eldest, a remarkably handsome girl of 21, to Baby Elizabeth, about 5 years of age. They are fond of society, but are very far from being mere butterflies. Miss Helen Griggs is a young woman of the most artistic tastes, which have been carefully cultivated, although she is not a college graduate. Some time ago, to the surprise and amusement of her friends, she took up the study of stenography, in which she speedily became proficient. At the same time she acquired a knowledge of business.

Miss Griggs has turned her accomplishments to good account, for she is her father's "right hand man." She is the invariable companion of her learned parent, who frequently asks her opinion on vexed points and often accepts her suggestions.

BARRIE AND HIS NEW BOOK.

Many and Great Successes of the Brilliant Scotch Author.

James Matthew Barrie, the Scotch author who has delighted so many thousands of Americans with his stories of Scottish life as well as by his dramatized novel, "The Little Minister," has just issued another book. "Tommy and Grizel," his latest work, has been running for some months in an American magazine and has just been issued in book form. It is the literary sensation of the hour. In it the delightful Scotchman continues the adventures of "Sentimental Tommy," and it promises to become as great a favorite with Americans as the former work.

JAMES MATTHEW BARRIE.

Mr. Barrie is a man of 40 and was born among the Scottish scenes which he depicts so well. Kirriemuir, in Forfarshire, is the original of the well beloved town of Thrums and the birthplace of the novelist. There and in the ancient town of Dumfries Barrie obtained his education until he went up to Edinburgh. During his university days and even at an earlier period his pen was kept busy, and after his graduation in 1882 he became a journalist. While writing for the press he gained the experiences described so well in "When a Man's Single."

The maelstrom of London soon sucked him in, as it does almost every author and journalist of note in Britain. Barrie's first book, "Better Dead," which appeared in 1887, attracted little attention, but "Auld Licht Idylls" and "When a Man's Single" in 1888 gained quick recognition. His other works, "My Lady Nicotine," a most delightful volume, and "The Little Minister," too well known to need comment, established his reputation on a firm footing.

CARLISTS BOB UP AGAIN

The Revolution Which Ever Haunts Poor Spain.

PERSISTENCE OF THE PRETENDER.

Origin of the Claim That Keeps the Iberian Kingdom in a Turmoil—The Salic Law and How It Was Originally Broken.

After Spain had received its whipping at the hands of Uncle Sam, it seemed that the unhappy kingdom was about to settle down to a condition of peace. With their vexatious colonial problems solved in so summary a manner, nothing remained for the volatile Iberians to raise a fuss about but their internal affairs, and this they have proceeded to do. That long standing and ever present menace to Spanish peace, Carlism, or the dispute about the throne, has again raised its ugly head, if indeed it could ever have been said to have been scotched, and there is every chance of a general upheaval.

DON CARLOS.

Most Americans know that there is some dispute about the Spanish throne, but few can give its grounds. The main cause of the trouble is the Salic law, which is very ancient and which declares that the throne may not descend to or through a woman. This law was established in Spain by Philip V, who died in 1746. He declared that no woman could reign in Spain while there lived a male descendant of Philip IV. This law worked fairly well without any serious dispute as to its authority for about a century. Ferdinand VII held the throne of Spain under Napoleon from 1813 until 1815, and then in his own right. Like most Spanish monarchs he was a weakling and was completely under the domination of his energetic fourth wife, Queen Maria Christina, daughter of Francis, king of the two Sicilies. This queen was a handsome, energetic, ambitious, unprincipled woman.

Ferdinand VII and Maria Christina had two daughters, who by the Salic law were barred from the throne. Had the royal pair possessed a son much misery and bloodshed would have been spared to their unhappy kingdom. Queen Maria was not satisfied, therefore, with the law, and under her influence the king in 1830 ordered it set aside. This action was vigorously resisted by the Bourbons, to which family the king belonged and who were jealous of the influence of the queen. After juggling with the law for some time Ferdinand settled the question as far as he was concerned by dying in 1833. Thereupon his elder daughter, Queen Isabella II, became queen under the regency of her mother, for she was only 3 years of age. Isabella's claim to the throne was disputed under the troublesome law by the brother of the late king, Don Carlos I. The dispute culminated in a civil war, which was settled for a time by the defeat of the Carlists in 1840. Queen Isabella's reign was disturbed by many revolutions, coups d'etat and changes of constitution, and in 1868 her outraged subjects, alienated by the flagrancy of her private life, deposed her. She is still living in Paris.

WIFE OF DON CARLOS.

From 1868 to 1874 the state of Spain was pitiable. The country was torn by internal revolution, dissension and revolt by its colonies. A republic was tried, but it proved a failure, and the monarchy was restored in 1875 under Alfonso XII, father of the present king. Alfonso died in November, 1885, six months before the birth of the present king, Alfonso XIII. In the interim the throne was occupied by the Infanta Maria Mercedes, the elder sister of the little king. The wife of Alfonso XII, Maria Christina, an Austrian princess by birth, acted as queen regent for both her children.

Don Carlos I, who was defeated in 1840, abdicated in favor of his son, Don Carlos II, in 1845. The second pretender to the throne renewed the quarrel in 1848, without success, although his followers made a stubborn fight. The Carlist strength lay principally in the north of Spain, in Catalonia and among the Pyrenees, as it still does. The second Don Carlos died in 1861, and his claims descended to his son, Don Juan. The latter in 1868 abdicated in favor of his own son, the present Don Carlos and the third of the name. He also has a son called Don Jaime, or James, to continue the fight that has so long torn the distressed country. There was fighting in the Carlos interest all the time, especially between 1873 and 1878. Since then there has been a continual series of small risings and threatened revolutions.

Don Carlos II, the present pretender to the throne and the man in whose interest the present uprisings are taking place, is variously described. By his followers, and he has many in Europe, he receives the highest meed of praise, for he is said by them to be a kindly, knightly personage. They assert, and it cannot be gainsaid if the Salic law be admitted to hold, that he is deprived of his rightful heritage, the throne of Spain. He has also, besides his pretensions to the Spanish throne, a very good claim to that of France, for he is the head of the ancient house of Bourbon. The pretender, who calls himself the Duke of Madrid, is tall, dark and of commanding presence. He is now 52 years of age.

By his enemies Don Carlos is denounced for meanness and love of money. During his early years he was quite poor, and some of his acts in obtaining money to carry on his cause were scarcely such as to commend him to his desperately proud countrymen. His wife, by whom he had four daughters and one son, was a French princess of a younger branch of the house of Bourbon and so related to her husband. She died in 1893. In 1897 he married a daughter of the princely French house of De Rohan, and his enemies say that he did so for her money. It is certain that without it he could not prosecute his cause. He is accused of being an ingrate and a libertine, though of late years he has been much quieter than formerly. He does not, of course, reside in Spain.

DON JAIME.

It has been reported several times that Don Carlos, following the example set by his grandfather and father, had abdicated in favor of his son. The latter is now about 30 years of age and quite rich through inheritance. He is blond haired, full faced and middle sized and was educated in England and Austria. Don Jaime received a military education and is said to be very popular in Spain. Undoubtedly he and the cause of which he is the representative and possible head form the most serious menace to the welfare and peace of Spain.

Society at Its Best.

Mrs. Ronald Stuart is a fair and prominent member of the society circles of Gotham. She does not, however, allow her social duties to distract her from the calls of humanity, and her generous purse is open to all worthy causes. At the recent bazaar held in the Waldorf-Astoria, for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the Galveston disaster she was one of the most prominent workers. The raising of the large sum of money collected was largely due to her efforts in the cause.

A REPENTANT SINNER.

By Count Leo Tolstoi.

Explanation of the cause of Count Leo Tolstoi's excommunication from the Russian church is found by his friends in his latest story entitled "A Repentant Sinner." This story was first published in the Novoe Vremya, St. Petersburg, and such was its unusual nature that it immediately involved all the doctrinaires in heated discussion. Following is a translation of the story:

"There once dwelt on the earth a man 66 years old. He had lived his entire life without virtue and without repentance, and this man became sick, and still he did not repent. And when death approached and his last hour had come he prayed.

"'Lord, as thou didst pardon the thief on the cross, pardon me.'

"After he had spoken he gave up the ghost, and his spirit, beloved of God, had faith in the mercy of the Creator and soared to the threshold of paradise. And the sinner knocked suppliantly for entrance into heaven. From behind the gate came a voice, saying:

"'Who knocks at the gate of paradise? How did he live on earth?'

"The voice of the judge replied, enumerating all the sins of the man. There was not one virtue to his credit. And the voice from behind the gate said:

"'Sinners cannot enter the portals of heaven. Depart!'

"But the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am Peter, the apostle.'

"And the sinner said: 'Have pity on me, Peter. Remember the weakness of men and the great heart of God. Were you not a disciple of Christ? Was it not you who received the doctrines from his lips? You have had the example of his life. Oh, remember! He was in trouble and asked you three times not to sleep, but to pray, and you slept because your eyelids were heavy with sleep, and thrice he came and found you asleep. Even so have I done. Recall also that you renounced him three times before Caiaphas after promising him thrice never to deny him. This also have I done. You will not keep me out of heaven, will you?'

"And the voice died away behind the gates of paradise, and at the same instant the sinner ceased knocking, for the gate of heaven opened. But another voice was heard from behind an inner door, which demanded:

"'Who is this man, and how did he live on earth?'

"Once more the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating all the sins of the man, and there was not a single meritorious action to his credit, and the voice replied from behind the inner door:

"'Depart! So ignoble a sinner cannot live among us in paradise.'

"And the man said, 'Lord, I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, nor do I know thy name.'

"'I am the royal prophet David.'

"The sinner did not despair. He did not recede, but said:

"'Have pity on me, King David. Remember the weakness of man and the large heart of God. God loved you. He gave you a place above other men. You had everything—royalty, glory, gold, favorites and children. But from the infinite height of your position you saw the wife of a poor man. Sin surrounded you. You yielded to temptation, and you took the wife of Uri and delivered her husband to the avenging sword of the Ammonites. You, the king, took from the poor man his last ewe. Even so have I done. And remember how you repentantly said, "I remember my sins, and I repent of them." Even so have I done, and surely you will not bar the door of heaven for me.'

"And the voice died away from behind the inner door of heaven. At that moment the sinner ceased knocking, for the door was opened half way. Then a third voice came from behind the door and said:

"'Who is this man and how did he live on the earth?'

"And for the third time the voice of the accuser replied, enumerating the man's sins without recounting a single virtue, and the voice replied:

"'Get thee hence! Such sinners cannot enter the kingdom of heaven.'

"And the man said, 'I hear thy voice, but I have never seen thy face, and I do not know thy name.'

"And the voice replied, 'I am John the Evangelist, the favorite disciple of Christ.'

"At that the sinner rejoiced and said: 'Now they surely cannot keep me out. Peter and David let me enter because they knew the weakness of human nature and the great heart of God. You, John, will surely let me enter, because you are filled with love. Was it not you, O John the Evangelist, who exclaimed in your lifetime, "God is love, and who does not love cannot know God?" Was it not you who, in your weakness, but repentance, exclaimed, "Brothers, love ye one another?" How will you then refuse me; how will you deny me entrance? Either renounce what you have said or love me and open for me the inner door of heaven.'

"And the door opened wide, and John the Evangelist embraced the sinner and allowed him to enter the kingdom of heaven."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Rich Uncle.

Old Lawyer—How'd I get my start? Well, shortly after I was called to the bar a rich uncle died, and I came into possession of a cool hundred thousand.

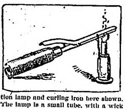
THE HOUSEHOLD.

Women and Bric-a-brac—Self Heating Hair Curler—Salted Almonds.

"There are no people on the face of the earth who litter up the rooms of their homes with so much useless and consequently bad furnishing as do the Americans," writes Edward Bok in The Ladies' Home Journal. "The curse of the American home today is useless bric-a-brac. A room in which we feel that we can freely breathe is so rare that we are instinctively surprised when we see one. It is the exception rather than the rule that we find a restful room. As a matter of fact, to this common error of overfurnishing so many of our homes are directly due many of the nervous breakdowns of our women. The average American woman is a perfect slave to the useless rubbish which she has in her rooms. This rubbish, of a costly nature where plenty exists and of a cheap and tawdry character in homes of moderate incomes, is making housekeeping a nerve racking burden. A serious phase of this furnishing is that hundreds of women believe these gimcracks ornament their rooms. They refuse to believe that useless ornamentation always disfigures and never ornaments. Simplicity is the only thing that ornaments. It does more; it dignifies. The most artistic rooms are made not by what is in them, but by what has been left out of them. One can never quarrel with simplicity, and nothing goes to make for perfect good taste so surely as a simple effect. A tasteful effect is generally reached by what has been left undone. And that is the lesson most needed in America today—not what we can put into a room, but what we can leave out of it."

Self Heating Hair Curler.

A flame to heat the hair curler is not always at hand, especially when traveling, and rather than ask for a light the hair is often allowed to remain in a disheveled state when a few minutes' work would greatly add to the neat appearance of the wearer. With the idea of providing an apparatus which will be ready for use in an instant Albert C. Moore has designed the combination lamp and curling iron here shown. The lamp is a small tube, with a wick at one end and a pronged support at the side, the tube being of the proper diameter to fit snugly inside the end of the handle, being held in place by a snap spring. The reservoir is provided with a screw cap to prevent leakage or evaporation of the alcohol or other liquid, and the supporting fork turns in against the side of the reservoir when not in use. To heat the iron the lamp is removed from the handle and ignited, when the fork is turned outward and the iron rested in the prongs until it becomes sufficiently heated for use.



Almonds as an Appetizer.

Salted almonds still hold the place of honor as an appetizer to serve at dinner with the cheese and crackers or at an afternoon tea. Purchased of first class confectioners they may be classed as luxuries. Prepared at home—and they are very little trouble—they are not at all expensive. Select the best Jordan almonds. These are not the expensive paper skinned nut, but a hard shelled sweet almond that retails at 25 cents per pound in the streets. Crack and blanch by pouring boiling water over them. Let them stand covered for five minutes, then rub off the skins of the nuts one by one with the finger and thumb. This is easily done if the water was actually boiling. Dry the blanched nuts with a coarse towel, then set in the warming oven until all the moisture is absorbed. Measure and allow two tablespoonfuls of the best olive oil or the same amount of melted butter to each pint. Toss the nuts in this until evenly and thoroughly coated and set back in the warming oven for a half hour or until the oil is partly absorbed. Spread the almonds on a dripping pan and sprinkle with two tablespoonfuls of fine salt, taking pains to distribute it evenly. Set in a moderately hot oven until crisp and slightly colored, stirring frequently. If temperature is right, it will not take over 10 or 12 minutes.

To Preserve Stale Bread.

When stale bread has become so hard that it cannot be eaten, it should be grated into a coarse powder and put into jars the same as those used for preserves. If kept well covered from the air and in a dry place, it will keep for a considerable time without becoming moldy or bad. It is not always convenient to obtain stale bread just when one wants it, and these powdered crumbs are very handy to have on such occasions as when a bread pudding is being made, when desired for fowl dressings or in forming meat balls, fish croquettes, etc.

Spiced Grapes.

A good recipe for spiced grapes is as follows: Put five pounds of grapes into a preserving kettle with four pounds of brown sugar, one pint of vinegar, a little pepper and one tablespoonful each of cloves and allspice. Place the kettle where it will be subject to a moderate heat and cook slowly for three or four hours.

SHORT NEWS STORIES.

The Duke Got the Cigar—Gave Way to His Impulse—A Novel Foot Warmer.

Some months ago W. H. Knowles, registrar of births and deaths, Great Harwood, England, addressed an envelope as follows:

"To the Officer Who Hoists the Union Jack (when that happy event takes place), Pretoria, South Africa."

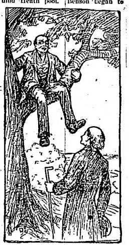
Mr. Knowles inclosed a cigar and a note, "Thanks; have a cigar."

As the war was so protracted he feared the envelope and contents had fallen into the hands of the Boers and that one of them had enjoyed a good cigar at his expense. The other day, however, he received the following autograph letter from the Duke of Westminster, dated Government House, Pretoria, June 7:

> Dear Sir—I write to say that I was the officer who hoisted the union jack over Pretoria, in consequence of which I received an excellent cigar, which Lord Roberts gave to me, having been forwarded by you. I thank you both for the cigar and congratulations and remain, yours truly,
> WESTMINSTER, A. D. C., Headquarters Staff.

Gave Way to His Impulse.

When Dr. Temple, the present primate, was head master of Rugby school, he paid a visit to Dr. Benson, his predecessor in the see of Canterbury, who was at that time the master of Wellington college, says a London periodical. One afternoon the two went for a stroll through the woods behind Heath pool. Benson began to point out to his companion the sylvan beauties of the place, calling his special attention to a magnificent beech tree. For awhile Temple admired it in silence, then suddenly crying:



GAVE WAY TO HIS IMPULSE.

"I can't resist the temptation. Look out!" made a rush for the tree and ere his amazed friend could quite grasp the situation had scrambled up the trunk and seated himself among the branches.

Then the two future archbishops, looking at each other, broke into a burst of schoolboy merriment.

Hot Coffee as a Foot Warmer.

An amusing story is told in connection with a German baker, M. von Cohn, who has just died in Berlin at the age of 87. Years ago he was honored by the friendship of several members of the German royal family, and a tale is told of how on one occasion he managed by his wits to do the Empress Augusta a service.

On an icy day in winter the empress was passing by train through Dessau, and Von Cohn was at the station to pay his duty to the sovereign lady. At that time the arrangements for heating the imperial carriage were of the most primitive order, and the empress complained of the cold; the hot water supply on board the train having given out entirely. Nor was there any hot water to be had at the Dessau station. But Cohn, who was a man of resource, was not to be beaten, bought up the entire supply of hot coffee in the station restaurant and caused the warming tins in the imperial carriage to be filled therewith. Thus the German empress sped away with the unique distinction of having her feet warmed by means of a plentiful supply of hot coffee.

A Mummied Cat.

Miss Agnes Repplier, who is a prominent figure in Philadelphia's coterie of literary people, has a passion for cats. But, strange to say, the deader they are the better she likes them. She has 39 altogether, and there isn't a live one in the lot. They are mostly plaster casts and images that have been presented to her by friends. Even on her doorplate outside her apartments is a framed picture of a cat. The greatest of all is Rameses. Rameses was once a real live cat in Egypt centuries ago. He's a mummy now and is Miss Repplier's choicest treasure. When she went abroad a short time ago, in the excitement of getting off Rameses was left behind. Now, this was a catastrophe, and no pun is intended either. Miss Repplier never goes anywhere without Rameses, and when she found that he had been left behind she was much concerned. As soon as she reached her port of destination she cabled to Philadelphia for Rameses. The mummy was accordingly packed securely and shipped to her.—Philadelphia Record.

Professor W. P. Amalizki of Warsaw University has discovered in North Russia skeletons of an antediluvian race of giants nearly ten feet in height.

The State of Oregon has issued warrants for over $100,000 within a year past for bounties for predatory wild animals killed within its limits. The bounty is paid on scalps of coyotes, wildcats, mountain lions, panthers, congars, gray wolves, and timber wolves.

Six ladies now rank in the professoriate of Swiss universities. Berne has four, one professing the history of philosophy; others are in the departments of surgery and of the Telluric observatory, while the fourth is civic librarian. At Zurich there are two, both in the department of surgery.

The pest-house at South Omaha, Neb., was recently burned to the ground by 200 armed and masked men, who stood off the guards and police. The building was purchased for an emergency hospital for the reception of smallpox patients, and was to have been put in use the following day. It was located within the city limits, and this was the cause of its destruction.

It has been stated that the name of Oklahoma means "beautiful land," but missionaries who have made special study of Indian languages dispute it. They say that it is a Choctaw word, and means "red people." Truth is more to be desired than sentimental appropriateness, of course, but "beautiful land" would so aptly describe Oklahoma that we regret that it is not the true significance of the word.

A tender-hearted Boston physician, on being called to visit a poor patient, found the family in such poverty-stricken circumstances that, besides prescribing, he gave five dollars to the family. The next day, on making a second visit, he learned that another physician had been summoned, and had received two dollars. Some of the remaining three dollars had been spent for beer, a box of dominoes and a pack of cards.

The North Carolina experimental station has discovered that the flavor of eggs is determined by the feed. After giving hens chopped onions for two weeks the eggs became so disagreeable in flavor that they could not be used. Wheat shorts, cotton seed meal and skim milk increased the number of eggs laid, but the eggs had a disagreeable flavor. Cracked corn and corn dough resulted in fewer eggs, but larger ones and of better flavor.

Among centenarians none can be more remarkable than Signor Pacelli, whose birthday has just been celebrated in Rome. He is 103 years old, and in full possession of his faculties. He has played a not unimportant part in public life in Italy, and was at one time the director of the Pontifical customs. He can remember the excitement caused by the Napoleonic campaigns, and was himself present at the removal of Pope Pius VII. from the Quirinal in 1808.

A doctor in Coleraine, Ireland, was sued for damages for the death of a valuable horse he had treated. It was shown that he had administered to the animal twelve grains of some powerful drug, and the plaintiff insisted that the medicine had caused death. The doctor declared that he had frequently given eight grains to a man, and that four grains more were not too much for a horse. The judge asked, "Wouldn't twelve grains kill the devil himself if he swallowed them?" "I don't know, my lord," replied the doctor; "I never had him for a patient." "That's evidently true, doctor," responded the judge, "for the owld boy is still alive."

King Victor Emmanuel has done that which becomes a true man, and therefore something not unbecoming a king. Lieutenant Bresci, brother of the assassin of King Humbert, has had to endure such suspicion and dislike, because of his relationship with the murderer, that his position became intolerable, and he forwarded to the king his resignation from the army. Not only was the resignation declined, in words which revealed the generosity of a manly man's nature, but the king, as a proof of his confidence in the loyalty of a gallant and deserving officer, promoted him to a captaincy, with the command of a fort on the Austrian frontier. It was a magnanimous thing to do, and the young king has given evidence that he possesses at least one of the qualities that made his father and grandfather worthily popular.

The war on cigarettes takes on new importance when the governor of a state in his inaugural address recommends legislation which will prohibit their sale within the borders of the commonwealth. Governor Bliss of Michigan has made such a recommendation. He places the matter upon physiological as well as ethical grounds. His observation leads him to believe that cigarette smoking impairs the health and intellect, and leads to other forms of depravity. The state adopts stringent regulations to stamp out tuberculosis in cattle.

While Delaware is considering the abolition of the whipping post, the legislature of Indiana has before it a bill providing for the punishment by the lash of a variety of crimes and misdemeanors, with the emphasis on wife-beating and family desertion.

Owing to the passage of a new law, private banks in Sweden can issue notes only on the understanding that they must be redeemed within one year. National or state banks may continue to issue currency without any such restrictions.

The Welcome Smile

The thing that goes the farthest toward making life worth while,
That costs the least and does the most is just a pleasant smile.
The smile that bubbles from a heart that loves its fellow men.
Will drive away the clouds of gloom and coax the sun
again,
Is full of worth and goodness, too, with manly kindness
blent—
It's worth a million dollars and it doesn't cost a cent.

There is no room for sadness when we see a cheery
smile—
It always has the same good look—it's never out of style—
It nerves us on to try again, when failures make us
blue;
The dimples of encouragement are good for me and you;
It pays a higher interest, for it is merely lent—
It's worth a million dollars and it doesn't cost a cent.

A smile comes very easy—you can wrinkle up with cheer
A hundred times before you can squeeze out a soggy tear.
It ripples out, moreover, to the heart-strings that will tug,
And always leaves an echo that is very like a hug.
So, smile away. Folks understand what by a smile is meant.
It's worth a million dollars and it doesn't cost a cent.

Churches With Big Incomes

RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES WHICH MIX BUSINESS WITH RELIGION.

The one church in America which has the largest annual income and expenditure is unquestionably St. Bartholomew's Episcopal, of New York. Its income last year—that is, the money value which it represents—was $208,000. This is not an exceptional year, and does not include a big gift of $200,000 made this year for its clinic now building. Its pew rentals alone amount to above $50,000 a year. The sum named includes what it gives to missions, and also the expenditure connected with its great parish house in Forty-second street. A dozen other Episcopal churches in New York and Philadelphia have incomes exceeding $100,000 a year. The Presbyterian church having the largest income in America, is the Brick church, New York, which took in $116,000 last year, a good deal more than half of which went to missions. The largest Baptist church in America is the Fifth Avenue, New York, to which John D. Rockefeller belongs, and through which his gifts, or most of them, go. The church is, apart from the Rockefellers, however, a large giver, and last year its cost, including benevolences, was $145,000. While Congregational benevolent societies have larger incomes than any other, proportionate to the membership of the denomination, individual churches do not run as high in expenditures as do churches in other religious bodies. The most expensive church may be either the Tompkins Avenue, Brooklyn, or the Old South, Boston. Their totals run about $45,000, and this includes only not local expenses, but also mission and other gifts.

The Methodist church having the largest annual income is the Madison Avenue, New York, although there are several others in that city having incomes almost as great. The Madison Avenue's total amount raised was $39,144 last year. Methodism is made up of small churches; its total number of them reaching 53,908 in all America, a larger number by nearly 10,000 than the Baptists, who rank next. In value of church property Methodists outrank all others in America, the amount being $132,980,480.

Can Read Men's Brains

That's the Startling Power Claimed by a Woman.

Miss Maud Lancaster, an Englishwoman has gained fame as a telepathist in London and eastern cities. She asserts that telepathy is a science, and defies the contrary to be shown by inviting to small private receptions, in which she gives illustration of her power, scientists, students, newspaper men, police officials, and all other possible doubters and scoffers who wish to come. There she gives illustrations of her feats in telepathy and defies the closest of these observant and inquisitive persons to say that the wonderful things she does are unreal. Miss Lancaster is the daughter of an English clergyman and has been possessed of telepathic powers since she was a child, but has been using her gifts professionally only a short time. The brain of the average mortal, she declares, is as transparent to her as window glass, and she feels thought waves as readily as one can reach out and finger anything against which their hands strike. Miss Lancaster differs from other experts in telepathy in that she has put her marvelous power to practical account, as she has several times assisted the detectives of Scotland Yard to tracking down felons.

CRUISER CHARACTERS.

Marine Officer Certifies to Correctness of These Tales.

The following products of a British cruiser's ward room have found a way into the Pall Mall Gazette. Their Scheherazade not being of the sex of the fair prevaricator of "Arabian Nights" fame, it has been necessary to audit the tales. This was done by a marine officer—aboard the ship at the time—who now certifies to their correctness. There was once a chief engineer, a patient man who had spent so many nights sitting by the bedside of an expiring boiler, which never expired, but kept on bursting blood vessels and getting a death rattle in its thousand throats, that he had become reconciled to knowing that he would be called upon to stop leaks at all hours of the day and night for the rest of his natural life. His only envy was the man who could sleep undisturbed through the whole night. This man was Bulstrode, chief engineer of another ship. One night the assistant engineer sent a man up to Bulstrode to report the gradual disappearance of the vacuum in the air pumps. Knocking at the chief's door, the man sang out: "Please, sir, the vacuum is decreasing." The answer came back in a drowsy voice: "All right. Report to me if it gets lower." Half an hour later the man again rapped at the door: "The vacuum is much lower, sir." "Very good. Tell me if it gets still lower." After another half an hour: "Mr. Bulstrode, the vacuum's gone, sir." "All right; report to me if it comes back." Not all sailormen, however, have Bulstrode's even temperament. There was a commander of a cruiser who was concentrated energy personified. He was the man who never slept. He was the bugbear of the crew, all and sundry, hence the point of McAlister's tale. McAlister was a boatswain who unexpectedly came into a small fortune, whereupon, quitting the service, he bought a snug little cottage as many miles away from salt water as it is possible for a man to get in England. When he was comfortably settled he employed a boy to come to his door every morning at half-past five, knock and say: "Please, sir, the commander wants you." Whereupon every morning the now free boatswain had the joy of singing out in his grandest voice: "Tell the commander to go to thunder."—Youth's Companion.

WIT & HUMOR

HIS POINT OF VIEW.

From the Detroit Free Press: They were sitting around the big stove in the office of a Grand River avenue hotel where farmers congregate after they attend to the business that has brought them to the city.

"Durned funny how the wheels go round," said one of them. "I can remember back when I was in my teens I came in with father to sell his clip of wool and buy some whisky for the choppers on the place. He got 40 cents a pound for the wool and paid 2 shillin' a gallon for the whisky. Last year I brought in my wool and sold it for 18 cents a pound and paid $3 a gallon for whisky. What's done it?"

There was profound silence for a minute, and then the old oracle from Redford, who was dissipating with a nickel cigar, said "polertics," and the explanation seemed unanimously satisfactory.

"What do you think about this milk racket?" inquired the stockman from the west who had been looking over the local field. "Is there any embalmin' of the stuff goin' on?"

"To be assuredly," from the Brownstown representative. "I know a woman right here in town that was raised on a farm out our way and knows all about milk and butter and cream. She bought two quarts and sot it in a warm place to sour for bakin' purposes and it was sweet at the end of a week. Suthin' was preservin' that milk.

"I don't know nothin' 'bout this formicy hide, or whatever you call it, but I was over to Dan's t'other day and when we was lookin' over his cows and I says, pointin' to a big red Durham cow, 'There, Dan, is the best critter you got in the herd,' he grinned and says back, 'Not by a dog-gone sight, Jimmy; there's my best cow,' and he p'inted to the pump. And when he was showing me through the buildin' I'll bet I see fifty jars of this here condensed milk. I guess you fellers kin do your own figurin', but I'm thinkin' that the innercent farmer's 'bout played out."

NO CHANCE.

"There seems to be some disposition," said the statesman, "to insist that a man who goes to the United States senate shall be poor all his days."

"I never heard of such a disposition."

"Yes, perhaps you have unconsciously voiced it. If a man is rich before he goes to the senate the gossips say all manner of unkind things, and if he gets rich after he goes to the senate—the gossips still say all manner of unkind things."—Washington Star.

NICE FOR THE TORTOISE.

"Now, Mary," said a mistress to her newly imported maid, "in the kitchen there is a pet tortoise and I hope you will be very kind to it. Do you know a tortoise when you see one?"

After having explained it to her the girl went and brought it forth.

"Is that it, mum?"

"Yes."

HE WANTED A DIVORCE.

From the Kansas City Star: "Where's the judge that gives out divorces?"

A negro woman asked this today of the elevator men in the courthouse. A negro man, her husband was with her.

"Do you want a divorce?" inquired the elevator man.

"Yes, sah. We's done 'greed to git divo'ced, an' Will, my man here, has done 'greed to give the jedge power to divo'ce me."

"You'll have to bring a suit first. The judge can't divorce you till you have filed a suit," the elevator man said.

"How much does that cost?"

"Well, the lawyer and all will cost about $15 or $20."

"Shaw, man! Yo' suttenly don't mean it. Why, it only cost us $2 to get mah'd. Um'm'm! Fifteen dollars. It suttenly do cost a lot. Say, mistah, why does it cost more to git divo'ced than to git mah'd?"

"Don't know, I'm sure, but that's a fact."

"An' can't the jedge give her a divo'ce if I give him the power?" asked the husband.

"No—got to have a suit first."

"Um'm'," they both groaned in chorus. Then the woman said:

"I'se got a right to a divorce. Will's bin mean as pizen to me. S'pose if I tell the jedge that he'll take it up?"

"Look here, woman," interrupted the husband, "don't you get too smart 'bout this yere divoc'e or I'll fight it. You know I'se been a good nigger to you. I done consent to give the judge power to divo'ce you 'cause you got yo' mind sot on cuttin' loose. But don't go to settin' up for a angel 'longside o' me or I'll fight it sho."

As they left the courthouse together she said:

"Don't see how I'se goin' to raise $15 for that divo'ce."

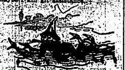
"And den agin I can't swim, but maybe I kin git assistance."



"F'rinstance! Yes, tanks; I'm able to sit up an' eat reglar."

THE METHODICAL MAN.

"I don't know whether I want to be a methodical man or not," said Willie Wishington.

"I am surprised to hear that."

"No doubt. But many cases have come under my observation in which a methodical man is simply one who takes up so much time making memoranda and keeping tab that he hasn't enough to devote to actual work."—Washington Star.

A TESTIMONIAL.

Gentlemen: I recently bought a scalped ticket which the railway people refused to honor when I presented it. I tried various expedients, but all in vain until, at the suggestion of friends I had recourse to your Hair Vitalizer. After the use of six bottles of the same the ticket, I am happy to say, was accepted without question.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS

PREVENTION OF MOUTH BREATHING.

In a former article we considered some of the evil effects of mouth-breathing, and saw that it resulted in injury to the entire respiratory system as well as in actual deformity of the bones of the face. The cause of mouth-breathing is of course anything that interferes with the free passage of air through the nostrils. Thus in the early stage of an ordinary cold, the membranous lining of the nostrils becomes swollen, the nose becomes "stopped up," and the sufferer must breathe through the mouth, to his added discomfort. This is only temporary, yet it is by no means unimportant, for while it lasts it exposes one to inflammation of the tonsils, throat and lungs through the inhalation of cold and unfiltered air.

Of greater importance, however, are the causes of habitual mouth-breathing, from which so many children suffer. The most common of these is a collection of glandular tissue in the pharynx, and whenever a young child is seen to breathe habitually with open mouth, an examination of these growths should be made.

Physicians some times hesitate to remove them, for they say they will probably disappear as the child grows older; but they may not disappear, and even if they do, it may be only after permanent damage has been done to the child. They ought always to be removed when they are voluminous enough to obstruct nasal respiration.

A somewhat less common cause of habitual mouth-breathing is the presence of enlarged tonsils—a condition which may or may not coexist with that just mentioned. These also will probably grow smaller as the child grows larger, but it is far better to remove them at once, before irremediable damage has been done.

Less frequently the nostrils are obstructed by growths, known as polypi, from their lining mucous membrane.

The treatment of most of these conditions is simple, but as it can be carried out only by the physician, it need not be discussed here. The aim of this article is to urge the necessity of seeking medical advice for any one, child or adult, who habitually breathes through the mouth, in order that more serious trouble may be averted.

AUXILIARY BOOK GUIDE.

It does not often occur that an inventor takes it into his head to lighten the labors of the student or applies himself to anything pertaining to books, but herewith is presented a practical idea which will be much appreciated by the bookworm. Its object is to provide a simple and convenient guide to be inserted in books for affording more ready access to references or articles of comment contained in different parts of the book and relating to the same subject, enabling the reader to turn directly to the passage desired. The manner of using the guide is as follows: The reader having found the main object sought in the book places the first index slip in that part of the book containing the nearest reference to the subject, and inserts the companion slips, with their index numbers or marks in consecutive order, in the different portions of the book containing sequential references to the subject. After the slips are thus placed the projecting ends at the top and bottom of the book are laced together to confine them in their place in the volume and convenient for future reference.

THE ROMANCE OF QUININE.

How many of those who fully realize the value of quinine in these days of colds galore and grip, are familiar with the pretty story connected with the drug.

In the year 1638 Donna Ana, the beautiful wife of Don Luis Geronimo Fernandez de Cabrera Bobadilla y Mendoza, fourth count of Chinchona, and governor of the Spanish province of Peru, lay sick and, it was feared, dying of an intermittent fever in her palace at Lima; her physician, Juan de Vega, was at his wits' end; her husband was in despair, when the Corregidor of Loxa, a neighboring state, sent to the former a small packet of powdered quinquina bark, which he knew the Indians prized highly as a febrifuge.

The powder was administered to the countess, with the happy result that the fever left her and a complete cure was effected.

Two years later, in 1640, the much-named Count of Chinchona and his wife returned to Spain, and as the Countess Ana brought with her a quantity of the healing bark, the distinction is claimed for her of being the first person to introduce it into Europe.

Her physician, we are told, made a large fortune by selling it in Seville at 100 reals the pound. It was this famous cure of the Countess Chinchona that induced the great Swedish botanist Linnaeus, long afterwards, to rename the whole genus of quinine-yielding tree "cinchona" in her honor.

In the long-distance race six balloons started, and three of them landed in Russia. Abou 1,400 miles were traveled in thirty-seven hours.

COMPLETE HOSPITAL OUTFIT.

The illustration shows a speciall constructed bed adapted for use i hospitals, provision being made fo treating numerous diseases and als for surgical work. A cooling tank i provided which contains ice and wate and this can be brought in proximit with any portion of the body, whil the remainder is given hot treatment by other appliances. The special function of the cooling tank is to regulat the temperature of a pyretic or febril patient—as, for instance, in spina meningitis, pneumonia, typhoid feve and all forms of eruptive diseases where bodily temperature plays suc an important role. In spinal meningitis and typhoid it may be necessary to apply heat to the spinal column an neck of the patient to produce muscular relaxation, while the general temperature is reduced by the applicatio of the cooling apparatus to other part of the body. The mattress of the be is adapted to be inflated with hot water or air, and in order to maintai the water at the required temperatur the mattress is connected with the water heater in proximity to the bed b means of a pipe. It will be notice that supports for a fractured arm o leg are also provided, as well as a thermometer, writing tablet, holder fo medicine glasses, etc.

Dimming of Eyeglasses.

Constant wearers of eyeglasses, spectacles, etc., are much annoyed by th dimming of the glasses upon enterin a warm room from a cooler place. I will greatly interest them to know that this evil can be obviated by rubbing the glasses with soft soap. Electric Alarm Clock.

An electric time alarm which has been patented lately has at least on novelty to recommend it. It is directly connected to the bed, and it is impossible for the sleeper to stop it unti he gets up to stay. Underneath the bed is a series of contact points, the weight of the person forcing them together. A clock is used in connection with the apparatus, and as soon as the hour of rising is indicated the remaining opening or break in the wire is closed, the current passing through the contact points underneath the bed and causing the bell to ring continuously until the sleeper, by leaving the bed, breaks the circuit. Should he lie dow again, the circuit is again completed and the bell rings until the second rising.—Electricity.

STRENGTH OF PEOPLE.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS ON WISCONSIN BACKBONE.

Widely Diffused Individuality Proves the Greatest Possible Safeguard in Critical Emergencies—Community Evinces Staying Power, which Is Safe Rock of Empire

The building of the State Historical Society of Wisconsin was recently dedicated at Madison. Charles Francis Adams, president of the Massachusetts Historical Society, delivered the address to which he gave the title of "The Sifted Grain and the Grain Sifters." Mr. Adams is great-grandson of John Adams, the second president of the United States. He is a writer of mark, especially in the field of railway questions. In the course of his speech at Madison he said: "It is no part of my present purpose to set forth here your sacrifices in the contest of 1861-'65. What I have undertaken to do is to assign to Wisconsin its proper and relative place as a factor in one of the great evolutionary movements of man. As the twig was bent, the tree inclined. The sacrifices of Wisconsin life and treasure between 1861 and 1865 were but the fulfillment of the promise given by Wisconsin in 1848. The state, it is true, at no time during that momentous struggle rose to a position of unchallenged leadership either in the field or in the council chamber. Among its representatives it did not number a Lincoln or a Sherman; but it did supply in marked degree that greatest and most necessary of all essentials in every evolutionary crisis, a well-developed and thoroughly distributed popular backbone. This racial characteristic, also, I take to be the one great essential to the success of our American experiment. In every emergency which arises there is always a cry raised for a strong hand at the helm—the ship of state is invariably declared to be hopelessly drifting. But it is in just those times of crisis that a widely-diffused individuality proves the greatest possible safeguard. It is then with the state as with a strong seaworthy ship manned by a hardy and experienced crew, in no way dependent on the one pilot who may chance to be at the wheel. In any stress of storm the ship's company will prove equal to the occasion, and somehow provide for its own salvation. Under similar political conditions, a community asserts, in the long run, its superiority to the accidents of fortune—the aberrations due to the influence of individual genius, those winning numbers in the lottery of fate—and evinces that staying power which, no less now and here than in Rome and Great Britain, is the only safe rock of empire. The race thus educated and endowed is the masterful race—the master of its own destiny, it is master of the destiny of others; and of the crowning republican quality, Wisconsin, during the period of national trial, showed herself markedly possessed. While individuals were not exceptional, the average was unmistakably high."

THEY DARED DEATH.

And This to Save the Lives of Pet Animals.

People who have dared death for animal pets and sometimes met it are heard of more often than one at first would think. One day, perhaps a year ago, John Doerflinger, of Brooklyn, was passing through the streets when he heard the whine of a dog in distress. Looking up to the structure of the elevated road he saw in the cross beams a dog which some heartless boy evidently had placed there. Climbing up, getting a foothold wherever he could, he reached the dog's position, and, placing him under his arm, started to descend. Coming down with his burden was much harder than going up, and an unlucky misstep sent him crashing down to the pavement. He was hurt so badly that he was not expected to live, but he pulled through, though the accident left him a physical wreck. The incident came to the notice of the humane people, and rich and poor contributed to a fund which should aid in the support of Doerflinger and his family. Now, by the help of this fund, Doerflinger has gone south in the hope that there he will recover enough of his old strength to enable him at least to do light work. On a cold, icy night recently in Liverpool, George Hemming, a policeman, who was patroling his beat, heard a pitiful mewing, and looking up he saw on the ledge of a building, twenty feet above his head, a tortoise shell cat clinging to the icy cornice. Hurrying to the nearest shop he got a light ladder, propped it against the wall and climbed to the rescue. He reached the half-frozen cat, and was just lifting it from the ledge, when the ladder slipped and he fell on the spikes of the railing below. He was terribly injured, but at last accounts was not dead.—New York Press.

Martial Law in Idaho.

One effect of last year's strike in the mining district of Idaho appears in a bill which has been presented to the legislature of that state. The measure stipulates that martial law under the proclamation of the governor shall not prevail for a longer period than thirty days, and it provides that whenever a county is declared to be in a state of insurrection the governor "shall also immediately convene the legislature in extraordinary session for the purpose of adjusting the difficulties."

Millions of Subjects.

Exclusive of Egypt, the area of King Edward's empire is 11,773,000 square miles, or much over one-fourth of the land surface of the globe. The wealth of the United Kingdom alone, apart from that of India, Australia, Canada and other possessions, is about $60,000,000,000, or second only to that of the United States. The population of the empire aggregates some 400,000,000, being comparable with that of the empire of China.

Rugs Have Supplanted Carpets in All Stylish Homes These Days.

To what extent the rug business has cut into the strictly carpet business cannot be told, but that it is appreciably felt by the latter goes without saying, and that it is making constant inroads upon it is also admitted by all. The growth and the expansion of the rug industry has been wonderful in the last five years, and it may be said that within a twelvemonth it has taken a start forward, gaining a momentum which promises much for the future. It is not difficult to ascribe the cause for this moment, or at least for a considerable portion of it, but it may be difficult to say whether or not this movement carries with it that permanency and stability which goes with most industries. Yet one cannot ignore the fact that there is associated with this business the idea of adaptability and of suitability which seems to argue in favor of its permanence. The rug as it is known today is different from the rug of two decades, or even a decade ago; it has a different place in the question of household economy, and it is this very question of economy which has made the place for it. Crowded cities mean small apartments, shifting population and expedients. The rug is a utility carpet, one that will fit emergencies, that is well adapted as an expedient. This unquestionably has done much to encourage the sale. The ingenuity of the manufacturer in devising the ways and means to meet the wants of the people along these lines has done much toward increasing the market. Judging from what has been done the last few years it might be said that the rug business today is in an initial movement, one that is likely to reach great proportions with recurring years, and that there are even those who believe it will to a large extent supersede and displace the regular carpets; that it is an advance in household economy. In any event, the rug of today promises well for the future, and the struggling ingrain manufacturers, as well as those who are fighting formidable competition in other branches of carpet manufacturing, may look to this one branch of the industry as offering them an escape from the heaviness and depression of their trade. The one who realizes at the start the evolutions in trade, getting in the movement early, is the one who succeeds best.

English Judge's Absurd Decision.

Meekness seems to be at a discount in Ceylon, and a Buddhist priest out there has just been made the victim of what Labouchere rightly calls "Judicial jackassery." Some time ago the priest was molested by a party of drunken, brawling villagers, who tore off his robes, and otherwise maltreated him. He belongs to a sect known as the Ramanui-Nikaya, who are distinguished for the strictness of their observance of the Buddhist religion. One of their tenets is to be meek and long-suffering and put aside all revengeful feelings. So the priest refused to prosecute his assailants. But some meddlesome friends of his insisted on setting the law in motion against the offenders. So the priest was summoned to give evidence before the police court. He declined to do so on conscientious grounds, whereupon he was committed for trial as a recalcitrant witness. The district judge, one W. E. Thorpe, heard the case, and delivered an elaborate judgment, in which he dilated upon the "absurdity and perniciousness" of the priest's religious tenets, apparently oblivious of the fact that a greater than Buddha inculcated the doctrine of forgiveness of enemies and the turning of the other cheek to the smiter. This Cingalese Solomon actually commented upon such teachings as "dangerous to society," and wound up his discourse by sentencing the priest to a fine of 100 rupees or, in default of that, an imprisonment of six weeks.—New York Press.

Defer Not Charities.

Believe not much them that seem to despise riches, for they despise them that despair of them, and none worse when they come to them. Be not penny-wise; riches have wings and sometimes they fly away of themselves, sometimes they must be set flying to bring in more. Men leave their riches either to their kindred or to the public, and moderate portions prosper best in both. A great state left to an heir is as a lure to all the birds of prey round about to seize on him, if he be not the better established in years and judgment. Likewise, glorious gifts and foundations are like sacrifices without salt, and but the painted sepulchres of alms which soon will putrefy and corrupt inwardly. Therefore measure not thine advancements by quantity, but frame them by measure: And defer not charities till death; for certainly, if a man weigh it rightly, he that doth so is rather liberal of another man's than of his own.—Francis Bacon.

A Gold-Bound Box.

A gold miner, living on the eastern confines of the Transvaal, who has during the whole Boer war manfully stuck to his post—cut off for months together from all communication with the outside world—has lately succeeded in getting safely through the hostile country, taking his treasure to the value of £200 with him. To secure this he devised the ingenious plan of beating gold into hasps, clamps, clasps and the like, fixing them securely on the outside of a box and covering over the whole with a thick coating of brown paint. The Boers apparently did not think the box worth taking.—The London Daily Graphic.

A Spider's Anatomy.

The body of every spider contains four little masses, pierced with a multitude of holes (imperceptible to the naked eye), each hole permitting the passage of a single thread; all the threads, to the amount of 1,000 to each mass, join together when they come out, and make the single thread with which the spider spins its web, so that what we call a spider's thread consists of more than 4,000 threads united.

BEST SPRING MEDICINE

The Palm Given to Doctor Greene's Nervura

THE GRAND JURY, THE PEOPLE, HAVE SO DECIDED

Used by Hundreds of Thousands in Spring as a Blood Medicine.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is indeed "The World's Great Spring Medicine." It has come to be recognized by almost everybody as the best possible spring medicine to take, and hundreds of thousands of our people use it during the trying spring months, to tone up anew the relaxed nerves and re-invigorate and enrich the blood.

A spring medicine is a necessity if one wishes to keep in perfect health and vigor during the changes from winter to summer. This grand spring tonic, this perfect spring medicine, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is exactly what the system needs at this season. It not only purifies, but makes rich, red blood; it not only strengthens and invigorates the nervous system, but re-energizes and revitalizes the nerves by feeding them with renewed nerve force and power. It is not only an aid to digestion, but it creates a regular, natural and healthy action of the bowels, liver, kidneys, which in the spring are always sluggish and inactive.

In fact, it is just what people need to make them well and keep them well during these months, so threatening to the health of all, and when it is considered that Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is made entirely from pure, health-giving vegetable remedies, and that people give it more testimonials of cure than any other remedy on earth, no one can doubt that it is the very best spring remedy for everybody to use.

Mr. Gustave Leibach, of 337 First St., Jersey City, N. J., says:

"I was troubled with sick headaches, and could not sleep on account of the pains in my head. I was suffering night and day with dyspepsia, could not eat anything, my stomach would sour so. I had to starve myself to have any ease. I had to give up work at last, I was so nervous and miserable, and I was falling away in flesh so that my friends hardly knew me. I tried several remedies, but without avail. At last someone recommended Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I tried one bottle and began to improve. I started in to eat all right; then I picked up my health; my headaches disappeared, and my weakness and sour stomach went away. I used three bottles and could sleep all night with ease; I used six bottles and felt like a new man. I can now do a hard day's work without any trouble, and I am as happy as a bird in spring. I was so miserable, always suffering, always in pain, but now I am like a new man."

Use Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy this spring, for it is the discovery and prescription of a well-known physician, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th St. New York City, who is responsible for its beneficial action, and who can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

VERDI'S SECRECY.

The Late Composer Was Very Rich, Thanks to Careful Management of the Ricordis.

Verdi was, however, very rich, thanks, mainly, to the excellent management of his musical affairs by the Ricordis. The original Ricordi was a street violinist. None of the later operas can be performed unless the Ricordis have approved the cast, a necessary precaution in Italy, where an opera can be half-ruined by a bad cast, but certain singers, such as Tamango and Maurel, can sing the Verdi operas without permission. Verdi observed great secrecy concerning his operas, even to his business associates, and it is said that the first intimation the Ricordis themselves received of the composition of "Falstaff" was a toast offered by Boito, who, at a supper one night, when the publisher and his wife were present, slyly glanced at Verdi, and proposed a health to the "Fat Knight," at which, it seemed, Verdi and Boito had been working for months. Boito, beyond question, had provided Verdi with another libretto, although it is understood the composer has not done anything of consequence with it, the only unpublished compositions he has left being some short religious pieces.—London Daily News.

AFTER EIGHTEEN YEARS.

Mrs. Doty, of Highland, Iowa, Restored to Health—A Miraculous Case—Her Husband Is Cured of Bright's Disease by Same Means.

Highland, Ia., March 4.—(Special.)—Friends of Mrs. W. H. Doty are very much pleased to notice the wonderful improvement in her condition. For eighteen years she has been a sufferer from rheumatism and the torture she has endured during this time is past all description. Mrs. Doty tells the following story:

"I have suffered for the past eighteen years with Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism. I have tried doctors, patent medicines, plasters, liniments, electric treatments, and nothing did me any good. I had nearly lost all faith in anything, when I sent for six boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I said to my husband I expected that it was some more money thrown away, but when I had taken them a week I could see that they were helping me. The lameness I had suffered with for so long is nearly all gone. It is not a quarter as bad as it was. For years I had to wear a warm bandage around my forehead to prevent the pain. Since using the Pills I have been able to remove this altogether.

"I cannot find words to express my heartfelt thanks for Dodd's Kidney Pills for their wonderful cure of my case. My husband has suffered from Kidney Trouble for years. Last spring a doctor said he had Bright's Disease, and treated him, but he received no benefit, and he kept growing thinner and weaker all the time. When I got Dodd's Kidney Pills he commenced taking four a day. He has taken them three months and is nearly well. His strength has increased, and the improvement in his case is almost miraculous. Dodd's Kidney Pills have certainly been a God-send to us."

It is just cases like those of Mr. and Mrs. Doty that have made Dodd's Kidney Pills so popular in Iowa. They are 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodd's Medical Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

A BUDDHIST'S DEATH.

WEIRD CEREMONY OBSERVED AT PASSING OF PRIEST.

Old Ting Ho-Sheng Died Sitting Up and Was Put Into His Coffin and Buried That Way—Pillows Under Each Elbow.

It is an exceedingly rare thing for a foreigner to be permitted to witness the death of a Buddhist priest, and it was only after a residence of nearly twelve years in China that the opportunity came to me, says a writer in Leslie's Weekly. Old Ting Ho-Sheng, head priest of the "Temple of the Spirit of Light," I had known by sight for several years, and had a more intimate acquaintance with him the summer he died, but I did not expect to be a witness of his death nor to see him die sitting up. Not only did "Old Ting" die sitting up, but he was put into his coffin and buried that way. Disease and native treatment had already placed the seal of death upon the old man, so that at my second visit I could only tell the attendants that his hours were few. Returning to the old priest's rooms a little later, I found him sitting on a broad stool facing the outer door, clad in his fine priestly robes of yellow silk. Being long past consciousness, he was supported by his attendants in this position, with his legs crossed, each foot resting upon the opposite thigh, sole directed upward—an exceedingly difficult, and, in fact, almost impossible position to assume in life. The hands were placed, palms together, up before his face, the whole attitude being that which represents Buddha in the state of Nirvana—and the old man was very near that state. The great anxiety of those in attendance was that he should not be placed in his coffin until he was really dead. Although I could not bring him back to life, they were willing that I should judge when he was dead. Holding a small mirror in front of his face, I waited until there was no more moisture deposited upon it. In the meantime preparations were continually going on around me for further ceremonies. A large pile of paper "cash" had been placed outside the door, on top of which was a document I was not allowed to see, but, from what I could learn, was his history as related to his accession to the priesthood and life in it. Upon being pronounced dead a flaming torch was applied to the "cash" by a young priest, former disciple and now successor to the lands and buildings of the old man sitting before him. No sooner was the paper well ablaze than the young man prostrated himself before it, bumping his head on the ground the requisite number of times, for every movement in every ceremony of the Chinese is regulated by rites as inflexible as law. The next step in this strange death scene was the placing of the body in its upright coffin. The front and top were removed and yellow silk cushions put in the bottom, on which the old man was placed as gently as possible consistent with the awkwardness of his position. Numerous small cushions and wads of thin paper were put in around him, a pillow under each elbow to sustain the arms in their upright position, and then the front was slid into place. More packing was done from the top until his body was immovable and the coffin filled, the yellow silk knot of his hat being the last I ever saw of old Ting Ho-Sheng, who will sit and wait until time and decay do their work in altering his position.

FALLACY OF BOILS.

No Such Thing as Bad Blood, Says Sutherland.

"It is an unshaken article of belief with most people that skin diseases are almost always catching; that they show that the sufferers themselves or their parents are no better than they should be; that they indicate that the blood is bad; that you must be careful or you will drive it in, and the patient will die, if nothing more, and that a boil is worth five dollars in doctors' bills saved. They are all wrong, teetotally wrong on the very best medical authority. Not more than two or three of the hundred or so skin diseases catalogued are catching, and the chances are that the eruption is as innocent and innocuous as a cold. If there is such a thing as 'bad blood' medicine has not found it out. Next to nothing is known in regard to the condition of blood in disease. Chemical and microscopical study has utterly failed to show that there is any difference between the blood in health and the blood in cutaneous disorders. Certain of them are symptomatic of nervous breakdown, and imperfect digestion causes others. Tomatoes, bananas, strawberries, shellfish and other articles of diet, harmless to most of us, cause a rash to break out on others. Evidently the medical profession does not fear driving the disease in, for the treatment for cutaneous affections is now wholly local. A boil is an acute inflammation of the tissues surrounding the hair follicle, and is due to some infection of the follicle by a germ, generally the staphylococcus pyogenes aureus. I thought you might like to know the name. Boils come upon the just and the unjust, on those who have good blood and those who have bad blood. What forms inside the tormenting thing is not the strained out impurities of the blood, for pus does not exist in the blood. It is of local formation. A boil is not worth five cents, let alone five dollars. It is just what your untutored imagination says it is, a confounded nuisance. If anybody owed me five dollars and could either pay it in cash or boils, whichever I preferred, I should take the cash every time, even at a discount. I think I should get more comfort that way."—Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's.

IOWA GOVERNORS.

Compelled to Provide Their Own Homes While in the Office.

Iowa governors have followed various plans in providing themselves with homes in Des Moines during their official terms. Gov. Larrabee occupied a frame house near the statehouse, says the Sioux City Journal. It was not very large and rented for about $50 a month, the sum which the state allows to the governor for house rent. Gov. Boies lived at the Savery house, occupying a small room when he was in town, and when he went out of town over night he gave up the room the same as any other transient. He never entertained. Gov. Jackson, who lives in a comfortable but modest home in this city, met the demands of his position socially in a very pleasing manner, having the assistance of a wife who was very capable and successful in discharging the duties of the governor's wife. Gov. Drake lived at the Savery House, where he occupied a parlor and entertained to some extent. Gov. Shaw has filled the position socially, as well as in other respects, to the complete satisfaction of all demands. He succeeded when he came here in renting a good furnished house from a family that was going to spend a year in Europe. During the last legislative session Governor and Mrs. Shaw occupied the Pratt house on Grand avenue. Since then they have lived in the Victoria, the new Hubbell apartment house. Governor and Mrs. Shaw have entertained liberally and have taken more part in the society of Des Moines than any previous governor except Gov. Jackson. All these experiences prove conclusively that no man can afford to be governor of Iowa unless he is wealthy and has an independent income. Gov. Shaw would probably not like to tell how much it cost him to maintain the governor's office. He urged that the salary be increased for the sake of his successors, because it is wholly inadequate to meet the most unavoidable demands upon the man who would maintain the dignity of the position. Gov. Jackson declined a second term because he found that he positively could not afford to retain the office any longer.

DIET FOR HEALTH.

Eating Such Food as the Family Doctor Prescribes.

Most people who are not in good health know in a general way what ails them; some of them know what kind of food they ought to eat in order to overcome their bodily infirmities and prevent a recurrence of them. But people who have good health usually consider only their taste or their pocketbook when they order a meal. An experiment which one of the Boston hotels is making shows that others beside invalids are beginning to understand that it is important to have the right sort of food as well as to have it properly cooked. The cafe of this hotel provides not only a bill of fare, but a diet list made out by a physician and intended as a guide to the patrons of the house. It prescribes the food best suited to various physical conditions. To the fat man it offers a variety of dishes that tickle his palate, and at the same time check his tendency to grow fatter. The thin and anaemic can procure the things which make blood and tissue and build up an enfeebled system. The new way of looking at the food question puts health first and preference afterward. It considers the needs of the individual, and makes practical application of the old saying that "one man's meat is another man's poison." It tries to make the diet like a well-stocked wardrobe, offering plenty of variety, yet designed for and fitted to the person for whom it is intended. Lilac is a charming color, but the red-haired girl does not need it to enhance her peculiar charms. Sirloin steak is a toothsome and desirable thing, but melons and coarse bread may be better for the full-blooded man who has a tendency to rheumatism. How one can fit his diet to his own needs is a matter which the physician can best decide. It is certainly easier to preserve health by the use of proper food than to regain it by taking medicine; and the prescription filled in a restaurant is pleasanter to take than one compounded by the druggist.—Youth's Companion.

A Preacher's Predicament.

A few weeks ago a noted minister went to one of the local railroad stations to meet a friend, says a Cleveland paper. Upon entering the station and looking around he saw an elegantly dressed woman, who apparently was about to board a train.

She was carrying a number of parcels in her arms, and besides had with her three or four children that with great difficulty she was trying to help along. The clergyman approached the lady and offered his assistance, which she accepted, afterward thanking him very graciously for the kindness. The train moved out of sight, and he went on his way thinking of the endless opportunities one has for doing good, when all at once he discovered that he was carrying a beautiful silk umbrella with pearl and gold trimmings. The reverend gentleman is now enduring distress of mind, fearful that the victim of his absent-mindedness may some day discover him in the pulpit.

Professional Women.

According to statistics furnished by the United States government, the professions followed by women have largely increased in the last thirty years. In 1870 there was one woman architect; now there are fifty. Painters and sculptors have grown from 412 to 16,000, literary and scientific writers from 109 to 8,161, preachers from 67 to 1,522, dentists from 34 to 417, engineers from 67 to 201, journalists from 35 to 472, lawyers from 5 to 471, musicians from 5,763 to 47,309, doctors from 527 to 6,882, accountants from 0 to 45,071, copyists and secretaries from 8,010 to 92,824, and stenographers and typists from 7 to 50,633.

Proposed Alliance with England.

If the United States and England should form an alliance, the combined strength would be so great that there would be little chance for enemies to overcome us. In a like manner, when men and women keep up their bodily strength with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, there is little chance of attacks from disease. The old-time remedy enriches the blood, steadies the nerves, and increases the appetite. Try it for dyspepsia and indigestion.

WONDERFUL CURE OF PSORIASIS.

As a sufferer for thirty years from the worst form of Psoriasis, finally cured by Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I wish to tell you my experience, that others may benefit by it. I was so grievously afflicted that the matter that exuded from my pores after the scales had peeled off, would cause my underclothing to actually gum to my body. After remaining in one position, sitting or lying down, for an hour or two, the flesh on my elbows and knees would split, so thick and hard would the crusty scales become. The humiliation I experienced, to say nothing of physical agony, was something frightful. The detached scales would fairly rain from my coat sleeves. I have read none of your testimonials that appear to represent a case so bad as mine. But as to the cure: I commenced bathing in hot Cuticura Soap suds night and morning, applied the Cuticura Ointment, and then wrapped myself in a sheet. In two weeks my skin was almost blood red in color, but smooth and without scales. Patches of natural colored skin began to appear, and in less than a month I was cured. I am now passed forty years of age and have skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Hoping that others may benefit by my experience, and regretting that sensitiveness forbids me from disclosing my name, I am yours gratefully,

J. H. M., Boston, Mass., Sept. 30, 1900.

Millions of People Use Cuticura Soap

An Ohio editor thinks it quite sad to see a young husband supporting a sealskin wife on a muskrat salary. Another student of human affairs thinks it quite as bad to have a champagne appetite and a lager beer salary. We think it's just as bad, and twice as sad, to see a 50-acre farmer's family living a 320-acre life in town. Another object for the social sorrower's commisseration is the young man who sports a high stepper on an old plug salary, a setter dog on a mongrel allowance, and besides rushes a satin girl, when he should confine himself to calico with the pocket money that is left. Not being personally interested in any of these things, our sympathy has been but slightly aroused for those who are beset with these various troubles and foibles. A person can always sympathize best with the sorrows which he has had occasion to feel himself—and there are things that make us weep. When we see a brother editor trying to run his "engine" at the head of the procession and can't get up steam because his friends don't bring in the fuel they agreed to, it makes our heart ache. An editor's trials are piquantly illustrated by an Iowa craftsman, who says his paper goes to Oklahoma, Texas, and most anywhere; and he has hard work to keep it from going to h——.

The citizens of the village of St. Hilaire in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota, who are qualified to vote at general elections, are hereby notified that the annual election for said village will be held at the village hall in said village on Tuesday the 12th day of March A. D. 1901 between the hours of ten o'clock in the forenoon and four o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, for the following purposes: To elect—

One President of the council.
Three councilmen.
One village recorder.
One village treasurer.
One justice of the peace.
One constable.

and to do any other business proper to be done at said election when convened.

Dated at St. Hilaire this 2nd day of March 1901.

They Won't Help Thief River Falls.

You can clearly see the sentiment of the people of Marshall county by the following taken from the last issue of the Warren Register in regard to the new county division scheme—splitting Marshall county and a slice out of Red Lake county in order to make Thief River Falls the county seat of the new proposed "Lincoln" county.

"Thief River Falls is not going to be sidetracked out of becoming a county seat if the boomers of that lively little burg can help it. Rumor has it that they are now engaged in preparing petitions to circulate praying for the formation of a new county to be composed of the eastern part of Marshall and northern part of Red Lake. The publication of the census bulletin has no doubt precipitated this unlooked for movement, the rapid growth of the townships north foreboded no good for the city founded by Chief Moosedung for they naturally construde this growth to mean the forerunner of a new railroad which when built will crush out forever the chance of Thief River Falls ever becoming a county capitol. The new county in the east when organized will be carved out of Marshall county territory and any plan which attempts to sidetrack the future hopes of the sturdy farmers of our eastern townships will prove abortive. They know that when the time is ripe for a new county they can secure separation without the aid or consent of Red Lake county but they are not going to be Roseaued or Beltramized into a new county to help Thief River Falls out of its slough of despondency and debt. The future spire of political aggrandizement of the next new county born in the east will adorn one of the now existing townships of Marshall county which will afford the farmers residing in its vicinity one of the best trading centers in the northwest."

A newspaper is similar to a mirror. You smile, it responds in good humor; you frown, the compliment comes back with interest. It pictures the city where published. If its merchants are doing business its columns tell the story. If they are shiftless, spiritless fellows, whose stores are jumbles of junk and jam, the newspapers will show it by the lack of space they take. If you want the world to know you have a live town you can only let it be known through the newspaper.—Lansing Journal.

A Brave Girl.

Three girls running a ranch on the plains of Western Texas recently had an unusual lion hunt. One evening the oldest girl started, unarmed, to ride the rounds before supper. While passing a clump of bushes on the creek she saw a large mountain lion bound out a fell a young calf to the ground. Angered by the calf's helplessness, and not fully realizing her own danger, the girl threw her lasso at the animal and caught him by the neck. The horse started to run and jerked the lion over backwards. She raced all the way to the house, the lion only hitting the high spots and choked to death. When she reached the yard she drew rein, thinking the lion dead, but he picked himself up and prepared to spring. One of her sisters fired, killing the lion just in the nick of time. The excitement over the nervy girl fainted. You can build up your nerve by right living, and particularly with the aid of "Golden Grain Belt" beer. It is a wonderful tonic brewed from pure barley malt and hops. Order from your nearest dealer or you can be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

"Mrs. Pinkham Saved me from an Operation."

Hospitals in our great cities are sad places to visit.

Three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls.

Why should this be the case?

Because they have neglected themselves.

Every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back. All of these things are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb.

What a terrifying thought! these poor souls are lying there on those hospital beds awaiting a fearful operation.

Do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an examination and possible operation. Build up the female system, cure the derangements which have signified themselves by danger signals, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from the hospital. Read the letter here published with the full consent of the writer, and see how she escaped the knife by a faithful reliance on Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the consistent treatment of her medicines.

Mrs. Knapp tells of her Great Gratitude.

MRS. F. M. KNAPP

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have received much benefit from using your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. After my child was born, blood poison set in, which left me with granulated inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I had suffered from suppressed and painful menstruation from a girl. The doctors told me the ovaries would have to be removed. I took treatment two years to escape an operation, but still remained in miserable health in both body and mind, expecting to part with my reason with each coming month. After using one bottle of the Compound, I became entirely rid of the trouble in my head. I continued to use your remedies until cured.

"The last nine months have been passed in perfect good health. This, I know, I owe entirely to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My gratitude is great indeed to the one to whom so many women owe their health and happiness."—MRS. F. M. KNAPP, 1528 Kinnickinnic Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

BIG MINING DEAL.

Denver Men Invest in Mining Property Near Lead, S. D.

Deadwood, S. D., March 2.—H. J. Mayham and A. M. Stevenson of Denver closed a big mining deal late last night for sixteen gold mines located in the North Lead district. There were twenty-five owners, most of them being residents of Lead. The purchase takes in the famous Hidden Fortune mine, owned by Otto P. T. Grantz. The Harrison, Durango, Golden Crown and other paying properties are included, together with the fifty-ton cyanide plant on the Golden Crown mine. The deal will call for nearly a million dollars. There are about 200 acres of ground in the deal, which is surrounded on all sides by Homestake properties. The best mining men of the Hills expect that the Homestake ore body will be found to be richer on the Mayham spur than where it is being worked in the Homestake mine further east. It is one of the largest mining deals ever made in the Black Hills, and it undoubtedly means another Homestake mine.

QUEER DISCOVERY.

Strip of Land Along the Border Between Michigan and Wisconsin Lies in Neither State.

Madison, Wis., March 2.—It has just been discovered that a strip of land 250,000 acres long along the boundary between Wisconsin and Michigan lies in neither state. Included in this tract is the city of Ironwood, Mich., the remainder being between the Brule and Paint rivers. E. D. Peake, an employe in the Wisconsin state senate, made the discovery that this strip of land was originally included in Michigan, but was not in the survey when the State of Wisconsin was laid out. The question has arisen as to whether or not official acts, such as marriages and land transfers in the strip are valid, and the matter will probably be laid before the Wisconsin legislature.

IRON WORKS' CLAIM ALLOWED.

Money Was Witheld Because of Delay on Torpedo Boat Ericsson.

Dubuque, Iowa, March 2.—The Iowa Iron Works company, which built the torpedo boat Ericsson for the government a few years ago at their ship yards in this city, is greatly elated over the fact that the government is about to allow their claim of $17,000. This amount was deducted from the price of the boat on account of the delay in the builders finishing the boat, but they recently made the claim that this delay was caused by the government refusing to accept the iron for certain parts of the boat. Senator Allison was instrumental in getting the claim allowed.

JUDGES NOT ACCEPTABLE.

Hence the Iowa-Minnesota Debate Had to Be Postponed.

Iowa City, March 2.—The debate between Iowa and Minnesota that was to have occurred at Iowa City on March 1 has been postponed because of a difficulty in selecting judges. The debate is on the single tax question, and the Iowa debaters have found that the judges submitted by Minnesota have all been members of a single tax club in the State of Iowa. They have refused to accept them as judges, and hope to have the matter straightened out by the 8th of the month.

Tin Mines Opened.

Spearfish, S. D., March 2.—The Bear Gulch tin district, located a short distance from this city, is being opened up and is drawing a great deal of attention. Some of the principal stockholders of the newly organized Niagara Tin company will arrive in the Hills in a short time, when the site for the new 100-ton concentrating plant will be laid out. The tin product will be shipped to Niagara to be smelted.

Washburn May Buy Light Plant.

Washburn, Wis., March 2.—The town board has taken action toward securing the Washburn Electric Light and Power company's plant, by purchase, under the terms of the contract by which the original franchise was granted. The town is paying $120 a year for each arc light, or a total of $4,800 annually, and there is a feeling among many that the charge is too much.

Insane Man Captured.

Winona, Minn., March 2.—The police here arrested an aged man by the name of Martin Feltz who had escaped from the insane asylum at Whitehall. The authorities there suspected the old man had come to Winona on account of having relatives living here. He objected to going back, but had to yield to the officers of the law.

Execution Against Ford.

Faribault, Minn., March 2.—An execution was issued by the district court against E. B. Ford and his sureties in the Dr. Rogers libel case. Ford having been found guilty of libel by the supreme court against the superintendent of the school for the feeble-minded. The execution calls for the fine, $100, and the costs, $80.

Paroled Prisoner Arrested.

La Crosse, Wis., March 2.—William Muller, alias William Franklin, a paroled prisoner from St. Cloud, Minn., reformatory, was arrested in this city on a charge of breaking into a freight car at Toma and stealing some clothing. Muller had on two suits of clothing when arrested.

St. Charles Plans Celebration.

Winona, Minn., March 2.—The Agricultural Association of St. Charles has planned races for Memorial day, a celebration on the Fourth of July and a street fair in the fall. H. C. Bear is president, Carl Cunningham secretary.

Three Boys Injured.

Clinton, Iowa, March 2.—Three boys who were playing in a vacant house smelled escaping gas. They struck a match to discover the leak. The house was demolished and the boys were seriously, if not fatally, injured.

Traveling Library Formed.

Winona, Minn., March 2.—The Thursday club of this city has formed a traveling library of fifty volumes, and it will soon be started out on its mission of usefulness. Its first location is to be determined by Miss Gratia Countryman of the Minneapolis public library.

Hotel in Quarantine.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, March 2.—The Keystone house of Keystone is quarantined, the day clerk having smallpox. The action was taken by the city council as soon as the case was discovered.

SIOUX FALLS SEEKS CAPITAL.

South Dakota Busy With New Contest Started by Caucus in the Legislature.

St. Paul, March 5.—Advices from South Dakota show that that state is in the midst of a lively state capital removal fight. Since the removal of the capital to Pierre ten years ago there have been occasional suggestions of a change, but until recently no formal action was taken. A caucus has been called of members of the legislature from towns with capital ambitions to unite on one town. At Sioux Falls a mass meeting of citizens instructed the mayor to offer to provide site and capitol building in case the capital is removed to that city. At Pierre all other business has been abandoned for the time being, pending a settlement of this matter.

IOWA MAY HELP NEBRASKA.

Plans Care for 300 Convicts From Lincoln in Prisons at Fort Madison and Anamosa.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 5.—A letter was received in the governor's office from the acting governor of Nebraska asking if Iowa would accommodate Nebraska's prisoners while the penitentiary of that state was being rebuilt. Gov. Shaw is in Washington, but Chairman Kinne of the state board of control replied that if two prisoners were placed in each cell all of the 300 from Nebraska could be easily taken care of at Anamosa and Fort Madison.

SERIOUS FIRE AT CAMBRIDGE.

Most Disastrous Fire in History of the Town.

Cambridge, Minn., March 5.—This town was visited by the most destructive fire in its history yesterday morning. An entire block of buildings in the business portion of the town was burned. The fire started at 8 o'clock in the kitchen of the Commercial hotel, kept by J. J. Linehan. The total loss is about $3,500. A strong wind was blowing from the west and the fire for a time threatened the entire eastern portion of the town. It was only by heroic efforts on the part of the citizens that the homes of more than half the people of the town were saved.

HANGS HIMSELF.

Prominent Merchant and Former Member of the Legislature.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 5.—Hans Mikkleson, a prominent merchant of Pelican Rapids, committed suicide by hanging himself while his wife and family were at Sunday school. Mr. Mikkleson had been very despondent over financial reverses of late. He was a member of the legislature of 1895.

His Mind a Total Blank.

Milwaukee, March 5.—The mind of Charles H. Hoff, a teamster of this city, has been totally blank for the past three weeks. He disappeared Feb. 8. Two days ago he found himself at Appleton, Wis., where he was at work with a team hauling logs. Hoff asked his employer how long he had been working in Appleton, and he was told a week. He had drawn some of his pay, but had two day's wages still coming. This he drew at once and immediately returned to his family in this city. Those who know Hoff well do not believe he would desert his family intentionally. The case is one of the most mysterious on record.

Ice Explosion.

Tyndall, S. D., March 5.—A curious phenomenon was observed the other day on the Missouri river near Bon Homme. When the river is frozen over there is a great deal of crossing at that place, many men being engaged in hauling wood from Bon Homme island. The road bed on the ice blew up, carrying great cakes of ice twenty feet into the air. The explosion could be heard for a long distance. The wood haulers abandoned their track for one farther up the stream, when another upheaval warned them to withdraw still further.

Maj. Curtis Dead.

Des Moines, Iowa, March 5.—Maj. H. G. Curtis, recently a member of the United States insular commission which established the government in Porto Rico, died at his home in Atlantic, Iowa. When the major returned from Washington last summer he was in very ill health, but while his strength increased somewhat, he never regained his accustomed vigor. About three weeks ago he suffered a relapse and since then had been gradually growing worse.

Plague Is Spreading.

Cape Town, March 5.—The bubonic plague is spreading here. Five corpses (all of colored persons) have been found since yesterday morning. Ten colored persons and one European woman believed to be affected by the disease, have been removed to a hospital. Numerous persons who had come into contact with suspected cases have been isolated.

Child Burned to Death.

Manawa, Wis., March 5.—Through the burning of the residence of E. Perkins at Simco his six-year-old child lost its life and the mother barely escaped. Mrs. Perkins saved her life by jumping from a second-story window.

Prompted by Jealousy.

Beloit, Wis., March 5—Homer Payne, a mechanic aged forty-five years, shot his wife and Arthur Cady, a neighbor of whom he was jealous, then placing the revolver to his head killed himself. Mrs. Payne and Cady will recover.

Fishermen Rescued.

Bayfield, Wis., March 5.—L. J. Bachand and Eli St. Andrews, the two fishermen carried out from Chequamegon Point on an ice floe were rescued by other fishermen who went after them in a small boat.

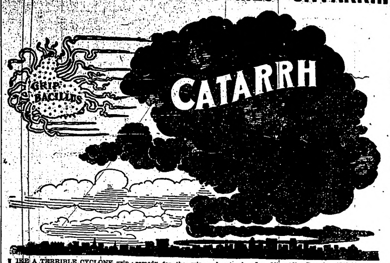
Death Claims Prisoner.

Huron, S. D., March 5.—J. J. Bennash, wanted here for stealing mortgaged property, and for whose arrest a reward was offered, was captured at Edgerley, N. D., and an hour later dropped dead.

Died While He Slept.

Lamberton, Minn., March 5.—Olof Newdall, a prominent young business man, was found dead in bed by his wife when she went to call him for breakfast. The cause of death was heart failure. [illegible]

AFTER THE GRIP COMES CATARRH.



LIKE A TERRIBLE CYCLONE grip bacillus has passed over our country, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, leaving behind it a dark cloud of anguish and despair.

Catarrh follows grip as effect follows cause.

A multitude of catarrh victims will spring up in the trail of the awful epidemic of grip that has just passed over our fair country.

The hope to these people is Peruna.

Most people know this already.

Everyone who has had the least touch of grip, should not fail to take a course of treatment with Peruna.

Peruna eradicates every vestige of the disease and leaves the system in a normal condition.

Hon. Joseph B. Crowley, Congressman from Illinois, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D. C., as follows:

"After giving Peruna a fair trial I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with coughs, colds, la grippe and all catarrhal complaints."—J. B. Crowley.

Hon. George H. White, Congressman from North Carolina, writes:

"I am more than satisfied with Peruna, and find it to be an excellent remedy for the grip and catarrh. I have used it in my family, and they all join me in recommending it as an excellent remedy."—George H. White.

Hon. J. P. Megrew, Superintendent U. S. Capital Police Force, of Washington, D. C., says:

"Having suffered from the grip, I was advised by a friend to use your Peruna. I also used it for my catarrh, and I can now cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone who is suffering from the grip and catarrh."—J. P. Megrew.

Miss Anna Russell, Past Worthy Counselor, Loyal Mystic Legion, 293 Endicott Bldg., St. Paul, Minn., writes:

"For years I have unfortunately found my system in a peculiarly receptive condition for catarrh when I was exposed in any way to inclement weather. At those times I would be severely afflicted with la grippe and its unpleasant consequences.

"Now for the past year and a half I have used Peruna in such cases and have found that it not only cures me quickly, but it also cleanses my blood and renders me less liable to catch cold. It is the finest preventative of colds that I know of and a very superior tonic."—Anna Russell.

Miss Alice Dressler, 1313 North Bryant Ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the bad after-effects remained through the summer, and somehow I did not get strong as I was before. In the fall I caught a cold after getting my feet wet and attending a lecture in a cold hall, and I suffered a relapse. An unpleasant catarrh of the head and throat followed, and as I was in a weak condition physically previous to this, it took but little to break me down completely.

"One of my college friends who was visiting me, asked me to try Peruna, and I did so and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh, but restored me to perfect health, built up the entire system, and brought a happy feeling of buoyancy which I had not known for years."—Miss Alice Dressler.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

DEATH

begins in the bowels. It's the unclean places that breed infectious epidemics, and it's the unclean body—unclean inside—that "catches" the disease. A person whose stomach and bowels are kept clean and whose liver is lively, and blood pure, is safe against yellow fever, or any other of the dreadful diseases that desolate our beautiful land. Some of the cleanest people outside are filthiest inside, and they are the ones who not only "catch" the infections, but endanger the lives of all their friends and relatives. There's only one certain way of keeping clean inside so as to prevent disease and that is to take CASCARETS. Perfect disinfectant and bowel strengtheners. All diseases are

CURE all bowel troubles, appendicitis, biliousness, bad breath, bad blood, wind on the stomach, bloated bowels, foul mouth, headache, indigestion, pimples, pains after eating, liver trouble, sallow complexion and dizziness. When your bowels don't move regularly you are getting sick. Constipation kills more people than all other diseases together. It is a starter for the chronic ailments and long years of suffering that come afterwards. No matter what ails you, start taking CASCARETS to-day, for you will never get well and be well all the time until you put your bowels right. Take our advice; start with CASCARETS to-day, under an absolute guarantee to cure or money refunded.

GUARANTEED TO CURE: Five years ago the first box of CASCARETS was sold. Now it is over six million boxes a year, greater than any similar medicine in the world. ST. HILAIRE SPECTATOR.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOLUME XX ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 13, 1901. NUMBER 34.

STARTS ON HIS SECOND TERM

William McKinley's Induction Into the Presidential Office Is Accompanied by Most Elaborate and Impressive Ceremonies.

Vice President Roosevelt Assumes the Reins—Greatest of All Inaugural Parades—City of Washington in Gala Attire.

Washington, March 5.—William McKinley, a second time, is president of the United States. He was ushered into that office yesterday in a city ablaze with more and finer decorations than ever graced the holiday-loving national capital, whose streets yesterday resounded to the tread of more marching soldiers and sailors than ever have participated in a like function, and had as witnesses to the ceremonies a vast multitude who cheered frequently whenever he or his vice-presidential colleague was visible. There has been better weather on inauguration days and there has been much worse than that which attended yesterday's ceremonies. The day during the forenoon gave promise of being a golden spring day, but by noon a slow drizzle began which lasted, with some intermissions and some lively downpours, the rest of the afternoon. The rain unfortunately came just at the time when President McKinley was being inducted into office on the east front of the capitol in the presence of a crowd estimated to number 40,000 persons. But the air was mild and pleasant and the day ended with dry weather.

Had a man been on top of the dome of the capitol Washington must have looked as it did in the spring of 1865 when the victorious armies and the multitude behind and with them gathered here for the grand review. The influence of the greatest multitude that ever invaded the city, overshadowed all the pageantry and most impressed the mind. Washington had decked herself as never before for of McKinley and the induction into the vice-presidency of Roosevelt. The committee in charge had insisted upon uniform and harmonious decorations. The scheme was superb and it was admirably executed. The gem of it all was the court of honor, where the president reviewed the parade. It extended from the treasury building, with its severe classic facades and columns to the state, war and navy building, with its imposing Italian renaissance architecture comprising the stretch in front of the executive mansion. Guarding the entrance were gigantic white pilons surmounted by bronze urns for the Greek fire at night. Doric columns, like measured sentinels stood before the white roofed stands in which the distinguished personages were seated while other columns ran in a semicircle through the White House grounds. It was as beautiful as the setting in a theater.

Only a comparatively insignificant portion of the vast multitude saw anything of the actual inauguration ceremonies at the capitol. The great umbrellaed thousands were content to wait in the avenue below to see the two men on whom the mental attention of the world was fixed and the great procession which followed them. The brilliant and impressive scene in the senate when the vice president-elect was inducted into office was reserved for a few hundred. The public had no part in it. While the distinguished audience was gathering in the senate chamber the president in a little side room was signing the bills which the dying congress was sending to him.

Roosevelt's Induction.

The senate galleries were already filled tier on tier with handsomely gowned women and men conspicuous in every profession of life. The diplomatic corps, headed by the ambassadors as the personal representatives of their European sovereigns marched in glittering with gold and aflame with ribbons. The admiral of the navy and the general of the army, stiff in gold braid, had taken their places. The judges of the supreme court in their satin gowns, the speaker and members of the house, the governors of the states were all there when the brilliant assemblage felt an electric thrill as the vice president-elect was announced. The greatest curiosity existed to see this man, who has been so much in the public eye during recent years, and instantly all eyes were turned toward him as wheat in a field is all blown one way in a gale. He halted a minute beneath the clock at the entrance, drew himself up until he seemed a foot taller, and marched down the aisle erect and with the bearing of a soldier. He acknowledged the round of applause that greeted him and smiled up at the gallery where his wife and children sat. The president, who was the last to enter, got even more enthusiastic reception. He never looked better and never seemed more graceful and at ease.

When the ceremony in the senate, a little tedious despite its brilliancy, was over, the floor and galleries emptied into the corridors, through which the people jostled and squeezed into the rotunda and out onto the platform erected from the east portico of the capitol building. Upon it were to be seated the senators, representatives, diplomatic corps, supreme court and some of the invited guests. Flanking it on either side were other stands while the steps to the house and senate were precipitous hillocks of people. Below the multitudes filled the plaza and beyond, down the diverging avenues patches of color and myriads of points of steel indicated the assembled soldiery far as the eye could reach. As the first of those from the senate appeared a fine drizzling mist began falling which changed quickly into a pelting rain. Soon it was a veritable downpour. The forbidding aspect drove some back into the rotunda, but many handsomely gowned women, most of the senators and representatives and every member of the supreme court and the entire bespangled diplomatic corps braved the elements. The president and vice president, Mrs. McKinley, the chief justice and several others in the railed and covered enclosure jutting out into the crowd were protected from the storm. There in the presence of 20,000 thousand and in the sight of twice that number of people standing in a soaking rain the president took the oath of office and delivered his second inaugural. The hushed multitude waited breathlessly to see him kiss the Bible, and then despite the rain they awakened the echoes of Arlington across the Potomac with their applause. Hardly had the inaugural been finished when the rain abated, turning into drizzling mist again, and later ceasing altogether.

The president's inaugural address was short. The following summary covers its most salient features.

The Inaugural Address.

In opening the president said:

"When we assembled here on the 4th of March, 1897, there was great anxiety with regard to our currency and credit. None exists now. Then our treasury receipts were inadequate to meet the current obligations of the government. Now they are sufficient for all public needs, and we have a surplus instead of a deficit."

The president pointed out that the congress just closed had reduced taxation $41,000,000. Increasing activity was noticeable in manufacturing and mercantile industries. Every avenue of production is crowded and labor is well employed. The necessity of enlarging our foreign markets is referred to. Whatever remains unfulfilled of the promises made the president says is a continuing obligation upon the congress and the executive. From the obligations imposed by the Spanish-American war the president says it is impossible to escape and would be dishonorable to attempt to do so. Continuing this subject the president said:

"Existing Problems

demand the thought and quicken the conscience of the country, and the responsibility for their presence as well as for their righteous settlement rests upon us all—no more upon me than upon you. There are some national questions in the solution of which patriotism should exclude partisanship. Magnifying their difficulties will not take them off our hands nor facilitate their adjustment. Distrust of the capacity, integrity and high purposes of the American people will not be an inspiring theme for future political contests. Dark pictures and gloomy forebodings are worse than useless. These only becloud, they do not help to point the way of safety and honor. 'Hope maketh not ashamed.' The prophets of evil were not the builders of the republic, nor in its crises since have they served it. The faith of the fathers was a mighty force in its creation, and the faith of their descendants has wrought its progress and furnished its defenders. They are obstructionists who despair and who would destroy confidence in the ability of our people to solve wisely and for civilization the mighty problems resting upon them. The American people, at home, take their love for it with them wherever they go, and they reject as mistaken and unworthy the doctrine that we lose our own liberties by securing the enduring foundations of liberty to others. Our institutions will not deteriorate by extension, and our sense of justice will not abate under tropic suns in distant seas."

Intrenched in Freedom

Of our relations with Cuba the president says: "We face at this moment a most important question—that of the future relations of the United States and Cuba. With our near neighbors we must remain close friends. The declaration of the purposes of this government in the resolution of April 20, 1898, must be made good. The peace which we pledged to leave to the Cuban people must carry with it the guarantees of permanency. Our enfranchisement of the people will not be completed until Free Cuba shall be a reality, not a name—a perfect entity, not a hasty experiment bearing within itself the elements of failure."

A Reign of Peace

The president closes by referring to the progress that has been made toward local government in the Philippines and promises the extension of that policy as circumstances will permit. In conclusion the president says: "We will not leave the destiny of loyal millions in the islands to disloyal thousands who are in rebellion against the United States. Order under civil institutions will come as soon as those who now break the peace shall accept it. Force will not be needed or used when those who make war against us shall make it no more. May it end without further bloodshed, and there be ushered in the reign of peace to be made permanent by a government of liberty under law."

A Brilliant Pageant.

When the president and vice president had quitted the scene to take their places at the head of the procession the soldiers stretched across the place where the multitude had been, their bright uniforms, gay standards and accoutrements of brass and gold and such, showing no bad effects of the wetting they had received. The procession wound down the hill and up the broad rain-drenched avenue through a living lane of people. The crowds had waited patiently through the rain rather than lose their places, and when the parade appeared their ardor seemed undampened. The regulars, infantry, cavalry and artillery, the Jack tars and marines, the somber cowboys, the dark-skinned Porto Ricans in the American uniform, the militia of twenty-two states and the political clubs of the civic division swelled the great procession which escorted the president and vice president back to the White House. From one end of the avenue to the other the troops, keeping step to the rythm of the martial music, rolled on like billows of the sea, their banners and guidons completely filling the vision. Over all was the continuous roar of voices greeting the presidential party. In advance rode a platoon of mounted police, followed by the famous Governor's Island band, playing "Hail to the Chief." Behing these there broke upon the spectators' view the grand marshal, Gen. Francis V. Greene, and his dashing staff. Then the handsome city troop of Cleveland in grenadier uniform, the president's personal escort, rode by, their

to the movement of their coal black chargers. But their claims to admiration wer slighted in a large measure. The craning, eager crowds had eyes only for the open barouche drawn by four horses in which the president and Senator Hanna, chairman of the committee on arrangements sat. The explosions of applause which greeted the chief magistrate were redoubled as Vice President Roosevelt in another carriage, drawn by two horses, came into view. The hero of San Juan received, if anything, a more flattering ovation than the president himself. The Twenty-third Ohio, the president's own regiment during the rebellion, battered and grizzled by time, trudging along on foot in the wake of the carriages, testified to the loyalty of the president's old comrades in the Civil war. The military as a rule created unbounded admiration. Admiral Dewey, Gen. Miles, Gen. Joe Wheeler and many other officers who came into prominence during the Spanish war were lionized. The crowds went wild over the West Point and Annapolis cadets marching with clock-work precision and the rough riders upon their bronchos. The Porto Rico regiment, the Richmond Grays in Confederate gray and the college students from the principal universities set the crowds off again and again. The national guard of the several states made a brilliant showing and many of the governors riding with their staffs were overwhelmed with enthusiasm. Darkness fell as the last of the procession tramped by the reviewing stand.

The brilliant pyrotechnic display set for the night was postponed on account of the weather, but at the beautifully decorated pension building fair women and their escorts danced and passed the hours until the early hours of the morning.

THE INAUGURAL BALL.

As a Spectacular Event Is Surpasses All Predecessors.

Washington, March 5.—The culminating event of the inaugural festivities was the inaugural ball, held in the vast auditorium of the pension office, with President and Mrs. McKinley leading in the grand march, and with men and women distinguished in every walk of life touching elbows, dancing and mingling with the plain American citizen. As a spectacular event it was unparalleled in the history of inaugural balls in the stupendousness of arrangement, in the bewildering splendor of decorations and of marvelous electrical effects, and in the countless throng taking part in the spectacle.

Minnesota Represented.

Washington, Aug. 5. — Minnesota's interest and enthusiasm in the second inauguration of President McKinley were well exemplified by the splendid representation of the state in the inaugural procession. Representative J. T. McCleary commanded the first division of civic organizations, occupying position of honor, and his gaily caparisoned staff attracted considerable attention along the line of march. The Flambeau club of Minneapolis, the St. Paul Rough Riders and the Minneapolis Rough Riders occupied prominent places in the parade.

ON RETIRED LIST.

Operation of Law in the Cases of Hichborn and Colby.

Washington, March 5.—Two prominent naval officers were placed on the retired list by operation of the law on account of age. They are Rear Admiral Philip C. Hichborn, who has been chief of the bureau of construction and repair for the past eight years, and Pay Inspector H. G. Colby, one of the ranking officers of the pay corps. Paymaster Inspector Colby is a native of Vermont, and entered the navy as an acting assistant paymaster in 1863. He reached the highest grade in the corps in April, 1899. His last service was at the naval pay office in Baltimore.

REINDEER FOR ALASKA.

Lieut. Burtholf Is Making a Tour of Siberia.

Moscow, March 5.—Lieutenant Burtholf of the United States revenue cutter service has just passed through St. Petersburg on his way to Irkutsk, whence he will make an eighteen months' trip through Siberia and the far East with the object of purchasing a large stock of reindeer for service in Alaska.

Red Lake Falls Fire.

Red Lake Falls, Minn., March 5.—Fire burned four frame buildings belonging to H. B. Kauffer, Fred Borchers, P. E. Pirath and Theodore Majerus, occupied by S. A. Swanson's real estate office, F. Borcher's saloon and residence, P. E. Pirath, real estate and residence and Berberich & Son, butchers. Loss, $10,000; insured.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 5.—The reapportionment bill was introduced in the legislature yesterday morning just as it came from the subcommittee by Representative W. B. Anderson in the house and in the senate by Senator Daugherty. It was made the special order for Friday afternoon in both houses.

An anti-Sunday amusement bill was introduced in the house by Representative Wells of Wilkin county. The bill provides that no theater shall be open on Sunday nor any public play, show or scene be given on that day. It fixes a fine of from $50 to $200 for violation on the part of managers or others.

The memorial to congress requesting that widows and children of settlers who took part in subduing the Indian outbreak in 1862 be allowed to participate in the United States pension laws was passed.

The bill authorizing county commissioners to appropriate $2,500 for the purpose of erecting mounments or memorials to Union soldiers of the Civil war was passed.

The bill providing for the destruction of the ox-eye daisy was recommended to pass, as was the bill providing for the regulation of the practice of osteopathy.

Representative Jacobson succeeded in having the house pass a motion to the effect that no more committees be allowed to go away on trips without the consent of the house.

In the Senate.

Senator McGovern introduced a bill making the people of disbanded municipal corporations responsible for bonds issued by the municipalities. The bill is supposed to cover the case of the $10,000 in bonds held by Russell Sage issued by the now disbanded village of Reeds.

Senator Knatvold introduced a bill to give the normal school board power to establish continuous sessions at the four normal schools.

Senator Miller introduced a bill to impose a 5 per cent gross earnings tax on all express companies.

Senator Knatvold fathered a measure to change the dates for hunting deer to between Nov. 10 and 30, the present law gives a twenty-days' open season ten days earlier.

Senator Dougherty introduced a bill authorizing the governor to appoint railway conductors and brakemen, station agents and yardmasters as special "railway police," to maintain order and enforce the law upon railroad property.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 6.—The senate voted to adjourn April 5. The vote was on a resolution presented several days ago by Senator Young.

Senator Thompson of Fillmore county presented another inheritance tax law in the senate. The bill is modeled in general after the law passed two years ago, but is made constitutional in its verbiage. It imposes a 5 per cent inheritance tax.

Senator Wilson's bill to permit Minneapolis to increase its school levy from 5 to 8 mills was passed.

A new measure, which codifies all the previous election laws, and with an amendment creating each senatorial district a delegate district for party state conventions, was presented by Senator Knatvold.

Senator Fitzpatrick's bill to establish assembly districts for public discussion throughout the state was killed in committee of the whole.

In the House.

Cheaper fares for patrons of street cars is the object of a bill introduced in the house by Representative Dealy of Scott county. The bill provides that all street railway companies in the state shall sell ten-ride tickets for 25 cents, with the limitation that such tickets be good between the hours of 6 and 8 o'clock a. m., 12 noon to 1 p. m. and 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

Representative Morley's bill for the extermination of the "ox-eye" daisy became a law.

A bill providing for the appropriation of $79,900 for deficiencies in state departments for the last fiscal year was introduced by Representative Jacobson.

The primary election law, which was to have been a special order for yesterday afternoon, was postponed until next Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 7.—The house transacted considerable business yesterday. The most important bill introduced was a measure presented by Representative Stark, providing for licensing peddlers doing business in organized towns. The bill makes it a misdemeanor for peddlers to offer their wares in such towns without having procured a license, punishable by a fine of from $10 to $1000. A license fee of $1 per day, $10 per month or $40 a year is authorized by the bill.

Representative Hurd introduced a bill providing for the regulation of bathing establishments, massage parlors, clairvoyants, mind readers and faith healers. The bill authorizes city and village councils to fix a license fee and otherwise regulate such places or persons.

Representative Alley's amendment to the general statutes, regulating the sale of real estate belonging to the estates of deceased persons by executors or administrators, was passed.

The drainage bill, appropriating $300,000 for the redemption of swamp lands in the northern part of the state, was recommended by the committee of the whole to pass.

Defeat met the bill for the establishment of uniform fees and mileage for grand and petit jurors. The bill raised the fees from $1 to $2 and $3 a day.

In the Senate.

A bare quorum was present when the senate convened at 8 o'clock last night, and after the introduction of a few bills the adjournment was taken until 10 o'clock this morning.

Senator Grindeland submitted a codification of the laws relating to county drainage work.

Senator Sheehan introduced a bill admitting graduates of standard law schools to practice in Minnesota without examination and without fees during a period of two years from their graduation.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 8.—The Deming bill providing for the parole of life prisoners, framed in the interest of the Younger brothers, was yesterday as a special order amended and passed by the house after three hours' debate. The amendment provides that paroles may be granted life prisoners who have served thirty-five years, less the good time accruing for good behavior, by the board of prison managers with the unanimous concurrence of the members of the board of pardons.

Fifty-eight thousand dollars to be expended in extensions and improvements at the state training school at Red Wing is asked for in a bill introduced by Mr. Scherf of Goodhue chairman of the house committee charged with the care of the institution.

A constitutional amendment authorizing the establishment of a state road and bridge commission and creating a fund for the use of the same is proposed in a bill by Representative G. Johnson.

Representative Plowman entered a vigorous protest against granting the $20,000 appropriation for the state exhibit at the Pan-American exposition. Nevertheless the bill was passed.

In the Senate.

The senate spent an hour yesterday listening to arguments from prominent physicians upon the Daugherty bill creating a state institution for the treatment of consumptives. The bill was referred to a special committee consisting of Senators Grindeland, Chilton and Daugherty.

The senate passed the Horton bill allowing the state capitol commissioners and additional $1,000,000 for the completion of the new state building without a dissenting vote.

The senate recommended the Hurd oil inspection bill to pass, with amendments making the scale of inspection fees practically the same as at present, increasing the salaries of deputies and preventing its being in operation until after the present administration.

Twenty-one bills were passed by the senate, most of them of minor importance.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 11.—A strong fight was put up in the house Saturday to wipe out the corrupt practices act. A bill was before the house providing for the repeal of the act. After a lively, and at times spirited, debate it was indefinitely postponed by a vote of 41 to 42.

A state board of appeals to pass upon the grain and warehouse appeals is proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Wilder. The board is to be appointed by the grain and warehouse commission and its members, six in number, to hold office for two years.

A bill for the enlargement of the state forestry reserves and the application of the profits accruing there from to state, county and town purposes was introduced by Representative Bush of Olmsted.

Senator Smith's bill providing for a state loan of $75,000 to farmers for the purchase of seed grain was passed under suspension of the rules.

In the Senate.

Senator Ryder introduced a bill requiring cities, towns and villages to care for sick and disabled paupers furnish them medical aid and board, and in case they die, provide for their burial. The cost becomes a legal claim against the county, and from the county against the city or town where the pauper resided.

Corporations or companies not strictly savings banks are restrained from accepting deposits by a bill from Senator J. D. Jones, prepared by the public examiner. It is aimed at so-called tontine savings associations and diamond companies.

Senator Hawkins introduced a bill to limit the public deposits in banks to the amount of the assessed valuation of their capital stock, the figures of the tax roll to govern.

Fourteen bills were sent to the calendar from general orders in the senate in anticipation of a heavy week's work. The calendar was passed on account of the light attendance.

SESSION IS ENDED.

Senate Finishes Its Business and Adjourns.

Washington, March 11. — After proceedings lasting only six days the extraordinary session of the senate was declared adjourned sine die at 1:15 p. m. Saturday. During the session practically no business except that of an executive character was transacted. The session was called by the president in order that the senate might haye opportunity to confirm appointments made at the beginning of the new administration. That business accomplished, there was nothing for the senate to do, and at the opening of Saturday's session the president pro tem, Senator Frye of Maine, was inducted into office and the oath of office administered by Vice President Roosevelt. Hon. John H. Mitchell, the recently elected senator, from Oregon, was presented by his colleague, Senator Simon, and took the oath of office. He was given a cordial reception by his colleagues on the floor, many of whom had served in the senate with him, and by his friends in the galleries, who greeted his appearance with hearty applause. Through a committee of the senate, consisting of Mr. Hoar of Massachusetts and Mr. Cockrell of Missouri, the president informed the senate that he had no further communications to make. He conveyed to the senators his cordial wishes for their welfare, and his hopes that they might have a happy return to their homes. Without ceremony the session was then declared at an end. For some time after final adjournment many senators remained on the floor of the chamber exchanging cordial farewells. The senate in executive session confirmed all the nominations to office that have been made during the special session.

NIPPED IN THE BUD

STILLWATER PRISON GUARD IS LOCKED UP IN JAIL.

Alleged to Have Been Implicated in a Plot to Secure the Release of Edward Leland, a Notorious Robber—Clever Scheme Was Concocted, but Warden Wolfer Nipped It in the Bud—Name of the Culprit Is Not Divulged—Two Others Implicated in the Affair.

Stillwater, Minn., March 12.—A prison guard, whose name Warden Wolfer does not wish to divulge at present, is locked up in the county jail here on the charge of aiding Edward Leland, a notorious convict at the prison, serving a ten-year term for robbery committed in Minneapolis, in attempting to escape. There are two others implicated in the affair, one being a woman. A clever scheme was concocted which Warden Wolfer succeeded in nipping in the bud. According to reports, the guard, together with a former guard and Leland's paramour, had been planning the escape of Leland for some time. The guard arrested is said to have received nearly $500 to secure Leland's freedom, and it was to be done early in the morning. When Leland came from his cell to enter upon his duties in the dining room the guard was to give him a key which had been made in St. Paul to fit the cellroom door leading to the yard, and Leland was to escape over the wall by means of a rope ladder, where his paramour would be in waiting with a team to convey him safely away from the prison, and of the country. Leland has been a clerk in the prison twine factory, and notes are said to have been passed by the guard both to and from him. Warden Wolfer says a search was made of his desk, but nothing was found excepting bits of torn paper in the waste basket, which were pasted together and are said to reveal all the plans. Warden Wolfer first became suspicious one day last week when Leland's paramour came here and was met after leaving the prison by the guard who, it is said, had spent much time in the woman's company since early in December. Last Thursday the guard had a bogus telegram delivered to him at the prison, stating that his sister was dying. He left for St. Paul, where he was kept under close surveillance by officers and was arrested yesterday on a St. Paul and Minneapolis interurban car by Cellroom Keeper Glennon, who had been sent after him by Warden Wolfer. The guard was brought to this city and placed in jail. Warden Wolfer says there are various reasons why names should not be divulged at present. Some of the parties implicated are presumably not under arrest.

New Order of Things.

Miller, S. D., March 12. — At last the first families of this part of the state are beginning to look with suspicion upon the strangers who are trying to neighbor with them—immigration has started and the newcomers are buying the vacant land that the first settler has used for a small rental these many years. Many an old settler wakes up to the fact that the quarter he had leased, and which he had expected to buy some day, has been purchased of the Eastern owner by an Easterner, and the stranger comes along unexpected. This is causing the original settler to buy instead of renting the adjoining quarters.

Drainage Cases Bunched.

Fargo, N. D., March 12.—The trial of the drainage cases has been in progress for nearly two weeks, and for the purpose of facilitating matters the attorneys have stipulated that the remaining cases be consolidated. The time heretofore has been devoted to one case, and it would take nearly all summer to complete the hearing of each one separately. The final arguments may not be made for some time. There are twenty-seven different plaintiffs and all have a protest to make on the method of assessment.

Church Sold at Sheriff's Sale.

Sioux City, Iowa, March 12.—The St. Joseph's Catholic church property and parsonage, costing $30,000, which were built and dedicated last year, were sold at sheriff's sale under a mechanic's lien. They brought the amount of the bills against them — $163.16. Berg & Weirich, of the Architectural Wood Works company, were the purchasers, they being plaintiffs in the action to foreclose. Rev. E. W. Fowler expects to redeem the property within one years.

Registered Mail Pouch Stolen.

Kalispell, Mont., March 12.—A pouch containing registered letters from the East was stolen at the depot. The pouch and part of the mail matter were later found. Two outside coverings of registered letters were found on the track near the station. No clue is obtainable, nor is it known the amount of registered matter stolen or the value of the same.

Threatened to Lynch Slayer.

Keokuk, Iowa, March 12. — William Edwards was shot at Memphis, Mo., by E. R. Bartlett, an attorney and real estate agent. A mob congregated at the jail and threatened to lynch Bartlett but were persuaded to desist.

Reported Suicide.

Winona, Minn., March 12.—Information has reached this city that O. E. Larson, for four years treasurer of Trempeleau county, committed suicide by drowning himself in Pigeon river.

REMAIN IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Several South Dakota Soldiers Secure Civilian Positions.

Sioux Falls, S. D., March 12. — Information has reached the state from the Philippines that several South Dakotans, after serving with distinction in the military service of the United States and participating in some of the most notable battles with the Filipino insurgents, have secured good positions in the civilian service and will remain in the Philippines. Orman Osbon, formerly of Howard, has accepted a position in the schools as teacher at a salary of $80 per month for the straight twelve months, including two months vacation each year. Robert Wells, another Miner county boy, has secured a place in the quartermaster's department, while Vernon Bennett has accepted a place on the police force. Albert Horne, another South Dakota boy, has secured a good position in the customs house at Manila.

FIRE DESTROYS WAREHOUSE.

Building Formerly Occupied by Pillsbury & Co. Burned.

Minneapolis, March 12. — The two-story warehouse erected fifteen years ago by Charles A. Pillsbury & Co. on Seventh sereet southeast between Seventeenth and Eighteenth avenues, was destroyed by fire yesterday morning, causing a loss of $35,000. The building was filled with goods of a perishable nature and the flames spread rapidly. It covered half a block. For several pears Charles A. Pillsbury & Co. occupied it as a flour warehouse. Recently, however, it has been rented.

FOR MURDER AT STANLEY.

Alleged Murderer Is Arrested at Thorpe and Taken to Neillsville.

Thorpe, Wis., March 12. — Wojahsowa, who killed City Marshal John Moore of Stanley was captured by Deputy Sheriff Connors and taken to Neillsville for safekeeping. His preliminary examination will be held here on March 12.

Winona, Minn., March 12. — The heaviest snow storm of the winter has prevailed here since early yesterday morning. The fall so far is about seven inches, and this with a thirty-five-mile wind is giving this vicinity its first real touch of winter. Street railways are operated with difficulty and all trains are considerably delayed.

WINGS.

The gods but half reluctantly
Grant us the gift of song;
Yet, tawny throat, they give to thee
Pure notes and pinions strong.

To those blue worlds that arch above
We look, aspire—and fail.
Thou, thou dost mount the skies we love,
The stars we never scale.

Thou knowest not, winged soul, the fires
Of that old discord strange,
The vast and infinite desires,
The all too finite range.

So sing for us! Our throats are still,
And song no solace brings—
To whom the gods have given the will,
But not, alas, the wings?

—Arthur Stringer in Ainslee's Magazine.

THE DATE OF THE FLOOD.

Bible Facts on Which the Bishop Based His Question.

Some people had fun over the reported rejection of eight candidates for the African Methodist ministry in the south by the examining bishop because they could not tell the date of the flood. Nevertheless the bishop who asked the question knew what he was doing. It may not have been a fair question, but there is a concise answer to it in the Bible, and he no doubt thought that the eight candidates, if they were well versed in the Old Testament, would answer it at once.

The date of the flood was 1,656 years after the birth of Adam, in the second month and the seventeenth day. It began then and continued for 40 days and nights. This is how it is figured: The third verse of the fifth chapter of Genesis reads thus. "And Adam lived 130 years and begat a son in his own likeness, after his image, and called his name Seth." Then in the sixth verse it is told that Seth lived 105 years and begat Enos. Adam, says the fourth verse, lived 800 years after the birth of Seth, and the latter after the birth of Enos lived 807 years. So it goes on. Enos begat Cainan when he was 90; Cainan begat Mahalaleel when he was 75; Mahalaleel begat Jared when he was 65; Jared begat Enoch when he was 162. Methuselah was born to Enoch when the latter was 65, and when Methuselah was 187 he begat Lamech, and Lamech's son Noah came into the world when the father was 182. This brings us down to the birth of Noah, which, according to the added ages of the several patriarchs at the time their sons were born, occurred 1,056 years after the birth of Adam.

In the seventh chapter of Genesis the eleventh verse reads as follows: "In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up and all the windows of heaven were opened." This was the flood, and it came to pass in the year 1656 after the birth of Adam.—New York Sun.

The Average Lawsuit.

There is nothing more ridiculous than the average lawsuit. Two men dispute over a few dollars and go to law. Both are sure to lose. Their neighbors are dragged in as witnesses, and the costs amount to 10 or 20 times the amount in dispute. Frequently these lawsuits ruin families and start quarrels that last for years. Some men claim it is "principle" that actuates them in these lawsuits. It is bullheadedness, pure and simple. It is nearly always easy to "split the difference."

Another bad feature about these lawsuits is that the county is put to considerable expense, and men willing to work are compelled to sit on the jury. Settle your disputes without going to law. If the man with whom you are disputing is not willing to "split the difference," he will probably accept a proposition to leave it to three neighbors.—Atchison Globe.

Advice From a Butcher.

"What the newspapers should do is to devote less space to describing what people should wear and more to what they should eat," remarked the butcher. "Fashionably dressed women come in here every day who don't know lamb from mutton or a hen from a rooster. No wonder men have dyspepsia! I find that men know more about the quality of food stuffs than women do. Many of the latter don't even know the few simple tests that might help them to distinguish an old fowl from a young one, and about meat they're greener yet. A young woman came in here the other day and asked for two pounds of veal cutlets. I showed her the loin I proposed to chop the cutlets from, and she remarked, 'Yes: that's very nice, but isn't it rather thick to fry?'—Philadelphia Times.

Two Great Objects.

"They say," remarked the very cynical person, "that in this corrupt and superficial age the great object is not to be found out."

"That shows you have very little experience with bill collectors," answered the impecunious friend. "My great object is not to be found in."—Washington Star.

Take Your Choice.

The Buddhists believe that happiness, Nirvana, consists in self effacement, oblivion. The young Buddhas began life by sitting unsupported in the air just after birth. Their mothers attained Nirvana immediately, and they, the Buddhas, reached Nirvana in various queer ways.

One earnest Buddha, one of the earliest of the long line, earned the "Nibbuta" as follows:

A hawk was about to devour a small bird. Said the Buddha to the bird of prey:

"I beseech thee, leave this little creature in peace. I will give thee its weight from my own flesh."

Down from heaven came a pair of scales, and the transaction was accomplished. The small bird sat on one side of the scales, and the Buddha began putting slices of his body into the other side, while the bird of prey looked on with an evil eye. As the Buddha carved himself up the little bird seemed to get heavier and heavier. The beam of the scales did not move until the last particle of the saint's body was put in the scales.

The Buddhists' legends do not tell how the saint managed to carve up his last few fragments, but that is not important. Which do you think was happier, the Buddha who entered into Nirvana as the little bird flew away or the bird of prey that made a hearty meal of the saint's flesh and sailed off delighted with his bargain?—New York Journal.

Cobwebs and Cuts.

An old time remedy to stop blood flowing from a cut is to put cobwebs over it, but from recent discovery it appears a dangerous thing to do. Some time ago a woman fell and cut her head, and when her friends hurried to her assistance they found the blood flowing from a deep gash. Cobwebs were applied, and the bleeding quickly stopped, but in a few days the woman was taken with lockjaw.

A scientist declared there were lockjaw germs in cobwebs, and that was the way the woman contracted the disease. He has made quite a study of the subject and says that in a handful of cobwebs he found 61 different disease germs. That being true, it is very easy to see how one could get not only lockjaw, but many other dreadful diseases, as the cobweb is placed right on an open wound and the germs can enter the blood. Cobwebs form in dark, dirty places, and it is not to be wondered that they gather germs.—Exchange.

The Log of a Ship.

A ship's log is an instrument for measuring the rate at which the vessel is going and consists of three parts—viz, the log chip, the log line and the log glass. The principle is simply this:

A light substance thrown from the vessel ceases to partake of the motion of the vessel as soon as it strikes the water and will be left behind on the surface after a certain interval. If the distance of the ship from this stationary object be measured, the approximate rate of sailing will be given.

The log chip is the float, the log line is the measure of the distance, and the log glass defines the interval of time.

In the old days the heaving of the log required skill and watchfulness, but since the patent log has come into use no skill is required in finding the speed of a vessel. It is regulated by clockwork, and the number of knots the vessel sails per hour is recorded on the dial without any hand touching it.

The London Bus.

"English travelers," says a London correspondent of the Boston Transcript, "have so jeered our advertising outrages upon architecture and scenery that I fancied we were of all nations most culpable. But after a season's residence in England I hold America excused. Our advertising efforts are modest, even feeble, beside those of our British cousins.

"A London bus is a mere advertising van with accommodations for passengers. It takes almost as long to read one through as to read a daily paper. The destination of the bus is marked in inconspicuous letters, the smallest on the canvas decorated vehicle, and the chances of disentangling those letters from the maze of advertising announcements about them in time to hail the bus you want are smaller still."

Crape on the Door.

The custom of placing crape on the door of a house where there has been a recent death had its origin in the ancient English heraldic customs and dates back to the year 1100 A. D. At that period hatchments, or armorial ensigns, were placed in front of houses when the nobility or gentry died. The hatchments were of diamond shape and contained the family arms quartered and covered with sable.

A Helpful Suggestion.

"Kin yeou tell me, young feller," inquired Mr. Reuben Hay of Four Corners, "where hereabouts I kin git me a good farmer suit?"

"Why, there's a good pharmaceutist not two blocks away," replied the young fellow blithely.—Harper's Bazar.

Not True to Its Name.

"Didn't you start out with a play called 'Turned Adrift?'" asked the friend.

"We did," replied that eminent tragedian and repertory actor, Mr. Barnes Tormer, "but we couldn't get anybody to float it."—Indianapolis Press.

The infancy of British manufacturing was nursed by engineers from Holland, who superintended the erection of wind and water mills.

It is one of the privileges of man to live and learn, but some men seem to live a great deal more than they learn.—Chicago News.

D. 1901 at ten o'clock a. m., at a special term of said probate court, to be held at the probate office in the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, be and the same hereby is, appointed as the time and place, when and where the said Probate Court will examine and adjust said claims and demands.

And it is further ordered, That notice of such hearing be given to all creditors and persons interested in said estate by forthwith publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks in the Spectator a weekly newspaper printed and published in said county at St. Hilaire.

Dated at Red Lake Falls this 25th day of February A. D. 1901.

By the Court,
[SEAL] JOHN T. KNIGHT,
Judge of Probate.
(Feb 27-4t-Mar 20)

To Romould Sylvester:—

You are hereby notified that on the 11th day of May A. D. 1896 in proceedings to enforce the payment of delinquent taxes pursuant to that certain real estate judgement, which was entered in the District Court in and for the county of Polk, in the Fourteenth Judicial District, in the State of Minnesota, on the 21st day of March A. D. 1896 the following described piece or parcel of land now situated in Red Lake county, (formerly Polk county) state of Minnesota, to-wit: SE¼ section 25, town 150, range 42 was bid in to the state to satisfy the amount for which it was judged liable in said judgement, interests and costs, for the sum of Twenty-six dollars and eleven cents; that the above described real estate has become and now is the absolute property of the State.

That on the 13th day of April A. D. 1900 the above described real estate was sold by the undersigned County Auditor of Polk county, as directed by the State Auditor in accordance with section 101 of chapter II of the general statutes of 1878, and the several acts amendatory thereto, for the sum of Sixty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents; that the amount required to redeem said piece or parcel of land from such sale (exclusive of the costs to accrue on this notice) is Sixty-nine dollars and fifty-three cents, with interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum from said 13th day of April A. D. 1900, until such redemption is made, and that the time for redemption of said piece or parcel of land from such sale will expire sixty days after the service of this notice, and proof thereof has been filed in the office of the county auditor of said county of Polk.

Witness my hand and official seal this 18th day of August A. D. 1900.

[SEAL] JOHN GLEASON,
County Auditor, Polk County, Minnesota.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE

ST. HILAIRE, - MINNESOTA

Wednesday, March 13, 1901.

At the coronation of Edward VII, the duke of Norfolk will be the "stage manager." His ancestors have been masters of ceremonies at all coronations for centuries. He is entitled to a drinking cup of pure gold, either from King Edward or somebody else.

The New Hampshire legislature will be asked for an appropriation for the erection on the Capitol grounds of a statue of Franklin Pierce, the only New Hampshire man who has been president of the United States. The body of Mr. Pierce rests in Concord, in the old North Cemetery.

William K. Vanderbilt has ordered a new automobile in France that will be nearly 50 per cent more powerful than his famous "White Ghost." His present machine has a road record of fifty-five miles an hour, but the new one will be of forty-two horse power, and able to go at a rate of seventy-seven miles an hour. It will cost $12,000.

A Philadelphia judge is reported as having a most exalted idea of the importance of his court, for he fined a physician for contempt because, being a witness, he had kept the court waiting half an hour, while at the bedside of a patient so ill that he could not safely be left. Said the judge: "It is better that a patient should die than that the court should be treated with contempt."

Mrs. Elizabeth Lidy, 80 years old, six times married and five times divorced, has been adjudged insane at Petersburg, Ind. She began her matrimonial ventures while still a girl, and she continued through life discarding one husband after another, hopeful that she would find an ideal one. A commission decided that this hopeless ambition was evidence of insanity and ruled accordingly.

A "New-Laid-Egg Society" has been organized in England. In furtherance of its object collecting depots are being established at various points. The formation of such a union not only suggests the almost universal propensity of human beings to increase the varieties and numbers of societies, but it testifies forcibly to the fact that recentness in an egg is a form of newrichens which sarcasm spares and good sense welcomes.

A man named Chandloux has just hanged himself at Nevers, France. The circumstances of the suicide are in no way extraordinary except for the fact that the man was the fifth husband of a woman, all of whose previous husbands came to a violent end. The first hanged himself, the second perished in a fire, the third drowned himself, and the fourth and fifth have both been found hanged, and in each case, strangely enough, on a pear tree.

On the Interoceanic railway of Mexico a part of the track has been laid on ties of jarrah wood imported from Australia for this purpose. The jarrah wood is obtained from one of the largest tress of the forests of Australia, which grows to an average height of two hundred feet, and is about four feet in diameter at the trunk. There is usually an interval of 150 feet to the first branch. These trees furnish timber which is sound in every respect, there being an absence of dry rot, gum veins and other defects that often characterize large trees.

"I've kep' school," said a Kentucky mountaineer, whose eyes were opened by a visit to Berea college, "but I can't say I've ever taught." With more adequate provision for training and an ever-rising standard of qualification, the pedagogical profession is taking on new dignity and power. All the more important is it not to rush things, for the finest results must depend on full tides of vitality. In twelve states associations of teachers met during the recent holidays. Schoolroom work is wearing to brain and nerve, and it is open to question whether it is wise to pack the vacations with shop-work, however attractive or handsomely done.

The peanut seems to be playing the part of "civilizer" in some of the foreign possessions in tropical Africa. Traders give a negro a bushel of nuts for seed on condition that he returns four bushels from his crop, and since the yield in good years is twenty-fold, the black man generally has a surplus which he can sell at the rate of a shilling a bushel. From a single station in Senegambia there were shipped, in 1898, twenty-nine thousand tons. Small boys and scientists have long been in agreement touching the value of the peanut; how statesmen also will have to do it honor, since it seems likely to lead the native African into the paths of agriculture.

The superior quickness of American workmen was strikingly illustrated not long ago, when a number of them were sent to Europe with a shipment of American locomotives. With previous consignments only a foreman and his assistant had been sent, and local labor was relied upon for all the work save superintendence; but the foreign workmen were so leisurely in their habits that it took them twice as long as the same force of Americans required for the task. Hence it was cheaper to send all the men necessary to set up the locomotives.

An important change in the new uniforms of the German army is that the buttons are dark and worn beneath the cloth. The shining buttons that glistened in the sun, proclaimed to the enemy: "Here lies a brave soldier's heart. Shoot!" No rational law of war or society demands that risk.

Germany, despite her smaller area, is going in for canal building about as much as the United States plans to. Seven different schemes are incorporated in one bill, the total cost of which will be some $100,000,000.

MAGGIE DARLIN'

A Story of St. Patrick's Day

By Edith Sessions Tupper

"Gee, Tom's in luck!" said Larry Finn, as he watched two of the prettiest girls in the ward sail by the engine house and give Tom Brennan, the handsomest fireman of hook and ladder company No. —— a perfect fusilade of eye adoration.

"To the divil wid Tom," said Dooley Bryan, shrugging his brawny shoulders in downright disgust. "He don't be human. What ails him Oi dunno. All the gurrils in the parish crazy over his dommed black eyes, an' he not noticin' thim. Bedad, Larry, Oi cud knock his head off for a sthupid, onfeelin', graven image."

"Was he always so?" inquired Larry.

"He was," returned Dooley, "iver since Maggie Harrigan tuk the veil."

"Oho!" said Larry.

"They were engaged," said Dooley, enraptured with himself as a gossip, "whin Maggie got the vocation. It was near killin' Tom. But av course he couldn't do nothin'."

"He couldn't?" said Larry. "Why didn't he carry her off?"

"Murther! fot do ye be sayin'? 'Tis the bride of heaven she is. It's ashamed of you Oi am, ye baste. No, poor Tom had to submit, but he's niver been the same. Oi suppose now," concluded Mr. Bryan, meditatively, "if one of thim mimbers av the Four Hunderred were to come by and give Tom the glad eye he'd niver incourage her. 'Tis sthrange thot the nuts allus fall to the toothless divils."

"THE CHILD FIRST, TOM."

With which sage observation Mr. Bryan betook himself to the burnishing of a hose cart as a relief to his overcharged emotions.

All was true. Since the day "Tom" Brennan tore his manly heart out in bidding an eternal farewell to the beautiful girl who renounced him for her vocation the big fellow had never been the same.

All women were like shadows to him. He had loved one truly, devotedly, and he had been forced to give her up to heaven. He could never love another. In vain were appealing and languishing glances sent in the direction of this superb young specimen of Irish-American manhood.

"Tom" never noticed women. He simply went about his business of saving lives and property as if there were nothing else in the universe for a big, handsome, athletic fellow.

Often, as he lay in his bunk at the engine house, as he rode tempestuously through the crowded streets, as he fought the flames, he repeated to himself the last words he had said to his beloved: "I love you, Maggie, darlin'. I would live for you or I would die for you, and since you bid me tear out my heart, I must do it."

St. Patrick's anniversary morning dawned—the very one on which "Tom" had hoped to lead his sweetheart to the altar. He thought of her as he roused from his dreams of her sweet face. Life was over for him, he said. He saw again the crowded church, the white-robed novices. He smelled the incense, he heard the roll of the organ, the solemn voice of the priest. He shivered and, turning, buried his face in his pillow.

Suddenly the alarm roused him. He listened. He sprang from his bunk, and a moment later was down the pole and in his place on the truck. His face was like the face of the dead. As in a dream he heard the cry: "Where is it?" and the answer from a dozen lusty throats: "The convent!"

The convent and the Orphans' Home adjoining were ablaze. It was evident at a glance that the buildings were doomed. The main business was to save the sisters and the children.

The bravery of the nuns and their proteges was only second to that of the magnificent fellows who fought for the lives of these helpless people. Everyone recalls the amazing fortitude and courage displayed at this frightful hour. The children had been drilled for just such a moment of peril, and nobly did they now obey their instructors. Such deeds of heroism as were done that bitter morning are never lost. Their memory remains as an eternal inspiration.

"Tom" Brennan thrust a ladder up to a window of the dormitory just beneath the huge gilded cross that surmounted the roof of the convent.

In this window, serene, calm, her lips moving in prayer, stood a sweet-faced sister, holding in her arms a tiny crippled boy. So symbolic was the attitude of this holy woman that not one heart in the vast crowd below failed to respond.

"It is Sister Mary Beatrice!" moaned the mother superior. She knelt upon the bare ground and crossed herself.

When Tom Brennan, his face blackened with smoke and his eyes blazing with heroic excitement, reached the window, Sister Mary Beatrice looked steadfastly at him with her old sweet smile.

He held out his arms.

"The child first, Tom," she said, as she laid the little boy on the broad breast of the fireman.

A mighty shout went up from the crowd below. All had seen that sublime act. All realized what it meant.

A dozen hands received the child and Tom Brennan turned back up the ladder.

He lifted Sister Mary Beatrice from the window.

For one instant he held her on his heart.

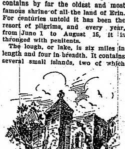
Then as the frenzied spectators groaned and cursed and prayed the convent walls swayed in.

And at the foot of the cross Tom Brennan died for his "Maggie darlin'."

A Famous Irish Shrine

Away up in the north of Ireland, in County Donegal, is Lough Derg which contains by far the oldest and most famous shrine of all the land of Erin. For centuries untold it has been the resort of pilgrims, and every year, from June 1 to August 15, it is thronged with penitents.

The lough, or lake, is six miles in length and four in breadth. It contains several small islands, two of which are known respectively as Saints' Island and Station Island. The scenery for many miles around is neither beautiful nor is it forbidding. It is simply dreary—inexpressibly dreary. There are no trees, no broken or graceful hills, but only slopes of desolate, unrelieved moorland.



RUINS OF THE OLD MONASTERY.

This unpromising spot attracted the attention of the British world in the middle of the twelfth century, when one Henry, a Benedictine monk of the Abbey of Saltrey, in Huntingdonshire, wrote a marvelous book describing the penitence and punishment of a certain knight of King Stephen of England. This knight, Sir Owain (the name is spelled in many ways), seems to have been one of the most appallingly wicked men that ever lived. According to the story of Henry, he entered a cave in the tiny island of Lough, and there passed through the experiences of purgatory. The critic of folklore may deem the experiences of Sir Owain as being only the work of a vivid imagination or a vision of fever, which wrought a deep impression upon his soul. The circumstantial nature of the descriptions, however, impressed the religious world profoundly, and the narrative of the knight's vision of purgatory passed into other lands. One hundred and twelve years after the appearance of Henry's narrative Dante was born. In its "Inferno" his descriptions of purgatory are much the same as Henry's. In fact, it is impossible to believe that the great Italian poem was not inspired largely by the strange, unearthly narrative of the monk of Saltrey.

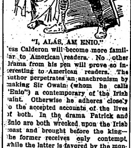
The great work which made Lough Derg familiar to the literary world, however, was not the poem of Dante, but the drama of the Spanish poet Calderon, entitled "Saint Patrick's Purgatory." This was written in 1635, when the author was 34 years of age. Eight years before a book entitled "The Life and Purgatory of St. Patrick" had been printed in Spain, and this is what gave the dramatist his materials.

In this day of Spanish study in America there is the beginning of a revival of Spanish literature and doubtless Calderon will become more familiar to American readers. No other drama from his pen will prove so interesting to American readers. The author perpetrates an anachronism by making Sir Owain (whom he calls "Enio") a contemporary of the Irish saint. Otherwise he adheres closely to the accepted accounts of the lives of both. In the drama Patrick and Enio are both wrecked upon the Irish coast and brought before the king—the former receives only contempt, while the latter is favored by the monarch. Enio elopes with and murders the king's daughter, while Patrick converts his hearers to the Christian faith. The impious king demands an ocular demonstration of heaven, hell and purgatory, and enters the cave in the islet of Loug Derg, from which he never emerges. Enio, returning to Ireland after his flight therefrom) to commit a murder, is prevented and tormented night after night by a mysterious figure, heavily cloaked and muffled, with whom the wicked knight proposes, at last, to fight. The latter finds, however, that his sword only cuts the air. He pursues the figure, and tears off its cloak, only to find a skeleton, while a spectral voice exclaims: "I, alas am Enio. How dost thou fail to recognize thine own self?"



"I, ALAS, AM ENIO."

After this the unique adventure, so suggestive of the later known Rubaiyat of Khayyam, Enio is penitent, and seeks the saints in the cavern. On his way he meets the king's daughter, restored to life. He enters the cavern from which the impenitent never returned. But to the joy of all he again comes forth purified from all crime and relates the strange scenes through which he has passed in the nether world.

The drama is one of great power and of absorbing interest. It will repay a perusal, even in the imperfect translations now to be found in the market.

It is claimed that the original monastery on Saints' Island was erected by St. Daveog, a disciple of St. Patrick. This was destroyed by the Danes in the ninth century. In the thirteenth century the island was already very famous. In 1497 the place was devastated by order of Pope Alexander VI., but it was restored by order of Pope Pius III. Twice has the sanctuary been suppressed by law—once in 1632 and again in 1704. However, no law has been able to lessen the interest in this singularly fascinating spot with its strange history and associations. At the present time about 4,000 people visit Station Island annually. It is but 130 yards long and sixty broad but it contains two chapels, a bell tower, a presbytery, a hotel or "hospice" of sixty bedrooms, and six lodging houses. Saints' Island, near by, contains the ruins of the old, old monastery, destroyed in 1632. The cavern likewise, was destroyed.

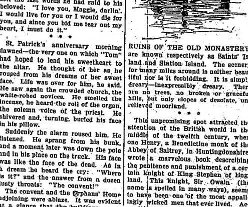
Ship for Antarctic Exploration.

The ship for Antarctic exploration which the German Emperor is having built at the Howaldt Works at Kiel will be 150 feet long and 36 feet broad, writes a Berlin correspondent. It will have a triple covering of wood measuring 30 inches thick, and the better to resist the pressure of ice packs it will have no port holes or windows. Four hundred tons of coal will be taken on board at the start, and this amount will be replenished at Cape Town and at the Kerguelen Islands, where a coaling vessel will meet the ship especially for this purpose. The ship will be fully rigged with sails as well as provided with engines, and will be able to go at the rate of seven knots an hour. It will take four scientific men, for whom there are two laboratories fitted up; five officers and a crew of twenty men, and will also carry a captive balloon and fifty siberian dogs which will be kenneled on deck.

Women Preponderate in Norway.

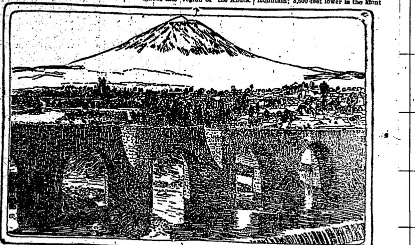
In consequence of emigration there is a greater preponderance of women in Norway than in almost any other country in Europe. The census of 1891 showed that there was an excess of women over men of almost 70,000, while in 1876 this excess only amounted to 48,000.

Grave of St. Patrick



After ages of neglect the traditional resting place of the remains of Ireland's patron saint in the cathedral graveyard in Downpatrick has been covered with a memorial stone, a rough, weather beaten bowlder of granite, weighing about seven tons, from the mountain side of Slieve-na-Largie, where it rested at a height of 600 feet. Upon the upper surface of this bowlder is cut an Irish cross, faithfully reproduced from one cut on an equally rough, unhewn stone found on the island of Inisclothran, one of the islands of Lough Ree, where St. Dairmid founded his famous ecclesiastical settlement about the middle of the sixth century. Under the cross the name "Patric" is cut in Irish characters copied from the earliest known Celtic manuscripts. This simple treatment is considered to be the nearest approach to the form of monument which would have been constructed about the year 469, the supposed date of St. Patrick's death.

Meteorological Science.



EL MISTI, FROM AREQUIPA, WHERE THE HARVARD OBSERVATORY HAS MAINTAINED THE HIGHEST WEATHER STATION IN THE WORLD.

Announcement has lately been made of the abandonment of the remarkable system of meteorological stations, extending in a chain from the Pacific over both Cordilleras of the Andes to the valley of the Amazon, which have been maintained in connection with the Peruvian station of the Harvard college observatory. With the exception of the station at Arequipa itself all are to be given up, the objects for which they were established having been in large part attained.

Observations have been made continuously for more than a decade, and since the phenomena of climate and weather are so much more stable, taking one year with another, in Peru than in a country like our own, it is believed that they will furnish a basis for a fairly complete knowledge of the meteorological conditions prevailing throughout this region of the Andes.

The barometer shows in Peru no such irregularities as in our northern latitudes. There is simply a double diurnal change twice each day reaching a maximum and twice a minimum. January differs from July, but a day in one January or July is remarkably like a day in another.

Among these various Peruvian stations that of El Misti, ten or a dozen miles from the city of Arequipa, is notable as being the highest point at which continuous meteorological observations have ever been taken—19,200 feet above the level of the sea. The station is on the summit of the mountain; 3,500 feet lower is the Mont Blanc station, being at the same altitude as Mont Blanc in Switzerland, where the observatory at Meudon, assisted by the French Academy, for a time tried to maintain observations.

California's presidential electors cast their vote in the largest hall in Sacramento in the presence of an immense assemblage, including the pupils of the public schools.

WOMAN WITH A HISTORY.

Inez Walker, Whom Jo Shelby Helped to Rescue from Mexicans.

There has just died near San Antonio, This county, Inez Walker, for whose rescue from a Mexican plantation several lives of General Jo Shelby's Confederate command were sacrificed on the memorable trip of Shelby's 800 men from the American border to the City of Mexico to offer their services to Maximilian, says a recent dispatch from St. Joseph, Mo., to the Inter Ocean. Inez was the daughter of an American miner and had been kidnaped while in her teens by Rideriguez, a Mexican planter, who held her a close prisoner. Shelby was ten days' march from the City of Mexico when Jim Wood, one of the command, captured a sheepherder, who told him the story of Inez. Wood determined to rescue the girl, and enlisted the co-operation of a dozen men. About midnight, heavily armed, the rescuers stole out of camp and quietly made their way to the planter's house. Rideriguez, anticipating that an attack would be made on his hacienda, had summoned a number of Mexicans to his assistance. The Americans at once opened the fight. With a large beam they battered down the gate of an immense corral, inside of which a large number of Mexicans lay in wait for them. Both sides opened fire simultaneously, each Missourian being armed with a brace of dragoon pistols. The noise of the combat aroused Shelby's camp and the Americans came rushing to the scene. General Shelby himself took command and ordered the hacienda surrounded. The men inside the corral fought like tigers. Five were slain on the first assault. The Mexicans were finally driven to take refuge in the hacienda, which had a high tower. The hacienda was finally taken by assault and Inez rescued. When the dead had been buried and the wounded cared for the column took up its march for the City of Mexico, Inez accompanying the command. The refusal of Emperor Maximilian to accept the services of the Americans is a matter of history. The command disbanded and the men made their way back to the states in small parties, Inez returning with one squad, prematurely aged from her sufferings as a captive. She lived in the neighborhood of San Antonio until her death.

WORK FOR THE CABLE.

Hawaiian Islands Cannot Receive Fresh Telegraphic News.

Honolulu has been visited by a number of people of more or less prominence in the United States within the last month and each and every visitor says: "What you need is a cable to the mainland." Visitors probably notice the absence of the cable more than those who have resided in the islands for some time. Man is a creature of environment and the man who lives here for a considerable period grows accustomed to the absence of a cable, and, while he may think of it in an abstract way, it gives him but little immediate concern. On the other hand, men fresh from the states where they are in constant touch with every civilized country on the globe, excepting Hawaii, by the electric telegraph or cable, at once notice the marked difference here. They are accustomed to daily papers with telegraphic news from all parts of the world, published fresh every morning and every evening. If something of great moment occurs in Europe before 6 o'clock in the evening every newspaper reader in the states can read about it the same evening. Coming here where there is no telegraphic communication with the outside world every active man and woman feels lost. No matter how far away from business cares one may wish to get he still feels an interest in the daily doings of the world. Many of the recent visitors can do much to secure cable communication for Hawaii by agitating the subject when they return home. Let them give interviews on the importance of cable communication to their local papers or else write letters to the papers upon the subject. Action, action is what wins in these days, and constant action in behalf of a cable to Hawaii not only by our own people, but by every visitor will help to hurry along the desired result.—Honolulu Republican.

Things That Need Improving.

We are dreadfully slow in some things. Our clocks keep no better time than the clepsydra of 158 B. C., and are neither more accurate nor cheaper than the Ely Terry timepieces of 1802-1816, which sold for $2 and upward. The average speed of railroad trains is but little higher than it was half a century ago; we are using the same style of locomotives, cars, rails and ties. The piano of today makes no better music than the "cabinets," "cottages," "piccolos," and other brands of the early years of the nineteenth century. They are cheaper; that is about all. The same general style of instrument prevails. A double piano, with two keyboards reversed, giving remarkable effects, was played on at the Covent Garden theater in 1878 and then forgotten. The ancients slept on skins, and rheumatism and a hundred other maladies were unknown. Heliogabalus had an air cushion for a bed in 220 A. D., and water beds have been in use since India rubber cloth was first invented, some 83 years ago. Feather beds were used in England in the reign of Henry VIII., and wooden bedsteads were common in Egypt centuries ago.—New York Press.

A Good Memory.

A bad memory, in most cases, might be more properly described as one rusting from sheer want of use. The fact is our brain cells are always "ready to oblige," but we do not give them sufficient encouragement in their well-meant efforts. Naturally the individual may cultivate a memory for certain details more readily than for others, but the general basis for all recollective acts is the same and there is no department of human mental activity in which the motto that "practice makes perfect" holds more truly than in the science of mnemonics The view may be expressed, indeed, that we never forget anything presented to our brain cells. When we say we have forgotten we really mean that we can not find the mental photographic negative whence we can print off a positive reproduction.—Dr. Andrew Wilson, in London Chronicle.

As an Englishman Sees Us.

"The new Washington," says an English writer in the London Spectator, "is clean and beautiful. It is doubtful whether any such delightful residential street as Massachusetts avenue is to be found on the globe. American domestic architecture is as successful as public architecture, is expensive and often bad, but in these Washington avenues it is carried to the height of comfort and beauty. The green, well watered, fenceless lawns, the grouping of gables and oriels, the pretty porches and exquisite trees and flowers combine to give a most delightful series of pictures. There is not the ostentation of New York or Chicago, but there is more charm."

Where He Should Have Been

A clergyman not long since observed a horse jockey trying to take in a gentleman by imposing upon him a broken-winded horse for a sound one. The parson, taking the gentleman aside, told him to be cautious of the person he was dealing with. The gentleman declined the purchase and the jockey, quite nettled, observed: "Parson, I had much rather hear you preach than to see you privately interfering in bargains between man and man in this way." "Well," replied the parson, "if you had been where you ought to have been last Sunday you might have heard me preach." "Where was that?" inquired the jockey. "In the state prison," returned the clergyman.

Polished Floors in Europe.

In Europe, where polished floors have so long been popular, it is a custom to polish them carefully, and preferably with a cloth fastened on the shoe. Professional cleaners or polishers have learned to skate about at a great rate and to do polishing quickly and well.

JEALOUS OF FRANKLIN.

Attempt Made to Prove a Prior Kite Experiment.

Every schoolboy knows the story of Franklin's kite, but many have never heard of the jealousy and envy that its performance raised among the learned men of his time. Franklin turned his attention to electricity when almost nothing was known about it. From his earliest days he had experimented upon all manner of unsolved problems, building curious machines with his own hands for carrying out his theories. When he undertook to drill a volunteer regiment in Philadelphia he succeeded so well that his troops insisted upon marching home with him and firing before his door a salute that broke several of his electrical jars. In 1752 he made the famous kite experiment, proving that lightning and electricity were one. An Englishman, Mr. Collinson, who had corresponded with Franklin, published several letters describing the experiment. A copy fell into the hands of Buffon, the French naturalist, who undertook similar experiments that attracted the attention of King Louis XV. When an exhibition was given before the latter he bestowed so much praise upon the discovery that French philosophers grew jealous. Who was this Franklin, anyway? America? Philadelphia? Tut, was it even possible for any one to discover things in so obscure a place? Assuredly not. He must have stolen the idea—and with that they began to inquire whether any French philosopher had recently been robbed of an idea. In 1743 an Abbe Nollet had suggested that lightning and electricity might be similar, but he had made no more than the bare suggestion and had never attempted experiments to further his theory. But the philosophers pounced upon him in high glee, insisted that he had been robbed and raised a pretty hullabaloo about the matter until the abbe himself disowned them and honestly gave Franklin all credit. This put an end to such charges in France, but English paragraphers awoke and tried to prove that another Frenchman, M. Romas, had made a prior kite experiment. When, however, it was shown that his kite had gone aloft a full year after the publication of Franklin's letters the attempt fell through and the world—even to the philosophers—agreed that it was quite possible for an American to add to its knowledge, even in Philadelphia.

President Faure's Erudite Daughter.

Mdlle. Lucie Felix Faure, daughter of the former president of the French republic, who has just made her entry into the literary world by a critical work on Newman, is said to be a young woman of great erudition and of considerable originality of thought. She reads the classics in the text, is an excellent Latinist and a distinguished Greek scholar. Her book on Cardinal Newman is a psychological analysis from the Roman Catholic view point. The author is very devout. Mdlle. Felix Faure, with her mother, has lived very quietly since they left the Elysee. She is very rich, occupies herself with philanthropic work, and is the president of the Charitable League of the Children of France, of which she is the founder.

Story of Automatic Coupling.

A Chicago man, recently returned from a trip through Iowa, brought rather a tall railroad wreck story with him. A freight train was rumbling along when a defective wheel on a car in the middle of the train threw a car off the track, dragging another with it. The two cars rolled clear and all the others remained on the rails. The engineer slowed up as soon as possible and the detached portion of the train came up and coupled automatically. The train was thus ready to proceed, which it did, thus leaving the two wrecked cars in the ditch.

Sir Charles Gavan Duffy, K. C. M. G., has presented to the Royal Irish Academy his valuable collection of books, manuscripts and curios relating to Ireland. His "Ballad Poetry of Ireland," which was issued in 1845, has passed no fewer than fifty editions.

THE OLD SPRING

A path that leads from the kitchen door,
Through a little garden plot,
Down past the cherry and apple trees
That grow in the pasture lot,
Thence on through a beechen avenue
Till you hear the waters trill
Upon the pebbles and over the stones
By the old spring under the hill!

The old spring under the hill is cool,
With blotches and rifts of sun;
Its air is as grateful and fresh and sweet
As the air of a summer dawn.
The song of a bird in the trees above,
Below the song of a rill
Are the only sounds that are heard around
The old spring under the hill.

How oft we have trudged in other days,
When boys and girls at our play,
To the shade and stillness of that old spring,
Remote from the garish day!
How oft by its sparkling waters clear,
We have knelt and quaffed our fill!
And never a draught was so sweet as that
From the old spring under the hill.

The years are many, the years are long
Between us and that fair time;
We hear no more the tinkling song,
Nor the water's silver chime;
But oft in the mirror of Memory
We can see the image still
Of the winding pathway, the shadows deep,
And the old spring under the hill.

An Anti-Microbe Crusade.

BY KATHERINE LOUISE SMITH.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

It was appendicitis season. We were simple folks and not fashionable, and so did not fall into the hands of the surgeon, but Maria said this was due to her extreme caution in selecting food for our table.

"Appendicitis," said Maria with a sort of differential look, "has been here all the time only, like the bacilli and microbes, we did not know it. Now we do, or are liable to have it."

It was the time of fruits, God's own gift to nature, but we ate no grapes, strawberries or currants for fear of their being dead shots for appendicitis. It was this time of fruit that I called Maria's attention to the fact that people who ate all these things seemed to be as well as those who did not.

"Maria," I said with a rebellious air, "don't you know the doctors are on the look out for a vermiform appendix irrespective of what anyone has eaten or proposes to eat?"

To which Maria replied that "it was well to be on the safe side," meaning, of course, the opposite to the appendicitis side, and cut all fruit from our table. I am particularly fond of tomatoes and we had been eating them freely when Maria came across an article in the Lancet or some other medical journal, saying they produced cancer. Instantly we tabooed tomatoes. Of course, we had known all along that cucumbers and watermelons gave one cholera morbus, so these were entered on the death list early in our housekeeping venture. All this rather limited our diet, but my wife was ingenious and concocted a great many dishes that we felt sure were all right, and we always boiled the drinking water. We had pork and beans occasionally like my New England ancestors, and once in a while Maria allowed a pie to decorate our table. However, one day I ran across an article stating half the woes of the world were due to indigestion, and New England stomachs, caused by New England pork and beans, had caused more crime in the world than we were aware of.

"Maria," I remarked as we partook of our dinner, "we must instantly stop pork and beans. Think of the New England stomach as a factor in crime," and I called her attention to the fact that Lombroso had entirely overlooked this in writing his "Female Offender."

"Still," said my wife, who was always hopeful, "we have our bread, Thaddeus; our good, sweet, wholesome bread, and I am sure we boil all the water we use."

We rested calmly on the assumption that all was well and we were devouring no microbean morsels when to Maria's horror she one day discovered that white bread had a tendency to produce diabetes and that beef and tapeworm went together. The utter despair that followed these discoveries produced a complete reaction, and we decided to eat everything, microbes and all. Still we boiled the water and shunned as deadly any that had not gone through the distilled-anti-bacilli process. In fact, Maria had ascribed my immunity from typhoid fever, diptheria and pneumonia, let alone premature baldness and other misfortunes to this saving process, and we had often smiled as we realized that we had got the better of defunct frogs and microbes with long names and short legs, knowing they could not harm a family whose aqueous beverage had been boiled, distilled, filtered and kept hermetically sealed until used.

"We must instantly stop pork and beans."

Maria talked much of this. I heard her tell her friends in bursts of sudden confidence, just how many twists she gave to the top of the jar to be sure it was sealed. I heard her dilate on how well I had been in consequence, and I listened while she told how she stood the jar on its head to see if anything ran out. Maria got me and the bottle and the hermetically sealed and standing on the head process so mixed in her auditor's mind that I determined to have my revenge.

I was passing a newsstand one day and purchased a scientific magazine. The first thing that met my gaze was an article upon the ill repute in which boiled water should be held. When I saw that Dr. Koppe a learned and respected member of medical societies without number, was the writer and that the excerpt was from the Deutsho Medicinashe Wochsorift I knew it was all right. The length and unintelligibility of the name gave me utter confidence. I waited until we were at the dinner table and the maid had just filled our glasses with our boiled-distilled-filtered - hermetically-sealed-until-used water, when I opened my attack.

"Maria," I said with feigned solicitude, "you are not looking well; what is the matter?"

"Oh, nothing," replied my wife smilingly, "I have had, in fact, a delightful afternoon. We went to the park, walked around, drank some of that pure spring water and came home."

"My dear girl," I cried holding up my hands in affected horror. "It is wonderful you are alive. Do you know so little that you drink spring water? It is too pure. It does not contain salts and hence the microbes in it cannot live."

"Pshaw," exclaimed Maria with a sort of don't-trifle-with-me air, "Thaddeus you are crazy. You know we boil all our table water just to get rid of these microbes, and after it is boiled we put——"

"Maria," I cried, as I gave my glass a push away from my plate, "spare me the details. I know it all and we have been all wrong. Here I am coming down with catarrh of the stomach all on account of that distilled water."

I . . . purchased a scientific magazine.

"I don't see what you mean," averred Maria a little crossly. "I try so hard to keep you well. I boil the water and filter it and then it is put——"

"My dear wife," I announced solemnly, "this is no time for trifling. Ring the bell and order water fresh from the faucet put on the table. We are drinking in distilled water a protoplasmic poison. I don't exactly know what that means, but the words are so indigestible I am sure it is right. Isolated, living organic elements, cells and all unicellular organisms," I went on rapidly bracing my feet against the table to give momentum, "are rapidly destroyed in distilled water. They are therefore dead in the water, and in this way we lose the salts and soluble cell constituents we need in our constitution."

I managed to get this last off glibly, and with a nonchalant air, for I was quite proud of the long words and hoped Maria would think it original. I paused to get breath, and while I did so saw Maria pour the contents of her glass back into the pitcher.

"Thaddeus," said Maria at length, bracing up against the loss of one of her pet theories, "do I understand we will be too fresh if we drink distilled water? That while we render harmless the sort of frog broth we are inviting all sorts of polysyllabic perils?"

"I do," I said, "and I am going to write to the German savant and thank him.'

"Well," sighed Maria, "it is distracting to keep up with the different theories. We won't boil our water any more, but certainly you will keep on drinking a great deal every day. You know the doctors say there is no doubt but that none of us drink enough water. We ought to drink three or four quarts a day it is so cleansing and beneficial generally."

"Oh, certainly," I replied with a chuckle, "I am willing to keep on making an impromptu tank of myself, but mark my words, Maria, in a few months reaction will set in here also, and we shall read of water on the brain or aqueous humor of the heart caused by too much water drinking."

And this last looked so probable Maria did not answer.

Great System of Espionage.

A banished Siberian prisoner, who was ordered to move from one district to another and allowed 2 shillings for his expenses on the journey, to be paid to him in installments at certain specified villages through which he passed, had his last installment of 2½ pence handed to him at his last stopping station, and his identity book being pretty well filled up, the clerk entered the payment in very small characters at the foot of the cover. On arriving at his place of destination, says a St. Petersburg correspondent, the prisoner handed in his book, and the entry of the last payment having been overlooked a voluminous correspondence between the various authorities ensued and special messengers were employed. The mayor of Ilimsk has at last discovered the entry.

Texas May Claim Oil Well.

The great oil well at Beaumont may yet prove to belong to the state of Texas. Even if it does not, most of the other wells of the new oil field will certainly belong to the state unless the legislature repeals an old statute. This statute was adopted in 1883 and provided that all oils and minerals found on school lands should belong to the state. At that time nearly all of the new field belonged to the school fund, and though much has since been sold the statute, as worded, still applies.

Strawberries and Earmuffs.

One afternoon last week a loud-voiced huckster paraded upper Broadway, New York, selling strawberries at 50 cents a box. On the other side of the street was a man selling earmuffs at a quarter a pair. Each of the merchants was doing good business.

STORM SIGNALS

RECENT EXPERIMENTS WITH WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Wireless telegraphy, high towers and electric lights are some of the devices which the weather bureau is bringing into play for the improvement of the service. Prof. R. A. Fessenden of the weather bureau is making experiments with wireless telegraphy along the Atlantic coast from Cape Hatteras to Cape Henry, says the New York Press. This marks the first serious attempt to communicate warnings to vessels at sea off the dangerous coasts of Virginia and the Carolinas. It is intended to send storm signals to all the life-saving stations along the coast by this means when the wires are down, as they frequently are. Then each life-saving station can hoist storm signals and warn vessels off shore. The towers for the wireless telegraphy are being erected, and a corps of experts will aid Prof. Fessenden in his experiments. If they are successful it is probable that the system will be extended all along the coast. In increasing the height of the towers at signal stations of the weather bureau the idea is to make the warning of the bureau visible over a greater area. Already fifty high steel towers have been built, and 100 more have been contracted for. They will be erected at stations on the shores of the great lakes and on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. On these towers are to be hoisted the flags which show by day and the lamps which shine by night to warn the mariner of approaching storms. Just now the government is looking for the best sort of lens to use in the signal lamps. Not only American but foreign firms have entered into the competition, and the government is sure to get the best lenses made in the world for the purpose. As far as possible, electricity will be used for the lighting of the lamps in these signal towers. Heretofore signals have been displayed from the tops of buildings or poles placed in places not always conspicuous. Now, with steel towers seventy feet high built in the most conspicuous place that can be selected, great improvement in the service of the weather bureau is looked for. Where the tower is built near a city or near a line of electric-light cables the supplying of light to the signals will be easy, but in many places oil lamps will have to be used, electricity being unobtainable. Where electricity is used the tower is an open structure, but where lamps are used the frame is covered with a corrugated steel shelter, in which the lamps are kept when they are not hoisted up at night. Whether electricity is used or not, the power of the lights will be the same, for where oil is used the lamps will have a candle power equal to the same sort of light run by electricity. With electric lights the man in charge has only to press a button to set his signals, but with oil lamps he must go to a great deal of trouble in trimming, cleaning and hoisting up. Every year mariners rely more and more upon the predictions of the weather bureau, and therefore this improvement in the maritime signal service will be appreciated greatly by masters of vessels. Vessels bound out either do not leave port when storm signals are flying, or if they do they prepare for the predicted storm, and so, not being caught unawares, are able to weather it. Here are the storm signals which will fly from the high towers, the notice to put them up probably being sent by wireless telegraphy:

A red flag with a black center indicates that a storm of marked violence is expected. The pennants displayed with the flags indicate the direction of the wind; red, easterly (from northeast to south); white, westerly (from southwest to north). The pennant above the flag indicates that the wind is expected to blow from the northerly quadrants; below, from the southerly quadrants. By night a red light indicates easterly winds, and a white light above a red light westerly winds. A red pennant displayed alone at stations on the Atlantic, Pacific and gulf coasts indicates that the local observer has received information from the central office of a storm covering a limited area, dangerous only for vessels about to sail to certain points, and serves as a notification to shipmasters that information will be given them upon application to the local observer. Two red lights with black centers, displayed one above the other, indicate the expected approach of tropical hurricanes and also of those extremely severe and dangerous storms which occasionally move across the lakes and northern Atlantic coast. No night hurricane signals are displayed.

ANIMALS AND DISEASE.

TOO CLOSE ASSOCIATION OF MANKIND AND THE BRUTE CREATION DISASTROUS.

Medical students and students of bacteriology have become convinced that the close association of animals and mankind is responsible to a great extent for many epidemics of sickness. By reason of the often continuous contact of members of a household and dogs, sometimes affected by contagious diseases, such as tuberculosis, hydrophobia, mange, eczema, etc., the ailments are communicated to the human family, upon whom they often work with disastrous effect. The cat, as well as the dog, may transmit certain diseases to mankind. It is, in fact, liable to tuberculosis, eczema and other analagous affections that rage in mankind. From its mode of life, attached as it is to the fireside, it readily accepts the caresses of its owners, and lives beside them; it likes to sleep in soft places, and if it carries upon it certain germs of parasites, it leaves them behind it.

Birds in the poultry yard, cage or dovecote are also a source which the human race may catch the germs of specific and even mortal diseases. Although the question of transmission of avIarian diphtheria to children in the form of human diphtheria has never been solved, it is none the less established by numerous observations that when there is an epidemic of diphtheria in a poultry yard there is also a prevalence of angina with false membrane among the children.

The rabbit and the hare are capable of communicating parasites. Although the pathology of fish and mollusks is at present almost unknown, it should be remembered that fish are capable of contracting tuberculosis.

Whether or not action on the matter will be taken in some sections is not yet decided, but medical men are agreed that the transmission of disease germs is possible and that many fatal illnesses have been induced by too close association of mankind with the brute creation.

Commenting on politicians as subjects for the camera, a New York photographer said the other day: "President McKinley poses frequently, but Vice President Roosevelt is a treasure. He never refuses a photographer to snap him, unless wearing a bathing suit. He drew the line at that. Mrs. Cleveland is a splendid subject, and so is Mrs. McKinley. Miss Helen Gould makes a magnificent photograph, but hers are all taken with the understanding that they must never be used for publication. Gov. Odell wears a very serious expression when having pictures taken. He always requests the photographer not to ask him to look pleasant. Bishop Potter has many photographs taken. Archbishop Corrigan does not enjoy the ordeal and seldom poses."

A CHECK SWINDLE.

Trick by Which One Firm Got Dollars Without Sales.

That there is no end to the ways of imposing upon the suffering New York public was illustrated by the failure of a small store recently. The newly appointed receiver was surprised by having many women come to his office with credit checks. These checks were for small amounts ranging from $1 to $10. At first the receiver couldn't understand it, but upon investigation he learned the details of a pretty system of fleecing. The firm, it seems, had made a specialty of silk and cotton shirt waists. These were, with few exceptions, shapeless, ill-fitting garments, and when the unfortunate women shoppers got home with their purchases and put them on they were disgusted to find that the bargain sale waists were baggy and puckery and altogether so poorly fashioned that it would be next to impossible to make them fit even by a complete ripping up and remaking. Such being the conditions they invariably took the goods back and demanded other waists or their money. It was contrary to the principles of the firm to refund money, and as they seldom had waists more becoming either in style or shape than the ones returned they were driven to the extremity of credit checks. "We will get in a new supply of waists in a few days," was the suave assurance of the manager and his well-trained assistants. "Your check will be good at any time, and when we replenish our stock you can select a waist that suits you." But the new stock never arrived and in spite of the good dollars received from deluded customers without decreasing their capital of waists, the firm became insolvent and then the women began to come with credit checks. So far the receiver has been unable to compensate them for their loss through the swindle which, in its way, was rather neat.—New York Sun.

Buried Under Snow.

Elizabeth Woodcock, overwhelmed in a snowdrift near Cambridge, was too weak to thrust her way out, but before being overcome by torpor managed to tie her handkerchief to a twig and push it out at the top to serve as a signal. In this awful position the poor woman remained for eight days and nights, without food, before being discovered, and she survived her hardships only six months. A similar case occurred in Piedmont, Italy, when three women were buried thirty-seven days in the ruins of a stable by a heavy fall of solid snow. They also survived their ordeal.

Murderous Highwayman of Munich.

Quite a sensation is being experienced in Munich at present by a highwayman who keeps the environs of the city in terror by his robbers and murders. He is the son of a former proprietor of a mill in the neighborhood of Sulzemoos. His name is Mathias Kneisal. His father was a confirmed poacher, and the son followed the same lawless business until, finding robbery more profitable, he turned highwayman. The father died in prison; he, if caught, will die on the scaffold, as he has already been guilty of two murders.

The "Badger State."

Wisconsin was early dubbed the "Badger State" from the representation of that animal on its coat of arms. Why the badger should have been chosen does not appear, as it is not in evidence that badgers were more numerous in Wisconsin than in other surrounding states.

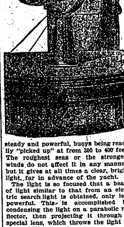
A BOON TO LAUNCH OWNERS.

A Satisfactory Searchlight for Small Launches Is at Last Furnished.

A. H. Funke, 101 Duane St., New York, has placed upon the market a searchlight for small launches, which will be appreciated by every one who has attempted to run a launch in the dark. It is named the Baldwin Search Light, and is guaranteed to work satisfactorily.

The lamp is complete in itself, requires no generator in the cabin, which is the common method of making gas for search lights. The generator is attached to the lamp itself, no pipes or tubes being used.

The lamp is simple in construction, anyone can operate it. The light is steady and powerful, buoys being readily "picked up" at from 300 to 400 feet. The roughest seas or the strongest winds do not affect it in any manner, but it gives at all times a clear, bright light, far in advance of the yacht.



The light is so focused that a beam of light similar to that from an electric search light is obtained, only less powerful. This is accomplished by condensing the light on a parabolic reflector, then projecting it through a special lens, which throws the light to a great distance.

Under all conditions the lamps are absolutely safe.

The lamps stand 16 inches high, fitted with 7-inch reflectors, and are made in two styles, one with attachment for operating when fastened to the cabin roof, the other for setting on forward deck.

These lamps can also be used on sail boats to a great advantage.

Her Sweetheart's Double.

A young married woman who had taken new apartments on Capitol Hill, was having her pictures arranged. One of them was a framed portrait of James Whitcomb Riley.

"Who is that?" asked the chambermaid, after looking long at Mr. Riley's portrait.

"That is James Whitcomb Riley," was answered in a way consistent with the idea that the maid would not know Riley from a foreign potentate.

"Reason I asked," explained the maid, "is that he looks exactly like an old sweetheart of mine, and I thought you might have had his picture."—Denver News.

An Apt Pupil.

Benny was a new boy at school, and, as the teacher enrolled his name in her book, she asked:

"Where do you live, Benny?"

"On Blinker street," he answered.

"You should say 'in Blinker street.' That is considered the proper form now."

"Yes'm."

"You have lately come to town, have you not?"

"Yes'm."

"Where was your home before?"

"Booneville."

"Where is Booneville?"

"In the Erie canal, ma'am," said Benny.—Boston Herald.

ON VERGE OF INSANITY.

Mrs. E. A. Deacon Tells of a Case Where a Lady Was in This Serious Condition, But Was Saved.

East Randolph, N. Y., March 11.—(Special.)—Mrs. E. A. Deacon of this town is Vice President of the local Women's Christian Temperance Union. She is a lady of splendid capabilities, and these she has always directed towards the uplifting of humanity. What Mrs. Deacon says is accepted in East Randolph without question. No one has ever doubted her truthfulness or honesty of purpose.

Mrs. Deacon says: "My attention was first called to the remarkable curative value of Dodd's Kidney Pills, through the cure of a literary lady who was a friend of mine, and who from mental overwork was on the verge of insanity. After the failure of her physician to help her, her husband was advised to have her try Dodd's Kidney Pills, which she did with gratifying results. She used five boxes before she was completely cured, but at the end of two months' treatment she was her own happy, brilliant self once more.

"Feeling languid and worn out myself, I thought perhaps they would be a help to me, and I am very glad to say that two boxes made a new woman of me. I feel ten years younger, am in the very best of health, and appreciate that it was entirely through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I give them highest indorsement."

These cases are becoming very common in Cattaraugus county, and many ladies have had experiences similar to those of Mrs. Deacon and her friend. What Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for these suffering women, they will do for anyone who gives them a fair trial.

They are 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Dog Couldn't See The Joke.

John Joseph Carney, eight years old, living on the island at the foot of Michigan street, went to the Fitch hospital late yesterday afternoon with lacerations on both legs. He said he had been playing jokes on a yellow dog, and that the dog didn't take them right.—Buffalo Express.

MOUTH-BREATHING.

The General Health Is Broken Down by Breathing Through the Mouth.

Few people realize what an important organ the nose is. It is the first of the organs of respiration, and unless its functions are well performed the whole breathing process is deranged. The nostrils are not open cavities with smooth walls through which the air passes in and out, as it would through a rubber tube. They are divided into several compartments by bony projections covered with mucous membrane, and the volume of air in entering is broken up into several streams, so that all of it comes in contact with the lining membrane. This warm and moist membrane catches the dust and other impurities, and warms the air so that it will do no harm when coming in contact with the more delicate membrane in the bronchial tubes and lungs. When the nose is stopped up from any cause one must breathe through the mouth and if this is continued for any length of time the general health will inevitably suffer. The mouth itself suffers first. The mucous membrane loses its moisture and becomes inflamed. The air is neither warmer nor purified, and it irritates the lining membrane of the air passages all the way down to the lungs, so that a condition of sluggish inflammation is excited. But the general effects are more serious than the local. One who is a mouth-breather never gets enough air. During the day he suffers less in this respect, for the nerve centers are more active and force the respiratory muscles to act more energetically; but at night this vigilance is relaxed, the amount of inspired air is greatly reduced and all the tissues suffer for want of oxygen. For this reason the mouth-breather always feels tired and out of sorts in the morning. The mind suffers as well as the body and mouth-breathing children are almost always backward in their studies. A child who always breathes with open mouth and whose voice has a nasal twang, should be examined and treated at the earliest possible moment, for the longer the trouble exists the worse it is for the child mentally, morally, and physically.

ENGLAND'S SEALS.

Much Formality Accompanies Sealing Documents in British Empire.

The great seal of England, the specific emblem of sovereignty, is appended only to the most important class of public documents, such as writs for summoning parliament, treaties and official acts of state. A new one is made for each new sovereign (or on occasion of a change of arms or style), the old one being solemnly broken. The lord chancellor is the custodian of the great seal. The privy seal is the seal appended to grants which are afterwards to pass the great seal, and to documents of minor importance which do not require the great seal. The officer who has the custody of the privy seal was at one time called the keeper, but is now known as the lord privy seal. Under the Norman monarchs of England sealing became a legal formality necessary to the authentication of a deed, and from the thirteenth century onwards the seals of all persons of noble or gentle birth represented their armorial ensigns. The seal was generally appended to the document by passing a strip of parchment or cord through a slit in the lower edge, and the ends being held together, the wax was pressed or molded round them a short distance from the extremity, and the matrix impressed on it. Occasionally the seal was not pendent, but the wax was spread on the deed. The colored wax with the impression was sometimes imbedded in a mass of white wax, forming a protective border to it. In England a seal is still an essential to all legal instruments by which real estate is conveyed; but since subscription has also become necessary the practice of sealing has degenerated into a mere formality. The custom was gradually introduced of covering the wax with white paper, on which the impression was made, and latterly wafers have been considered sufficient substitute for seals. Of course this does not apply to the great and privy seals, mentioned above, which are still attached to all state documents.

FINDERS OF AMERICA.

Buddhist Priest Sonoda Tries to Rob Columbus of His Laurels.

The Rev. Shuye Sononda, Buddhist priest of Japan, has returned to San Francisco from Mexico, with what he regards as convincing proof that his people discovered America 1,000 years before Columbus and carried their faith along the Pacific coast from Alaska to Mexico. Sonoda has been assisted by Senor Batres, archaeologist of the Mexican government, says a special dispatch to the Chicago Record. Sonoda followed the chronicles of Hoeirshin, a Buddhist monk, who, in 499 A. D., returned to his native land with an account of explorations that reached to a land he called Fu Sang, now identified with Mexico because of the maguey plant. Sonoda found innumerable evidences of Buddhist influence over the natives of Mexico. Some of these were the Mexican zodiac, with its twenty-eight hours, Buddha Zaca, Oriental letterings and signs on temples, stones, images and pottery, and hundreds of names which are slightly corrupted from the Japanese. The temples he found invariably facing south, as in Tibet, the home of Buddhism, and in the mosaics at Uitla he found the common cross of Tibet. He also found strong racial resemblances in features between the Mexican and California mission Indians and the Japanese. So strong were these resemblances in features that when a California mission Indian was dressed in Japanese costume and photographed, Prof. John Fyer of the chair of Oriental languages, University of California, declared the photograph was of a Japanese of the northern islands and bore no resemblance to the California Indian.

London's Municipal Bands.

The popularity of London's municipal bands has grown by leaps and bounds since they first started their performances in 1892. The modest £3,000 then granted has now had to be increased to nearly £10,000. The sum set apart for music in 1901 is £9,500. Last season £9,000 was devoted to bands, and 1,045 performances were given.

ANCIENTS HAD SENSE.

Dated Beginning of Year from Opening of Spring

WHEN ALL THINGS IN NATURE START AFRESH.

Some Other Things in Which the Ancients Have Given Us Points.

The ancients began their year with the advent of spring. How much more appropriate thus to begin the New Year with the new life of nature in the awakening spring. At this season all processes throughout the natural world start afresh.

The ancients also showed their sagacity and appreciation of the great changes and active processes of springtime, by realizing that this is also the time for renewed life and energy in the human system. They well knew that the blood should be cleansed from impurities and the nerves re-invigorated at this season. Hence the establishment of the custom of taking a good spring medicine.

This most sensible and healthy custom is followed by almost everybody at the present day, few people of intelligence venturing to go through this trying time of change from winter to summer without taking a spring medicine.

The unanimity on this subject is a settled fact; the only question heretofore has been in regard to what is the best thing to take. The people have now become unanimous in their decision that as a spring tonic and restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is pre-eminently the best.

MR. STOUGHTON L. FARNHAM.

Year after year Dr. Green's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has proved itself the surest, most positive and reliable remedy. Made from pure vegetable medicines, it invariably cleanses, purifies and enriches the blood, making the blood rich and red, and at the same time, by its invigorating effects, giving strength, power, vitality and energy to the nerves.

In fact, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has proved itself the most perfect of medicines and just what everybody needs for a spring remedy. Try it this spring.

Mr. Stoughton L. Farnham of Manchester, N. H., says:

"Some time ago I was troubled with lassitude and a feeling of fatigue. I did not have the ambition to do anything that demanded unusual physical exertion.

"I was recommended by a friend to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I took two or three bottles and am prepared to say that it did me good. I can recommend it as a tonic, as I know it helped me."

Remember Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is recommended by physicians, in fact, it is a physician's prescription, the discovery of the well-known specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th St., New York City, who can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

A Pretty Good Sign.

What Do the Children Drink?
Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

The St. Paul Dispatch of March 9th says: "Charles G. Rapp, member of the house of representatives from St. Hilaire, Red Lake county, is confined to his room at the Merchant's hotel, with a complication of illnesses that have threatened a serious outcome. He is a sufferer from heart trouble and is also afflicted with a kind of dropsical ailment that caused two physicians to give him up a few days ago. To-day he was able to sit up long enough to eat a meal and in other ways showed signs that lead his friends to hope for his recovery. Mr. Rapp has been a very popular member of the legislature and has acquired a good many friends since his stay in the city.

An American Girl Who Wed a King.

"Surely no girl in the world ever had a more wonderful romance than did Elisa Hensler, of Boston, who married King Fredinand, of Portugal, nearly forty years ago," writes Mabel Percy Haskell of the "Only American girl who ever married a King," in the March Ladies' Home Journal: "It was a case of love at first sight. Miss Hensler had been trained for the operatic stage and was singing at the Opera House of San Carlos when King Ferdinand first saw her. He sought an introduction to Hensler and soon after asked her to become his wife. His wife, the Queen, had been dead nine years and his only son was married and sat upon the throne and he was free to do as he wished. In making this choice he was prepared to defy all objections that his family and the Court might offer to his marriage with an American opera singer, and was ready to cut away from all that belonged to his former life and to live in delight with his beautiful Elise. But, strange to say, his royal relations raised no objections to his marriage, and a great attachment sprang up between them and his American wife, whose dignity and grace were so charming that she won over the whole Court of Lisbon."

Farmers Should Attend.

Prof. T. A. Hoverstad, superintendent of the State Experimental Station with A. J. Glove, instructor in the Minnesota State Dairy school, will hold a farmers institute in Thief River Falls Monday afternoon and evening March 18th, and Tuesday morning March 19th. The meetings will be addressed by the gentlemen above mentioned and a number of local speakers including Ira C. Richardson, Prof J. A. Wilson and Dr. Cummerford. It is expected that Dr. Tupper and H. E. Mussey will also speak. It is hoped that a large number of farmers from the surrounding country will be in attendence. These institutes have been held throughout the state and have proved of marked benefit to the agricultural community. The afternoon and morning session will be devoted to farming and kindred subjects but the evening session will be largely in charge of the public schools and will partake of the nature of an entertainment. Everybody both in and out of the city is cordially invited. —Thief River Falls Press.

A Cape Nome Millionaire.

Millionaire Lane, the wealthiest man in Cape Nome to-day, was a tramp in Seattle only a few years ago. He wandered down to the docks one night and fell asleep on a coasting vessel. When he woke up he was on his way to Alaska. The captain, finding him a poor sailor, set him ashore somewhere south of Nome, telling him jocosely to "hunt for gold on the beach." At that time gold had not been discovered, but the poor tramp found it, and made himself the most influential man in that part of the world. Lane fought his way to the front by pluck and nerve the two qualities which are absolutely necessary to success in any business. These essentials are capable of cultivation. Drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer to build up your health, steady your nerves and clear your brain. It is the best tonic because it's the purest. THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

MISS PFALZGRAF

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, feet swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.

STORM PLAYS HAVOC

UPPER MISSISSIPPI GETS A TASTE OF REAL WINTER.

Thousands of Telegraph and Telephone Poles Blown Down and Wires Snap Under the Heavy Weight of Sleet—Communication With Chicago Both by Rail and Telegraph Seriously Interrupted—Sweeps the Country From the Missouri River to the Atlantic Coast.

Chicago, March 12. — A storm, the worst since the one that proved so disastrous to shippers in May, 1894, swept over the upper Mississippi valley Saturday night and yesterday morning. In the region of Lake Michigan it was more severe than in the West. Last night the storm was raging in Michigan, and wires were down in the state. Telegraph and telephone poles were blown down, and in many places the wires, laden with a weight of ice, were broken. In the early morning communication between Chicago and surrounding points was practically cut off, but repair gangs sent out during the day succeeded in re-establishing connections with surrounding points, except on the lines near the west shore of the lake. The storm reached Chicago about 12 o'clock Saturday night. Rain and sleet fell rapidly. The rain froze to the wires as it fell, and the sleet clung also. Later the wind rose, and shortly after five o'clock poles began to break and wires to snap and fall. The weight of the sleet upon the wires and the force of the wind, which was blowing at the rate of forty-five miles an hour, was too great for their strength to withstand. The poles and wires and the street car tracks, blocking all traffic. Thousands of telegraph poles throughout the West are now down. Surface lines all over the city had trouble operating their cars. Only the fact that the storm occurred on Sunday morning saved the traction, telegraph and telephone companies from great loss of business, in addition to the material damage done. The storm played havoc with all railroad telegraph wires, and up to a late hour last night no communication could be gotten with trains in Michigan, Indiana and all Southern and Western points. The Santa Fe limited from California was nearly nine hours late, having encountered a heavy storm in Iowa before it struck the local storm. The city telephone and fire alarm service was crippled in all parts of the city. Hardly a police station or fire company was exempt from the ravages of the wind. All of the country from the Missouri river to the Atlantic coast was swept by the storm.

Fell Across Streets

HANGS BY A THREAD.

Life of Li Hung Chang Despaired of.

Pekin, March 12.—Li Hung Chang is again seriously ill and his physician says his life hangs by a thread.

Prince Ching and Earl Li seem to think that by spreading rumors of the court's unwillingness to return to Pekin unless this or that thing is done, they can influence the deliberations of the ministers of the powers. As a matter of fact, according to reliable reports from Sian Fu the imperial personages are extremely uncomfortable at Sian Fu, where they live in the house of the governor, which is only a small structure. French missionaries who have just returned here from Sian Fu believe the empress dowager would bring the court back to Pekin on the first offer of the allies, having as a basis the removal of the troops, except the legation guards. The foreign envoys will not hold a general meeting until Tuesday owing to the absence of M. Pichon, French ambassador to Pao Ting Fu. The United States signal corps will be ready to leave in a week, according to instructions. No transport has yet been announced, however.

Chinese Will Resist.

London, March 12.—It is not likely that the powers will oppose the schemes of Russia. The situation is regarded as very gloomy, according to the Pekin correspondent of the Morning Post, wiring Saturday. Even the Chinese plenipotentiaries declare openly intervention by the powers is not desirable unless they are prepared to back up their protests. There are reports from the provinces of Shen Si that the Cinese are constructing extensive fortifications and mobilizing large bodies of troops to resist an advance of the allies. Gen. Chaffee refuses to allow the decapitation of several notorious Boxer chiefs, guilty of murder, whom the Chinese have condemned. The Americans are the only foreigners who have carried out no executions in Pekin.

Will Resist Arrest.

Shanghai, March 12. — Dispatches from Lanchu assert that Gen. Tung Fu Hsiang, with 20,000 men and Prince Tuan with 10,000 men are at Ning Hsu prepared to resist arrest. The Chinese Gazette announces that Sheng, the Taotai, has memorialized the throne in favor of the abolition of the Likin duties and that all the viceroys and governors support him.

Stormed by Germans.

Berlin, March 12.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Count von Waldersee: "Col. Ledebur's column stormed a gate of the great wall eighty miles west of Pao Ting Fu Friday, capturing four guns.

OREGON SOON TO COME HOME.

Battleship Ordered to Return From Philippines—Wisconsin Will Take Big Vessel's Place.

Washington, March 12.—Orders have gone forward from the Navy department for the return of the battleship Oregon, which has been for so long a time on the Asiatic station, to the United States. The vessel probably will sail for home about May 1, to be replaced by the battleship Wisconsin when that vessel has finished up its official trials.

PRESIDENT'S WESTERN VISIT.

Washington, March 12.—At the cabinet meeting the president told his secretaries that the start for California would be made the first week in May. He extended an earnest invitation to the whole cabinet to accompany him. The purpose is to make the journey by a leisurely itinerary, devoting perhaps six weeks to the round trip, including the week or more to be spent in California. The return is to be by one of the Northern routes, with possibly a visit to Yellowstone Park, which the president has been trying to see for several years.

CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

A Remarkable Experience of a Prominent Statesman.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON GIVES PE-RU-NA A HIGH ENDORSEMENT.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State, but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Pe-ru-na came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be able to fully eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing. Yours truly,

"David Meekison."

Many people can tolerate slight catarrhal affections. A little hoarseness, a slight cough, a cold in the head, or a trifling derangement of the digestive organs, do not much disturb the average person in his business. But this is not true of the public speaker or stage artist. His voice must always be clear, lungs perfect, digestion undisturbed. Hence the popularity of Pe-ru-na among the leading actors and actresses of this country. They have come to regard Pe-ru-na as indispensable to their success. Their profession is so exacting that it requires perfect health in every particular. They regard Pe-ru-na as their friend and safeguard. Many lettersare received from this class of people. Miss Carrie Thomas, in speaking of Pe-ru-na, says: "I have used Pe-ru-na with splendid results. Would not be without it. No money would hire me to have a settled cold or chronic cough, or hoarseness. Catarrh is the most dreadful thing that could happen to one of my profession. Pe-ru-na is my shield and protector against this most undesirable disease."—Carrie Thomas.

Cuticura SOAP

MILLIONS of Women Use CUTICURA SOAP, assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, in the form of baths for annoying irritations and inflammations, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odors. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz.: TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

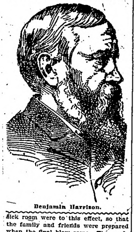
HARRISON IS DEAD

FORMER PRESIDENT MAKES GALLANT BUT LOSING FIGHT.

Gradual Sinking Until the End, Which Was Quiet and Peaceful—Relatives and Old Friends at the Bedside When He Passed Away—Death Causes Universal Sorrow Throughout the Country—Great Statesman Had Been Unconscious for Hours.

Indianapolis, March 14.—Gen. Harrison died at 4:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon without regaining consciousness. His death was quiet and painless, there being a gradual sinking until the end came which was marked by a single gasp for breath as life departed from the body of the great statesman. The relatives with a few exceptions and several of his old and tried friends were at the bedside when he passed away.

The general's condition was so bad in the morning after a restless night that the attending physicians understood that the end could not be far off, and all the bulletins sent out from the sick room were to this effect, so that the family and friends were prepared when the final blow came. The gradual failing of the remarkable strength shown by the patient became more noticeable in the afternoon, and a few moments



Benjamin Harrison.

Before the End

there was an apparent break-down on the part of the sufferer as he surrendered to the disease against which he had been so bravely battling for so many hours. The change was noticed by the physicians and the relatives, and friends who had retired from the sick room to the library below were quickly summoned and reached the bedside of the general before he passed away.

News of the death spread quickly through the city, and several of the more intimate friends at once hurried to the residence to offer services, which, however, were not needed. The word was bulletined by all the newspapers and thus communicated to the people on their way home in the evening. The announcement produced the greatest sorrow, nearly every one having nurtured the hope that Gen. Harrison would recover.

Manifestations of Mourning.

Within a few minutes all the flags on the public buildings and most of the down-town blocks were hoisted at half-mast and other outward manifestations of mourning were made. None of Gen. Harrison's children were present at his death. Neither Col. Russell Harrison nor Mrs. McKee had reached the city, although both were hurrying on their way to the bedside of their dying parent as fast as steam would bear them. Elizabeth, the little daughter, had been taken from the sick room by the nurse before the end came. The group at the bedside included Mrs. Harrison, W. H. H. Miller, Samuel Miller, his son, the Rev. M. L. Haines, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, which Gen. Harrison had attended for so many years, S. M. Tibbitts, Dr. Jameson, Dr. Dorsey, Col. Dan Ransdell, sargeant-at-arms of the United States senate and a close personal friend of the dead ex-president, Clifton Artick and the nurses, who had been at the bedside. Gen. Harrison's two sisters and an aunt were also present. Mrs. Harrison kneeled at the right-hand side of the bed, her husband's right hand clasped in her's, while Dr. Jameson held the left hand, of the dying man, counting the feeble pulse beats. In a few moments after the friends had been summoned to the room the end came, Dr. Jameson announcing the sad fact. The great silence that fell on the sorrowful watchers at the bedside was broken by the voice of Dr. Haines raised in prayer, supplicating consolation for the bereaved wife and family, mingled with the sobs of the mourners. Steps were at once taken to notify the friends and relatives abroad.

In Constant Attendance

Gen. Harrison had been unconscious for hours before his death, the exact time when he passed into a comatose state being hard to determine. He spoke to no one during the day and failed to recognize even his wife.

Will Lie in State.

The funeral of ex-President Harrison will take place next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The services will be held in the First Presbyterian church, of which he was a member for nearly fifty years. The Rev. M. L. Haines, pastor of the church, will have charge of the services. It was decided at a meeting of Gov. Durbin with a number of the other state officers that the body should lie in state in the rotunda of the capitol all day Saturday. The highest honors which it is in the power of the State of Indiana to pay will be rendered the remains of Gen. Harrison.

Will Issue a Proclamation.

Washington, March 14.—Deep interest was exhibited in all of the executive departments throughout the day in the reports that came as to the condition of ex-President Harrison. As office hours had closed for the day before the end came, the first official action regarding the death was deferred until to-day when, following precedents, President McKinley will issue his proclamation to the people notifying them of Gen. Harrison's death and setting out in becoming terms his virtues and characteristics. He also will order salutes to be fired at the various army posts the day of the funeral, and on ship board, when the news is received. The secretary of war and the secretary of the navy will send out special notices to soldiers and sailors conveying the president's directions in this matter.

McKinley Will Attend.

Washington, March 14. — President McKinley will attend the funeral of Gen. Harrison. He will leave here probably this evening, although the exact time of departure has not been determined definitely, accompanied by Mrs. McKinley and Secretary Cortelyou. The party will stop at Canton for a day or more and Mrs. McKinley will remain there while the president and Mr. Cortelyou proceed to Indianapolis. The itinerary will be so arranged as to enable the president to leave Canton Saturday night for Indianapolis and return immediately after the funeral. After a brief stop at Canton he will return to Washington. It is not expected that any member of the cabinet will go.

Regretted in London.

London, March 14.—All the morning papers publish long memoirs of the late Gen. Benjamin Harrison and editorials dealing with his career.

BATTLE WITH BURGLARS.

Four Hundred Men Shoot at Three Burglars—Latter Wounded.

Farmington, Mich., March 14.—Four hundred men and boys had a pitched battle yesterday afternoon in which over a thousand shots were exchanged with three burglars who were hiding in a patch of woods three miles west of the village. After a desperate resistence the men showed a white flag from behind their cover, and when the posse swarmed in upon them it was found that all three were badly wounded. They gave their names as George Smith, John Taylor and Jim Williamson, and their residence as Port Huron. Williamson had been shot through the back, head and one elbow; Smith was wounded in the back and legs and Taylor in the face and legs. The trio were handcuffed and brought to the village, where their wounds were dressed. A large crowd made such threatening gestures after the men's capture that the officers removed their prisoners to the jail at Pontiac.

Reform at Deadwood.

Deadwood, S. D., March 14. — The mayor of Deadwood has issued orders for all saloons to exclude minors, and the order has so far been complied with. This included all newsboys, popcorn boys and messengers. The reform movement which was started in this city and Lead a few weeks ago is assuming large dimensions. The next thing that will be asked of the saloons is to abolish music and gambling.

Killed His Brother.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 14. — Word has just been received here of the accidental shooting of Theodore Peterson, a twelve-year-old boy, whose home is in the vicinity of Vining. The boy had been hunting rabbits in company with his older brother and the latter's gun was accidentally discharged, the bullet entering just below Theodore's heart, causing almost instant death.

Important Question Involved.

Pierre, S. D., March 14. — The supreme court granted an order to show cause in the case of the new members of the board of charities appointed under the law enacted at the last session, reorganizing the board, and the date of hearing was set for the 28th. This hearing will be of the most importance, as the whole question of the referendum will be opened up by it.

Fined for Gambling.

Mitchell, S. D., March 14.—O. Warfield, who was arrested about two weeks ago, charged with conducting a gambling house in this city, had his trial in justice court with a jury attachment. He was found guilty and the court fined him $100. Warfield thinks he will have better luck with the circuit court, and gave notice of appeal.

Buying Seed Grain.

Dickinson, N. D., March 14. — The Stark county board of commissioners has issued $6,000 in county warrants under the provisions of the Sharpe law for the purchase of 6,000 bushels of wheat for farmers. The warrants are issued in denominations of $500 and will be taken by the local banks at par.

Old Guards Reappointed.

Stillwater, Minn., March 14. — Fred Pouman and James Beckman were reappointed by Warden Wolfer to the positions they formerly held as guards at the penitentiary.

Robber Recaptured.

Sioux City, Iowa, March 14.—John Stovall, the express robber who escaped from the jail at Denison, Iowa, has been captured six miles south of Omaha.

Trampled to Death.

Grinnell, Iowa, March 14. — Dormer Evans, a teamster of Steamboat Rock, while feeding horses fell under their feet and was trampled to death.

Snow Storm Was Severe.

Balaton, Minn., March 14 — The worst storm of the winter has raged here since Tuesday night. About three inches of snow has fallen.

Death of a Centenarian.

Cleveland, Minn., March 14. — Mrs. Margaret Forsyth died in her 101st year. She had been a resident here forty-five years.

THE LAST OF EARTH

IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL OF FORMER PRESIDENT HARRISON.

Gone Down to That Low, Green Tent Whose Curtain Never Outward Swings—Fifteen Thousand of His Fellow Citizens Testify to Their Respect for the Dead—President McKinley and Other Distinguished Men Pay Their Tribute of Respect to the Honored Dead.

Indianapolis, March 18.—In the center of a hollow square composed of fully 15,000 of his fellow citizens, the remains of Benjamin Harrison were yesterday afternoon interred in the family lot in Crown Hill cemetery. Close by the grave were the members of, the family, President McKinley and other visitors of distinction and the more intimate friends of Gen. Harrison.

Back, a distance of fifty yards, behind ropes guarded zealously by a large force of police, stood with uncovered heads the great multitude who knew him not so well as did they who stood beside the freshly upturned earth, but who honored him and admired him fully as much. It is doubtful if any public man, at least in this generation, was borne to his last resting place among so many manifestations of respect. Of passionate grief there was little beyond the members of his family, but the tribute of respect was universal. It came from all alike, from those of his own political faith and from those who differed with him concerning what is best for the nation's good, from men who had been his life-long friends, and from those who knew him merely by sight and to whom he never spoke. It came from women and children, from white and black, from all conditions and kinds of people. There was no exception anywhere to the expression that the nation had lost one of its ablest men, and the greatest man of his generation in his own state.

By the grave stood the chief magistrate of the nation and behind the ropes were all the street arabs of Gen. Harrison's city—every grade of human life in America between the two was represented in the crowd—and in them was but one feeling—that a man had died who was honest at all times with himself and others and whose ability and character were such as the nation could ill afford to lose. The weather was unsurpassable, bright sunlight—the warm breath of spring in every breeze, and yet in the air, a touch of winter that brought the blood to the cheek and a sparkle to the eye.

The services at the church and grave were simple in the extreme, all of the most excellent taste, and, like the proceedings Saturday, there was an utter absence of friction in everything that was done. All was well-ordered and well performed.

MRS. NATION WILL SMASH.

Promises Leavenworth and Atchison a Sample of Her Work.

Topeka, Kan., March 18.—Mrs. Nation is growing impatient, and will start out on a smashing tour the coming week. She will first use her hatchet on Atchison and Leavenworth joints.

"I shall slip over to Atchison some night when they are not expecting me," she said to-day, "and smash a couple of joints before the police know I am there. After the excitement cools down I shall take a little run to Leavenworth. The saloonkeepers of Atchison and Leavenworth have threatened to do me bodily harm, but my experience is that a Kansas jointist is always a coward, and would gnaw out of a room at sight of me if he couldn't get out any other way. So I don't expect much trouble when I go to Atchison and Leavenworth."

Mrs. Nation says she will shortly start on a tour of the state.

BONI THE VICTOR.

In the Duel Editor de Rodays Is Shot in the Thigh.

Paris, March 18—In the duel between Boni de Castellane and M. de Rodays, the latter was wounded in the thigh. La Liberte says M. de Rodays was hit in the right thigh at the first exchange of shots. Count de Castellane was not injured. The duel was then stopped. The meeting occurred in the Parc des Princes, where many cycling events occurred last summer. The Count de Dionne directed the duel. M. de Roday's wound was in the lower fleshy part of the thigh, bled abundantly, but he is not seriously injured.

STILL HOPE FOR PEACE.

Prospects Are Considered Bright in South Africa.

Pretoria, March 18. — The prospects of peace are still considered hopeful. The Boer losses last month were 160 killed, 400 wounded and 1,000 captured and surrendered. Owing to the heavy rains Gen. French's transport difficulties are still enormous.

-o-

Cape Town, March 18.—Gen. Dewet's commando has been broken up at Senekal, Orange River Colony.

For Murder of His Daughter.

New York, March 18.—Charles Friedmann, twenty-three years of age, was arrested in Brooklyn last night for the murder of his daughter Jessie, sixteen months of age, and the probable fatal wounding of another daughter three years of age. It is claimed that while temporarily insane he seized a clock and struck Jessie on the head. Then picking up the clock he hurled it at the other child.

Hanged by a Mob.

Nashville, Tenn., March 18.—At Tiptonville a mob hanged Ike Fitzgerald to a tree near the court house. The negro was charged with assault on a white girl, and a trial jury had just reported that they could not agree.

Aged Couple Killed by Train.

Columbus, Neb., March 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Josiah McFarland, over seventy years old, were killed at a crossing at the western city limits by an incoming passenger train. The couple were in a buggy.

FATAL FIRE AT PITTSBURG.

One Man Killed and Three Others Seriously Injured.

Pittsburg, March 18. — During the progress of a fire in this city one man lost his life, three others were fatally hurt and the property loss will be fully $250,000, well insured. All of the injured are in the hospital in rather bad shape, but will recover. The fire broke out in the boiler room of the French company's hair felt factory, just opposite the exposition main building. Through some confusion no alarm was turned in for some time and it was fully twenty minutes after the fire was discovered before the engines reached the scene. From the felt factory the flames leaped across the street and in a short time the exposition building was burning fiercely. All the firemen could do here was to prevent the flames from spreading. After hard work this was accomplished and machinery hall, with its valuable contents was saved. The main building was a complete wreck. Two lumber yards adjoining the felt factory soon succumbed, Gallagher & Banker lost 1,000,000 feet of lumber and Henry Henk 350,000 feet of valuable hardwood.

TRIAS' SURRENDER.

It Indicates the Final Stage of Armed Resistance.

Washington, March 18.—The war department has received the following cablegram from Gen. MacArthur at Manila, announcing the surrender of Lieut. Gen. Trias:

"Mariano Trias, only lieutenant general insurgent army, surrendered March 15, San Francisco de Malabon, with nine officers and 199 well armed men. Trias immediately took oath of allegiance, presence several natives. Most auspicious event; indicates final stage armed insurrection. Prestige Trias, Southern Luzon, equal to Aguinaldo. Gen. Bates and Col. Frank D. Baldwin entitled great credit for persistent work bringing this about."

Gen. MacArthur will remain in command of the Philippines until the civil government is established.

KING EDWARD'S OATH.

Catholics Will Ask That the Wording Be Changed.

London, March 18. — The king will give an audience next Thursday to Lord Herries, a Roman Catholic peer, who will move an inquiry in the house of lords into the wording of the accession oath as to whether the king's Protestantism cannot be asserted sufficiently without hurting the feelings of his Catholic subjects. It is not only general belief, but it is considered that of the king's also, that the government has agreed to grant the request. The report of Lord Herries' reception, which is made public at the king's express wish, is taken as an indication of the king's feelings in regard to the inquiry.

GIRL STRIKERS WIN.

Silk Workers Secure and Advance in Wages.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 18.—The girl strikers at the Bramford Bros.' silk mills will return to work in the morning, as satisfactory settlements have been reached. They will get an advance in wages of from 5 to 20 per cent, according to the class of work. It is believed by the leaders of the strikers that this resumption of work will induce the managers of mills in Pittston, Scranton, Paterson, N. J., and the Hess-Goldsmith mill in this city to arrange some means of reaching a settlement and that the mills will not remain much longer idle. Committees from the central labor union in each of these towns are endeavoring to effect a settlement.

DISGRACE TOO GREAT.

Grandfather of Emperor William's Assailant Commits Suicide.

Berlin, March 18.—The wound in Emperor William's face is healing in the most favorable manner. The edges have not yet united, but Dr. Bergmann hopes to unite them so that the scar will be merely a narrow line that will not disfigure his majesty. The emperor works vigorously, as usual. The outrage has had a distressing sequel at Schneidmuhl, where Heinrich Weiland, eighty-one years old, grandfather of the emperor's assailant, shot himself. He had declared that he could not survive the disgrace of his grandson's act.

SIX LIVES LOST

As the Result of the Explosion of an Oil Stove.

Cape Elltown, N. B., March 18.—Six persons were burned to death at Little Cascapade, Que., as the result of the explosion of a coal oil stove in the house of Joseph Gauthier. The stove exploded on the landing of the stairs. Mr. Gauthier finding it impossible to remove the stove on account of the burning oil, jumped from an upper-story window and broke a leg. Before he could help his wife, who was sick in bed, and five children, they were burned to death.

Insurance Swindlers Convicted.

Chicago, March 18.—The jury in the insurance conspiracy case of Dr. Michael N. Regent, Nora O'Brien and her son James O'Brien, returned a verdict of guilty. Regent will be sentenced to the penitentiary in addition to paying a fine. The O'Briens escape with a fine. The trio was charged with substituting false bodies for members of the Knights of Ladies of Security and collecting the insurance.

Moving Shops.

Blue Earth, Minn., March 18. — The Omaha is moving its railway shops from Elmore to Mankato. Several families have already moved from the former to the latter place. The roundhouse of the company will be removed to this place.

Guilty of Murder.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 18.—Richard Henry was found guilty of murder in the second degree for killing Frank Johnston. Henry attempted to rob Johnston, and in the quarrel that ensued he used a coupling pin on him.

Disfranchised for Selling Votes.

Frankfort, Ind., March 18. — George Barnett and William Marshall, numbered among the twenty men in this county charged with selling their votes, pleaded guilty and were disfranchised for ten years.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 11.—A strong fight was put up in the house Saturday to wipe out the corrupt practices act. A bill was before the house providing for the repeal of the act. After a lively, and at times spirited, debate it was indefinitely postponed by a vote of 49 to 42.

A state board of appeals to pass upon the grain and warehouse appeals is proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Wilder. The board is to be appointed by the grain and warehouse commission and its members, six in number, to hold office for two years.

A bill for the enlargement of the state forestry reserves and the application of the profits accruing therefrom to state, county and town purposes was introduced by Representative Bush of Olmsted.

Senator Smith's bill providing for a state loan of $75,000 to farmers for the purchase of seed grain was passed under suspension of the rules.

In the Senate.

Senator Ryder introduced a bill requiring cities, towns and villages to care for sick and disabled paupers, furnish them medical aid and board, and in case they die, provide for their burial. The cost becomes a legal claim against the county, and from the county against the city or town where the pauper resided.

Corporations or companies not strictly savings banks are restrained from accepting deposits by a bill from Senator J. D. Jones, prepared by the public examiner. It is aimed at so-called tontine savings associations and diamond companies.

Senator Hawkins introduced a bill to limit the public deposits in banks to the amount of the assessed valuation of their capital stock, the figures of the tax roll to govern.

Fourteen bills were sent to the calendar from general orders in the senate in anticipation of a heavy week's work. The calendar was passed on account of the light attendance.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 12.—The Dunn bill for the extension of the direct primary law to all the counties of the state and covering all offices but those of the state, villages and townships, was yesterday passed by the house by a vote of 83 to 14.

A strong fight was put up against the bill, principally by the country members. The debate lasted for three hours.

The bill as introduced was framed to cover the nomination of state officers. Mr. Jacobson of Lac qui Parle led the opposition to that clause. An amendment striking it out of the bill was offered and defeated. Mr. Jacobson then moved to indefinitely postpone the bill. The friends of the measure, frightened at what they believed to be defeat of the whole scheme, consented to a reconsideration, and the bill was so amended as to exclude nominations for state offices. The bill as passed provides that on Tuesday, seven weeks before an election at which district, legislative, county or city officers are to be elected, a primary or nominating election shall be held. The primary election day shall also be the first registration day. At least twenty days prior to the primary election day any voter eligible to an office which he seeks may file his name with the county auditor, and if the office be voted for in one county only, by the payment of $10 have his name printed on his party's primary ticket as a candidate for nomination. If he seeks an office voted for in more than one county his name is filed with the secretary of state and the fee is increased to $20. The party tickets are to be uniform in size, printed with black ink on white paper. All persons entitled to registration are entitled to participation in the primary election. The voter after registration before receiving a ballot must declare his political affiliation, and if chalenged, must swear that the ticket which he wishes to vote is that of the party whose candidates he generally supported at the last general election. The voting and canvassing is conducted in the manner now prescribed by law.

Representative Sherman S. Smith of Minneapolis introduced in the house a bill fixing the salary of state senators and representatives at $500 per annum, and of the lieutenant governor and speaker of the the house at $750 a year. At present the senators and representatives get $330 for the full session of ninety days, the speaker and president of the senate getting twice that.

A number of bills on the calendar were disposed of.

In the Senate.

The three bill relieving Beltrami county of its present serious financial difficulties were recommended to pass after a fruitless effort on the part of Senator Wilson to make important amendments.

Senator Baldwin introduced a bill authorizing juries to take with them into the juryroom bills of particulars and all papers affecting the case excepting depositions.

The Swenigson bill regulating the practice of opticians was recommended to pass.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 13.—The Nichols bill providing for a 5 per cent gross earnings tax for express companies operating in Minnesota was, after a short, sharp struggle recommended to pass by the house in committee of the whole.

The education committee presented a bill to permit adjacent independent school districts to consolidate.

Mr. Whitford presented a bill providing that "licensed" as well as "ordained" ministers may perform the marriage ceremony.

Mr. Deming's bill to abolish days of grace was killed, as was also the bill exempting osteopaths from the regulation of the state board of medical examiners.

In the Senate.

The Hurd bill to place the office of state oil inspector on a salary basis at $2,400 per year was passed by the senate without an opposing vote.

The senate passed the Greer bill for the improvement of Camp Lakeview.

Among numerous bills presented were the following: By Senator Wilson, to create a fine of $300 to $500 for a firm or party not admitted to the bar selling legal advice; by Senator Greer, to appropriate $4,500 to enlarge the chemical building of the state university; by Senator McGill, to permit publishing by the state of the annual reports of the Minnesotta Historical society; by Senator C. C. McCarthy, to have counties pay the travelling and other business expenses of county attorneys.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 14.—The board of control bill was before the house yesterday as a special order. Nothing was accomplished beyond the introduction of several amendments, none of which were acted upon. Three hours time was taken up in debate which was at times lively and spirited. Representative Peterson of Minneapolis was the principal opponent of the bill, which he denounced as a scheme to build up a great political machine. Consideration of the bill will be resumed to-day.

The house refused to concur in the senate amendments to the oil inspection bill and it was sent to conference.

A bill was introduced creating a state board of deposit to select banks in which state funds may be deposited.

Representative Whitford introduced a bill for a memorial to congress praying for the partition of the Winnibigoshish, Chippewa, Leech Lake and Cass Lake Indian reservations for national park and sanitarium purposes.

The house passed under suspension of the rules a bill giving the regents of the state university the right to accept gifts and donations.

In the Senate.

The senate passed the bill presented by Senator Sweningsen to regulate the practice of optometry—the fitting of glasses.

Senator McCarthy's three bills for the relief of Beltrami county's present financial troubles passed with few opposing votes.

Senator Hawkins is ambitious of establishing new safeguards to the public health in county boards having jurisdiction over all unorganized townships. The board is given the usual powers in a proposed law submitted to the senate yesterday.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 15.—The house late yesterday afternoon passed the board of control bill, substantially as it was introduced. After the debate, which occupied the attention of the house for two days, was concluded the long list of amendments confronting the bill were voted down in order, almost without exception. The only amendments adopted were those correcting typographical or clerical errors.

Representative Sageng of Pelican Rapids introduced a bill for the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment providing for direct legislation. He also introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor for physicians or surgeons to administer medicines or perform operations when under the influence of liquor.

Representative Alley is the author of a bill authorizing village councils to order sidewalk or street construction and repairs.

Representative Alford is the author of the second civil rights bill to appear in the house this session. His bill provides for the restoration of full rights of citizenship to persons convicted of felonies, who have served the sentences or paid the fines imposed.

In the Senate.

Senator Coller has secured the passage of a bill in the senate fixing the salaries of judges of probate throughout the state on a basis of population. The amounts paid range from $300 to $2,000 on a sliding scale.

Senator E. E. Smith has introduced a bill providing for state employment offices in each of the three large cities.

The drainage commission bill passed by the house was recommended for passage in the senate after a sharp contest.

PLANKINTON BANK CASES.

Depositors Secured a Verdict and Case Goes to Supreme Court.

Mitchell, S. D., March 16. — The Plankinton bank, which went to the wall a year ago by reason of the defaulting of Fred Stevens, had its first trial at the present term of court. Suit was brought against the bank, which has been adjudged a partnership by the federal court on its application to go into bankruptcy, by forty depositors, who assigned their claims to Wayne Mayson. At the conclusion of the case Judge Smith directed the jury to bring in a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $10,000, which was done. There are other cases of a similar nature pending against the bank. The case will be carried to the supreme court.

COUNTERFEITING ALLEGED.

La Crosse, Wis., March 16.—Deputy United States Marshal Lovering made an important catch in Fillmore county, Minn. A number of counterfeit coins have made their appearance in that vicinity recently and yesterday Emile Sandlie of Arendahl, a Norwegian about twenty-five years of age, was arrested and charged with the crime. A complete set of counterfeiter's tools was found in his possession, as well as some of the spurious coins. The prisoner was arraigned before Court Commissioner Harrison in the federal court and waived a preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury under $500 bonds.

Speaker Corbett Dead.

Helena, Mont., March 16.—Frank E. Corbett, speaker of the house of representatives, died in Butte yesterday of pneumonia, aged thirty-seven years. He was a graduate of the law school of the University of Virginia, his native state. For ten years he has been attorney for W. A. Clark. He was formerly president of the state bar association.

KILLED BY HER DOG.

Woman Meets Death in a Shocking Manner.

New York, March 18. — Mrs. Carrie Cobus, living on West Eighteenth street, met death in a shocking manner last night, being killed by her dog. Mrs. Cobus, her husband, her son and her mother live together. Mrs. Cobus was thirty-eight years of age and subject to epileptic fits. He dog was a fox terrier of unusual intelligence. Mrs. Elizabeth Broadhead, Mrs. Cobus' mother, said her daughter went out into the kitchen about 7 o'clock. A few moments later Mrs. Broadhead heard the dog barking excitedly. The mother ran out and found her daughter lying on the floor. She knew it was an epileptic attack, and, dashing a pitcher of water into her daughter's face she ran into the hall and screamed for help. Philip Rockefeller, living near by, heard her and ran to her assistance. They ran into the room where Mrs. Cobus lay and there saw a horrifying spectacle. The pet terrier, seeing his mistress in agony, appeared to have gone mad. He flew at the prostrate woman as she writhed on the floor and repeatedly attacked her, burying his teeth in her throat and severing her jujular vein. When Rockefeller tried to tear the maddened brute away it clung to the dying woman with terrible tenacity. He finally got the animal loose. It then attacked the mother and the man, but they beat it off. A physician was summoned, but Mrs. Cobus bled to death. The dog disappeared in the street.

HILL LEASES THE BURLINGTON.

Railway System Practically in Control of Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Chicago, March 18.—The Burlington road has passed practically into the hands of J. J. Hill. This information comes from an authoritative source. Arrangements are about completed whereby the Burlington system is to be leased to the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railroad companies, the latter guaranteeing 7 per cent dividends on all the Burlington stock. The Morgan and Harriman interests obtained control of the Burlington road several weeks ago, and it is with them that Mr. Hill has been negotiating for the lease.

The rapid advance in Burlington stock during the last two weeks, and the additional jump of six points Saturday, made it certain that something of an extraordinary nature was in the wind. Few people, however, had any idea that Mr. Hill was trying to get control of the property, and special stress was laid upon the assertion that neither Mr. Hill nor any of his brokers was buying Burlington stock. Mr. Hill has been in New York for more than a week in connection with this deal, but so secret were the negotiations conducted that the announcement of his acquiring control comes as a surprise.

PERISHED IN A STORM.

A Woman About Sixty Years Old Is Frozen to Death.

Morris, Minn., March 18.—Mrs. Amborne, aged about sixty, who lived four miles north of Chokio, was lost in the snowstorm last Tuesday. She started to go to her son's, a mile and a half away. She was missed that evening and continued search was made until yesterday afternoon, when her body was found near the Chokio mill.

Served His Country.

Vermillion, S. D., March 18. — First Sergeant Ernest E. Goding has arrived home from San Francisco, having landed in that city from the Philippines a short time since. He has served full term with the First South Dakota and the Thirty-seventh regiment, U. S. A., and is now awaiting results of an examination he lately took for a lieutenancy in the regular army.

Death of a Sporting Man.

Walker, Minn., March 18. — A man named Atkinson, well known in sporting circles, whose home is at Verndale, died here just after being taken from the train on which he arrived from Cass Lake. Though suffering from pneumonia, his death is thought to have resulted from morphine taken to allay pain.

Will Haul More Cattle.

Sioux Falls, S. D., March 18. — The Milwaukee anticipates a great increase in cattle shipments over its lines from the ranges of the state this season. The recent extension of its Bowdle branch to the town of Evarts, on the Missouri river, gives the company the best of opportunities for cattle shipments.

Hospital Burned.

Helena, Mont., March 18.—St. Peter's hospital, an Episcopalian institution, was partially destroyed by fire. Thirty patients were removed to places of safety and no one was injured. The loss was about $10,000, fully insured. The fire caught under the roof from a defective flue.

Renville Will Build Schoolhouse.

Renville, Minn., March 18.—At the special school meeting Renville voted $1,200 bonds to build an addition to the schoolhouse. The vote stood 97 for and 31 against.

SARAH AND THE "INDIANS."

Bernhardt Played Fedora For Them at 35 Cents a Head.

Sarah Bernhardt, the great French actress, once played in Sullivan, Ind., at 35 cents a head.

It was many years ago, and Bernhardt was making a tour of the country. On the way from Louisville to Indianapolis the train was stopped at Sullivan by the news that a serious freight wreck had occurred a few miles up the road completely blocking the tracks and making progress to Indianapolis impossible until the next day.

"Very well," said the manager in excellent French and with forced calmness. "Since we cannot leave town we will give a performance here."

"Impossible," said Mme. Bernhardt, also in French: "Quite impossible."

"Not a bit," said the manager, and he went about it. The divine Bernhardt, being under contract to play a certain number of nights, was induced to consent. There was no "opera house" in Sullivan, but the Masonic hall was rented, and some of the scenery was crowded into it. The local job office got out a lot of handbills in a hurry, and messengers were dispatched to the adjoining towns to spread the glad news that Bernhardt, the divine Sarah, was to play in Sullivan that night and that admission would be 35 cents.

"No use trying to charge metropolitan prices here," said the manager to the treasurer, and that gentleman sighed and said he supposed not.

In the early evening there began to come into town long lines of green farmer wagons, each holding a family party. When the house was full, the great Bernhardt cautiously took a peep at it from behind the flimsy curtain.

"Mon Dieu!" she cried, raising her jeweled hands. "Look at the Indians!"

But she played Fedora for them, and she played until 11 o'clock.—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

HE USED THE SALT TEST.

An Old Apache Chief's Knowledge of the Human System.

In the early days of Union Pacific railroading Victoria, Nana and Geronimo, the three chiefs of the Arizona Apaches, with 100 of their best bucks, came through to Green River, Wy.

They had heard of the "heap wagon and no hoss" and had come to stop the train. They made a lasso of rawhide, and 50 men on each side held on to the rope as the freight came down the Wasatch divide. The engineer saw when several miles away what the Indians were up to, so he whistled "off brakes" and, opening his throttle, let her loose. The cowcatcher struck the rope and hurled the Indians in all directions, literally tearing them to pieces, headless, armless and legless. The three chiefs went south to their cactus plains very crestfallen.

Before they selected these men the old Chief Victoria had them all eat a piece of rock salt about as big as a pecan, run swiftly about 100 yards, sit down on a log or rock and cross their legs. Then he watched the vibration of the feet, which were crossed. The feet which vibrated the longest or had the longest strokes he declined to accept for a severe duty or a dangerous trip or for one that was at all hazardous, but he accepted the feet which vibrated short, distinct and regular strokes.

Now, what did the old chief know about pulsation of the arterial system or of heart action and indeed about salt in the system? I have lived near to Indian reservations and have had occasion often to survey over their lands for railroads and other objects, and I have wondered where old Victoria got his idea. Is not the child of the sagebrush plains better posted than his paleface brother?—Chicago Inter Ocean.

A Love Letter of Prince Bismarck.

"On my window sill, among all sorts of crocuses and hyacinths, stand two camellias which always inspire me with strange thoughts. One of them, slender and pretty, with its ornamental crown (top) and soft, pale—very pale—pink blossoms, but little foliage and only two buds, transports me to Reddetin, holds itself rather stiffly and lisps English. The other makes far less impression of beauty as you look at it, and its stalk betrays in its gnarled twisting lack of care in its pruning. From the midst of the foliage looks out a dead branch, but the crown is rich in leaves, and the foliage is greener than that of its neighbor. It gives promise of abundant blossoming in its eight buds, and its color is deep dark red and white in irregular gay variegation. Do you take the comparison amiss? It is a lame comparison, moreover, for I do not love camellias, because they are without odor, and you I love precisely on account of the fragrance of the flower of your spirit, which is white, dark red and black."

Here is a picture of the Man of Iron with his armor doffed.—Harper's Magazine.

HE CURSED THE TOWN

END OF THE FIRST CAPITAL OF ILLINOIS PROPHESIED BY AN INDIAN.

The Destruction of the Town of Kaskaskia Was In Accordance With the Last Words of the Chief Who Died For a Woman's Love.

Since the waters of the Mississippi river washed away the last vestige of Kaskaskia, the first capital of Illinois, an old legend that contained the prophecy of the total destruction of the once flourishing little city has been recalled. Kaskaskia was situated on a peninsula at the junction of the Kaskaskia and the Mississippi rivers, and in 1882 the Mississippi river cut its way through the peninsula, leaving the remnant of the town on an island. The water continued to wash away the rich alluvial deposits on which Kaskaskia was built until, late in 1900, the last foot of the land where the town once stood disappeared. This singular ending of Kaskaskia's once splendid ambitions has recalled to the superstitious the story that the town was cursed in the eighteenth century by an Indian who had been wronged by one of the leading citizens.

Jean Benard came to this country from France in 1698, bringing with him his wife and his 10-year-old daughter Marie. The family settled in Kaskaskia, where Benard established a merchandising business. The Frenchman soon became one of the most prosperous and most influential men of the town. Marie, his daughter, grew to be a beautiful woman, much courted by the most eligible young men of the new country. She was in no hurry to accept any of them, and her fame as a belle spread from Lake Michigan to the gulf of Mexico.

A young chief of the Kaskaskia tribe of Indians, having become converted to Christianity after several years of study under the tutelage of the Jesuits, built himself a house in Kaskaskia and was taken into partnership in one of the trading houses there. He was prosperous, handsome and well educated and was soon received into the homes of the white settlers. One night at a ball he happened to meet Marie Benard.

The girl was at once fascinated by the tall, fine looking Indian, who fell in love with her at first sight and made no secret of his admiration. But Benard pere soon noticed the attachment and forbade his daughter from communicating with the young Indian. To make sure that there would be no more meetings Benard used his influence to prevent the chief from attending any of the social entertainments given in Kaskaskia.

But love always finds a way, and the young couple managed to see each other despite all the precautions of the girl's father. But Benard became aware of these meetings and again took means to prevent them. He was a man of wealth and influence, and he had the Indian forced out of his partnership in the trading company.

The Indian left Kaskaskia. For almost a year nothing was heard of him, and Benard thought that his daughter had forgotten her lover, for she appeared gay and careless, and she accepted with apparent pleasure the attentions of a young Frenchman. One night when a large ball at Kaskaskia was at its height Marie Benard disappeared.

Those who searched for Marie discovered that the young chief of the Kaskaskians had been seen that evening in the town, and the conclusion was at once reached that the girl had eloped with him. Benard at once organized a party to go in pursuit of the fugitives. As there was a heavy snow on the ground, their trail was easily discovered and followed. The Indian and Marie had crept away afoot, and as their pursuers were supplied with fast horses the young lovers were captured after a day's chase about 40 miles from Kaskaskia. Their destination had been the French settlement at St. Louis, where the Indian had provided a home for his wife.

The Indian surrendered without resistance, and the posse started on the journey back to Kaskaskia, taking the two captives. Most of the men who composed Benard's party wanted to kill the Indian instantly, but Benard would not allow it, for he said that they should leave him to deal with his daughter's lover.

When the party reached Kaskaskia, the girl was placed in the convent there. Then Benard took the Indian to the bank of the Mississippi and, binding him tightly to a log, turned him adrift in the river. As the helpless Indian floated away to his death he raised his eyes to heaven and cursed Benard, who, he declared, would die a violent death. The Indian's last words were a prophecy that within 200 years the waters which were then bearing him away would sweep from the earth every vestige of the town, so that only the name would be left.

The unhappy girl died in the convent. Benard was killed in 1712 in a duel. The last trace of Kaskaskia has been obliterated, and the superstitious declare that the Indian's curse has had something to do with the passing of the once flourishing town. On dark and stormy nights the ghost of the Indian is said to appear. The specter, with strong arms bound and face upturned, floats slowly by on the river where the stream sweeps by the site of the vanished city in which Marie Benard once lived and in which she died mourning the red man that she loved.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

He Knew Better.

"Oh, John," she cried, "baby's cut a tooth!"

"Aw, go 'way!" broke in little Willie, who was playing on the floor. "You can't cut a tooth! You may break it, but you can't cut it!"—Chicago Post.

We Want Correspondents

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage, and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

Luck and Pluck.

Two clerks named Thomas and Clarence were in the employ of a wealthy merchant. Thomas was always an industrious lad, but Clarence was much given to frivolity and was extravagant in his habits. In after years Clarence married his employer's daughter and was made a partner in the business. Thomas continued to be an honest, industrious clerk all his life, and his services were much appreciated by Clarence and his father-in-law.

Moral: There is no royal road to success.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Spinsters.

Unmarried women are called spinsters, or spinning women, because it was a maxim among our forefathers that a young woman should not marry until she had spun enough linen to furnish her house. All unmarried, old or young, were then called spinsters, a name still retained in all legal documents.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE
St. Hilaire Spectator.
ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA.
Wednesday, March 29, 1901.

President Diaz of Mexico is to be the guest of the French nation during his visit to France, and will be escorted from Vera Cruz to Marseilles by a fleet of French war vessels.

The German government is granting a subsidy of $1,500,000 per annum to cable companies, and, in conjunction with Dutch undertakings, cables are to be laid between Batavia, Saigon, Palembang, Makassar, Amborna, the Carolines and New Guinea.

In South Carolina there was hanged last week a negro convicted of assaulting a white woman. This is the first execution under the law making this offense a capital one. Now that the law is on the statute book, it is hoped that it will have a tendency to prevent lynching.

In the Georgia legislature a bill has been introduced to empower the State Commissioner of Agriculture to inspect proprietary medicines to see if they are wholesome or injurious. When the testers, or "tasters," are inspecting medicines of an alcoholic nature, it is likely that well-developed jags will result ere the inspectors will be qualified to report.

The great dam across the Nile at Assoua, which has just been completed, is designed to hold back the floods and provide for a system of regular irrigation. It is expected that some 600,000 acres of arid land will be made productive. The dam cost about $1,000,000 and has required two years for construction—a comparatively short time, when the magnitude of the work is considered.

A young woman teacher of St. Louis tried to discourage tardiness by kissing the first pupil to arrive at school in the morning. On the day the system went into effect two boys of 16, only two years younger than the teacher, arrived several hours before school opened, and every boy in the school was on hand an hour ahead of time. The two big boys each got a kiss, but the system was abandoned.

The new Austrian parliament contains no less than twenty-six parties, with membership ranging from two up to sixty-four. No party has a majority. In elections the Anti-Semites and the Clerical parties suffered heavily, many of their seats being captured by Socialists or Nationalists. The German members outnumber the Poles, or Czecks, by thirty. It is not believed that any government can long continue to hold office.

A woman reformer recently pulled from the folds of her gown a soiled American flag and waved it before the audience, saying that she had waved it from public platforms in every country in Europe. "More's the pity!" murmured a much-loved general, who had lost his arm in fighting under that emblem. Those who see in our flag liberty and justice and moderation do not incessantly wave it above their heads; but perhaps they will sustain it long after those who every day wrap themselves ostentatiously in its folds have dropped in the rear.

According to the statements of a former resident in the Klondike, the inhabitants of that region suffer much from snow blindness. Dark glasses seem to be of no value in the way of prophylaxis. That which afforded the most protection was wooden goggles, the patterns for which were taken from those worn by the Indians. These were whittled out of a piece of wood, fitting closely around the eyes, and with no glasses at all; but in the place of glasses were very small openings to see through, the inside being colored black. A projection like the visor of a cap extended over them, which was also colored black on the under side to shade the eyes.

The groups of coast-defenders, on duty at life-saving stations are now having their most trying experiences. One of the force describes a sentinel tour along the shore in a terrific gale with a blinding snow. He was unable to keep his feet, but crawled to the outer limit of his beat, and returned in the same manner. The cold and fatigue made the night-watching an exhausting test of endurance and courage. His warning light was happily not needed, and no vessel came within the danger line; but the devotion was ready and the duty faithfully fulfilled. In the homes of comfort and security, when darkness and tempest bring no fear to the householder, let not the men whose service often means peril and privation be forgotten. Sympathetic thought, and whatever is needed to make their lives exempt from unnecessary suffering, ought to be a glad offering to the brave and patient men whose record is an honor to themselves and to their country.

Fishermen will be interested in the announcement that 200,000,000 whitefish will be distributed in the Great Lakes from the Michigan hatcheries during the coming season. In addition to these, the same hatcheries will distribute in the larger streams of Michigan 7,000,000 brook trout, 3,800,000 lake trout, 7,000,000 black bass and 100,000,000 wall-eyed pike. The work of planting fish is as interesting and about as important as any in the line of preserving an industry which is paid for out of public funds.

A sudden illness compelled Robert Winfield, a colored man, to seek treatment at the Bellevue Hospital, New York City. While he was there two stylish colored ladies called for his clothing, stating that they had been requested by the patient, who was then confined to his bed, to renovate and press his garments. In a week Robert was well enough to be discharged; but he couldn't leave the hospital, as his entire wardrobe consisted of a four-inch smile and an eleven-inch pair of shoes.

THE LAKE SIDE.

The shadows round the inland sea
Are deepening into night;
Slow up the slopes of Ossipee
They chase the lessening light.
Tired of the long day's blinding heat,
I rest my languid feet;
Lake of the Hills, where, cool and sweet,
Thy sunset waters lie!

Along the sky in wavy lines,
O'er isle and reach and bay,
Green-belted with eternal pines,
The mountains stretch away.
Below, the maple masses sleep
Where shore with water blends,
While midway on the tranquil deep
The evening light descends.

So seemed it when yon hill's red crown,
Of old, the Indian trod,
And, through the sunset air, looked down
Upon the Smile of God.
To him of light and shade the laws
No forest [illegible] taught;
Their living and eternal cause
His truer instinct sought.

He saw these mountains in the light
Which now across them shines;
This lake, in summer sunset bright,
Walled round with sombering pines.
God near him seemed; from earth and skies
His loving voice he heard,
As, face to face in Paradise,
Man stood before the Lord.

Thanks, O our Father! that like him,
Thy tender love I see,
In radiant hill and woodland dim,
And tinted sunset sea.
For not in mockery dost thou fill
Our earth with light and grace;
Thou hid'st no dark and cruel will Behind Thy smiling face.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

Van Zandt's Vindication.

BY J. F. PHILLIPS.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Asher had just finished putting an extra block of coal in the blazing grate and was tapping it with the tongs to increase its brisk glow, when one of the men spoke, thus breaking the chain of silence. Outside, the air was filled with particles of swirling snow and, all portentous of a night in-doors, with jovial companions, one youthful member of the Lethe club puffed more vigorously than ever at his pipe. Then he stopped, looked inquiringly at the coterie nestling in easy chairs around the fire and advanced the words that dispelled the unusual quiet.

"Where's Vanny?" asked Collier, he of the light curly locks and Arundelian bearing, as he looked at his watch. "He told me he was coming here at 10; we're due to finish that tie game of billiards, but, as yet, I've seen no sign of him. Wonder what's the matter?"

"Oh, you needn't bother about Van Zandt," answered Asher, as he once more seated himself in the restful leather covered armchair. "Never knew him to keep an appointment strictly on time; I'll lay you odds of five to one he finishes the stretch at least a quarter hour to the bad. I know that's no more than he'd be willing to allow if he was here now. And besides, it would take a more rigid promise than the one he made you to induce him to leave Miss Trezevant without his customary brief grace for saying 'good night.' She'll be the doing of him, I'm afraid."

Carlough, the club's self-appointed analyst in all matters pertaining to the love affairs, bethumbed the magazine he had been reading and looked up.

"Well, she'll have a dandy opportunity to prove her adroitness," said that gentleman. "Vanny's not the chap to allow himself to be dictated to. He's too much a devotee at the shrine of independent bachelordom; not saying, of course, that the right woman, at the proper time, may not succeed in breaking this steel-clad barrier. He's often spoken of it to me; decried the weak-mindedness of men who allow themselves to be transported hither and yon by the buffeting waves of Aphrodite's sea. He calls it misguided reason and silly sentimentalism. Mary Trezevant, from what I know of her, is not the girl to conquer under such circumstances. I've half a mind to believe she w[illegible]'t try, either, since her mother [illegible] are so opposed to men who [illegible] their appetite for an occasio[illegible] and soda or a nip of warm [illegible]

"That may be true," int[illegible] Pearson, a ruddy-faced [illegible] while innately champio[illegible] cause, had hitherto [illegible] saying anything. W[illegible] in his hands, he had sat [illegible] last half hour, as if meditating [illegible] flyer in wheat or some new cou[illegible] the board of trade. In truth, it was Van Zandt's behavior that concerned him most deeply; for Vanny and h[illegible] had long been kindred spirits—chum[illegible] from boyhood. So, when Carlou[illegible] finished his remarks, [illegible]hil's ears were soon turned to catch a[illegible]l that was said.

"Where's Van ney?"

"That may be so," he said, "but as for keeping promises I'd pit the old fellow against anyo[illegible]ne in this club." Hotly, "We know how he likes his toddy; especially at such a cold, blustery time as this, but that doesn't weigh in the bal[illegible]ance against him—not with me!"

"None of us is trying to pose as a saint, my dear bo[illegible]," mildly interposed Carlough, "you have placed a wrong construction on what I have said. We have a bit of th[illegible]e ancient spirit about each of us, whe[illegible]n it comes to a tempting glass or a pretty woman, and you know that Va[illegible]nny's no exception. In his case, unti[illegible] the acid and the alkali, however, one will not neutralize the other; on[illegible]e must give way and I'm ready to vou[illegible]ch for his good sense."

Sound of a familiar voice in the corridor announced the arrival of the much-discussed Van [illegible]dt. A kindly word to the porter and a nod to friends in the billiard room off the hall, and soon the young lawyer, with cheeks aglow, strode into the room, wherein he would find his cronies. At sight of him, there was a simultaneously whispered greeting from each, but it was plain that his entrance had caused a lull in the conversation.

The possibility of losing one of the brotherhood of Letheans, New York's famous bachelor organization, after all kinds of resolutions against marriage had been passed, was more than the most stanchly hearted of them could bear. A mental pall seemed to settle over the little gathering, as if one of their number was already under the shadow of some mysteriously ominous power. He who brought the pervading gloom, maintained a rigid silence, not at all in keeping with his conduct, when, with glass to lips he was wont to join in the chorus:

"He's a jolly good fellow,
He's a jolly good fellow,
He's a jolly good fellow,
A jolly good fellow is he."

Then someone suggested the regular nightly potation, which, for some strange reason, thus far, had been overlooked. Prospects of that which was to follow brought back the good cheer and soon all were laughing and joking, conscious only of the joys of comradeship.

"For the second, you would better ask Miss Trezerant."

"Let's drink a toast to Vanny and his promises," suggested Dan Wilson, an ex-football player who was always ready for a tackle at just such critical times. At this juncture a clinking sound marked the rise of the glasses as they went aloft; all eyes were centered on the member whose immediate future was a matter of so much concern.

"To Vanny and his promises!" all yelled and it was not until silence ensued that any of them noticed the emptiness of Van Zandt's hands. Many looked aghast; so great was their surprise.

Vanny grasped the back of his chair as he arose to give response. Something tugged at his throat, a sign of the weakness his companions would charge him with, and which made speech, for the moment, difficult. His heart throbbed fast in the excitement but thoughts of her steadied his nerve and calmed his voice, so that his words fell measurably clear and eloquent.

"I've a confession to make," he advanced. "It's due to you, I know, since I'm the first to nullify—our bond—of fellowship. Your toast has taken me completely off my guard. I hadn't considered, for a moment, that you knew of the serious turn this affair had taken—how could you?—when the affirmations were made only tonight. There were two of them; the third shall be an invitation to dine with me Thursday evening. Will you come?"

Chief Butler of England.

The duke of Norfolk, as hereditary earl marshal of England, has entire control over the arrangements at Westminster abbey at a coronation or other ceremonial of a public character, and as chief butler of England he is entitled at a coronation to receive a drinking cup of pure gold. He can claim an escort of cavalry whenever he likes. The dukedom goes back more than four centuries.

Late Queen Victoria's Religion.

Queen Victoria was profoundly religious. She believed in the efficacy of prayer. She was a regular Bible reader, and frequently used a well-worn Bible that belonged to General Gordon, and was presented by his sister to the queen, who acknowledged the gift in an autograph letter. At the same time she did not permit her religious convictions to influence the subtle intricacies of statecraft.—Chicago Record.

Landlord System in the South.

Aid is being sought in the north in furtherance of a plan to assist the negroes in many places in the black belt of the south to become land owners, thus freeing them from the bondage of the landlord system, under which too often, the tenant does not receive a just share of the product resulting from his efforts.

The city authorities of Vienna have condemned the use of trailing skirts in public places, on hygienic grounds, because they sweep up the dust.

Some people would rather do a thing twice than do it right in the first place.

Woman's Home

THE ENGAGED GIRL.

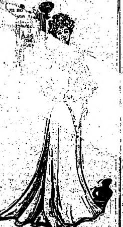
An engaged girl is often a very foolish girl with regard to her future husband's relatives. She looks at them with coldness, as people who suppose themselves to have more right in her lover than she herself has. She does not care particularly about them, perhaps, and thinks them frumpy or over particular, and she takes little pains to hide that they don't interest her. She seems to expect that he will lose his old closeness of relation with his own people at once, and [illegible] hers in their stead. She is impatient and resentful of any claim they make to his time or notice, and thinks she ought to have the monopoly. This is not only wrong, it is foolish as well, says the Toronto News.

She should remember that, after all, his own family have the prior right, and that it needs a good deal of unselfishness and self-effacement to resign that right without a pang to a strange girl, if even it is a girl he loves. She should think that to even the most generous of mothers it is a hard thing to part with her son to another woman, and the more she herself loves that son the more she ought to understand his mother's love and sympathize with it.

She ought to reflect that upon her attitude now toward her fiance's people much of the happiness or the discomfort of her future life will rest. She ought to realize what a terrible responsibility she is taking on herself if she does anything to sever the close bond between her husband and his people. It is inevitable that if she makes a faction against them he will side with her, and by how small a difference may she make a quarrel that will break the old affection for life.

Her aim should be to win their liking and their confidence, no matter how little congenial she may chance to find them, and, it does not always follow that because she loves a man she finds his family lovable, too. She should make up her mind to put up with much, if needs be, to endure and to be patient, and to overlook. She must realize that from henceforth his people are to be her own people, and that if she is not prepared to take the rough with the smooth, in that relation she had better let the whole thing [illegible] girl who really loves the man [illegible] marries will not need be told much [illegible] what it is right to do in this respect.

PALE CORN COLOR CREPE.



The bolero opens over accordion pleated front of white chiffon; bolero bordered with fagoting and French dots in blue silk; collarette and cuffs of Persian embroidery on blue, white and gold; blue panne velvet knot and ends.

AS TO DRESSING THE HAIR.

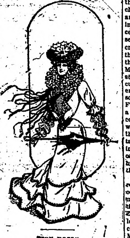
With the flat hats and low turbans now in vogue a change in hairdressing became necessary, and the coiffure has receded from the extreme top and front of the head to the back. A charming arrangement has the hair waved softly all around, parted at the side and coiled loosely in two figure eights, held together by jewelled combs. The Catogan braid also is seen. This old-fashioned coiffure is made by tying the hair just below the crown and forming two braids that are looped up to the tying and fastened there. This leaves four lines of braided hair which are flattened to the head and caught by pins and finished with a fancy comb. If the loops of the hair extend beyond the nape of the neck, so much the more fashionable is the wearer. The front of the hair should be parted off and waved and fastened under the knot, says the Plain Dealer.

It seems quite certain that low and elaborate hairdressing, with many curls and braids, will take the place of the styles that have prevailed so long. The pompadour, as of old, parts reluctantly with its sway, but it grows smaller day by day and cannot last into the summer.

THE DIP BUCKLE.

The straight front which we now all present to the world has necessitated a like change in the attitude of our buckles. The dip buckle is now the thing, and as is to be expected from its name, it gives that dip in front which Dame Fashion requires. It comes, of course, in all manner of styles and in all the popular metals, says the Pittsburg Dispatch. One form has, in addition to the slides at the side, through which the ribbon passes, two loops at the bottom, through which the ribbon ends are run and tied low down to give that slanting effect so much desired. This device is quite helpful, for the buckle is so shaped that it keeps its place and thus holds the knot of ribbon where it is tied, not always an easy matter to achieve otherwise. We all have had troubles of our own when our belts, ribbons, bows and the like persist in "riding up."

SPRING GOWN, TRIPLE SKIRT.



"TOY DOGS."

The term "toy dog" was never applied with more appropriateness to any breed than to the clever and beautiful little Pomeranians. Admirers of this breed claim that the Pomeranians supersede every other dog, and are sure to become the most popular as pets. In England they have had a great vogue for some time, but as yet there are comparatively few in this country. The first were brought over about a year ago by Mrs. C. Hartley Willamson, who fell in love with the beautiful little animals, and has made a sort of fad of them. Mrs. Williamson, who is a member of the Ladies' Kennel association, brought a dozen with her from a European trip, and now she has twenty, keeping some of them at her home in this city, and others at her Lakewood place. At last year's Westminster Kennel club show her Lakewood Roy took the prize for the best Pomeranian exhibited.

The black Pomeranians, so Mrs. Williamson told a Mail and Express reporter, are the smallest. As yet it ha[illegible] impossible to breed the white [illegible] Eight pounds is the [illegible] dogs under eight are [illegible] and the smaller [illegible]able. Lakewood Roy [illegible]uite five pounds [illegible]d white, Pomeranian[illegible]n, blue and [illegible] as ermine, [illegible] The first [illegible] were bred by Glads[illegible] [illegible]tremely fond of Pomerans.

These tiny [illegible]ring prices in no way commensura[illegible] with their size. The price averages from $500 to $1,000, and as much as $2,000 has been paid for an especially fine one.

Some of the Pomeranian's distinguishing points are these: A profuse coat which is more like fur than that of any other dog; having an upper and an under coat; the hair is not curly, nor is it brushed smooth; it stands out from the body in a fluffy way; the nose is pointed, the ears small and erect, the feet dainty and "feathered," and the beautiful plume, as the tail is called, is carried erect.

Very affectionate and lively are the little Poms, but jealous of attention paid to any other pet, playful and intelligent and quick to hear any noise. Mrs. Williamson declared that hers know everything that is going on in her house, and are superb watchdogs on account of their acute hearing. The same regimen of food and exercise suitable for any house dog suffices the Pomeranians, although they are in every way more dainty.—Mail and Express.

TO FLOAT AT POLE.

OUR FLAG FIRST FOR THE EXTREME NORTH.

Evelyn Baldwin's Plans to Make a Dash to the North Pole—He Will Take the Franz Josef Land Route—Explorer's Confidence.

The vessel chosen by Evelyn B. Baldwin for his proposed "dash to the north pole" has been named the America. The expedition will be distinctly American. If the dauntless captain who has quietly and unostentatiously devoted many months to preliminary study and investigation before embarking upon what he feels will be the voyage of his life, in more senses than one, reaches his goal at latitude 90 degrees north and stands on the spot beneath the north star, where "there is neither east nor west," it will be the stars and stripes which will there be first unrolled and frozen. Mr. Baldwin is now in Washington recruiting the party for his expedition, says the Chicago Chronicle. His idea of polar exploration is diametrically opposed to that of Lieutenant Peary, so far as the personnel of such a party is concerned. Peary has said the greater the party the greater the danger of accident, and necessarily of delay. "Two men, the right two men, can go north over the ice faster and farther than 2,000," he is said to have asserted. Baldwin thinks that polar exploration is like any exploration, and that in the union of a moderate number of strong, active, hardy men, there is greater strength. He admits, however, that like a war fleet, such a party is only so strong and so fast as its weakest and slowest member. There will be about thirty in the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition, but there will be none but the hardiest. Mr. Baldwin has been very reticent in regard to his plans. After his return from a three months' visit in Europe "to gather information of all sorts," as he said when he started out, he would make no definite disclosures in regard to the plan which the [illegible] adopted. It was only [illegible] nouncement [illegible] been chosen to lead [illegible] pedition, that he was [illegible] overland voyage by sle[illegible] Josef Land, that it bec[illegible] the Franz Josef Land [illegible] chosen by Mr. Baldwi[illegible] and Scotch newspapers, [illegible]ing upon Bernier's change of plan, censured the Canadian captain most severely for what they termed an encroachment on the declared plans of the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition. Since this statement it has transpired that Mr. Baldwin, after a long and careful study of all the known charts of ocean currents, has decided to allow the America to be frozen into the drift ice somewhere in the neighborhood of Franz Josef Land. The explorer has a confidence which amounts almost to certainty in his mind that the ship will sooner or later be swept across the unknown seas within striking distance of the pole. Mr. Baldwin, having settled in his mind the question of reaching the pole, is now possessed by a fear that Lieut. Peary will get there before him.

The long list of efforts, with their recorded failures or only partial success, is sure to arouse doubts in the minds of even the most sanguine as to the ultimate success of the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition in reaching the long sought goal, but it is a striking commentary upon the character of Mr. Baldwin that those who know him most intimately, and have discussed his plans with him with greatest care place implicit faith in the expedition to do all that is possible to man.

Believes in Inhabited Worlds.

The president of the French Academy of Sciences, at the last meeting of that body, announced that Mme. Guzmann, a believer in the plurality of inhabited worlds, had bequeathed to the Academy a sum of 100,000 francs, to be given to any person who shall have succeeded in entering into communication with one of the heavenly bodies, with the exception of the planet Mars. The "will," M. Levy adds, wisely provides that on each occasion that the prize could be awarded during the space of five years in succession the compound interest will be devoted to the promotion of the serious work of astronomy. The intention of the founder would be scrupulously carried out, and the prize would be put up for competition in the present year.

Speculation and Theft.

Some statistician, in emulation of Lombroso, perhaps, has been figuring out the habitual employment of convicts. He concludes that more men and women whose employers are the national, state or municipal governments fall into evil ways and come to untoward ends than those who work for private individuals or corporations. A very large proportion of the men and women who have been handlers of public moneys seem to yield to the constant temptation and begin to speculate, and some cynic avert that peculation is the corollary of speculation. As a matter of fact, most of the big and little thieves who confess how they were led to take money that did not late, and some cynic aver that peculations of one sort or another brought them eventually behind the bars.

Necessity of Cover During Sleep.

The object is simply this: Nature takes the time when one is lying down to give the heart a rest, and that organ consequently makes ten strokes less a minute than when one is in an upright posture. Multiply that by sixty minutes and it is 600 strokes. Therefore in eight hours spent in lying down, the heart is saved nearly 5,000 strokes, and as the heart pumps six ounces of blood with each stroke, it lifts 30,000 ounces less of blood in a night of eight hours spent in bed than when one is in an upright position. As the blood flows so much more slowly through the veins when one is lying down, one must supply then with extra coverings the warmth usually furnished by circulation.

He has command of the sack who is seated on it.

VICTIM OF DOUBLE JOKE.

What Followed When an Alderman Spoke to a Motion.

Recently, when a measure which attracted more than usual attention was being debated in the city council, Ald. Brenner spoke loud and long on the topic, says the Chicago News. Scarcely had each speaker in reply finished when Brenner was again on his feet. This was repeated several times until finally a wag in the council, tiring of the discussion, slipped a written order to the reading clerk and quietly sat back in his chair while the clerk read out, in stentorian tones a proposition to declare "Ald. Brenner a public nuisance" and calling upon all well-disposed persons to suppress him on sight. Greatly enraged, Brenner made himself heard above the roar of laughter with a demand for the name of the author of the sally. The only answer he received was continued laughter, which was taken up by the occupants of the visitors' gallery. "Don't make any fuss," whispered "Blind" Billy Kent, who sat near at hand. "I will tell you who did it. It was Novak. I saw him hand it up." In a minute Brenner was beside the accused, breathing forth suggestions of annihilation to the astonished alderman, who could only gasp a weak denial, so great was his surprise and so sudden the attack. "Don't you deny it for one minute," commanded Brenner. "I've got you with the goods. Kent saw you hand up the proposition." "Kent saw me," gasped Novak, as his eye swept over to where the blind alderman sat. Brenner followed his gaze and then he, too, saw the point. "I guess there'll be no more debate on that nuisance ordinance," he said, and he sunk back into his seat and joined heartily in the laughter that followed.

How Gold Was Found in Australia.

The discovery of the Australian gold fields was in some instances not altogether without romance, notwithstanding their prosaic surroundings, perhaps in no case more so than in that of West Pilbarra, of which I may quote the story as commonly told. It [illegible]

—forgetting to add that he had [illegible] gold in it! The governor, much surprised, but moved by curiosity, wired back: "Yes; and what happened to the crow?" (or cow). This elicited explanations which led to the proclamation of the district as a gold field, and in consequence of the rush that followed in the same year (1888) 3,493 ounces of gold were obtained, valued at £13,273, early attention being drawn to the district by the discovery of several large nuggets, one of which weighed 140 ounces.—A. G. Charleton, in Engineering Magazine.

Coverings for Brass Beds.

Some of the newest coverings for brass beds are made of heavy white linen, with lace or hemstitched edge, while in the center is the owner's monogram, embroidered in rose or white flax threads. More simple coverings for a young girl's bed can be made of some of the many graceful designs of cretonne. A most appropriate one is made from a design which has bunches of poppies scattered over a white ground. Bright red, pink or yellow colorings upon the white ground often give the needed touch of warmth in an otherwise cold room. If the daffodil yellow is chosen, it will be found to be more often satisfactory in combination with the other furnishings of a room than either red or pink, while the warm note is produced with equally satisfactory results.

Facts About Norwegian Army.

According to late reports the Norwegian army is now on an excellent footing. Under the regulations all able-bodied men, except members of the clergy and pilots, are liable to service. There is a regular line army of about 26,000 men, which, according to law, can be employed abroad. There is a militia army of more than 25,000 men, called the landvern, who have already served in the line, and a second branch of the militia called the landstrum, also of 25,000 men, who have served previously in the line and in the landvern. Then there is a coast artillery force of 4,500 men, making a total of 30,000 men to defend the nation.

Coal in Andro Island.

In the '30s a fisherman discovered the presence of coal in the island of Andro, Nordland, but the discovery was treated with indifference, and only a few years ago capitalists undertook to investigate the coal fields in a thorough and systematic manner. The result of this examination, which was recently concluded, is very encouraging, as it is understood that the coal is of the very best description and that the supply is almost inexhaustible.—Stockholm Letter.

Says Farmers Are Starving.

Russian farmers in McHenry county, North Dakota, are starving, according to the Rev. John H. Mead of Fargo, who has been in Tacoma. He says: "It is the intention of the Red Cross society to ask help from other northwestern states, for it will be necessary to keep about 150 families until their crops give an indication of a good yield next summer. At present they cannot get credit at the stores."

Experiment in Reflection.

A curious experiment is described in Popular Science. Hold a teaspoon over a candle until it is blackened with soot, and then plunge it into water, when it will at once appear to become coated with polished silver. The water surrounding the light-absorbing layer of soot has become transformed into a mirror.

The Barrier at the Door.

BY EDGAR WELTON COOLEY.

(Copyright, 1901: by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Amid some old barrels and rubbish in an alley, covered with grease and dirt and rags, lay the Tramp. His eyes were bloodshot and bleary.

Over the buildings and in the streets and alleys, silent and damp, rested the fog that had drifted in from the lake. Pedestrians dodged each other on the walks like grim shadows flitting hither and yon. The gongs on the electric cars kept up an incessant din and vehicles picked their way along the congested thoroughfares.

But the Tramp was oblivious to fog and confusion. Unkempt, outcast, desolate, he lay, his faculties inert, benumbed by the liquor that turned the blood in his veins to fire, and threw a heavy veil between him and the tragedies and the pathos of his life.

From out of the yellowish black of the street, into the denser fog of the alley came two shadowy forms. They halted by the brick wall of a building near the pile of barrels and rubbish where the Tramp lay.

"Well," said the shorter Shadow, bluntly, "what's the job—liftin'?"

"No," replied the taller one, cautiously, "nervy business. But say, honest now, are you on the square?"

"Sure," returned the other.

The voices aroused the Tramp from his drunken stupor, and raising his head a trifle, he rested it on his hand and tried to listen.

"Well," resumed the taller Shadow finally, "there's a woman in the case, and she's made a big fool of me. I'm in a tight box, Reddy, and you've got to help me. Good job, good pay. Blundering job, and you'll swing, and I'll not donate a penny towards giving burial."

"Well, what's de graft?" was the response.

"It's this: The woman is Belle Sibley. You know her—out on Bennington avenue, Number 16, Carleton Flats. She is my wife but the world doesn't know it. I've blowed in twenty thousand on her—twenty thousand big round dollars and not one of them mine."

"De bank's?"

"Yes, the bank's, every cent of it. But they can never trace it to me if she is out of the way. We had a quarrel this morning, and I believe she intends to preach. So she's got to go."

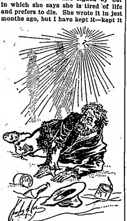
"And what do you want me to do—kidnap her?"

"Kidnap the devil;" snapped the taller Shadow, irritably. "No, kill."

"Oh," said the other quietly.

Into the muddled brain of the Tramp the words sank slowly, but they finally aroused his dormant faculties.

"It's this way," resumed the taller Shadow, lowering his voice until the Tramp could scarcely catch his words. "I have the business all cut and dried. Take this revolver and use it—it's hers. At two o'clock tomorrow morning, enter the flat by means of the stairs at the rear. You will find the outer door unlocked. Go down the hall until you come to the last door on your left. Open it with this key. You will find her alone. Put a pillow over her head to deaden the sound. Place the revolver against her right temple so that the powder will leave its marks. Then, when it is all over, lay the revolver near her right hand and place this paper on the dresser. It is a note written and signed by her in which she says she is tired of life and prefers to die. She wrote it in jest months ago, but I have kept it—kept it and preserved it for this hour, which I felt was coming. When you have done all these things carefully, retire the way you entered. The door will lock after you when you close it. Bring the key away with you."



"I'm in a tight box, Reddy."

"You'll do," exclaimed the shorter Shadow, admiringly. "You're a peach."

"As for me," continued the other, "I have arranged to spend the night with friends in a suburb. Might have to work an alibi, you know. But what do you say—is it a go?"

"Sure," said his companion; "it's a go, or me name ain't 'Reddy' Farrell."

After the two shadows had retreated through the black fog of the alley into the yellowish fog of the street, and had lost themselves amid the other shadows, the Tramp sat upright and drew the back of a rough and grimy hand across his eyes.

His bones ached from the dampness and the chill, and his brain seemed light and uncertain.

Belle Sibley! How that name carried him back across the span of years to the days when he was a gentleman himself—a gentleman, respected, honored, ambitious, successful,—and she was the sweetest, daintiest creature in his little world.

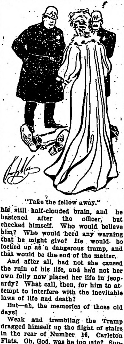
Gradually the whisky oozed out of the Tramp's brain, and memory's paintings passed before his eyes. The buttercups in the meadows, and the the loud whistle of the quail in the fence corner; her father's house amid the elm trees at the end of the lane; the music of her young voice, and the magic touch of her little hand!

How madly he had loved her in those old days in that simple, peaceful country town! And how happy he had been—how happy they both had been sweet scent of the clover; the melody of the thrush's song in the hedge, and—until that winter she had visited in the great city, and became intoxicated with its glare and its gayeties.

Then she had wearied of him, and he, crushed, heart-broken, desperate, had cursed her and drifted away—drifted on the wild billows of recklessness that had tossed him this way, and that, until—— He looked at his rags and his filth and his degradation God! Was this the end?

He struggled to his feet and staggered out of the alley into the subdued yellow glare of the street. A patrolman passed and the Tramp instinctively crouched in a darkened doorway and watched the retreating figure.

Suddenly a thought flashed through his still half-clouded brain, and he hastened after the officer, but checked himself. Who would believe him? Who would heed any warning that he might give? He would be locked up as a dangerous tramp, and that would be the end of the matter.



"Take the fellow away."

And after all, had not she caused the ruin of his life, and had not her own folly now placed her life in jeopardy? What call, then, for him to attempt to interfere with the inevitable laws of life and death?

But—ah, the memories of those old days!

Weak and trembling the Tramp dragged himself up the flight of stairs in the rear of Number 16, Carleton Flats. Oh, God, was he too late? Suppose—but no; the door was still unlocked.

He entered the narrow hall, and for a moment flattened himself against the wall. Then he crept on—on to the last door on the left, and listened. He could hear the heavy, regular breathing of a healthy sleeper.

He placed his knuckles against the panel of the door, thinking to knock and warn her of her danger, but he refrained. He would fight for her, he thought; out there in the darkness, alone and unarmed, he would battle for her life with a desperate man with a deadly weapon, and she need never know who her defender was.

And so, with his back pressed against the wall and one arm extended protectingly across the door like an iron bar, he waited—for hours, it seemed to him.

Finally, to his straining ears, there came the sound of footsteps ascending the stairs, and presently the silhouette of a short, thick set man appeared in bold relief in the open door. The Tramp, still holding his arm across the door, calmly awaited the man's approach, and when he had come so near he could feel upon his face the moisture of his breath he clutched him suddenly by the throat, and down upon the floor they fell together.

There they struggled and strained and cursed until, of a sudden, the darkness was pierced by a red tongue of flame and the silent hall reverberated with a sharp report.

Then the Tramp, clutching a jagged, reddening hole in his breast with his nervous fingers fell upon the threshold he had protected with his life, while a shadowy form sped silently through the darkness and was gone.

Presently came two blue coated officers and lifting the pulseless form of the Tramp carried it into the room And Belle Sibley, hurriedly robed in a mantle of pale blue satin, trimmed with silk, cast one quick glance at the drawn features stamped with dissipation and frowned.

"A drunken brawl, no doubt," she said, irritably. "How annoying to have it occur here. Take the fellow away."

Ancient Remedies.

Most of the drugs on which we chiefly rely date very far back. Nearly all those most commonly in use were known thousands of years ago. Castor oil and rheubarb were prescribed by the old Arabians, ergot was used in parturition by the peasants of Germany hundreds of years ago, male fern in tapeworm by the early Greeks and Romans. Mercury was a specific from time immemorial, and the list can be lengthened. The most ancient pharmacopoeia known was found between the legs of a mummy about 1500 B. C., and the principles of modern treatment were practiced by Asclepiades of Brussa.

Sweeping.

In sweeping carpets remove all furniture or cover it thoroughly, as the dampness will cause the dust to stick to the woodwork and soil the fabric. Sweep quickly and carefully from the corners and sides to the center of the room, to prevent the soiling of the wall paper. Take the dust carefully into the dustpan, carry to the kitchen and burn it. If you have a carpet sweeper run over the carpet quickly to brighten it and remove the dust.

There is no use in blowing a fire that burns well.

AN ELECTRICAL AGE.

APPLIANCES WHICH COST NEARLY FOUR BILLIONS.

About 600,000 Persons Employed—Expert Estimates That Arts of Electricity Have Added Six Billions to the World's Wealth.

It is a far cry from the $15,000 cash capital of the Magnetic Telegraph company in 1846 to the $3,975,000,000 which represented the cost of the electrical appliances in actual use in the United States at the end of the year 1900. The Morse telegraph was the first attempt to use electricity for industrial purposes. The Magnetic Telegraph company was organized mainly through the efforts of F. O. J. Smith in 1846, and was the beginning of the present immense telegraph and telephone business and other branches of business in which electricity is used. The company's capital stock was $60,000, of which one-half went to the owners of various patents, and $30,000 of which was allotted to subscribers, who invested the comparatively insignificant sum of $15,000 in cash. This $15,000 was the working capital of the first telegraph company. That sum today would hardly pay the furnishings in the general office of any one of the big telegraph or telephone companies. The value of the property, owned and used in their business by telegraph companies alone in this country is estimated by competent judges at $250,000,000, of which the Western Union company holdings represent some $115,000,000. Every railroad has its own telegraph system; 800 cities have fire telegraph lines, and every city of any consequence has its police department telegraph system. In addition to this, there are in all large cities systems of electric burglar alarms, "thermostatic protection," and district messenger companies with telegraph lines. The telephone business dates from the inventions of Bell and Gray, in 1877. The Bell system today represents an invested capital of about $200,000,000, and the total value of telephone lines, public and private, is placed at $400,000,000. The number of subscribers to telephone companies is said to be at least 1,500,000. The companies are earning about $20,000,000 annually, or 5 per cent of the estimated capital invested. The electric lighting plants of the United States are worth about $1,200,000,000. There are some 3,000 companies, more than 500,000 arc lamps, and about 30,000,000 incandescent lamps. Electrical appliances for equipping street railways are of the estimated value of $1,800,000,000. The electric motor is daily coming more and more into use, and it is believed the value of property in this branch of the electrical business is increasing at the rate of $150,000,000 a year. Street railroads operated by electricity earn about $72,000,000 annually, or about 4 per cent on the capital invested. In addition to these leading lines of business, of which electricity is the basis, there are smaller enterprises representing considerable capital. About $100,000,000, it is asserted, is invested in electrical apparatus used in connection with mining. At Niagara Falls the electrical plant represents an outlay of $10,000,000, and other power plants represent an investment of $160,000,000. Five hundred electro-plating establishments have a capital of $50,000,000. Then there are the electrical manufacturing companies and the storage battery industries, which are valued at $150,000,000. The General Electric and Westinghouse companies alone could not be purchased for $50,000,000. This makes a total of about $3,975,000,000, or nearly four billions, invested in the use and manufacture of electrical appliances. T. C. Martin, an authority on the subject, declares the figures are as nearly correct as can be ascertained in such a multiplicity of enterprises. He estimates that some 600,000 people earn their livings from these different lines of electrical business. One hundred thousand are employed in telegraphy, 25,000 by the Bell telephone exchanges, 150,000 in electric lighting plants, 150,000 on electrical street railways and 150,000 in electrical factories. Says Mr. Martin: "The arts of electricity have added $6,000,000,000 to the world's wealth. For the United States of America the possession of the half of this can be very easily established."—New York Mail and Express.

Close Season for Herring.

The question of a close season for herring is again causing discussion. The Lewis and Harris Fishermen's association wants to have the close season from Feb. 1 to May 10 instead of from April 10 to May 10, as at present. The business men of Starnoway, Scotland, protest against this, and held a meeting the other night to air their views. The point at issue is whether the early spring fishing spoils the summer fishing by taking the herring over young, and that is a point nobody has been able to settle as yet. The Moray Firth Fishermen's association wants no close season at all, which shows the difference of opinion on the subject.

Plymouth Church to Have Club.

Time has laid its hand upon the policy of historic Plymouth church. The admirers and followers of Beecher are slipping away from church to grave and younger men now are directing the affairs of Plymouth. Dr. Hillis believes in surrounding himself with young men of energy and ability. With this object in view he will tonight organize in the lecture room the Plymouth League of Young Men. Meetings will be held weekly. A building near the church has been purchased and it will be turned into a club house.—New York Press.

Astor and His Buildings.

Colonel John Jacob Astor had hardly finished the Astoria in New York city when he began to consider a project for another skyscraping hotel on some property he owns farther up Fifth avenue. Now, it is said, he intends to erect a twenty-story hotel on the site of the St. Cloud, at Broadway and Forty-second street, which he owns. Henry M. Flagler, who has built several costly hotels in Florida, has, it is reported, entered into an arrangement with the Mexican Central railroad to build and operate a number of large hotels in Mexico [illegible]

STRANGE SEA LIFE.

Big, Wormlike Creatures, That Explode After Being Captured.

What is believed to be a hitherto unknown species of the spoonworm has been pumped up from the depths of Elliott bay by the dredger in operation near the Centennial mill, says the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The animal found in the bay is of nondescript appearance. It resembles an oblong transparent rubber bag, filled with water, and varies from three to five inches in length. It is about as thick, generally, as a man's thumb. At each end are several circles of sharp bristles, colored like brass and seemingly as hard. These are believed to be its defensive weapons. The bristles at one end are stronger and more numerous than at the other. Other species have the bristles only at one end. These peculiar animals were first brought to the surface about two weeks ago by the dredger of the Seattle and Lake Washington Waterway company. They were sucked up by the pumps from a depth of from thirty to thirty-five feet and carried through the discharge pipes to the point where the filling is being made. There they were found by members of the dredger's crew, whose curiosity was aroused by the appearance of the worms. A number were collected and given to the officers of the company. To a reporter Capt. W. E. Roberts of the dredger stated that the species was found in schools. He believes that they live on rocks, and every time they have been pumped up so far they have been accompanied by pieces of stone and coal which had been dumped into the bay from ships discharging their ballast. "We find none for several days," he said, "and then they come in a bunch. They appear to be able to travel on any side, and wriggle along like a common earthworm. As far as I can learn it is not exactly known whether they live upon the surface of the sea bottom or beneath it. We always find them submerged and I believe they will die if kept out of their natural element very long. They live on smaller worm and marine vegetation. I should judge that they do not have much vitality, although they cut some queer antics when out of the water."

HIGH PRICES FOR EGGS.

A South American Collector Gave $2.50 for a Single Specimen.

In winter time housekeepers are likely to grumble about the price of eggs. As a solace to them the price list of some sorts of eggs—and not necessarily fresh ones, either—should be quoted. The frigate bird, while not an uncommon bird, lays its eggs in such out-of-the-way places that ornithologists are not yet agreed upon what the egg looks like. A South American collector is said to have given $250 for a specimen of the frigate bird's egg, but the egg he bought is described as being white, clouded with gray, whereas, according to the "authorities," the egg is of a "pinky-white" color. A supposed specimen was sold in London recently by a sailor for $50. The sailor said he got it in South America, but there was no guaranty of its genuineness. It was of grayish white, with faint mottlings at the thick end. The eggs of the great northern diver are becoming scarcer every year. For a good shell $25 is by no means a fancy price. If the birds decrease in numbers for the next few years as rapidly as they have been doing in the last few, the price of diver eggs will go up to such a point that they will be placed far beyond the reach of "common people." These eggs of the great northern diver are large in proportion to the size of the bird, some of them measuring three feet in length. In color they are a tawny white, usually unspotted and generally of a symmetrical shape. The eggs of the nut-cracker crow, if found in England, are worth $5, and a bustard's egg, if found on British soil, is worth its weight in gold. A raven's egg is worth about $2, though some especially fine specimens have brought $5.

To Save Life in the Grave.

Emile Camis once buried and willing to be again in order to show the efficacy of a device to save life in case of premature burial, arrived here today, says a New York dispatch to the Chicago Record. As a part of his luggage M. Camis brought with him the apparatus which he has himself tested in such a novel way. The device consists of a tube three and a half inches in diameter, fitted over an aperture in the coffin. At the top of this tube is a hermetically sealed box. On the breast of the supposed dead body is placed a ball, which is attached to a rod. The least movement of the chest or of the body will be communicated to the signal box above ground. The movement of the body raises a spring which causes a door in the box to fall over, admitting light and air to the coffin. It would be posible for a man to live for two days under such conditions. The same motion causes a bell to ring for half an hour. It also sets off a rocket, which in the night serves to call the attention of those in charge of the cemetery.

Wealth of United States.

In 1800 the aggregate wealth of the United States, it has been estimated by the statisticians, was in the neighborhood of $500,000,000. The census authorities in those days made no attempt to get at the value of the real and personal property of the country, but this $500,000,000 is a guess which has been made by experts since that time, based on the growth of the earlier years in which the census officials made an inquiry into this field. The aggregate was little over $7,000,000,000 in 1850, and it is expected to be over $90,000,000,000 for 1900.

Surprised Them Both.

Marcus Clark, author of "His Natural Life," related to a friend that he had once discovered a French novel that he considered a work of genius. He translated it into English and when a Melbourne firm brought it out, publisher and translator were astounded at discovering that he had merely Englished a French translation of one of George Eliot's works.

Walked Thirty Miles to Wed.

Thirty miles across country, with the temperature at freezing and the roads rough was the route Nellie Funk and her sweetheart traveled in their journey to Gretna Green.

Nellie is sixteen years old, and Benjamin Surdam three years her senior. Her parents, who live in Norfolk, objected to their marriage. The young couple planned an elopement. Surdam had little more than enough money to pay the minister, none at all for transportation. So he joined his bride Monday in Norfolk, and they started on foot for Millertown, N. Y., thirty miles away, where they were married.—New York World.

Understood at Last.

"If you were only more reasonable!" I creid, with a bitter sneer.

"I don't know how I could possibly feel any cheaper," she sighed, wearily.

I started, as violently as I could, without rising from my seat, and pressed my hand perplexedly to my throbbing temples.

But in a moment it was all clear to me.

"Cheap and reasonable mean the same thing to a woman who does her own shopping!" I exclaimed.

Three Minutes His Limit.

Senator Beveridge tells a good story on an Indiana lawyer, who was something of a wag. Leaving his office one afternoon, the man stopped in a restaurant and took a drink of whisky. On the car he met a prohibition friend.

"I have quit drinking, and I feel splendid," remarked the lawyer.

"Quit drinking?" queried the prohibitionist, scenting the liquor on the lawyer's breath. "How long since?"

The lawyer took out his watch and looked at it.

"Three minutes ago," he replied—Washington Post.

"That's what you said before, mamma," replied the little miss; "but the angels didn't show up, and I'm just awful lonesome."—Motherhood.

MADAME BAVEAS TESTIFIES.

A Distinguished Lady After Traveling Six Years in Search of Health, at Last Finds It in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 18.—(Special.—This popular resort, numbers among its patrons many of the world's most distinguished men and women, but none more so than Madame Isabelle Ellen Baveas, Life Governor of the Free Masons' Grand Lodge of England.

Madam Baveas, like most of the other visitors, came here in search of health. She was not disappointed, but her cure was not found in the virtue of the baths, but in a few boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which she found on sale here, and which is being used and with wonderful success by a number of the visitors to Hot Springs. She says:

"I traveled almost constantly for the past six years in the interests of my Society, and my health gradually became broken down, through the change of food, water, climate, etc. The doctors told me I had diabetes, and advised me to go to the Springs, as they could do nothing for me. While there my attention was called to Dodd's Kidney Pills by a fellow sufferer, who had been greatly benefited by using them.

"I profited by her experience and bought a box, and then another, and so on until I had used seven boxes. It is with gratitude that I state that they cured me completely, and I am now able to take up the duties of life once more. I am very thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me, and as a grateful woman shall never hesitate to recommend them to any one suffering with Diabetes."

The very satisfactory experience of this distinguished woman should be an encouragement to all similar sufferers.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are 50c. a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Shyster and the Law.

There are various methods by which the unscrupulous fakirs who infest the produce trade succeed in swindling country shippers and still keep themselves out of the clutches of the law, says the New York Produce Review. The old way was to get up attractive and often expensive and high-toned stationery, posing as commission merchants, quoting prices for produce higher than could be obtained, and guaranteeing phenomenal results based upon claims of exceptional facilities. Prompt returns would be made for the first few shipments, then there would come great praise of the goods, and calls for larger quantities; then slower returns until enough goods were in the hands of the frauds to make a good sized haul; then a general selling out, pocketing the proceeds and a fly by night to other fields where the same operation would be gone through under another name.

But this was risky business because the laws referring to commission sales are likely to be effective and failure to make proper return may result in arrest, criminal prosecution and perhaps imprisonment. The new way is safer. The snide does not pose as a commission merchant but simply offers to buy produce either on track at shipping station or delivered in the city where he locates. He quotes high prices, cash payment, "no commission" and, as a bait to get goods, generally says "why pay commission for selling your goods when you can sell them to us for the highest market prices without any deduction except for freight?"

This is attractive bait and there are usually many to bite the hook. A trial shipment is made, and back come the returns as prompt and as satisfactory as possible. Other shipments may be paid for promptly also and as soon as the shipper's misplaced confidence is won he is entreated to make larger shipments. Then payment begins to fall behind, but excuses are made until the indebtedness is as large as possible; perhaps notes are given to coax along further shipments, but before the notes become due the house fails.

Now as this scheme is worked on a large number of shippers at once—as many as can be caught with the bait used—the total stealings may amount to a good many thousand dollars and the creditors have no redress unless they can get positive proof of fraud—which is a most difficult matter. And as they can't squeeze water out of a dry sponge and few of them would pursue the criminals merely for vengeance sake, with no hope of getting back their property or its value, the rogues escape, probably only to start up again under some different name and do the trick over again.

The basis of success in these nefarious operations is the lack of confidence with which many shippers regard the commission trade. There are many who look upon an unusually tempting offer as merely the sign of honesty and integrity; they seem to think the commission man gets too much out of their goods and when a man comes along who says he will pay top prices "no commission" the country shipper seems to say to himself "here at last is an honest man." Then he bites the bait and gets left.

It is best to realize that service in selling goods—as in other performances—cannot be had for nothing. There are many honorable merchants ready to receive consignments of produce and obtain their full value, to whom shipments may be entrusted with the utmost confidence. When strangers come with offers to do better it is safe to suspect fraud until the most careful investigation proves the contrary.

Size of Carriage Horses.

A New York horse buyer recently said: A horse that is 15.2 hands high and put up right, with plenty of bone, substance and quality, is big enough to do any kind of work that a carriage horse is called on to do. In nine cases out of ten a horse of this size will outwork and outwear a horse of sixteen hands or higher. You see he isn't so likely to pound himself to pieces on the hard pavements for one thing. Then again he has better command of his legs than a tall horse has, and therefore doesn't tire so quickly. Of course large horses are required for large carriages on account of appearance. A horse no higher than 15.2 hands would look like a pony in front of some broughams and a pair of this size hooked to an opera 'bus seating six or eight persons would spoil the appearance of the whole equipage, no matter how handsome the horses might be. But aside from the looks of the thing, a short-legged, big-bodied, four-cornered horse of the size I have named could do the work and do it fully as well as one a full hand taller.

Horticultural Observations.

Onions are easily grown where the proper methods are used. The ground must be very rich, as growth to maturity should be rapid. The land must be thoroughly pulverized and afterward kept free from seeds. Sow the seed in rows eighteen inches apart and cover to a depth of one-half an inch if the soil is fine and compact. When the plants are well up, thin to three to five inches apart. Some advanced culturists follow the plan of replanting all their onions, selecting for that purpose only those that show great vigor.

For watermelons the land should be thoroughly pulverized and well manured. Plant the seeds as soon as the danger of frosts is over. One of the common ways of planting is to check off the ground eight feet each way, dropping three or four seeds in the center of each check. When the plants have made a good growth and passed the critical periods of early growth they should be thinned to two vines to a hill. Keep the ground clear of weeds till the vines spread too much to permit of cultivation. For muskmelons prepare the ground the same as for watermelons, but make the squares in which they are planted four feet each way.

It is generally admitted that a cow will give more, and richer milk if always milked by the same person. But, as it is manifestly sometimes inconvenient, and at others impracticable to comply with this rule, it is believed by good dairymen that it is better to train a cow to be occasionally milked by a different person. A cow's behavior is largely a matter of habit, and neither inconvenient nor bad habits should be encouraged.

ALARMING MORTALITY

Noticeable Among the Weak and Ailing.

SPRING THE TIME DEATH REAPS ITS LARGEST HARVEST.

There is a Way of Eluding the Grim Destroyer.

Every Spring it is noticeable how many people are taken away that we have been accustomed to see in our daily life.

Statistics show that at no other season of the year does so many deaths occur.

Especially large is the mortality among weak and sickly people.

The reason for this is apparent. The body that is weakened by age or disease has much to contend with during the Winter months. Insufficient exercise frequently has been taken. Too much starchy and fatty foods have been eaten. The system has been allowed to become run down, and when Spring comes with its bright, sunshiny days, older people will begin to realize that their vitality has become very low. The same thing is true of people who are naturally sickly and weak.

This is the season of the year when even a strong person feels at his worst. That tired, restless feeling is experienced by too many.

There need not be as many deaths this year as usually take place. A little care will ward off many Spring funerals. If one is weak or ailing they should take time by the forelock and take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This great medicine has been in many cases, and will continue to be, the means by which the black angel of Death has been driven from the threshold. It dispels the grim destroyer in a scientific way, for it purifies the blood and gives strength and vitality to the nerves. It tones up and restores to a healthy condition all of the great life-giving organs of the body.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will enable those who take it to throw off little ills that prove dangerous only when they attack a system already wasted and weakened.

From many people, who have experienced benefit from this greatest of all life-lengtheners, comes the following from the famous General Longstreet of 1217 New Hampshire Ave., Washington, D. C. He says:

"It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony with many others for Dr. Greene's Remedy, which I have used with highly beneficial results, and I am able to recommend its virtues from experience. I have used it for catarrh and have derived help."

Mr. Wellington Hynes, Elizabethtown, N. Y., writes:

"I feel it my duty to tell how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura has done me. I was so run down that I could not sleep at night and everything worried me. I had no appetite and could not work, my head ached all the time and there was an all-gone feeling in my stomach, and I was always looking on the dark side of everything. I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and in less than three weeks I felt like a new man. I can now do as much work as is expected of a man my age. I advise anyone who is troubled to take Dr. Greene's Nervura. Do not go to a doctor but get a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura. It is cheaper than a doctor's bill."

The latter part of Mr. Hynes' advice might be profitably disregarded, however, if you should feel you would like the advice of a physician. You can have such advice and have it free if you will write or call on the greatest known blood and nerve specialist, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

In the Early Days.

"Charlie, dear," said young Mrs. Torkins, "I hope that you are not departing from the precepts of our forefathers and allowing yourself to be dazzled by the pomp and glitter of empire."

"What book did you get that out of?" asked her husband.

"No book," she answered, stoutly. "I remembered some of it after reading a newspaper article. But I hope you have not abandoned your old principles. Last night you were talking in your sleep, and you said several times that all you wanted was another king to make you all right. And, after the trouble we had with George III., it does seem perfectly foolish."—Washington Star.

A Charwomen's Union.

The charwomen of Chicago have formed a union, and now all such work as scrubbing, house-cleaning, washing and ironing will have to be paid for at a scheduled price, which will be announced in a few days. A price will be fixed for a day's work of nine hours, and extra time will be charged for by the hour, at proportionate rates. Already over 300 women are said to be numbered in the new organization.

The Truth Forced Home.

During the Pan-American Exposition this train will also have a Pullman sleeper for Buffalo, arriving at that point at 6:15 a. m.

The Fifth Annual.

The Woodman ball given at Hotel Markham Wednesday evening in honor of the fifth anniversary of the organization of that order in our village was a very pleasant affair. The Woodmen never do things by halves nor was it so on this occasion. The dancing began at an early hour and was kept up continuously until the hour for refreshments when landlord McAndress took possession of the dining room and spread the tables with a bountiful repast which was much relished by the guests. After supper dancing was resumed and continued until an early hour when the merry makers taking leave of each other remarked that the Woodmen ball was always looked forward to as a good time only it was getting more joyful each year occasioned by the steady growth of the order and the good class of people taken into its secrets.

The Thief River Falls Press voting contest closed last week and the judges found by the count that Miss Mary Quande (formerly of St. Hilaire) is the most popular young lady by over three thousand votes and in consequence will take in the Buffalo Exposition at the expense of the Press.

Editor Trigg of the Rockford Register gives the following pertinent advice to farmers: "Give the farm a name. Have this name neatly lettered on a signboard and placed where it can be seen by the traveler who goes by your place. Then have some letter heads and envelopes printed with the name of your own thereon, and thus do business on the farm in a business like manner."

Careless punctuation often makes trouble. A western paper went for a couple of fellows for getting drunk, and got the comma in the wrong place, as follows: "They went with their girls to attend the teachers' institute and as soon as they left, the girls got drunk." It took a whole lot of explaning to show that the comma after "left" was in the wrong place and should have been after "girls."

Paste this in your hat: "Drink nothing without seeing it. Sign nothing without reading it, and make sure that it means nothing more than it says. Don't go to law unless you are forced to and have something to lose. In any business never wade in when you can't see bottom. Put no dependence in the label of a sack and count money before you receipt for it. See the sack before you buy what is in it, for he who trades in the dark asks to be cheated."

For the benefit of the farmers who lost their crops last year and are unable to purchase seed wheat for this season, the legislature has passed a bill appropriating $75,000. Those who desire aid for this purpose can borrow money from the state by making an application and sworn statement to the county auditor. It will be better to appear in person before the auditor and this must be done before the 23rd day of March. If you need help you have a right to take advantage of this and should do so immediately.

"It is positively assested that Mark Hanna has written to Lincoln telling what ought to be done in the senatorial matter. Who is Mark Hanna?"—Lincoln (Neb.) News.

Never heard of Mark, eh? Well, he is the man who struck Billy Patterson, for one thing; then he kidnaped Charley Ross, and his alibi is not quite perfect in the Cudahy case. Mark is the boy who knocked the underpinning from the republic and set up an empire without the consent of Jim K. Jones—in fact, against the earnest and profane protests of the latter. Mark is the constitution and by-laws of the United States; he was the late river and harbor bill and is the coast defenses; he was the inaugural parade also a few days ago. Who is Mark Hanna? Just step over into the Commoner office if you would know all. Mr. Bryan can tell you if he has not forgotten.—Chicago Record.

The postoffice department will soon issue a new series of postage stamps which will be known as the Buffalo series, in recognition of the exposition to be held in that city this year. The one cent stamp, of green color, will contain a picture of a lake steamer, representing the great transportation industry of the lakes in which the city of Buffalo is so much interested. The two cent stamp, with a picture of a railroad train will be printed in red; the 4 cent, an automobile; the 5 cent, a picture of the new bridge at Niagara, in blue; the 8 cent a picture of the lock at Sault St. Marie, lilac color; the 10 cent containing a picture of an ocean steamer will be light brown. There will also be others of larger denomination, and probably the demand for them will be nearly as great as it was for the Columbian series.

The latest illustration of "doing evil that good may come" has been brought to light in Toronto, where a firm did a land office business as the result of advertising, as follows:

> On receipt of $1 we will send, securely sealed, a beautifully bound book of 400 pages full of good things. Every sport should have one. The most wonderful book ever written. French and English translations. Prohibited in some countries. Write at once.

The confiding persons who forwarded a dollar received a fifteen-cent bible. The Toronto detective department declined to interfere with the flourishing industry, on the ground that it would be inexpedient to interfere with the distribution of the gospel. Holy Scriptures are having a great and constantly increasing circulation, but it is apparent that the Toronto plan places them in the hands of many persons who would otherwise steer clear of Holy Writ. It is exasperating to think that bunco men are reaping the rich financial reward that comes from selling fifteen-cent Bibles for one dollar. Even in this enlightened period it is held legitimate to fight his satanic majesty with fire. Suppose that the Bible house the churches and other agencies for the dissemination of the gospel should undertake the Toronto plan, and thus compete with the bold, bad men who have stolen the livery of the court of heaven to serve the devil in? What would the Bible trust say of the plan?—Los Angeles Herald.

Remember the Living.

It is amusing and at the same time sad in the extreme to note the many inconsistencies practiced by the people of to-day. For example: A man or woman, boy or girl, struggles along in this world to live an honest, upright life—on all sides he or she is confronted by lurking demons ready to drag him or her down, and rarely ever does he or she receive encouragement by those whose duty it is to give it. All the elevating graces with which God endowed mankind, and which should shine as beacon lights are hidden from them. Death comes—the very ones who refused or neglected to give a word of encouragement and uplift, are generally the first to deck the casket with pyramids and wreaths of beautiful flowers. Let more of the love, respect and sympathy that such tokens bespeak, be given to the living, not necessarily in bouquets etc., but in kind deeds and words of encouragement, and this world will be the brighter and happier for it.—Ex.

An Apple Eater.

A well known literary man in the southern part of England lives on one meal a day, and that meal consists entirely of apples. He is a perfect picture of health, and states that he has lived on this plan for three years. Furthermore, he drinks nothing, as the juice of the apples is sufficient to quench his thirst. He claims that it is the purest drink in the world, being in reality water distilled by nature.

"Golden Grain Belt" beer is as pure as apple juice, and it is much more nourishing. It is brewed from the choicest barley malt and flavored with prime hops. Use it constantly and you will have pure blood and steady nerves. Order from your nearest dealer or of Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

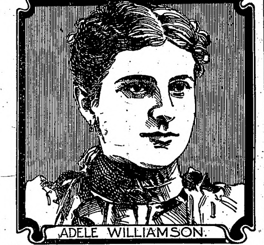
Nervous Prostration.

A Noted Boston Woman Describes its Symptoms and Terrors.—Two Severe Cases Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.



ADELE WILLIAMSON.

"I am so nervous! no one ever suffered as I do! There isn't a well inch in my body. I honestly believe my lungs are diseased, my chest pains me so, but I have no cough. I am so weak at my stomach, and have indigestion terribly, and palpitation of the heart; am losing flesh; and this headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I had hysterics.

"There is a weight in the lower part of my bowels, bearing down all the time, with pains in my groins and thighs—I can't sleep, walk, or sit, and blue—oh goodness! I am simply the most miserable of women."

This is a most vivid description of a woman suffering with nervous prostration, caused by inflammation or some other diseased condition of the womb.

No woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is no need of it. Read about Miss Williamson's case and how she was cured.

Two Bad Cases of Nervous Prostration Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM;—I was suffering such tortures from nervous prostration that life was a burden. I could not sleep at all, and was too weak to walk across the floor. My heart was affected so that often I could not lie down at all without almost suffocating. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like magic. I feel that your medicine has been of inestimable benefit to me."

MISS ADELE WILLIAMSON,
196 N. Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

"I had nervous prostration terribly, caused by female weakness. I suffered everything; was unable to eat, sleep, or work. After a while I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I really began to improve on taking the first bottle. I continued to take the medicine, and am now better in every way, and feel like a different person. I am simply a well woman."

Riley's Long Wait for Fame.

"A friend came to me once," says James Whitcomb Riley, "completely heartbroken, saying that his manuscripts were constantly returned, and that he was the most miserable wretch alive. I asked him how long he had been trying."

"Three years," he said.

"My dear man," I answered, laughing, "go on; keep on trying until you have spent as many years at it as I did."

"'As many as you did?' he exclaimed.

"'Yes; as long as I did.'

"'What? You—James Whitcomb Riley—struggled for years?'

"'Yes, sir; through years, through sleepless nights, through almost hopeless days. For twenty years I tried to get into one magazine; back came my manuscripts eternally. I kept on. In the twentieth year, that magazine accepted one of my articles.

SCALDS TRAIN ROBBERS.

Colorado Road Uses Automatic Device to Discourage Bold Bandits.

The Rio Grande railroad in Colorado, has equipped its locomotives with a novel train robber killing device. It is a means of playing scalding water and steam over the bandits. There is an extra piece of steel pipe running up from the bottom of the boiler to the back of the engine cab, where it is flattened out fan-shaped, the angle of the fan embracing the front, top and sides of the blind baggage and express. Another device of practically the same kind covers the front, top and sides of the locomotive itself. Other engines have a steam pipe and hose just back of the engineer, where it is handy to grab quickly. Down near the floor of the cab in several places, where they can be reached easily, are little innocent looking buttons that connect with an air valve to the steam pipe. In less time than it takes to tell it, the engineer or fireman can touch a button and send back over the coal pile in the tender the hottest jet of water that any robber ever saw. The boilers carry a pressure of about 225 pounds, so the water near the bottom of the crown sheet will be at least at the boiling point. The amount of execution one of the "cookers," as they are called, can do in a few seconds is frightful. Should four or six robbers get on the front or top of the blind baggage and make a hostile demonstration toward the engineer they can be disposed of quickly. A slight stream will make it so hot in the neighborhood that they will be glad to get off. At the same time it will fill the air with steam, so that shooting at the engineer or fireman will be out of the question. It will be impossible to tell the direction, except the way to jump. Only once since their installation have the new machines been put to test, and that was several weeks ago in the Grand canyon, when several tramps threatened to take charge of a freight train and bully the crew into submission to their wishes. They got the conductor and brakeman "buffaloed" back about a dozen car lengths, and then started toward the engineer to make him "dig up" some coin. But the fireman had seen the whole performance and tipped off the affair to the engineer, who turned on a small stream and slowed up to see the fun. The white mist had no sooner struck the hoboes than they made a dive off the tops of the cars. The two fellows with guns who were back with the conductor and brakeman, worked their way ahead to see what caused all the excitement, when they got a few stray splashes of hot water in the face and also jumped.

Odd Wares From Manila.

The acquisition of the Philippines has begun to familiarize the American public with many of the odd wares and merchandise which are found in that archipelago, says the New York Evening Post. No part of this world is richer in shells, especially of the pearl and mother of pearl variety. For centuries there has been a steady flow of the latter to China, where they are used in enormous quantities for household decorations. Outside of these shells are others almost as useful. One variety, a sea couch, is cut through obliquely and according to the angle of the saw the resulting segment is a spoon, a ladle, a saucer, plate, cup, or bowl. After cutting they are cleaned and polished, making a handsome object. It looks like colored porcelain, but is far tougher and stronger. A shell spoon or bowl can be dropped without danger of breaking and will withstand hot water and cold as well as wood. Another variety of shell is employed for buttons. The turbinates are the favorites. They range through a hundred colors and patterns and take a very high gloss. When cut by the natives beauty of surface rather than of outline appears to be the main object. The most popular shape is oblong. Next to this is an oval, and then follow such figures as the rounded triangle, which with eyelets are retailed in Manila for five cents.

Bread, Butter and Health.

Many physicians, according to a lecturer on dietetics, are ordering thin bread and butter for delicate patients, especially those suffering from dyspepsia, consumption and anemia, or any who need to take on flesh. This thin bread and butter insensibly induces persons to eat much more butter than they have any idea of. It is extraordinary, says the lecturer, how short a way a pat of fresh butter will go if spread on a number of thin slices of bread. This is one advantage, and a great one, in the feeding of invalids, for they are thereby provided with an excellent form of the fat which is so essential for their nutrition in a way that lures them to take it without rebellion. But the thin bread and butter has another advantage equally as great—it is very digestible and easily assimilated. Fresh butter made from cream is very much more digestible when spread upon thin slices of bread than the same amount of cream eaten as cream would be.

M. Bourget's Metamorphosis.

"Joseph," the ex-valet de chambre of Felix Faure, has written a book. Joseph did not begin and end his career with the late president, but has for years attended to the wants of M. Casimir Perier, Mme. Juliette Adam, the Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, the duke of Connaught, the prince of Monaco, Gambetta, the Grand Duke Vladimir, and M. Paul Bourget, of whom he says: "I have been most useful to M. Cow Brings $3,700.

Carnagian, said to be the best-bred Hereford cow ever produced in this country, was sold the other day at Kansas City for $3,700. This is believed to be the highest price ever paid for a single cow in this or any other country.—Jesse C. Adams, of Moweaqua, Ill.

AFTER-EFFECTS OF LA GRIPPE.

THE after-effects of the grip are often disastrous. It is commonly known to the medical fraternity that the numerous ailments and complications which follow the grip are apt to be more serious than the acute stage of the disease.

Some people have the grip very lightly. They may be confined to the house only a day or two and yet a long train of disagreeable, disabling symptoms follow. All sorts of tonics and stimulating remedies have been devised to meet this condition. None of them can compare in results with Peruna.

Every one who has had the grip ought to take a short course of Peruna. Read what the following people have to say about it.

Gentlemen—"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks, and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and take pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow sufferers."—M. W. Howard.

Grip Produces Catarrh.

Henry Distin, the inventor and maker of all the band instruments for the Henry Distin Mfg. Co., at Williamsport, Pa., writes:

1441 South Ninth Street,
Philadelphia, Pa., May 6, 1899.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Dear Sir:—"I write to inform you that I had a bad attack of la grippe last December which lasted more than three months and which left me with catarrh, when several of my friends advised me to try your wonderful medicine, Peruna. I began with a bottle the first week in March and it certainly did me a great deal of good. I was so well satisfied that I purchased another bottle and followed your directions, which you furnish with every bottle, and I am glad to say, that it has cured me. I shall certainly recommend the Peruna to all my friends."

GRIP CAUSED NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

D. D. Wallace, a charter member of the International Barber's Union writes from 15 Western ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

"Following a severe attack of la grippe I seemed to be affected badly all over. I suffered with a severe backache, indigestion and numerous ills, so I could neither eat nor sleep, and I thought I would give up my work, which I could not afford to do.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. I used it faithfully and felt a marked improvement. During the next two months I took five bottles, and then felt splendid. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Washington, April 24, 1900.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Frances M. Anderson.

Gentlemen—"About two months ago I was taken very very ill with la grippe and was obliged to go to bed. I took three bottles of Peruna, with very beneficial results and was able to leave my my bed in a week, and regained my usual strength very soon. I have nothing but the highest praise for Peruna and recommend it to those similarly afflicted wherever I can."—Frances M. Anderson.

Grip Poisoned Her Blood.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctor called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned.

"I also suffered with dyspepsia, and had either to starve or suffer from what I was eating. A neighbor who was using Peruna praised it so highly that she induced me to try it, and I soon found this was what I really needed.

"I could soon eat my regular meals with relish, my system was built up, my health returned, and I have remained in excellent strength and vigor now for over two years."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

GRIP LEFT HER BROKEN DOWN.

Miss Alice Dressler, of 1313 N. Bryant ave., Minneapolis, Minn., writes as follows concerning Peruna:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the bad after-effects remained through the summer and somehow I did not get as strong as I was before.

"In the fall I caught cold after getting my feet wet and attending a lecture in a cold hall, and suffered a relapse. Catarrh of the throat and head followed, and as I was in a weak condition physically previous to this, it took but little to break me down completely. One of my college friends, who was visiting me, asked me to try Peruna and I did so and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of the catarrh, but restored me to perfect health."—Alice Dressler.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

FARMING IN WESTERN CANADA.

The Great Natural Fertility of the Soil in Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

What Has Been Done by Premier Greenway, Himself a Leading Farmer.

Hon. Thomas Greenway, Premier of the Province of Manitoba, one of the foremost farmers of Western Canada, writes an excellent article to the press, from which the following extracts are made:

The writer came to Manitoba from Ontario in the autumn of 1878, and has ever since been engaged in agricultural pursuits. From the day, nearly twenty-two years ago, when he selected his homestead, he has had unbounded faith in the country as a place where farming can be successfully carried on, if pursued upon proper lines. There is a large number in this province who should rather be called "wheat-growers" than farmers. On account of the facilities, natural advantages, and therefore cheapness with which wheat can be grown, no doubt many have done exceedingly well by raising wheat only; still, it is far from ideal farming. Not only will such a course, if persisted in, have the effect of causing the land to run out, as has been the experience of those who pursued the same plan in the wheat-producing prairie States to the south of us, but it is far from being the most profitable course to adopt.

This fact is already being demonstrated in Manitoba. Let the farms in this Western country be managed upon the lines which were successful in the Eastern Provinces, and much more can be done here in a given time than was ever done in the East. The probabilities of failure are practically nil. Upon the farm there should be found horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, according to the ability of the farmer, with respect to his means and the extent of his holding. The wanton waste which has hitherto been practiced by many farmers, that of burning vast quantities of excellent fodder after threshing is done, should cease; it should all be used upon the farm and converted into the old, sensible kind of fertilizer manure, and afterwards be returned to the soil, so that what has been taken from it by the crop may be restored. Although admitting that the great natural fertility of the soil in Manitoba and the success that has attended the growing of wheat after wheat for years upon the same land have a tendency to make such a course as the one mentioned tempting, yet, if continued, wheat growing upon the same land year after year is undoubtedly a mistake.

The writer knows of no country that offers advantages so great to the agriculturist as does Manitoba. The various branches of farming can be carried on successfully, as twenty-two years of practical operations and observations of what others are doing have proven. To those desiring to make new homes for themselves, the low price of some of the best lands in the world (although rapidly advancing in price this year) offers still great opportunities. To all such the invitation is cordially given to "Come and see." There need be no poor people here. There is land for all who choose to come, land upon which happy homes can be established, and from which ample resources can be gathered against old age. All that a man needs to achieve competence in this domain is common sense and industry. With these qualifications he is bound to succeed.

For information regarding free homestead lands, apply to any agent of the government whose advertisement appears elsewhere in these columns.

A RIVER OF FLAMES

BURNING OIL SWEEPS DOWN ON A SLEEPING VILLAGE.

Many Buildings Destroyed by Fire and Inhabitants Compelled to Flee for Their Lives Before the Oncoming Flood of Blazing Oil—Fire Most Peculiar in Character and Origin—Wrecked Cars of Oil Catch Fire and the Burning Oil Flows Down Upon the Village.

New York, March 25. — A river of flaming oil swept down upon the little village of Glen Gardner, N. J., while its inhabitants were asleep yesterday morning and reduced eleven buildings, stores and residences, to ashes. The conflagration was noteworthy in character and in its origin. The village was on the line of the Jersey Central railway. An immense freight train was coming east at 6:30 a. m. It was composed of a string of cars and eighteen tank cars. High above the village the tracks of the railway run along the side of the mountain. They decline as they approach the village, but even at the station are completely above the level of the street, which runs to the depot up a steep incline. A few miles west of the village while coming down the incline around the mountain the train parted. The engineer on the forward part pulled open the throttle of the engine and tried to race away from the second section which was increasing its speed every moment. He managed to keep clear of the runaway cars until he got opposite the depot, when the second section smashed into the first. The first section, composed of coal cars, was going at a high rate of speed and none of its cars were jolted off the track. The forward car of the runaway section, one of the oil tanks, was hurled on its side across the track and the oil cars were piled on top of it in every way. The first crash caused the oil in one of the tanks to ignite and caused the tanks to explode one after another. The incline running from the depot down to the main street formed a sluice for the burning oil and it poured into the chief thoroughfare of the village, setting fire to everything it touched. Houses, fences, trees, shrubbery and barns were reduced to ashes in an incredibly short time. Villagers awakened by the explosions rushed from the oncoming flood of blazing oil carrying children in their arms. Some risked their lives to free horses, cows and dogs in outbuildings, but other unfortunate animals could not be reached in time and were burned. Within five minutes after the first explosion the flowing river of oil had reached the Masonic temple in the heart of the village and ten minutes later that structure was enveloped in flames. Then building after building, all of them frame, took fire as the oil reached them, and within half an hour an area 500 feet square was a mass of flames. From the wrecked cars the oil also flowed down the incline of the railway track, making a long line of fire that destroyed the ties and bet and twisted the tracks. The loss is estimated at from $60,000 to $75,000.

WANTED FOR KIDNAPPING.

Authorities Making a Search for a Prominent Merchant.

Mobile, Ala., March 25. — W. H. Stevens, aged fifty-five and a prominent merchant of Lucedale, Miss., is being searched for by the authorities of several counties on the charge of kidnapping. Stevens is charged with having kidnapped the thirteen-year-old daughter of B. M. Stearns of Lucedale. It is charged that Stevens boarded with the family and on Wednesday took the girl to Mobile. With them was J. A. Freeman, who was arrested on the charge of assisting in the affair. Freeman says Stevens and the girl intended to get married, but up to Saturday night the ceremony had not been performed so far as is known in Mobile. The local officers went to the place where Stevens and the girl had been stopping, but they had left. The father of the girl and a number of friends are assisting in the search for her and Stevens.

KILLED HIS BROTHER.

Result of a Quarrel Over a Trivial Matter.

Alexandria, Ind., March 25.—William and James Gilmore, colored, brothers, who, with their wives, occupy the same house, quarreled yesterday over a trivial matter, when James struck his brother, who drew a revolver and fired two shots at him with fatal effect. The first shot grazed the wrist of Henry Campbell, who tried to separate them, and inflicted a flesh wound upon the abdomen of James Gilmore. William then fired the second shot at his brother who had turned to make his escape. The shot entered the left shoulder from the rear and penetrated the lungs. Gilmore died in an hour. His brother disappeared but was afterward captured and lodged in jail.

Injured by a Fall.

Boston, March 25. — Edward W. Hooper, a former treasurer of Harvard college and a lawyer in this city, fell from the third story of his residence on Beacon street shortly after midnight and received serious, though, it is believed, not fatal injuries. Mr. Hooper has been confined to his room for ten days with illness brought on by overwork, and he has been in charge of a trained nurse. The accident occurred when the latter was temporarily absent from the room and no one witnessed it.

Bank Wrecked and Robbed.

Yankton, S. D., March 25.—The Tabor State bank was entered by robbers and the safe was blown open, wrecking the building. The loss in damage and money is $2,000; fully insured. There is no trace of the robbers.

Insurance Man Arrested.

Clinton, Iowa, March 25.—Donald G. McKay, agent of the New York Life Insurance company, was arrested here charged with having issued fraudulent insurance policies to the amount of several thousand dollars.

MRS. H. P. ROBINSON ALIVE.

Report That She Was Dead in New York Due to Mistake.

Baltimore, Md., March 25—Mrs. Harry P. Robinson, now living at the Altamont hotel in this city, was much shocked by a report circulated in New York that she was dead. A telephone message from the Holland house in New York was received at the Altamont asking whether Mrs. Robinson was dead. She replied that she was alive and in good health. Upon inquiry she ascertained that she had been confounded with a woman who died in New York, and whose last name was said to be Robinson. Mrs. Robinson is the daughter of Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis, and she said that she understood a telegram had been sent to him saying she had committed suicide. Mrs. Robinson stated that she had immediately telegraphed her father that she was alive and well. Mrs. Robinson stated that when in New York she stopped at the Holland house.

HAITI AND SANTO DOMINGO.

Their Boundary Dispute to Be Submitted to Arbitration.

Kingston, Jam., March 25.—Reliable information has been received here to the effect that the recent boundary dispute between Haiti and Santo Domingo, which was reported to have threatened hostilities, was suspended on condition that the matter be submitted to arbitration. The dispute dates from an attempt to divert the course of a river marking the boundary between the two countries. In deference to public opinion the government has revised the tax valuation to make all cultivated lands bear the same proportionate taxation as the United Fruit company.

HOME FOR ADMIRAL SCHLEY.

Nearly Half of Required Sum Already Contributed by Citizens.

Washington, March 25.—At a meeting of the committee appointed at a mass meeting of citizens of Washington for the purpose of presenting Admiral Schley with a modest home, held in this city, it was reported that about $6,000 had been contributed to the fund. It is expected that by April 15, $15,000 will have been raised, and this will be used to purchase a home in the suburbs of Washington to be presented to the admiral on his arrival in this country about April 15.

BOERS ATTACK BRITISH.

Raid Supply Train and Get Away With Provisions.

Standerton, Transvaal, March 25. — Four hundred Boers under Commander Buys have wrecked a supply train north of Vlaklangte. They overpowered the escort and carried off several wagon loads of provisions. A convoy designed to join Gen. French's column has been attacked between Blood river and Schepper's Nek. The British had one man killed and three wounded. The bridge at Blood river was burned.

COULDN'T STAND THAT.

Mrs. Nation Fires Her Publisher for Suppressing an Editorial.

Topeka, Kan., March 25.—Mrs. Carrie Nation has dissolved partnership with Nick Chiles, the colored publisher. She will hereafter endeavor to edit and have printed her paper, The Smasher's Mail, without his assistance. The trouble grew out of the suppression by Chiles of an editorial written by Mrs. Nation scoring District Judge Hazen, before whom she has appeared a number of times.

WEST POINT CADETS.

Four Applicants From Minnesota Pass the Examination.

West Point, N. Y., March 25. — The superintendent has received from the war department the names of all the candidates who were examined at the various posts throughout the country regarding their qualifications for admission to West Point as cadets. Out of 214 examined 104 passed successfully. Those from Minnesota are W. A. Howard, W. H. Dodds, Jr., R. W. Case and B. H. Williams.

ON A SOUTHERN CRUISE.

J. J. Hill and Party Will Sail on Yacht Wacouta.

New York, March 25. — J. J. Hill's yacht Wacouta has left for Baltimore. It is reported she is to be provisioned for a cruise in southern waters, starting from Baltimore. Vice President Daniel Lamont, of the Northern Pacific, and wife, and President Hill's family are to be the party.

POISONS BABES AND HERSELF.

Michigan Woman Gives Laudanum to Her Son and Daughter.

Cass City, Mich., March 25. — Mrs. Nathan Townsend, who lived near here, poisoned herself and her two children, a girl aged eight years and a boy aged ten years, with laudanum. Family difficulties are believed to have impelled her to administer the poison.

Grief for His Friend.

Niles, Mich., March 25—W. J. Gilbert, former mayor and reputed to be very wealthy and one of the best known and most respected residents of Barrien county, was found dead in a storehouse in the rear of his residence, where he had ended his life with a bullet. Grief over the misfortune of a bosom friend is believed to have caused the suicide.

Damages for a Wounded Heart.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, March 25. — The verdict of the jury in the breach of promise suit of Mrs. Sophie Oleson vs. John Anderson has just been made known. The jury decided against the defendant for the whole amount of the suit, $10,000. Anderson is well-to-do and able to pay the money.

Two Boys Drowned.

Kenosha, Wis., March 25. — By the capsizing of a sail boat in the harbor two boys were drowned. One of the boys is supposed to be Albert Langenbach, but there is no clue to the identity of the other.

Killed While Loading Logs.

Pine City, Minn., March 25.—George Williams was killed while loading logs for the Northern Lumber company near Mountain Iron. His remains will be brought to his home in this city for interment.

TO CAPTURE AGGIE

GEN. FUNSTON UNDERTAKES A DANGEROUS MISSION.

Risks His Life in an Effort to Capture the Leader of the Filipinos—Goes to the Heart of the Enemy's Country With a Small Escort—Company of Trusted Natives Accompanies the Intrepid Kansan—News of Aguinaldo's Capture Is Expected Now at Any Time.

Manila, March 25.—The news of the capture of Aguinaldo by Gen. Funston is daily expected. Gen. Funston left Manila two weeks ago at the head of an expedition organized by Gov. Gen. MacArthur for the express purpose of capturing the insurgent leader. The expedition is made up of trusted natives, under command of Gen. Funston, assisted by Capt. John Newton of the Thirty-fourth Volunteer infantry, Lieut. Admire of the Twenty-second infantry, Lieut. Mitchell of the Fortieth volunteers and Surgeon Major Harris.

The expedition was conveyed by the gunboat Vicksburg and the cruiser Albany to a landing place on the east coast of Luzon, north of Baler. From the landing place Funston had a six-days' march inland before reaching Aguinaldo's hiding place. It is believed that the Kansas general has already carried out the details of his plans.

Gen. Funston's present attempt to capture Aguinaldo is the most dangerous of the many daring projects he has undertaken during his dashing career in the Philippines. He is staking his freedom and perhaps his life, for he has gone into the heart of the enemy's country with no other escort than four American officers and a company of Filipinos, upon whose faithfulness his liberty depends.

Insurgents Surrender.

Manila, March 25. — In the province of Cavite four insurgent officers and 53 men with 56 rifles have surrendered to Lieut. Col. Frank D. Baldwin, of the Fourth United States infantry, and 1 sergeant and 12 men, with 16 rifles to Col. Walter S. Schuyler of the Forty-sixth volunteer infantry. The attendance at the Evangelical church services in Manila is not diminished. Protestantism is spreading rapidly in the province of Pampanga.

WORK OF A MANIAC.

Horrible Injuries Self-Inflicted by a Woman.

Toledo, Ohio, March 25. — Mrs. G. Brunschneider, residing near the city limits, occupies a ward at St. Vincent's hospital and is in a serious condition as a result of horrible injuries self-inflicted. About 5 o'clock in the evening, armed with an ordinary pair of scissors, she cut off all the toes on her left foot, both her ears close to her head and about an inch of her nose. Then she cut out a portion of her right cheek, inflicted five gashes in the left cheek and finally began on her arms. Beginning at the left forearm she removed every vestige of skin, laying bare the muscles. She also lacerated the right arm in a horrible manner. Nothing was known of the affair until her husband, who was absent during the night, returned home in the morning and found her in bed in a semi-conscious condition. A surgeon was called at once and she was taken to the hospital. Her recovery is doubtful. The woman is about fifty years of age. It is thought that she was temporarily insane on account of domestic troubles.

POPE LEO DISTURBED.

Popular Demonstrations Against the Jesuits the Cause.

Rome, March 25.—The pope has had special inquiries made respecting the policy of action toward the Jesuits throughout the world. He is much disturbed at the simultaneous and apparently spontaneous popular demonstrations against the order in Spain, Portugal, France and Austria, and expressed the opinion that there must be something radically wrong somewhere. It is now announced that the pope is satisfied the trouble is due to mismanagement, and has decided to remove Father Martin, the director general of the Jesuits. Father Martin, it is understood, will be placated by an important post at the Vatican. The new general will be an Italian, who will be more directly amenable to church discipline.

BICYCLE RIDER'S STRANGE END.

Legs of Pennsylvania Man Burst After Overexertion on Old-Fashioned Wheel.

Reading, Pa., March 25.—Jonas Wagner, aged thirty-five, died at Tamaqua of an affliction that puzzles the doctors. Overexertion on the steep hills on an old-fashioned high wheel bicycle caused the calves of both his legs to suddenly swell. In a few hours the skin burst at several places. The swelling continued until the pain was so intense that in a short time he died.

Arrested on Serious Charge.

Kansas City, March 25.—A. H. Pendergast, a prominent oculist, was arrested here. Two girls employed in a hotel in Moran, Kan., Nettie Price and Mabel Harrison, fourteen and sixteen years old, swear Pendergast drugged and assaulted them.

Drunkenness a Disease.

Toledo, Ohio, March 25.—Police Judge L. W. Wachenheimer has decided that drunkenness is a disease and not a crime. Prisoners charged with that offense appearing before him are discharged and the costs are remitted.

Hanged by Masked Mob.

Pocahontas, Ark., March 25.—George Chevries, who, on Thursday last, shot and killed Town Marshal John Norris while Norris was executing his official duty, was taken from jail by a mob of 200 masked men and hanged.

Alcoholic Poisoning.

Lexington, March 25.—W. P. Evans, a rolling mill proprietor of Versailles, Ky., was found stretched on the floor of his room at the Palace hotel, dead. Alcoholic poisoning is ascribed as the cause of death.

MILWAUKEE SCORCHED.

Big Piano Factory Completely Wiped Out.

Milwaukee, March 24. — Fire completely wiped out the big piano establishment of William Rohlfing & Sons, on Broadway, between Wisconsin and Mason streets, and wrought farther destruction to adjoining property entailing a loss close onto $300,000; fully covered by insurance. The fire started in the Rhoifing store, a four-story structure which was heavily stocked with pianos and sheet music. The building and contents were licked up in the space of half an hour and quickly spread to buildings on either side. William Rholfing & Sons' loss will reach $250,000. William E. Goodman, plumber, occupying the next building north, lost $15,000 on his stock, and Ferry & Class and Elmer Grey, architect firms, and William Marnitz, tailor, sustained losses aggregating $25,000. The flames then leaped to the sixth floor of the old insurance building to the south and completely destroyed that floor. The loss on the old insurance building will will reach fully $10,000. Price & Thomas, furniture store, sustained a small loss from water. Carroll & Carroll, lawyers; Benedict & Morsell, patent attorneys and Miss Gray, stenographer, occupying offices on the sixth floor of the old insurance building, sustained small losses. The cause of the fire is unknown.

LOWRY'S DAUGHTER FOUND DEAD.

Police Believe That She Committed Suicide.

New York, March 24.—A good-looking woman about thirty years old was found dead yesterday morning in a boarding house at 321 West 124th street. She was known at the boarding house as Mrs. L. B. Robertson, the wife of a Chicago tailor. Dr. Thomas J. Carzey, who viewed the body at the Harlem morgue, said that he was almost positive the woman was Mrs. L. R. Robinson, the daughter of Thomas Lowry, the millionaire street railway man of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Dr. Carney said that Mr. Lowry's daughter was in the Glen Springs sanitarium at Watkin's Glen, New York, when he was on the house staff there about three years ago. In the room where the woman was found were two vials containing the remains of some dark liquid. The boardinghouse keeper said the bottles had contained bromide of soda and blackberry brandy. The police are inclined to believe that she committed suicide, and Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon will perform an autopsy on the body to-day. When Dr. Carney was examining the body he said he got a perceptible odor of laudanum from the woman's lips.

M'KINLEY IN TWIN CITIES.

President May Change the Itinerary of His Western Trip.

Washington, March 24. —President McKinley may change his itinerary any pay Chicago a visit during his return from the Pacific. Charles Truax, representing the National Business league, has called upon the president and extended an invitation to visit Chicago. The present plans of the presidential party are to pass overland as far as Duluth, whence the journey east will be continued by the great lakes to Buffalo. It is possible, however, that the president will change his route and come home via St. Paul and Minneapolis, stopping at Chicago and depart for Buffalo via the lakes from there. There is no intention to slight Chicago, and there is every prospect that the invitation will be accepted.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

Penned in the Bedrooms of a Burning House.

Davenport, Iowa, March 24. — Two children were burned to death and six other members of his family are in a hospital as a result of the burning of the home of John Holland near Milan, Ill., about five miles from here yesterday morning. The house caught fire from a defective flue and the flames made rapid progress before they were discovered. Holland's father, wife and six children were penned in bedrooms. All jumped from second-story windows but Willie and Edward, aged five and three years. Their bodies are in the ashes of the home. The others were burned and bruised except Holland and a sixteen-year-old son, but will probably recover.

DESERTED HIS CHILDREN.

An Arab Peddler Fails to Return for the Children He Left in Sargent County.

Forman, N. D., March 24. — Five months ago a peddler left three children to be boarded at the residence of John Murach, in the northwestern part of Sargent county. The man has not since been heard of. The children are Arabs, aged 10, 8 and 4 years respectively, one being a girl.

FROM A HOT PULLEY.

Elevator Fire From a Peculiar Cause Does Damage.

Mayville, N. D., March 24. — The Northwestern elevator at Murray, six miles south of here, burned. The fire caught from a hot pulley chain in the top of the building. There was no protection and the loss is probably total, with a large amount of wheat.

Arrested for Burglary.

Fargo, N. D., March 24. — Ed Lee, who was arrested on the charge of burglarizing a store at Tower City, pleaded guilty. Sentence was postponed till some men whom Lee had formerly worked for could testify as to his character. Lee says he was in a Northern Pacific sand house when the real robbers came along and divided the booty with him to avoid exposure.

Company D Elects Officers.

Zumbrota, Minn., March 24. — Company D, Third regiment, M. N. G., elected officers last evening. The company is in a prosperous condition and arrangements are being made to erect an armory this summer.

Fergus Falls Grocery Fire.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 24.—Wheeler Holmes' grocery store was totally destroyed by fire. Total loss about $2,000; insurance $1,400. The fire apparently originated from a defective chimney.

WITH Doings In the State Legislature. THE LAWMAKERS

St. Paul, March 19.—The house yesterday unanimously recommended for passage Mr. Peterson's bill providing for a revision of the constitution. The action was taken on general orders without opposition. The senate recently killed an identical measure. The Rich bill increasing the pay of the railroad commissioners $600 a year was killed.

The budget of new bills introduced included one by Mr. Lane of Minneapolis to tax grain elevators as the personal property of the elevator men. The bill is one which will probably be bitterly fought by a high-salaried lobby on the part of the elevator men. The greater part of the time was spent on the calendar. The bills passed included the Armstrong bill requiring hotels and lodging houses to have fire escapes, and the Fust bill for the regulation of barber schools. This had a close call, only mustering 63 votes after a vigorous campaign.

A bill was introduced to require all prison-made goods to be so marked.

The anti-wineroom bill was passed. The "tax-ferret" bill was reported for indefinite postponement and a long, hard fight is predicted on the measure.

In the Senate.

Thirty-two members of the senate answered roll call at a brief session last night. The calendar was not taken up and general orders received only passing attention. On account of the bare quorum there was no attempt to transact any business of importance.

St. Paul, March 20.—After a five-hour fight on general orders in the senate yesterday the board of control bill was amended to include the state educational institutions and the soldiers' home. The senate adjourned without final action and more amendments will be tacked on when the special order is continued this morning.

The senate killed Dr. Chilton's bill to prevent the marriage of imbeciles under forty-five years of age and to require a physician's examination of applicants for marriage licenses.

The drainage bill, carrying an appropriation of $50,000, was unanimously passed.

The Greer bill, which Senator Roverud endeavored to have entitled "A bill for the temporary relief of Russell Sage," was passed. This bill will cause the original village of Reed's to pay $10,000 of village bonds, which debt it tried to evade.

The Nichols house bill imposing a 5 per cent gross earnings tax on express companies was substituted for the identical measure introduced in the senate yesterday and placed on general orders.

In the House.

A bill intended to limit evasion of the prohibitory liquor laws in dry counties was introduced in the house by Representative Hillmond. The bill provides that practicing physicians who prescribe distilled, malt or vinous liquors in quantities in excess of two apothecary ounces to any one person in any one day shall be guilty of misdemeanor.

Bills were passed carrying appropriations aggregating $1,290.76, the amount of the expense accounts reported by the principals to the Blair-Mahood contest.

Representative J. A. Peterson's bill for a constitutional convention was passed without opposition.

Mr. Mallory of St. Louis introduced a bill legalizing all township bonds issued for road and bridge improvements.

The Peterson "mental anguish" telegraph bill was killed by practically a unanimous vote.

Mr. Dobbin of Hennepin introduced a bill authorizing the governor to set aside a suitably furnished room in the new capitol to be used as a permanent headquarters for the Minnesota department, G. A. R.

St. Paul, March 21.—Representative Jacobson sprung a decided sensation in the house yesterday by making the statement that he had in his possession evidence of bribery and corruption in connection with the recommendation of the committee to refer his bill providing for a 4 per cent gross earnings tax to the new tax commission. Representative Washburn, upon the defeat of Mr. Jacobson's motion to have the bill placed on general orders, said he had evidences of corruption which he desired to place before the house. Mr. Jacobson, in the course of his remarks in support of his bill, made the sensational statement that "one of the most corrupt legislatures ever assembled in St. Paul has infested the capitol for three weeks." Exciting scenes followed the charges of Mr. Jacobson and Mr. Washburn, and demands for the appointment of an investigating committee were loud and persistent. A resolution directing the speaker to appoint a committee of five members to investigate the alleged charges was carried unanimously. The committee will be named to-day.

The debate on Mr. Jacobson's measure consumed the entire day. The report favorable to the bill was defeated by a vote of 65 to 49.

Consideration of the senate resolution providing for adjournment April 5 was postponed until Saturday.

In the Senate.

The Burns telephone bill was killed by the senate yesterday, and a substitute, granting the same rights without endangering any provision of either the St. Paul or Duluth charters, was introduced in its stead and passed under suspension of the rules.

The Chilton meat inspection bill was withdrawn yesterday and a bill from the senate committee on public health substituted. The provisions of the former for the payment of fees for inspection are eliminated, and an appropriation of $65,000 is made to carry inspection into effect during the coming two years.

The board of control bill was put over until 2:30 to-day and the amendment adopted Tuesday was referred to a committee to be redrafted.

Among several bills passed was the Lord divorce bill, one of the conditions of which is that all divorce cases must be heard in open court.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 22.—Speaker Dowling yesterday named Representatives Mallory, Whitford, Johnson, Wells and Lee as a committee to investigate the charges made by Messrs. Jacobson and Washburn that bribery and corruption had been used in connection with the attempt to refer the gross earnings tax bill to the tax commission. The committee is expected to immediately begin the consideration of the evidence in the possession of Messrs. Jacobson and Washburn and sift the ugly charges to the bottom.

The opponents of the Jacobson bill are at a white heat and vociferously assert that Messrs. Jacobson and Washburn must prove their charges or take the consequences. They claim that the bribery charges were made to delay action on the bill. The charges were expected to furnish fuel for inflaming public sentiment that pressure might be brought to drive sufficient number of the opponents of immediate passage of the bill into the Jacobson camp to insure against its reference to the tax commission.

Representative Laybourn of St. Louis, who led the fight to secure the reference of the gross earnings tax bill to the tax commission, yesterday submitted an amendment to the report of the majority of the tax committee, providing that the subject matter of the bill be referred to the tax commission with the instruction that that body prepare a bill or bills covering the subject of railroad taxation to be submitted to the legislature with the commission's report on the revision of the tax laws. The amendment, after a vigorous debate in which the charges of corruption were again brought to the front by the champions of the bill was adopted by a vote of 60 to 51. The bill lies on the table, still in the possession of the house, and may be taken up and passed or killed at any time Mr. Jacobson can marshal a majority of the strength present.

The house passed the anti-cigarette bill.

In the Senate.

The Jones and Daly anti-trust bills were passed by the senate after a lengthy debate, the opposition being led by Senator Wilson of Minneapolis. One of these bills is to forbid all pools, trusts and conspiracies in restraint of trade, and the other puts the measure in force for all existing as well as future trusts, and regulates court jurisdiction.

The board of control bill was put over until to-day.

Senator Ives introduced a bill shortening the legislative sessions to eighty consecutive days.

Resolutions paying a sympathetic tribute to the life and work of the late Chaplain Lewis were adopted. Rev. Chainnard of St. Peter was elected to fill the vacant chaplaincy.

The Hickey bill reducing the rate of interest on state land contracts from 5 to 4 per cent was passed.

St. Paul, March 23. — The board of control bill passed the senate by a vote of 40 to 16, amended to include every state institution except the soldier's home. Absolute supervision of the affairs of all the state institutions except the soldiers' home. Absolute supervision of the affairs of all the state institutions except the university, normal schools, schools for the deaf and blind and the state school for indigent children is given. Over the financial affairs of these the board will have supervisory power. The board of corrections and charities is abolished.

Senator Chilton's marriage bill finally ran the gauntlet of the upper house and was passed with only seventeen opposing votes.

The special committee on the Daugherty bill providing for a state sanitarium for consumptives reported a substitute measure to the senate. It provides for the immediate appointment of five commissioners to select a site and purchase 1,000 acres, and to report fitting plans for such an establishment to the next legislature.

The reapportionment bill was reported from conference and passed both houses. The only change is that Waseca county is left in the First district.

In the House.

Mr. Hurd's bill for the maintenance of bicycle sidepaths and the licensing of wheels was yesterday passed without amendment by the house.

Representative Alley's bill authorizing the state superintendent of instruction to revoke the certificate of teaches for breaches of contract was passed.

Representative Alvord, St. Louis, is the author of a bill providing that nonresidents shall enjoy only the same rights of exemption in garnishment granted bona fide residents of the state.

A bill providing for the vacation of roads established under common law dedication unused for a period of one year and their restoration to the owners was introduced by Representative Johnson of Hennepin.

WATER AROUND LA CROSSE.

Annual Spring Overflow Gets an Early Start.

La Crosse, Wis., March 24.—The water in the La Crosse and Black rivers is on the rise and much damage is expected. The bottom lands between this city and Midway are overflowed and the water has nearly reached the tracks of the Milwaukee and Northwestern roads. The banks of the La Crosse river are overflowed north of the city and if the freshet continues residents in the lower part of North La Crosse will suffer great damage.

FOUND A SHORTAGE.

Mayor Pierce of Marshalltown Will Make It Good, However.

Marshalltown, Iowa, March 24. — A committee appointed by the city council to check up the accounts of Mayor F. G. Pierce for the six years of his administration and investigate alleged shortages has reported a shortage of about $1,100. The council will take immediate steps to collect this amount if possible. Mayor Pierce does not deny the shortage, and says he will make it good.

DECREASE THE ARMY

PHILIPPINE SITUATION MAKES IT POSSIBLE.

Much Smaller Army Can Handle the Situation in the Islands Than Has Heretofore Been Planned—Instead of the 100,000 Men Provided by Law an Army of 70,000 Men Will Be Sufficient—Philippine Insurrection Is Rapidly Going to Pieces.

Washington, March 24.—The war department is much encouraged by the reports from the Philippines, and also from the recruiting officers. The insurrection in the islands is rapidly going to pieces and it is now believed that a much smaller army can handle the situation than has heretofore been planned. Instead of an army of 60,000 for the Philippines the department now believes that 40,000 men will be enough to protect the islands and insure order and peace throughout the archipelago. The recruiting for the new army is going forward most satisfactorily. The average enlistment is 1,000 a week, and this will be as many as the department can handle in equipment, drill and shipment to the Philippines. The department expects to enlist the full 100,000 men provided for by the new army bill, but it will not try at that maximum figure. There will be 30,000 regulars whose terms of service will expire in six months, and when these are discharged their places will not be filled if the present promising conditions in the Philippines continue. That would place the army at 70,000 men instead of 100,000 as provided by law. The president is anxious to keep the army down to the minimum and he hopes to have it not above 70,000.

With 40,000 troops in the Philippines and 30,000 in this country, Cuba and Porto Rico he would have an army representing less than one man to every 1,000 of population.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

Two Regiments Sail From Manila for San Francisco.

Manila, March 24. — The transport Grant, which sailed yesterday for San Francisco, carried 31 officers and 891 men of the Twenty-ninth volunteer infantry. When the regiment arrived here there were 50 officers and 1,308 men. Of this number 32 were killed in action or died and 16 officers and 193 men remain behind. The Thirty-second infantry, which is also returning, originally had 48 officers and 1,264 men. Of this number 22 officers and 642 men are returning to the United States and 21 officers and 193 men remain behind; 52 members of the regiment have been killed or have died of their wounds. The remainder are absent on sick leave or have been discharged. The Twelfth company of the Twenty-sixth regiment also sailed.

MASSACHUSETTS AFLOAT.

Battleship Which Grounded in Pensacola Harbor Has Rejoined the Squadron.

Washington, March 24. — Navy department officials were relieved of all apprehension concerning the big battleship Massachusetts, which ran aground in Pensacola harbor while on her way out to sea, by the receipt of the following telegram from Capt. Reisinger, the commandant of the Pensacola yard, dated Warrington, Fla.: "Massachusetts got off about 5 a. m., towed by Leonidas outside. Has joined the squadron. Will wire particulars later."

WATCH YOUR FIVES!

Secret Service Announces a New Counterfeit.

Washington, March 24.—Chief Wilkie of the secret service has announced the appearance of a new counterfeit $5 national bank note on the National Iron Bank of Morristown, N. J. It is a deceptive counterfeit printed on two pieces of paper between which silk fiber had been distributed. The face of the note, apparently printed from an engraved plate, is defective in detail. The word "cashier" abbreviated in the genuine to "cash'r," appears in the counterfeit as "cash."

ASPHALT ROW IN COURT.

Rival Companies in Venezuela Seek to Settle the Trouble.

Washington, March 24.—Formal notice has been received of the institution of legal proceedings in Venezuela to settle the asphalt controversy. The representatives of the Warner-Quinlan syndicate on Feb. 8 brought suit in the highest court of Venezuela for a summonds against the New York and Bermudez companies to secure possession of the Felicidad concessions. The New York and Bermudez company is in possession of the asphalt lake.

NOTED PRELATE VERY ILL.

Lord Archbishop of Ontario Lies at Death's Door.

New York, March 24.—As a result of exposure endured during the early years of his episcopal life, his grace, the lord archbishop of Ontario, the metropolitan of Canada and the oldest bishop by consecration in the Anglican empire, lies seriously, and, it is feared, fatally ill at his apartments in the Hotel Empire, Broadway and Sixty-third street. Archbishop Lewis is the last bishop to whom the late queen gave royal letters patent.

SULTAN WILL PROTEST.

Objects to England Annexing Islands Without Telling Him.

Constantinople, March 24.—The sultan intends to make a protest because England without warning or negotiation has seized several islands in the Red sea near Adir, which was once part of his empire. The first the sultan knew of his loss was when he received official notification from the British foreign office that the islands had been annexed. The sultan may appeal to Russia.

BUSINESS OF THE SOAKER.

An Expert in Pawnbroking Who Has His Regular Customers.

In the neighborhood where pawnshops abound the soaker flourishes. The soaker acts as middleman between the pawnbroker and his customers. He explains his mission and accounts for his usefulness thus:

"The people down here employ me," said he, "not because they are ashamed to be seen going into a pawnshop themselves, but because I can get more for the goods than they can. There's an art in pawning a coat or a ring, just the same as in everything else.

"I've known people to go into a pawnshop with some old article to pawn and to look the proprietor over with a supercilious air, as if they considered themselves so far above him socially that he couldn't touch them with a 40 foot pole. Naturally, for sheer spite, the broker offers them only about half as much as they would get if they approached him properly. Having had a wide experience of my own, I know how to avoid such difficulties. I am not servile, but I am polite and respectful, and as those two qualities touch the most generous chord in the broker's bosom I get all I want on the proffered chattels.

"As recompense for my services I charge my customers 10 per cent commission. I have regular customers, and then, of course, I do many odd jobs for occasionals. There are families down here for whom I pawn the same things over and over again, one week after the other. On pay day they take their things out of soak. Three days later they put them in again, and the next pay day they take them out again. And so it goes, month after month. I canvass the houses just like a book agent or corn plaster peddler or insurance solicitor.

"'Anything to be pawned today?' I ask.

"And if there is I take it around to some shop and raise the necessary dough and take it back and get my commission. Once in awhile I come across somebody who abuses me and calls me a shark, but I'm nothing of the sort. I'm earning a decent living at a legitimate business."—New York Sun.

A Point at Issue.

Several of the lawyers had told their stories, some of which ridiculed the continued use of legal verbiage and the absurd lengths to which members of the profession sometimes go in taking advantage of technicalities.

"A rank outsider," announced the member of the profession who had been a good listener, "a client of mine, supplied the best instance of literal interpretation that ever came to my knowledge. He was executor under a will that, among other provisions, required the payment of an annuity to a venerable aunt of the testator. But proof of her being alive must be made before each payment, and this is the rock on which the executor struck.

"The old lady proved herself in the flesh, drew her money and went to California, where she spent two years without putting in her claim. On her return she went in person and demanded the double allowance due her.

"The conscientious executor got out the will, studied it, scratched his head and finally handed down his opinion:

"'Madam, you are alive now. There can be no reasonable question as to that, for I have the conclusive evidence of my own eyes. But I am possessed of no legal proof that you were alive a year ago. I am, as you know, within the restrictions of the will. I will pay the annuity for this year, but must insist upon satisfactory affidavits that you were not dead when the preceding annuity was passed.'

"It took me the better part of a day to convince him that he should settle in full."—Detroit Free Press.

His Good Wife.

Gilbert—I believe in a man being the master of the house. He should have the say in everything.

Mason—How about the naming of that baby of yours?

Gilbert—My wife gave way to me in a very proper and wifely manner. She said she didn't care what name I gave the little fellow so long as it was Henry. So that's the name I gave him. You know I felt, after the hearty manner in which she deferred to me, I ought to yield a single point merely out of appreciation of her humility.—Boston Transcript.

Family Pride.

"I suppose you take a great deal of pride in your business."

"No," anwered Mr. Cumrox. "I used to take pride in my business, but ma and the girls don't approve of it. The only thing we take pride in now is my daughter's husband's pedigree."—Washington Star.

Rogues are always found out in some way. Whoever is a wolf will act as a wolf; that is the most certain of all things.—Fontaine.

INDIAN SIGNALS.

The Long Distance Code by Which the Red Men Conversed.

The traveler on the plains in the early days soon learned the significance of the spires of smoke that he sometimes saw rising from a distant ridge or hill and that in turn he might see answered from a different direction. It was the signal talk of the Indians across miles of intervening ground, a signal used in rallying the warriors for an attack or warning them for a retreat when that seemed advisable.

The Indian had a way of sending up the smoke in rings or puffs, knowing that such a smoke column would at once be noticed and understood as a signal and not taken for the smoke of some campfire. He made the rings by covering the little fire with his blanket for a moment and then suddenly removing the blanket and allowing the smoke to ascend, when he instantly covered the fire again. The column of ascending smoke rings said to every Indian within 30 miles: "Look out. There is an enemy near." Three smokes built close together meant danger. One smoke merely meant attention. Two smokes meant "Camp at this place." Travel the plains, and the usefulness of this long distance telephone will quickly become apparent.

Sometimes at night the settler or traveler saw fiery lines crossing the sky, shooting up and falling, perhaps taking a direction diagonal to the line of vision. He might guess that these were the signals of Indians, but unless he were an old timer he might not be able to interpret the signals. The old timer and the squaw man knew that one fire arrow (an arrow prepared by treating the head of the shaft with gunpowder and fine bark) meant the same as the column of smoke puffs—viz. "An enemy is near." Two arrows meant "Danger." Three arrows said imperatively, "This danger is great." Several arrows said, "The enemy are too many for us." Two arrows shot up into the air at once meant "We shall attack;" three at once said, "We attack now." An arrow shot off in a diagonal direction said as plainly as pointing a finger, "That way." Thus the untutored savage could telephone fairly well at night as well as in daytime."

PUZZLED THE JEWELER.

He Wanted a Second Hand Watch and Finally Got It.

He was evidently a foreigner, and he walked into one of the big jewelry houses on F street and asked for a watch. He would be pleased to examine some "second hand watches," he said to the clerk who advanced to meet him.

"This isn't a pawnshop," observed the clerk haughtily.

"No?" observed the man inquiringly. "But you have watches?" And he pointed to the great showcase full of handsome watches.

"Certainly," replied the clerk. "Finest stock of watches in the city. How much do you want to pay for a watch?"

"How mooch?" asked the stranger. "Mooch as he is worth, so that he suits me. I have said that I desire a second hand watch—a good one that shall keep the time."

"See here, sir; you are off your base. We don't keep secondhand goods. You will have to hunt elsewhere for secondhand watches."

The stranger's eyes opened wide. "But you have him there, and there and there," he said as he began to gesticulate. "I have said s-e-c-o-n-d h-a-n-d watches," spelling it as though to make it plainer, "and they are here, everywhere, yet you say you have them not. I do not comprehend you."

"Well, I do, you," replied the clerk sheepishly as he quickly got behind the counter. "Just a little mix up. No harm done, I hope. Certainly we have watches with second hands. All our watches have second hands. We handle no others." And the stranger got his second hand watch, for which he laid down a $50 bill.—Washington Star.

Speculation and Theft.

Some statistician, in emulation of Lombroso perhaps, has been figuring out the habitual employment of convicts. He concludes that more men and women whose employers are the national, state or municipal governments fall into evil ways and come to untoward ends than those who work for private individuals or corporations. A very large proportion of the men and women who have been handlers of public moneys seem to yield to the constant temptation and begin to peculate, and some cynic avers that peculation is the corollary of speculation. As a matter of fact, most of the big and little thieves who confess how they were led to take money that did not belong to them declare that speculations of one sort or another brought them eventually behind the bars.—New York Herald.

By Way of Suggestion.

"The trouble with me," spoke the young man who was on his way home with his best and loveliest from a party at the Kenhurst club, "is that I always feel embarrassed when I am out in company. I never know what to do with my hands."

"Suppose you just hold them up," said a hoarse voice in his ear.

The voice pertained to a large, rough looking man with a mask on his face and a large, rough looking revolver in his hand, and the youth lost no time in complying with the suggestion.—Chicago Tribune.

Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

French Bakers.

Bakers in France are subject to restrictions and regulations undreamed of in England. In the fortified towns along the frontier they are bound by law to have a certain stock of flour always on hand in case of emergencies. The bakery not only has to be kept clean, but the baker has to deposit with the local authorities a certain sum of money as a surety for the proper conduct of his business.

The law also looks after his weights and measures, which circumstance places him in the same position as the British baker, but in addition the law regulates the price at which bread can be sold.

Napoleon III ordered on one occasion that a loaf about equal to our quartern should be sold for not more than sixpence, and this at a time when we were paying eightpence and ninepence. —London Tit-Bits.

A MOUNTAIN LAKE.

Oh, limpid listener, in your placid soul
Are mingled all the songs that brooks have sung
When years and years, the shaggy hills among,
They babbled of their trials, with foamy tears,
Until, all wearied, having reached their goal,
You softly soothed their sorrows and their fears.

Like sentinels the stolid mountains stand
About you, dress'd in garb of gorgeous green;
At early dawn their mirrored shapes are seen
In shimmering outline, painted by the sun,
Upon your face, athwart the gleaming sand,
Nor fade from view until the day is done.

A fitting figure of eternal rest
You typify the changeless fate of man
When, having coursed mortality's brief span
Adown the hills of Time, his life shall end,
And all his doings, be they banned or blest,
Forevermore, with other deeds, shall blend.

ST. HILAIRE, - MINNESOTA

No wonder the fair sex is clamoring for equal rights. As it now stands, when a man dies his better half is entitled to only a third of his estate.

During the past eight months donations and subscriptions amounting to over £23,000 have been received for the Roman Catholic cathedral of Westminster, which structure is externally now practically complete.

Over $17,000,000 was spent on 102 vessels purchased by the navy department during the war with Spain. Seven of these were transferred to the war department, seven were sold and two sunk; thirteen are used by the state militia and five are at the navy yards or stations. Of all the remaining thirty-two seventeen are at the Asiatic station.

A queer sentence closes the inscription on a tombstone in a churchyard in Leigh, England. After announcing the name and other particulars of the lady there buried, these words follow: "A virtuous woman is 5s, to her husband." The explanation is that space prevented "a crown" being cut in full, and the stonecutter argued that a crown equals 5s.

Mexico has a national bathing day. It comes once a year—on that day every Mexican, from the president down to the humblest servant or laborer, is expected to give himself or herself a good wash. Some of the Mexicans, probably fearing the pneumonia, rarely permit water to touch their bodies; but on the national bathing day the most of them like to get in the swim.

The Bon Marche, the great department store of Paris, feeds its 4,000 employes. The smallest kettle in its kitchen has a capacity of 100 quarts, and the largest 500. Each of the fifty frying pans is big enough for 300 cutlets. Every dish for baking potatoes holds 225 pounds. When omelets are on the bill of fare, 7,800 eggs are used at once. For cooking alone sixty cooks and 100 assistants are usually at the ranges.

A good story has been going the rounds of an old Spanish priest, who labored for a long time in the Philippine Islands. His friends entreated him, before he died, to write out in a book the knowledge which he had gained of the people for the enlightenment of his successors. After he was gone, they opened hopefully a large volume which he left, inscribed "What I know about the Filipinos," only to find that the pages were all blank.

Ohio capitalists closed a deal recently for the purchase of 4,000 acres of improved Florida lands, located on the St. John's river, forty-five miles south of Jacksonville. On the land is a beautiful magnolia grove and it is so situated that it is very desirable for residence purposes. During the coming summer the new owners will erect several handsome houses thereon, and the entire tract will be fenced and used as a game preserve for the enjoyment of the owners and their friends.

Philanthropy has been defined as Tom's opinion of what Dick ought to do for Harry. An ounce of illustratin is worth a ton of definition. A visitor at a Hartford hospital was told that Nancy Cornelius, a young Indian nurse, could earn twenty dollars a week in that city, and have all her time employed. Feeling a call of duty to the sick and aged among her own people, this splendidly equipped woman offered her serivices as doctor, nurse, housekeeper and scrubwoman in a little hospital among the Wisconsin Indians. For this arduous work she receives the meager sum of $200 a year. Her returns in gratitude, and the humble efforts of her people to follow her lead to better things, pass all computation.

Captain George W. Streeter of Chicago entered the office of the chief clerk of the department of the interior the other afternoon and asked that he be "sworn in as delegate in congress from the territory of Lake Michigan." He was informed that it is not a function of the department of the interior to administer the oath of office to members of congress. "But," persisted the captain, "I hold in my hand the electoral vote of the territory, which I must cast for president." Mr. De Lacy told the visitor he might get some light on the situation by going to the capitol and the captain moved eastward. Captain Streeter said in an interview: "Yes, it is true that I am the duly elected delegate for a term of four years from the new territory of Lake Michigan, east of Chicago, range 3, township 47. A territorial form of government was established there four years ago. We have a territory covering 300 acres and we have 127 voters. I am going up to the capitol to see Mr. Roosevelt."

Mothers never have any trouble with the naturally curly locks of their children, but it is the straight ones which perplex them. Some "hair doctors" say that if a child's hair be brushed upward instead of downward from infancy it will have acquired a tendency to curl by the end of the first year. In fact, hair dressing is a detail that receives too little attention in the case of little girls. Probably not one mother in three score studies the contour of her daughter's face with a view to finding the most becoming head dressing.

Marriageable women in Servia have a queer way of announcing that they are in the matrimonial market. A dressed doll, hanging in the principal window of a house, indicates that there is living there a woman who is anxious to become a bride.

A curious plant is the "life tree" of Jamaica. It continues to grow for years after it has been dug up and its roots exposed to the sun. Leaves severed from the limbs will remain green for weeks. The tree can only be destroyed by fire.

MORSELS OF WIT & HUMOR

LITTLE CHANCE FOR HIM.

"My dear sir," said the lawyer after he had heard his caller's story, "you are doubly unfortunate."

"How so?" asked the man who wanted to sue for damages.

"Well, you were thrown out of the theater last night weren't you?"

"Yes."

"You'd been imbibing a little and were noisy, but still you wanted to see the play, so you were unfortunate in being thrown out."

"That's right, but how am I doubly unfortunate?"

"Your second bit of bad luck," explained the lawyer, "lies in the fact that you are of the wrong color to get damages. Now, if you were a negro we could trot out the civil rights bill and make a fine case on the contention that the alleged reason given for putting you out was a mere subterfuge; but, being a white man, I guess there is nothing for you to do but to make up your mind that you were treated as you deserved and let it go at that. You see, there are some privileges that are denied you because of your color."

The Emblem.

The landlady was helping her $10 per week flock to sausage.

"I hear that you are an Odd Fellow, Mr. Danks?" she said, pausing in her work.

"Proud to say that I am," responded the new boarder.

"Ah, then I shall just give you three links."

And as his table mates received from four to six links the new boarder knew that he had spoken unwisely."

Dull-Eyed Scientists.

Mrs. Hayseed—"Who are those gentlemen runnin' into our barn to get out o' th' rain?"

Daughter—"They are a party of scientists who are stayingat the hotel. They've been out on some expedition or other."

Mrs. Hayseed—"I don't see where their eyes was las' night. Any one might a' known from th' new moon it was goin' to rain. It was tipped up so it couldn't hold water if it tried."

UNCLE ELI'S LOGIC.

At midnight the other night I got a dig in the ribs and woke up to hear Hannah saying:

"Uncle Eli, get up at once or we shall have our throats cut!"

"Have you discovered any one in the room with a knife?" I asked.

"No, but there's a great racket in the back yard."

"Well?"

"Well, who knows who is around and what they're stealing? Get right up and let 'em know you're home."

"My dear woman, let's look at this thing from a logical point of view. No person in our back yard can cut our throats. It is a well-known fact that I am always home and no one would reason that this night was an exception. As to the identity of the marauder, what is it to us whether he be Tom Jones or Bill Green?"

"But do you want to be robbed?" she persisted.

"I do not. No man does. I hear a barrel being softly rolled over the snow. That barrel contains a dead cat and a lot of old shoes. I headed it up this afternoon and left it to be stolen. If not stolen it will cost me 15 cents to have it carted away. Hannah, seek thy repose. We have saved 15 cents in cold cash. The thief has worked up a surprise party on himself and there is yet time to indulge in our full amount of sleep."

MEETING AND PARTING.

PREPARING FOR THE FUTURE.

"So you're going to move," said the neighbor.

"Yes," replied the parent sadly. "I simply must do it. I like the neighborhood all right, and I'm pleased with the house, but I'm too far away from Harper."

"Harper? What Harper?"

"Why, Dr. Harper, of course—the man who is organizing the educational trust. You see, I have a family of children, and I have got to keep within reach of suitable educational facilities. These, I find, are gradually being gathered in by the University of Chicago, and I might as well go down and camp by the Midway first as last. Dr. Harper has a list of affiliated schools and colleges as long as your arm now, and little by little he's moving them into the Midway group of buildings. He'll have the Art institute down there in a year or so."

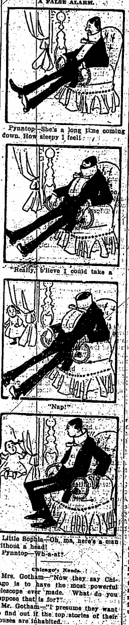
"Oh, he can't get that."

"Can't? Dr. Harper can't? I guess you don't know him. But, anyway, he's an earnest worker for the Two Million club. He's bringing people here from all over. He reaches out for their schools and they just naturally have to follow. I'm going to get as close to him as possible before rents reach a prohibitive figure in order to be prepared for the future."—Chicago Evening Post.

Light as a Cure.

At a meeting of the Academy of Sciences in Paris on December 3d, Monsieur P. Garnault reported that in certain diseases light exercises a specific curative action. The most successful treatment under concentrated light occurred in cases of muscular and articular rheumatism, various kinds of ulcers and chronic catarrh of the nose and ear.

A FALSE ALARM.



Pynntop—She's a long time coming down. How sleepy I feel!

"Really, b'lieve I could take a

"Nap!"

Little Sophia—Oh, ma, here's a man without a head!

Pynntop—Wh-a-at?

Chicago's Needs.

Mrs. Gotham—"Now they say Chicago is to have the most powerful telescope ever made. What do you suppose that is for?"

Mr. Gotham—"I presume they want to find out if the top stories of their houses are inhabited."

Time's Changes.

Mrs. D'Avnoo—"Those street repairers have got through at last."

Mr. D'Avnoo—"They have?"

Mrs. D'Avnoo—"Yes; they have taken away their red lantern."

Mr. D'Avnoo—"Taken away their red lantern? Well! Well! Another old landmark gone!"

LITTLE LAUGHS.

What Would Follow.

"Why didn't you loan Starker your snow shovel? That isn't much of a favor."

"No; but you don't know Starker. If I loaned him the shovel he would want to borrow my heavy coat and ear muffs. He'd dig in the snow until he caught a severe cold and then his son would want to borrow my horse to ride for the doctor. Likely as not he'd want to borrow enough to pay the doctor, too."

Usual Thing.

Barber—Here, you owe me 15 cents for that shave!

Customer—Go on! I always gits shaved "on me face!"

Unrestful Lodger.

The Miss—Do you prefer to spend the night on a park bench or the basement of a police station?

The Tramp—Well, lady, if it wasn't for de cold I'd prefer de park bench. In de station basement dey disturb yer dreams by pourin' coal on de furnace.

Ideas That Pass in Flame.

"Now, Jimmy, instead of spending your time in the streets you should read good literature. Does any poetry ever fall in your hands?"

"Bushel of it, ma'am. I'm office boy in a newspaper office an' have to empty de waste basket every mornin'."

Many Purchases.

Young Wife—"My dear, I've been putting down everything I spent in an account-book, just as you said; but I think I'd better stop."

Husband—"Why so?"

Young Wife—"It's costing like everything for account-books."

LET US BE PATIENT.

Let us be patient, you and I;
Let us, like watchful guardsmen, make
Our hearts a haven for the sake
Of those that drift, they know not why.

Let us be patient. Let us keep
Our watch-fires faithful as God's stars,
Whatever storm or shadow mars
The breadth of life's uncertain deep.

Let us be patient. Let men trace
No frown, no insincerity,
In skies of ours, that all may see
God's presence in his child's calm face.

Little Bacchus.

BY JESSIE LLEWELLYN.

Author "The Little Red Wagon," Etc.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

We were lounging around a large table in the east sample room of the Palace Hotel, which now is one of the swellest in the city. It was after business hours, and Dick Blume had started in on one of his long-winded stories. Dick had been running out from Chicago with a line of shoes before the oldest drummer among us had learned his A B C's, and his record for yarns was a world beater.

"I'll tell you he's her second husband and No. 1 is alive and flourishing back in the East," he was saying. "I'm the only man this side of the Mississippi besides his 'nibs' that's now got her, who knows the true inwardness of the affair."

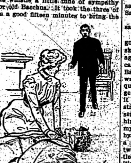
Blume was speaking of the pretty landlady of the "Palace," to whom we all had been making our politest speeches for a year past. We allowed him to continue uninterrupted.

"Her first husband was Nelson Bacchus, a good-hearted fellow, but without over-much brains. He brought her out here from back in the 'states,' as we used to say then, and in a little shack on this very spot they kept a hotel. It must have been the girl's black eyes and snappy, bright ways that started things going their way. It was a wonder they ever caught any of the boys, because she never would allow any liquor sold on the place any more than now, and if she'd find any of us backing our chips with the real stuff, out we'd go, bills paid or no. Well, in some way she took a sort of liking to me and used to tell me her troubles when the cook would quit on five minutes' notice or if any of the boys got sick; for, young as she was, she was a regular mother to us all.

"Things seemed to be going pretty smooth, for although she and Bacchus didn't seem to exactly hitch, they never had any words. He was a soft lot, always whining about something, and clean daffy with homesickness for the East. She was the whole thing about the hotel. Maybe I imagined it, but it seemed to me there was a wistful look in her eyes as though her life was incomplete.

"'There'll be a tragedy here some old day,' thinks I. 'That little woman is plumb ready to fall in love; she's just waiting for the right man'; for I could see that Nelson just figured as a sort of habit of hers. Sure enough, he came—the right man, I mean, and I was there—or here—at the time. It was the night before Christmas. The sleet and rain was knifin' every one it caught out, when a chap who looked to be pretty much on his uppers walked into the office. He was kind of wabbly in the knees, and old Kirk—you all know lazy Kirk, died down in Mexico in '79 for lack of exercise—Kirk took the trouble to knock the ashes off his cigar and voice the one word we were all thinking, 'Drunk,' he says. And as if the word hurt him, the fellow keeled over and fell prone to the floor. Little Bacchus—that's the name she went by among the boys—had been waiting for him to register, eyein' him pretty steady. Like a flash she was kneeling at his side and tugging at his frozen collar, and calling Mose, the black porter, and me.

"'Who says this man is drunk?' she asked, scornfully, looking straight at Kirk, as Mose lifted the slight figure in his arms. 'He's starvin' and half frozen to death, that's what he is.' There was something in her tone and the way she led the way to the best room in the house that somehow made me whistle a little tune of sympathy for old Bacchus. It took the three of us a good fifteen minutes to bring the fellow to himself. I had looked through his pockets and found two dog-eared cards with the inscription, 'Jonn Sheldon, printer,' same as now, only now it's 'John Sheldon, Palace Hotel.' There wasn't a sou of money about his clothes, and I guess he hadn't had the price of a hair cut for some time, for the yellow curls lay about his white face like a girl's. He certainly was good-looking. When the doctor came he said it was a case of typhoid fever. She was tending him like a mother when I jumped out of town.



'Who says this man is drunk?'

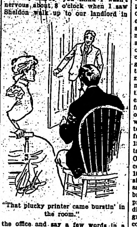
"It was about two months before I was here again. Nelse was behind the desk talking to some fellows about the glorious farm country in the East when I registered, but Little Bacchus was nowhere to be seen. It was old Mose to whom I addressed my questions as to her whereabouts.

"'Oh, she's up in her sittin' room with the printer, I guess,' he replied carelessly. I persisted with my questioning and learned that Sheldon on recovery secured a job with one of the morning papers—there were two here then—that he was boarding at the Bacchus House, and that he seemed devoting his leisure moments to Little Bacchus. All this prepared me for the shock when [illegible] office next morning [illegible] came straight [illegible] hand like a child. 'I'm in trouble,' she said, with a moist sort of sound in her voice, 'and I want to tell some one. Will you listen?' I didn't need to answer, for she had already led the way over by the window, and, looking around to see that none were in earshot, she began talking like a cyclone, fast and furious.

"'You see, he loves me, and I love him—I just can't help it. Oh, it's all right. Don't think that—and something's goin' to happen tonight. He's got a proposition to make to Nelson and he's goin' to make it tonight in our sittin' room. Now, no telling what will happen, and I want you to help me out. It won't be like eaves-droppin', not exactly, and we may be able to prevent shootin' if Nelson gets mean. I want you to meet me in the empty room just next ours at 8 o'clock, so that if anything goes wrong we can—'

"Kirk and some of the boys lounged in just then, and she ran away like a frightened kitten. She certainly was changed!

"Well, maybe you think I wasn't nervous about 8 o'clock when I saw Sheldon walk up to our landlord in the office and say a few words in a very low tone. I was more scared than he seemed to be, but I thought of Little Bacchus up there in the vacant room crying and worrying, so up I mosied. She just nodded to me as I went in, and we sat down without a word near the door leading into the next room. The two men came in immediately and it was Nelson Bacchus who spoke the first word.



"That plucky printer came burstin' in the room."

"'Well?' says he.

"'Mr. Bacchus, I love your wife. It's only right to tell you that she loves me. I thought I'd ask you—we thought it better—if you'd think over a plan—'

"An ominous clicking sound came through the partition, then the scuffling of feet. Little Bacchus sprang to my side and was pushing me toward the door. She was about to turn the lock, when a voice from the other side reassured us.

"'No need to get mean, you see; I'll take care of this.' It was Sheldon's voice. Old Bacchus was cursing softly but artistically.

"'To be brief,' continued the voice, 'what will you take, cash down, to go back East? Will you do this for one thousand dollars?'

"'You haven't got it,' Bacchus quickly answered.

"'See here.' There was a soft rustling of bills as Sheldon evidently counted them out. 'Here's five hundred. You know I'm a man of my word; now I'll give you my note for the other payable in five months.'

"'Umph!' Bacchus grunted. 'I thought you were trying to steal the girl and start a rival hotel; thought you weren't on the square, you know.'

"'What do you say?' insisted he of the yellow curls. 'Better decide now,' and I seemed to hear another ominous click, but perhaps it was only fancy; I never knew.

"'When do you want me to start?' whined Bacchus, like the coward that he was.

"A watch-lid snapped, then Sheldon said: 'In one hour you can take the Santa Fe going east.'

"'Give me the five hundred, then,' said Little Bacchus' husband.

"Well, sir, he didn't even tell her goodby, just took that money and skipped; and about an hour after the agreement, when that plucky printer came burstin' in the room where Little Bacchus and I were sitting, too wrought up for conversation, I just quietly slipped out and left them together. To this day every one thinks it was a cold case of desertion, and the strangest part of it is, that Sheldon sent that five hundred. Yes, sir, I saw him mail the check when I was out on my next run. Sent it without a word, by gad, and as soon as she could get a divorce he married the girl, and two years after they tore down the little shack and built the Palace; and it's a great hotel. Oh, a great hotel!"

The Old Farmer.

A southern paper tells a story of a Chattanooga (Tenn.) merchant who installed a telephone near the front door of his shop and one morning stepped up to the transmitter to answer a call. Just at that moment a North Georgia farmer who had never seen a telephone before came into the place and inquired, "Wanter buy any aigs?" The merchant, who was intent upon getting his message, gazed abstractedly at the farmer and told the telephone, "I can't hear you!" "Wanter buy any aigs?" shouted the farmer in a voice that made the windows rattle. Still unable to hear the man who was calling him, the merchant again remarked, this time without looking at the farmer, "I can't hear you! Speak louder!" For the third time the farmer spoke, roaring out his previous question so loud that people several blocks away stopped and asked what the trouble was. This had the desired effect. The merchant left the telephone, forgetting his call, and turning savagely on the intruder, remarked, "No! damn it, I don't want any eggs!" The farmer smiled, and as he went out, was heard to remark softly, "I never did see one o' them deaf fellers but what I could make 'em hear if I only let myself out."

THE SNOW MOUNTAINS

SNOW-CAPPED SUMMITS OF RUWENZORI RANGE.

Impression That This Was a Single Mountain Is Corrected—It Proves to Be a Mountain Range from 70 to 80 Miles Long.

Those who read many books of exploration know that a long period of investigation and the work of quite a number of explorers is usually required to give the world a fairly accurate idea of any new region, says the New York Sun. The first explorer comes home with very interesting information, but he rarely has time to make careful studies. There is much he does not see and he makes blunders with regard to geographic or other features that he has only superficially examined. The next explorer returns with new information about the same region, corrects blunders made by his predecessor and makes new blunders of his own. Thus explorer succeeds explorer, each showing the region in some new light, each eliminating some mistaken impressions concerning it till, at last, we drive from the sum total of work done, a fairly accurate and comprehensive idea of the new region. The explorations of the very interesting mountain region of Ruwenzori, in Central Africa between the north ends of Lake Albert Edward on the west and Victoria Nyanza on the east, is the latest illustration of the fact that the joint labors of a number of explorers are required to give the world the real facts about little-known territory. When Stanley came home from his Emin Pasha expedition in 1889 he reported a great snow mountain called Ruwenzori by the natives. One of his party, Lieut. Stairs, ascended the mountain to a height of 10,000 feet and came to the conclusion that the different snow peaks he saw were so many fragments of the broken rim of an old volcano. The impression made by the report of this discovery was simply that another great snow mountain had been discovered and that it was surpassed in height only by Kilimanjaro and Kenia among African summits. The work of Dr. Stuhlmann in 1890 did not remove this impression, but, while Stairs thought he saw the broken-down rim of an old volcano, Stuhlmann thought these peaks were mountains of deformation; or, in other words, that they had been formed by the crushing, uplifting and forcing together of the rocks. Then came Scott Elliott's explorations, in which he still spoke of Ruwenzori as a single mountain. For twelve years, therefore, geographers have spoken and written of Ruwenzori as a great eminence dominating lesser peaks to the north and south of it. But now come the description of Mr. J. E. S. Moore, who has made a careful study of this region and gives a different impression of it from that derived from the reports of his predecessors. He says Ruwenzori is not a single mountain, but is a mountain range from seventy to eighty miles in length. The mountains are not of volcanic origin, but of deformation, and form a succession of ridges, very lofty and covered with snow. Between the ridges are deep valleys and there is not merely one line of ridges, but a series of parallel ridges, so that this mountain region has important breadth east and west as well as seventy or eighty miles of extension north and south. The natives do not apply the name Ruwenzori to one mountain, but to the entire range, and they have distinctive names for the various summits. Scott Elliot said the highest peak, or Ruwenzori, is 16,500 feet in height, but Mr. Moore declares that, as far as he knows, it is as yet quite impossible to determine which of the numerous snowy peaks in the range is the highest, much less to give its exact height. One of the highest of the mountains is Ingomwimbi. It is a part of the central mass of the range. Moore ascended this mountain and found it a very steep and difficult ascent, sometimes along the edges of yawning chasms and always over slippery rocks or great fields of snow and ice. From the summit he could see the great central mass of wild and very lofty mountains, at least four of whose peaks are snow-capped; on the north and south of the central mass are deep valleys and beyond them are other white snow peaks to the north and south. As far as he could tell this central portion was the highest part of the range, but he is not certain that this is so.

Lord Rowton's Fame.

Lord Rowton, who celebrated his sixty-second birthday recently, has earned fame in several directions. He owes his title, to which there is no heir, to the fact that he was Lord Beaconsfield's private secretary and also to the fact that he is a favorite with the queen. It is as the "noble lodging-house keeper" that his lordship is now best known, however. He is the chief proprietor of three, if not four, of the buildings about London where a single man can obtain a night's comfortable lodging for sixpence.

Subjected Prince and Lost Job.

German papers give currency to a rumor that the retirement of Mr. Goschen from the British admiralty department was the result of his determination not to favor a royal sailor. He ordered that Prince Louis of Battenberg represent the admiralty at the funeral of a naval officer. The prince refused on the ground that he was of royal rank. He was upheld by Queen Victoria, but Mr. Goschen peremptorily ordered the chesty princeling to do as he was bid. Battenberg obeyed orders, but Goschen eventually retired from the department.

Making Light of Misfortune.

Bishop Tugwell of England, now in his missionary travels in the Sahara, sends an account of water "too dirty for us to clean it with our bodies. It made excellent coffee, however." Tapleyistic resignation of this sort might be copied by British troops at the front, or explorers. "Houses burnt down by natives in the night. VISITORS NOT WANTED.

People Who Want to See Greenland Must Get a Royal Permit.

Greenland is governed in a grandmotherly way by Denmark, but, as it consists of a group of colonies which would not under any circumstances attract many tourists or traders no outsider complains of the exclusiveness of the Danish authorities. Trade always has been and still is monopolized by the state and only government vessels are allowed to sail in Greenland waters. For foreign travelers also Greenland is a closed country unless the traveler in question has beforehand obtained the rare distinction of obtaining the permission of the Danish government. The monopoly of the trade is said to protect the Greenlander from being deceived by unscrupulous merchants. The administration settles a fixed price both for the goods the Greenlanders purchase and for the products they sell. In this way all are treated in the same manner and the business being carried on by the state is a guaranty that the natives are not imposed upon. Furthermore, the members of the administration are enjoined to take care that the natives do not leave themselves short of produce by selling more than they can dispense with, so that they are not destitute of needful food and clothing when the slack time arrives. The native Greenlander never has been, neither is he now, able to purchase a single drop of spirits from the administration. The exchange of goods between Greenland and Denmark is as a rule carried on exclusively by means of the nine vessels belonging to the Greenland Company—viz., five brigs, three barks and a small steamer, having a total register of about 2,000 tons net. Several of these vessels, which are suitable for sailing through drift ice, make two voyages a year, and the steamer as a rule three voyages. One of them the brig named the Whale, is nearly 100 years old.

Stone That Brings Luck.

A good deal has been heard of the "Lia Fail," or Stone of Destiny, which is placed under the seat of the coronation chair in Westminster abbey; but few people realize the extreme antiquity of this uninteresting-looking, rough, gray block. It was brought to Ireland about 1200 B. C. by the Tuatha-de-Danaans, a mysterious eastern race who conquered Ireland at that period. No one is quite clear as to their identity, but many savants suppose them to have been Chaldeans, Persians or Phoenicians. Those races were certainly highly civilized, even so long ago as the date mentioned. They attached the greatest possible value to the stone and used to crown all their monarchs on it. Three of the Tuatha-de-Danaan queens regnant who sat upon the stone of destiny rejoiced in the curious name of Fodhla, Bamba and Eire—the last a name that is creeping into use again of late, after long eclipse. In the sixth century, Fergus, king of Scots (an Irishman by descent), borrowed the stone for his coronation at Scone, and "froze on to it" when he had it. It never went back to Ireland, and many historians date the commencement of the distressful country's woes from that loss. Edward I. of England carried off the stone from Scone and placed it in Westminster abbey, where it still remains.

Profit in Ostrich Farms.

Very remunerative is ostrich farming, which, for a considerable time followed in California, has now been introduced into New Zealand. Five hundred of the birds are now on the farm of the Messrs. Nathan at Whitford Park, a short distance from Auckland. All the steps in the industry, from the nesting of the birds to the dressing, dyeing and mounting of the plumes, are carried on at this establishment. The manager states that an adult bird requires about the same amount of attention as a sheep, and that the ostrich consumes about twice the quantity of grass needed by a sheep. The birds become dividend paying investments when about 10 months old, after which age they are clipped every eight months. The feathers clipped are worth from $3.75 to $6.20 per pound, the after dressing increasing the value enormously. The male and female birds manage the incubation of the eggs between them, taking four-hour watches each. To his share of this duty the male ostrich adds the labor of turning the eggs. The chicks are hand fed, as with those of the ordinary farm yard fowl, and are reared without serious loss.

Gold in Sea Sand.

On the northern coast of California, near Gold bluff, gold-bearing beach sands are still profitably operated. The panning surfs of the ocean act as gigantic concentrators. There are two kinds, the "straight in surf" and the ordinary panning surf. The "straight in" is occasioned by the western wind accumulating the sand upon the seashore. The panning surf comes with a northwest or southwest wind, exercising a rocking motion on the cumulative sand heaps, panning them down and preparing the material for the puny appliances of the beach miner.

Barbaric Punishment in England.

The old-fashioned punishment of riding the rail for martial offenses, has been revived in the North Riding of Yorkshire. In Carlton, West Scrafton and Coverdale three erring husbands have undergone the salutary punishment of being forced to bestride a rail, and then, hoisted on the shoulders of some of the villagers, being ridden around through the streets for the edification of a hooting populace.

Need for the Ripper.

Without wishing to dip into our city's local politics, there is seemingly need of some kind of a "ripper" that it will not make its chief executive a laughing stock and a burlesque. A more incongruous spectacle has rarely been presented to a great city than the attitude of the mayor in his action, and its negation by understrappers, in the recent prize fight matter.—Pittsburg Catholic.

When a girl tells a young man to take heart it sounds suspiciously like a hint.

THE LAND OF MAKE BELIEVE.

To the gates of Dawn, how gladly
Would the grayheads all go back,
And, among the little children,
For a while forget the rack!
How their purblind eyes would brighten,
How their hearts with joy would heave,
Could they once again be dwellers
In the Land of Make Believe!

O, what treasures that a Croesus
Has amassed can equal those
That before the gaze of childhood,
As by magic, once arose?
All are rich if but they will be,
All possess what they perceive—
To life's largess there's no limit
In the Land of Make Believe!

What a land it is to live in,
Where a palace is as cheap
As a hovel—where the littlest
May with giant strides o'erleap
Highest hights! Tho' bringing knowledge,
How the flying years bereave
Us of all our happy dwellings
In the Land of Make Believe!

Still so curious is the human
E'en in childhood—oft he goes
Far outside Joy's sphere, a-weeping
O'er imaginary woes;
For the one that's born a poet,
Tho' he knows not why, must grieve
O'er the tears that fall outside of
The bright Land of Make Believe!

Wit vs. Wine.

BY JAMES NOEL JOHNSON.

Author "A Romulus in Kentucky," "Two Girls in Blue," Etc.

(Copyright, 1901: by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Old John Tabor of Bowie Creek sat on his veranda, his huge legs spread suggestive of the prongs of a black oak tree. The puckers between his eyes drew his brush-heap brows together.

His pretty daughter, Mollie, stood at the rail of the balusters, her apron pressed to her eyes. A curtain of morning glory vines dropped from the eaves to the ground, one blossom of which touched the cheek of the young girl with the soft lips of sympathy.

"No use in none o' your foolishness. You ain't got sense enough to know what's good for ye. Jest to think ye're wantin' to marry that school teacher, Ed. Bronson, with his soft han's, gal face and baby eyes, an' turn yer contrary back on Tom Bradley, who could split more rails in one day than that 'ar Bronson could split in ten years. You think you could live with him on soft moonshine, idle breezes, kisses an' all that sort o' truck, forgittin' that arter a few messes of that diet you'd like to try a round or two of 'taters, pork and beans, soda biscuit and strong coffee."

"Pap," spoke the girl between convulsive sobs, "you can't make me marry Tom. I can't do it; I won't do it, I tell you!"

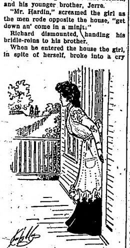
"Lookee hur' gal; I'm gittin' my dander clean up in my ha'r now! You belong ter me until you're twenty-one, an' I sorter allow, under the laws of the state o' Kentucky, made an' pervided fer sich cases as this, that I'll do as I please with my own property. Heah me? I'll have no kicks an' hitches. When I stand you side an' side to be hitched up ter the matrimonial wagon, by gad, suh, I'll have no stallin'! Think I'm goin' to give you to a little slender imirtation of a man with nuthin' but er edication (which only makes people fools and idlers), while a big, strong man with two hosses, three cows an' forty head of sheep stands ready to foreclose on ye? Not much! You're mine, I say—till tomorry night, then I give ye to Tom Bradley. So hush your snubbin' an' go git dinner in race horse time, for I promised Bradley to go with him to town this evening to git the license."

As soon as the old man had disappeared behind a wall of dark green corn at the rear of the house, Mollie, in a frenzy of dispair and grief, went to the front door and gazed with eager, blistering eyes up and down the road. She wanted to see some one she could fly to, to whom she could reveal her peril, and beg for a rescuing hand. Not more than a minute had passed when two men on horseback rode into view. They were Richard Hardin, the wealthiest young man in that section, and his younger brother, Jerre.

"Mr. Hardin," screamed the girl as the men rode opposite the house, "get down an' come in a minit."

Richard dismounted, handing his bridle-reins to his brother.

When he entered the house the girl, in spite of herself, broke into a cry that convulsed her frame, and rendered her speechless for some time. The sympathetic young bachelor gazed upon her, wonder and pity in his face. He had a vague idea, however, the occasion of her grief. When she had mastered herself, she briefly related her troubles, and begged him to save her.



The young man sat for a moment,
Two horsemen rode into view.
his mind working double time. The girl watched him as a mother would watch the lights and shades in the face of a child approached by death. Soon his face lighted up. He slapped his big leg and said:

"I'll fix it. Have no further fear. You shall have your heart's wise choice. I'll save you from that contemptible wretch—Tom Bradley. I'll be back in a second."

He arose and hastily went out to the fence.

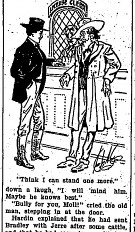
"Jerre," he said, "I'm going to Vanceburg with Mr. Tabor to get the license for Louis and Mollie's marriage. Ride over and tell Tom we are gone, and get him to go with you out to Abe Martin's to bring home the three cows I bought of him yesterday and I'll pay him well."

Then he went back into the house and said: "Mollie, when your father comes in I shall pretend to agree with him respecting his choice. You will appear as if reconciled. I'll go to town with your father to get a license for your marriage. Leave all to me."

Soon the old man's footsteps were heard in the yard, and Richard, as if in answer to words from Mollie, raised his voice and said:

"Oh, Mollie, you'll get over your foolish love for Ed Bronson all right. He's a pretty young fellow, very attractive to girls, but one they would always regret marrying. Your father is right. Mind him, and the future will show you that the wisdom of age is superior to a girl's day dreams."

"Well," replied Mollie, choking down a laugh, "I will mind him. Maybe he knows best."



"Think I can stand one more."

"Bully for you, Moll!" cried the old man, stepping in at the door.

Hardin explained that he had sent Bradley with Jerre after some cattle, and that he had come to go with him after the license. The old fellow was delighted, and when they were well on the road, he didn't refuse Hardin's proffer of a drink from his bottle.

The old man was a spreer. When he got one drink it was the beginning of a two weeks' "drunk." Frequently tapping Hardin's bottle, he was in excellent shape before town was reached.

The bottle exhausted, the pair entered the nearest saloon and began to drink to the health of the young couple. Hardin took very small drinks, while the old man was rapidly passing from the political to the religious stage of drunkenness. The crying stage is next, and, before that was reached, Hardin said they'd better go get the license.

When they reached the clerk's office the old man's eyes were tilted back in their sockets. Hardin whispered the names of the couple to the clerk.

"How old is your daughter, Mr. Tabor?" asked the clerk.

"Er (hic) me? Oh, her—u-um, um, (hic) she's sex—sic—six—er seven——"

"She's seventeen—I know her age," said Hardin.

"You give your free consent to her marriage?"

"Me? Heigh? Er (hic) w'y, yes, I don't keer—think I can stand one more."

Hardin and the clerk laughed, and the former took the license when made out, and paid the fee.

Hardin took the old man down to the saloon, and permitted him to pour down drink after drink until he fell in a heap at the bar. Then he had him carried to bed, where he slept in snoring unconsciousness until 2 o'clock the next afternoon.

Hardin handed the license to Mollie, sent for Ed Bronson and a preacher, and had the couple married four hours after he and the old man had started for Vanceburg.

Tabor continued his spree for two weeks, never coming home during the time.

One day he was standing at the bar, treating a lot of appreciative loafers, and bragging on his son-in-law, Tom Bradley, when the latter entered and called him out the back way.

"Mr. Tabor," he said, crying, "I think you treated me bad—promising me Mollie an' then givin' her to Ed."

"What!" thundered the old man. "Are they married? I got the license fer you an' her."

"No you didn't," mournfully spoke poor Tom, "it was made out for Ed an' Mollie, an' the clerk sez you wuz present an' give your consent."

The old man's whisky blooms faded from his face for a second; then he shouted: "I was tricked! I'll kill Dick Hardin!"

"An' Mr. Tabor, misfortunes never come alone. My horses are dead with epizootic, and the dogs have killed all my sheep."

"Well," laughed the old man, after a pause, "I guess I won't kill Dick, for a little joke like that. Come in an' take a drink."

Bishop Saves a Beetle.

The following anecdote of the late Bishop of London is told: On one occasion he was heading a procession down the nave of Peterborough cathedral, when he observed a black beetle crawling directly in his path. Fearing that the insect would escape the attention of those following, he stooped, picked it up, and, placing it out of the line of route passed on to his throne.

Chinese Fashion-Plates Simple.

All Chinese cloths are built on the same pattern. This is economical. The clothing that the great-great-great-grandfather wore is thus available for the son, the grandson, the great-grandson, the great-great-grandson, and so on down the generations to the day that there is not a thread of it left. The difference in the clothing of a Chinaman is in the material, and never in the cut.

Electrocution Assailed.

Electrocution has been violently attacked by the Electric Review on the ground of cruelty. The Review holds that shooting, garroting, hanging, the gullotine, harikari and beheading by the sword are all humane compared with the mutilations and sickening preparations for an electrical execution.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Don't Deepen the Wrinkles.

Is father's eyesight growing dim,
His form a little lower?
Is mother's hair a little gray,
Her step a little slower?
Is life's hill hard to climb?
Make not their pathway steeper;
Smooth out the furrows on their brows,
Oh, do not make them deeper.

There's nothing makes a face so young
As joy, youth's fairest token;
And nothing make a face grow old
Like hearts that have been broken.
Take heed lest deeds of thine should make
Thy mother be a weeper;
Stamp peace upon a father's brow,
Don't make the wrinkles deeper.

In doubtful pathways do not go,
Be tempted not to wander;
Grieve not the hearts that love you so,
But make their love grow fonder.
Much have thy parents borne for thee,
Be now their tender keeper;
And let them lean upon thy love,
Don't make the wrinkles deeper.

Be lavish with thy loving deeds,
Be patient, true and tender;
And make the path that ageward leads,
Aglow with earthly splendor.
Some day thy dear ones, stricken low,
Must yield to Death, the reaper;
And you will then be glad to know
You made no wrinkles deeper.

The Delayed Letter.

"Hattie," said Mrs. Miller, looking up from her sewing one day in late February, "don't forget to post my letter when you go for the mail, as it is important, and I want it to go on the 4 o'clock train."

"Yes, mother," answered Hattie, a bright looking girl of 15 years, as she reluctantly closed the book, "An Old-Fashioned Girl," which she had been reading and pushed it aside on the table. "May I take my skates along and have some fun on the ice?"

"Yes," her mother replied, "but post the letter first. And I will expect you home for tea; you know Mr. and Mrs. Harris will be here, and I will need you."

Hattie donned her hat, jacket and mittens and started for the door. Before she had reached it, however, her mother said: "Come back, daughter, and put your book away."

The girl obeyed with a slightly pouting expression on her pretty face. She disliked very much to have her greatest fault corrected. Hastily kissing her mother good-bye, she opened the door and ran lightly down the steps and hurried along the street, her good spirits entirely recovered. At the corner, three or four blocks from the postoffice, she met a merry party of girls and boys who, also with their skates slung over their shoulders, were racing madly along, making the air ring with their clear voices and laughter.

"Oh, Hattie!" cried Madge Rumsey, "we were just coming after you. Ed. Carter has his new iceboat down on the river, and has invited all the members of the Winchester Literary club to an iceboat ride. If you had been out to our meeting last night you'd have known about it"—here Madge stopped for lack of breath.

"We'll have to get a-humping," said one of the boys, "or we won't get any boat ride today, as Ed said we would have to start by 2 o'clock, and it can't be far from that now. We're going down as far as Lindon and have some refreshments, then we will come back and have a jolly old time on the ice with our skates."

"Hurrah!" cried one of the boys.

"Keep still, Bert," said Madge. "You'll come, Hattie, of course?"

"Yes, of course, I'll come," Hattie replied, thinking to herself, "I'm not going to miss all that fun just for that stupid old letter. Mother's always so particular, anyway."

The party soon reached the river, where they found the other members of the W. L. C. congregated. Ed's boat was a beauty and Hattie soon forgot all about the letter in her pleasure. They enjoyed a long ride up the river past small, peaceful villages to Lindon, and after refreshments, returned. Strapping on their skates, they indulged in races and cut up all the capers that a lot of mischievous youngsters could think of. The boys had built a huge fire on the edge of the river and after they had tired of skating, they gathered around the fire and told stories till the lights in the village began to show. Then realizing how late it had grown, the party broke up, each one wishing they could have an ice boat ride every day.

As Hattie turned once more towards the postoffice, she knew she was too late to send her letter that night. However, she slipped it in, received her mail, and hurried home, trying in vain to believe that it did not matter, and that her mother would never know but that it went that day.

"Well, sis, I thought you had skated clear out of sight," said her brother Tom, as she came in.

"What has kept you so late, Hattie?" asked her mother.

Hattie replied rather evasively that she had been having a ride in Ed. Carter's ice boat and did not know it was so late. Mrs. Miller asked if the letter was posted, to which Hattie replied, "Yes, mother, it was."

After the dishes had been washed Hattie's mother said, "How would you like to go to Montreal, daughter?"

"Better than most anything else on earth mother, is there any chance for me to go?"

"Yes; your Uncle Harold said if I was willing he would take you in the morning to see the ice palace, and other points of interest there. I sent him word today that if he was able to look after such a big piece of mischief I would be glad to have you go. So get the things you will need ready tonight, as there won't be much time in the morning. What's the matter? Don't you want to go?" for Hattie sat as if she were stunned [illegible] on her that her uncle would not stop for her if he did not get the letter.

"Oh, mother!" she cried at last, "I did not mail your letter till after the train had gone, and I can't go with uncle!"

Mrs. Miller thought it a really good lesson for her daughter, who had of late grown very negligent; but she realized the girl's bitter disappointment and comforted her with the promise that she should take the journey with her uncle another time.—Hunt Maxwell in Detroit Free Press.

Clever Playthings.

Our modern toys are as ingenious as they are varied and pretty, but the young people of Europe and America have no monopoly in this regard. For centuries the children of the far East have delighted themselves with the very queer and interesting contrivances known as expanding water toys. They come in small wooden boxes similar to the little paint-boxes that are so well known, and they look like dirty shavings, broken matches and dilapidated toothpicks. But throw one of them into water, and the ingenious little toy at once shows itself to be something more than a bit of stick. The wood has been kiln-dried, and as soon as it touches the water it begins to absorb the same and to expand almost indefinitely. As it increases in size it separates, and suddenly opens and becomes a very pretty toy. One stick changes into a flower-pot containing a rose-bush in full bloom, another becomes a fat mandarin carrying an umbrella, a third a sea-serpent ferocious in its tiny dimensions. A whale, a tiger and a lady of fashion taking her daily promenade are all represented. The figures are colored, and present an astonishing variety in design and treatment. How they are made and compressed is one of those trade secrets which are kept inviolate by the guild which makes a livelihood by their manufacture. On rare occasions it is possible to get larger and more artistic figures, historical characters and portraits of great monarchs, poets and teachers, dwarfed trees, and tiny houses whose doors and windows are full of inmates. The ordinary kind cost a mere song, but the finer qualities are often very expensive. Expensive or cheap, they have for long years given pleasure to the children of Kyoto and Canton.—Youth's Companion.

An Idea for Boys.

Boys who suffer from visits of minks to their poultry yards should raise these animals instead of chickens. Mr. E. N. Cheney of Lake Mills, Wis., has been doing this for several months, and selling hides to furriers at an average of $3 apiece. This mink farm, which is probably the first of the kind, is thirty-two feet wide. There is a roomy shed with little boxes for the minks, and a 10 by 12 open yard for the animals to run and play in. The "farm" is surrounded by a fence so built that the minks cannot jump over it. They like to come out in the evening, and it is then that they are fed on meat and game. During the summer a large trough of water was kept in the yard, and it was great fun to watch the minks swim, frolic and catch frogs in the water.

Expensive.

A little fresh air waif was spending his first day in the country. When the cows came up in the evening to be milked, he went down to the barnyard with his host to see the operation. The cows were standing about placidly, and as is their custom at that time of day, were contentedly chewing their cud. The boy watched the milkmaids at work, and his eyes dwelt with growing wonder on the ceaseless grind of the cows' jaws. At length he turned to his host, and said: "Do you have to buy gum for all these cows?"—Living Church.

An Intelligent Cat.

"I have a cat that can read," declared a lady to a writer in the Dominion Presbyterian. "At any rate, she knows when a letter comes for her."

"A letter!" exclaimed her friend in astonishment.

"Yes, a letter. If you don't believe it I will prove it to you. Just wait a moment while I direct one." She left the room and presently returned with a sealed envelope addrsssed "Miss Pussy, No. — Blank street, City." This letter was duly posted.

The next morning the postman came, and soon afterward the servant entered with a bundle of letters, among which was that for Miss Pussy. Placing them near her feline highness on the floor, Pussy's mistress said:

"Now, Pussy, pick out your letter." Surprisingly enough, Pussy at once showed an interest, and in a moment had pushed aside with her paws the envelope addressed to her.

"Wait a moment," said the mistress, "and she'll open it." Scarcely had she said this when Miss Pussy tore open the envelope, and in a moment was literally devouring its contents—catnip!

Bees as Geometricians.

The construction of geometrically perfect cells is not the only mathematical operation performed by bees. Not only is the construction of the cells carried on by mathematical rule, but many other operations of the insects also. For instance, the collection of the maximum amount of honey in the minimum time and the division of the workers among the plants proportionately to the number of plants of the same species. In the hives the number of bees engaged in ventilation is almost rigorously proportional to the daily increase of weight of honey, etc. Facts of this order relate to arithmetical proportion, while those having to do with cell-building relate to geometric ratios.

AN INHERITANCE IN WESTERN CANADA.

Indian Reservations and Other New Districts to Be Opened Up This Year.

In the Great Saskatchewan Valley and the Fertile Plains of Assiniboia.

To the Editor, Dear Sir: The past three or four years have demonstrated to a large number of Americans the value of the grain-growing and ranching lands of Western Canada. Tens of thousands have taken advantage of the offer made by the Canadian government as well as of the exceedingly low prices asked for lands by the railway, colonization and other companies. The experience of those who have been settled there for some little time is of a highly gratifying character. So much so that the Canadian government, who has control of the immigration into Western Canada, has decided to open up some new districts this year in the well known Saskatchewan Valley and also in the fertile plains of Assiniboia. These Districts are probably the most productive in the entire West and in close touch to largely settled communities as well as being situated on some of the most important lines of railway. They are within easy reach of markets, schools, churches and other social advantages. In some of these districts lands may be homesteaded as well as purchased outright at very low prices. Now as to what can be done on these lands. The evidence of the settlers in the neighborhood of the lands now about to be opened for settlement (some of them being located in one of the best Indian Reservations) goes to show that the very best results have followed even most indifferent methods. Cases are given where farmers having gone there with most limited means, barely enough to erect a small house and break up a little land, have in three or four years time become prosperous, all debts paid and money in the bank. The soil in the Districts mentioned, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, is a rich black loam, fifteen inches to three feet deep. As a settler says, "It appears like the accumulation of decayed vegetation and ashes for centuries (the sub-soil is a stiff, putty clay)." On this soil it is possible to raise from 40 to 50 bushels of wheat to the acre, oats 75 to 100 bushels, all of which bring good prices at the local market. For mixed farming these new districts are probably among the best in Western Canada. Stock fatten easily on the wild grasses. Hay is plentiful and prices splendid. Another settler writing to a friend in Iowa says: "The climate is all that could be desired, plenty of rainfall in summer, with no hot, dry winds. On the 28th of September, I saw prairie flowers in full bloom, sweet corn, potato and tomato vines that had not been touched a particle with frost, and the winters are milder than those in the State from which I came. After the holidays the winter sets in clear and cold, with plenty of snow for good sleighing; no high winds or blizzards are known. Horses live out all winter and pick their own living, while cattle live all winter in open sheds and around the hay ricks. Wheat, oats and barley are the principal grain crops. Potatoes and all other roots and vegetables do well, the yield being enormous as compared to those in the States. Wild fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries, cranberries, gooseberries and all varieties of currants yield in abundance. As a reader of your valuable paper for a number of years, I feel that I should inform you of the progress and advancement being made in Canada within the past few years, and the inducements and advantages that will follow settlement in Western Canada. Those who desire information can do as I did, and apply to any Agent of the Canadian Government, whose name I see appears in advertisements appearing elsewhere in the columns of your paper, and when writing ask particularly about the Saskatchewan Valley or Assiniboia Districts.

Yours truly, An Old Reader.

FREAKS OF THUNDERBOLTS.

Mountains Seem to Be Engaged in an Electrical War.

Professor Ellsworth Huntington says that during the geological trip through an almost unvisited part of the Taurus mountains in Turkey he heard of a peculiar electrical phenomenon. One of the natives told him that one mountain near his village fought with another mountain on the other side of the Euphrates river. The weapons were balls of light, which the mountains threw at each other. Professor Huntington thought at first, as the region was one of volcanic activity in comparatively recent times, and as hot springs and extinct craters are still to be seen, that this must be a traditional account of a volcanic eruption. He was, however, convinced subsequently that the story had its origin in a meteorological phenomenon. The story is detailed to him by ten or twelve men whom he saw at five different places within an area of forty miles was as follows: A ball of fire would start from one mountain and go like a flash to another. At the same time there is a sound like thunder. This occurs by night or by day, although by day no light is seen. It always occurs when the sky is clear and never when it is cloudy. It sometimes happens two or three times in a year, and then again it is not seen for several years. For the last two years it has not been seen. It hardly ever happens except in the fall, at the end of a long, dry season of three months. One of the mountains which he visited was composed of metamorphic schistose shale of the cretaceous age. Its height is 7,350 feet and its top is comparatively flat. According to one account the ball of fire was at first small, but grew larger as it passed over, and then grew smaller again. Professor Huntington believed that in this case the observer was standing between the two mountains. While meteorologists have not been ready with explanations of these mysterious lightnings, it is mentioned that there are peaks on the Rocky mountains on which almost continuous electrical discharges have been observed, but they pass off into the air quietly, like St. Elmo's fire, and never in great flashes from peak to peak. It is also known that a cloud or a mass of electrified air that has not quite attained the cloudy condition may lie between two peaks, and flashes may proceed from it simultaneously to the two peaks in such a way as to lead a careless observer to say that one peak discharged over the other.

He Peddles Morphine.

Long ago the rustling life of the Tenderloin shortened the current designation of the habitual morphine-taker from dope fiend to plain dope, says the New York Sun. In the process of mutation the term dope shop came to signify more often the resort of dopes than a place for the sale and purchase of dope. The dope shops are as well known as any other class of dives, and like various other classes have their regular followings. Out of this condition has come lately a peculiar product of this curious district. It is nothing less than a victim of the drug who has turned the necessities and appetites of his miserable fellows into a means of livelihood. He is a dope of dopes, who could not work if he would and perhaps would not if he could. He is not old, but the mortgages on time which he has given to spend life under the seductive beckoning of his only charmer are recorded on his face. Late in the afternoon and night after night he meanders in the district haunted by the men and women who are morphine's victims. He carries in his pocket a rusty syringe, and a supply of dope, and he goes among the nervous wrecks and sells them what they crave at a dime a jab. He knows where to find them, and they have come now to know where and when to look for him. They call him the dope doctor. Both women and men are his patrons, and they appear to have welcomed his advent. And the Tenderloin adds to the number of its products the successful practitioner in contraband.

When Women May Govern.

Many people have been confused by the various laws of succession which prevail in Europe. There are three different systems, the most general being that known as the Salic system, under which women are completely excluded. This is the rule in Belgium, Sweden and Norway, Italy, Denmark and Germany. Then there is the German-Dutch system, under which males of all degrees of relationship take precedence of females, the throne passing to the female line only in case of the extinction of all the male lines, however remote. This is the rule in Holland—from which it takes its name—Russia, and some of the minor German states. The third system is that prevailing in Great Britain, under which females are excluded when there are males in the same degree of relationship, but take precedence of males whose degree of riationship is not so close as their own. Thus an elder daughter of the ruling sovereign of Great Britain gives way to all her younger brothers and their issue, but takes precedence of a male cousin or a nephew. This system is the rule in Spain and Portugal as well as in England.

Men Who Talk to Themselves.

A western physician made his first visit to New York last week and at a semi-public dinner on Saturday evening he happened to be seated with men who had spent all of their lives in this city, says the New York Sun. One of them said to him: "Doctor, I have often wondered how New York would impress a thinking man on his first visit. What impresses you most in the streets?" "The thing which first attracted my attention," said the physician, "and which still holds it is the fact that most of the men whom one passes in the streets are talking to themselves. Why is it? Don't New Yorkers have friends to whom they may talk or are they so given to talking that they must talk to themselves when they are alone? Do they all talk in their sleep? Is it because men work harder here that they go along the streets, mumbling to themselves? I don't know the true explanation of it but I have been in many different cities and in none of them have I seen so many men talking to themselves as in New York."

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MRS. A. HARTLEY.

You ought to have known that when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to know that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, headache, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

Mrs. Hartley, of 221 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill., whose portrait we publish, suffered all these agonies, and was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her case should be a warning to others, and her cure carry conviction to the minds of every suffering woman of the unfailing efficiency of Lydia E. What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

Jay Gould's Timely Hint.

"I called upon Jay Gould once to ask him for a rule that would bring me success in my work," said Edward Boyer, principal of one of the finest grammar schools in New York City. "Every one who knew Jay Gould knew that he was a preoccupied man—that his thoughts were usually far away from the present scene. I was introduced to him by a friend, but I felt that he was scarcely conscious of my presence. We had planned to make some startling remark to attract his attention; and, as I did so, the great financier looked at me for a second as if he saw me for the first time. Then I put my important question.

"What is your business?" he asked, as quick as a flash.

"I am a schoolmaster," I replied.

"Then let the other people do the work."

The advice was to the point, and has proved invaluable.—Success.

NEARLY GONE.

Mrs. Julia A. Mallahan, of Owosso, Mich., Has a Very Narrow Escape—The Doctor Had Little Hope.

Owosso, Mich., March 25.—(Special)—Elite Rebekah Lodge, No. 2, I. O. O. F., of this town, came very nearly losing their esteemed and capable secretary, Mrs. Julia A. Mallahan. Mrs. Mallahan caught a severe cold last winter, and like many others, failed to recognize the dangerous possibilities until it had settled in her kidneys and left her with very severe bearing down pains and almost constant backache. It almost carried her off. Mrs. Mallahan tells the story this way:

"I caught a cold last winter, which I neglected until it settled in my kidneys, causing severe bearing down pains and almost constant bachache. My health had previously been so good that I paid little attention to these symptoms, until the disease had gone so far that my doctor entertained but a slight hope of my recovery.

"Fortunately, one of our Lodge Members mentioned Dodd's Kidney Pills. Her description of the cures they had effected sounded like a fairy tale, but I sent for a box, deciding to give them a trial. I soon found that she had but half told the story of what they would do. I bless the day that I first tried them, and have nothing but the highest praise for them."

Many very valuable lives have been saved by the timely use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and not a few of these have been in Owosso and other neighboring Michigan towns. There seems to be no case of kidney trouble or backache that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. They are 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodds Medicine Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

Among the papers of the late Grant Allen was found an article on "The British Aristocracy." It is probable that he did not care to place himself before the English reading public in the position of entire frankness which he had assumed while writing this article, and that consequently it was held until after his death for publication. It was secured through his son for The Cosmopolitan and appears in the April number. Certainly no Englishman has ever so handled the subject without gloves as Grant Allen, and no one was better equipped to do the subject justice.

The trial of the Thief River Falls moose hunters—Fred and Henry Cook and Geo. Wilcox—which took place at Bemidji last week on the charge of illegal killing of game resulted in a very mild verdict for the prisoners. Fred and Henry Cook plead guilty of having killed one deer each and the court imposed a fine of $25 and costs on each of the poachers. The case against Wilcox was dismissed on motion of the state's counsel. The fine and costs in the case amount to $150, and was paid by the defendants. Each of them was given a reprimand for their illegal act, and they all promised to respect the game in the future.

"Mystic Toilers."

A lodge of "Mystic Toilers" a fraternal, beneficial social society was instituted here last Wednesday by Mrs. Cora C. Hoffman, deputy supreme president. The new order starts out with thirty-three charter members and fifteen others will join at the next regular meeting. The officers are:

Gilbert A. Brooks, president.
Norman E. Beebe, secretary.
Robt. H. Almer, treasurer.
Mary A. Kyle, vice-president.

A certificate in this new order includes, death, accident, old age and funeral benefits; also provides a monument to mark the last resting place of every member. Another good point with the "Mystic Toilers" is that men and women are admitted on equal basis.

Revenue Tax Changes.

After July 1st the government will get $10,000,000 less money from the revenue tax. The tax has been cut on tobacco, cigars and beer and on some conveyances and other evidences of business transactions and has been removed entirely after July 1st on the following:

Bank checks, certificates of deposit, promissory notes, mortgages, leases, manifests, power of attorney, protests, money orders, express receipts, bills of lading, telephone messages, telegraph messages, warehouse receipts, charter party, insurance, certificates of damage and certificates not otherwise specified, chewing gum, proprietary medicines, perfumery and cosmetics, commercial broker's tax.

Children Should be Taught to be Thrifty.

A savings bank account is a great incentive to thrift in children. If one is begun for the baby, even with a very small sum, and added to through childhood and youth with a certain proportion of the money that otherwise would be spent carelessly and thoughtlessly by the child, there will be a very respectable amount on the credit side of the ledger when the depositor is eighteen years old. The habit of self-denial is not the least of the substantial benefits that follow a wise economy of money.

The Last Place.

There lives in this town one of the best hearted women on earth, whose sole fault is gossip. She will give the last cent to any one in trouble, but will always reserve the right to gossip about him. She will sit up all night with a sick person and find recompense enough for lost sleep in making the discovery that the bed the patient lies on has "bugs." She will go to a funeral and weep like a whipped child and find her reward in gossiping about the relatives of the deceased not taking heart enough to look well. Will her good heart save her for heaven or will her gossiping tongue land her in hell?—Armstrong Journal.

Senator Bacon started this week for the Philippines, where he intends to personally acquaint himself with conditions on the islands. The information he obtains will be utilized by the democrats at the next session of Congress. As he is a close observer and hard to fool, he will be apt to find out just how things are before he leaves the islands.

Secretary Root has found out that the politicians have no monopoly in the job of worrying him over army appointments. More than five hundred preachers are after the twenty-three new chaplaincies in the army, which carry the rank of captain and a salary of $2,000 a year and which can be made sinecures if those who hold the commissions are so disposed, and they and their preacher friends are making life a burden for Mr. Root. About every known sect and denomination is represented among those five hundred hungry applicants, and some of the denominations are fighting each other as viciously as rival factions of a political party ever did over the distribution of patronage.

An official of the State Department said of Senator Morgan, whom he has just met leaving the private office of Secretary Hay: "Senator Morgan is a wonderful man, and you can depend upon it that he will have ground broken for an American Isthmian canal before he leaves the Senate. I have heard some criticism of his constant talking for the Canal, and this reminds me of a Western Senator who blurted out in the cloak-room on the republican side of the chamber that 'Morgan is dinging on the Canal again.' He was immediately snapped up by one of the oldest men in the Senate, also a republican, who said: 'Don't you worry about Morgan dinging. We laughed at him when he dinged on Hawaii—and he got Hawaii. We laughed more when he dinged for years on Cuba—and we have just about got Cuba. We are laughing now because he is dinging on the canal, and you can depend upon it we'll have a canal. If there were more dingers and fewer ringers in the Senate we would accomplish more.'"

Defense Against Household Pests.

"Keep the house and surroundings clean, dry and well aired if you want to keep out pests," writes Maria Parloa in the April Ladies' Home Journal. "Do not keep kitchen garbage, wet cleaning cloths, dishcloths or towels in the house. Burn or otherwise dispose of the garbage; wash and dry all cleaning-cloths every day. Keep cereals in tin, stoneware or glass receptacles; wood harbors insects. Fill all the cracks in walls and floors. Wash floors, closets and drawers with carbolic water. If unwelcome visitors appear in any part of the house use a strong solution of carbolic water for injecting into cracks and grooves; five ounces of water to one of carbolic crystals.

Next time you get a ten dollar U. S. note, series of 1880, just turn it upside down and take a look at the eagle on the bottom of the bill. The imperial eagle of McKinley then becomes a jackass, perfect in outline. As the story goes the government was made the victim of a practical joker in the bureau of engraving and the staid, serious money of the country has become the vehicle of a puzzle picture. The culprit is said to be an Englishman who was discharged for having opinions counter to those of the republican party. Having been given the usual month's notice he decided upon a cold-blooded revenge upon the proud bird of freedom. The surprising thing is that the puzzle or joke was not discovered long ago, as it has been twenty years since its preparation. From an artistic point of view it is an excellent piece of work and the perfection of puzzle creation. By deft handling of the lights and shadows of the eagle the artist produced the jackass. The head and neck of the eagle, which has a peculiar twist, furnished the head of the jack. The light shading at the base of the wing becomes a perfect eye from the other view point. The thighs of the eagle form the ears of the jack. The note now goes by the name of the "jackass bill."

A Fainting Room.

The census office at Washington has set aside a room for the care of girls in their employ when they are attacked with a fainting spell from over work on the counting machines and the excessive heat. This room is in the charge of a trained nurse and has proved not only a convenience, but a necessity during the summer weather. In all the other departments in Washington, the work of employes is lightened during the heated season, but the census work must needs proceed regardless of the weather.

It seems heartless to work girls until they must have a special room for those who break down; furthermore it appears to be unnecessary. If they were nourished and strengthened with "Golden Grain Belt" beer, they wouldnt break down. Those who drink it find they can stand a great deal more, for it is a powerful nerve tonic made from the purest barley malt and hops. Try a case at home. You can be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

Sale of Ditching Jobs.

Notice is hereby given, that, on the twenty-second day of April A. D. 1901 at 10 o'clock a. m. at the auditors office in the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, I will sell the jobs of digging and constructing the entire work of Terrebonne Ditch No. 2 of said county of Red Lake Minnesota, located and established by the board of county commissioners of said county, by their order bearing date the 9th day of January A. D. 1901 in linear sections of one hundred feet each; each of said sections to be known and numbered by the stake or monument set by the viewers at the foot of each of said sections as shown on the viewers' report thereof, reference to which said report is herein made for greater certainty, commencing at the one including the outlet, and thence in succession up stream to the one including the source, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders; said work to be completed at the time and in the manner specified in the said viewers' report, reference to which has been and is now made, and no bid will be entertained which exceeds more than thirty (30) per cent, over and above the estimated cost of the construction of the part of said work covered by said bid; and the successful bidder will be required to give a satisfactory bond, with two freehold sureties, payable to the county, for not less than double the amount for which the same is sold, to be by me approved, conditioned that said successful bidder will faithfully perform and fulfill his contract, and pay all damages which may accrue by reason of the failure to complete the work within the time required in the contract therefor.

The said order, estimates, profile, etc. are on file and may be seen at any time during office hours, in my office.

Dated this 18th day of March A. D., 1901.

ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor Red Lake County,
State of Minnesota.

UNDER THE SNOW.

Ghastly Truths Revealed on the Disappearance of Winter's White Mantle.

Deadly dangers lurk in the ground left bare by the departing snow. All winter long there have been accumulating deadly disease germs.

These have been protected and kept alive by the covering of snow and now, with the first warm days, these death-bringing microbes are awakened by the rays of the sun, and as the ground dries they are carried to all corners of the community in the dust that is blown everywhere by the spring winds.

The human body at this time is particularly susceptible to these germs, especially the germs of fevers. The system has been depleted by the foregoing winter. The blood is sluggish and filled with impurities. The nerves have not recovered from the tension they have been under for the past months. The stomach, the bowels, the kidneys, the liver are all at their worst.

It is therefore, not strange that these germs of disease find fertile ground in which to thrive, flourish and develop into deadly ills.

Spring is the time of year when one should fear an attack of fever, especially when the system is depleted, one should dread any severe illness. The vitality is at a low ebb. There is less power of resistance to throw off disease, and it is on this account that fatalities are so much greater during the spring months than at any other time of the year.

There is but one way to ward off such dangers, and that is to fortify the human body so that it will become impregnable to the germs of invading disease.

To do this take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will build you up quickly, it will re-establish your waning appetite, it will give you restful nights of sleep, it will give vim and vigor to the nerves, and it will dispel all existing poisons that have accumulated in the body besides counteracting the effects of others that may accumulate.

Following is an instance that will illustrate the wonderful power of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy.

Sheriff Jonas T. Stevens, who is sheriff of Hyde Park, Vt., says:—"I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy especially as a blood purifier. I had a very severe humor on my arms, accompanied by a very bad itching, so severe that I could not sleep nights, causing me great inconvenience by the loss of sleep by the itching. A friend advised me to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which I did with the most satisfactory results, for the trouble has entirely disappeared, and I can now rest comfortably nights and have none of my former misery from the burning, itching sensations."

Remember Dr. Greene's advice will be given to any one desiring same absolutely free if they will write or call upon him at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

REARRANGE FAIR PROGRAM.

The Premium List Will Be $1,500 Larger Than Ever Before.

The state fair program was rearranged at a recent meeting of the board of managers of the state agricultural society at the Merchants hotel in St. Paul. "St. Paul" and "Minneapolis" days will be changed this year, the latter coming on Tuesday instead of Friday of fair week, and the former coming on Friday instead of Thursday. The new arrangement will enable both cities to devote their attention to the country visitors that are present in greater numbers during the middle of the week.

The premium list was discussed and agreed to, but is not yet ready for publication. The total of premiums has been increased $1,500 and is much larger than ever before. Twenty thousand dollars will be devoted to racing purses, as last year. The special $5,000 events will be retained for "St. Paul" and "Minneapolis" days.

Amusements at the fair, heretofore divided among several different departments, will be consolidated in a new department, of which Chester A. Smith of St. Paul will be chairman. All the former superintendents were re-elected except Messrs. Smith and Miles. The list of superintendents will be:

Horses—J. C. Curryer, Mankato.

Cattle—William M. Liggett, St. Anthony Park.

Poultry—Leslie Parlin, St. Paul.

Dairy Produce—B. D. White, St. Paul.

WAR ON THE "PIGS."

Many Prosecutions and Several Convictions at Willmar.

Much excitement has been caused at Willmar by the arrest of alleged blind-pig keepers. The following are in trouble: P. Norlander, O. Leyden, James Hackeston, John Anderson, Eric Borg, Frank Hultberg, O. E. Ferguson. Leyden, Hackeston and Hultberg have had a hearing and were found guilty. Leyden and Hackeston are now serving thirty-day sentences in jail; Hultberg appealed to the district court. The prospects are good for another "dry" year. A great deal of interest is taken in the question of license or no license and the temperance sentiment is gradually growing stronger.

NEARLY SIX MILLIONS.

Put by State into Its Property Holdings for State Institutions.

Secretary Jackson, of the state board of corrections and charities, has issued a supplement to his biennial report showing the value of the property used by the several charitable and correctional institutions of the state. In the aggregate the value of this property reaches the handsome sum of $5,924,682.30, of which $5,074,639.45 is in fixed property, lands, buildings and fixtures. The lands cost the state $214,301.14, while the buildings and fixtures are valued at $4,860,338.31. The movable property is held at $850,042.85. Based on the capacity of the several institutions there is $939 worth of property for each inmate, but several of the institutions are crowded far beyond the number they were intended to accommodate.

THOUSANDS OF FAIR WOMEN HERALD PRAISES FOR PERUNA.

Catarrhal Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration Make Invalids of More Women Than All Other Diseases Combined.

Miss Anna Prescott
Mrs. F. J. Lynch
Miss Marie Coats

Peruna is the woman's friend everywhere. It is safe to say that no woman ever used Peruna for any catarrhal derangement but what it became indispensable in her household.

Letters From Women.

Every day we receive letters from women like the following. Women who have tried doctors and failed; women who have tried Peruna and were cured.

Miss Katie Klein, 6125 Bartmer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Peruna has done me more good for catarrh than the best doctors could. I had catarrh so bad, but after taking Peruna it is entirely gone, and I feel like a different person."

Miss Anna Prescott's Letter.

Miss Anna Prescott, in a letter from 216 South Seventh street, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"I am sincerely grateful for the relief I have found from the use of Peruna. I was completely used up last fall, my appetite had failed and I felt weak and tired all the time. My druggist advised me to try Peruna and the relief I experienced after taking one bottle was truly wonderful.

"I continued its use for five weeks, and am glad to say that my complete restoration to health was a happy surprise to myself as well as to my friends."—Anna Prescott.

A constant drain of nervous vitality depleting the whole nervous system causes the mucous membrane surfaces to suffer accordingly. This is the condition called systemic catarrh. It very nearly resembles, and there is really no practical difference, between this condition and the condition known as neurasthenia, or nervous prostration.

Peruna will be found to effect an immediate and lasting cure in all cases of systemic catarrh. It acts quickly and beneficially on the diseased mucous membranes, and with healthy mucous membranes the catarrh can no longer exist.

Peruna a True Friend to Women.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch, writes the following from 324 S. Division street, Grand Rapids, Mich:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen—"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering woman, as it cures quickly. Last year I had a most persistent cough which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend to women."—Mrs. F. J. Lynch.

Peruna is equally efficacious in curing catarrh of the throat as in curing systemic catarrh or catarrh of the stomach. Catarrh is essentially the same wherever located. Peruna cures catarrh.

Peruna Makes You Feel Like a New Person.

Miss Mary Coats, a popular young woman of Appleton, Wis., and president of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, also speaks in glowing terms of Peruna. A letter recently received from her by The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, reads as follows:

"I am glad to call the attention of my friends to Peruna. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week.

"I have now used it for three seasons, and find it very valuable and efficaious."—Miss Marie Coats.

Diseased nerves are traceable directly to poor digestion, and poor digestion is directly traceable to catarrh. With the slightest catarrh of the stomach no one can have good digestion.

Very few of the many women who have catarrh of the stomach suspect what their real trouble is. They know they belch after meals, have sour stomach, a sensation of weight or heaviness, a fullness, irregular appetite, drowsiness, gnawing, empty sensations, occasional pain—they all know this; but they do not know that their trouble is catarrh of the stomach. If they did they would take Peruna.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes catarrh from the stomach the digestion becomes good, appetite regular, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—poor digestion. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause: Nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

CONSTIPATED OLD AGE

Means misery on the eve of life. Nine out of ten old people are constipated because the muscles of their intestines have become weak, worn out and flabby. Constipation is the curse of old age; causes bile and acid poisons to remain in the blood, making the skin yellow and wrinkled, the eyes bleary and causing the "bones to ache." Keep the bowels strong, healthy and regular and old age loses all its terrors and weaknesses. No reason why grandpa and grandma shouldn't have bright eyes, and clear, ruddy skin and feel lively and active, if they will only keep their bowels open and vigorous with CASCARETS CANDY CATHARTIC, the greatest bowel tonic ever heard of. Try them to-day—a 50c box—a whole month's treatment—and find that the tortures of constipated old age are

PREVENTED BY

NUMBER 37.

FUNSTON'S REWARD

BECOMES A BRIGADIER GENERAL IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

President McKinley Promptly Rewards the Kansas Soldier for His Daring Exploit in Capturing Aguinaldo—Gen. Wheaton Is Promoted to Be a Major General—Many Staff Appointments for Volunteer Officers—Gen. Funston Is Likely to Become Lieutenant General.

Washington, April 1.—The following important army appointments were announced at the White House Saturday:

To be major general United States army, Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, vice Miles, promoted to lieutenant general. To be brigadier generals in the regular army, Col. Jacob H. Smith, Seventeenth United States volunteers, vice Daggett, retired; Brig. Gen. Funston, United States volunteers, vice Wheaton, promoted.

The announcement of the appointments was made after a conference between the president, Secretary Root and Adjt. Gen. Corbin, and at the same time the long expected list of appointments of majors and captains in the paymaster's, quartermaster's and commissary departments and of the chaplains was made known. The list included two majors and twenty-five captains in the paymaster's department; twenty-one captains in the commissary department; thirty-seven captains in the quartermaster's department, and seventeen chaplains.

All of these appointees are in the regular army under the recent act of congress enlarging and reorganizing the army, and without exception the staff appointees are from volunteer officers. The chief interest, however, centered in the three high appointments of a major general and two brigadier generals, and more particularly in the selection of Gen. Funston after his gallant exploit in capturing Aguinaldo.

One interesting feature connected with the appointment of Gen. Funston to the regular army with the rank of brigadier general is that he is likely to become the lieutenant general commanding the army. The recent appointment of officers to be brigadier generals showed that Gen. Leonard Wood would succeed to the position of senior major general of the army in about ten years and thus become eligible for appointment as lieutenant general commanding the army.

Should he be appointed the head of the army he would continue in that position over ten years, during which time Gen. J. Franklin Bell and Gen. Jacob Smith, the officers next preceding Gen. Funston, would retire. Their retirement would make him the senior major general commanding the army upon Gen. Wood's retirement. His selection then to be the lieutenant general of the army would be probable.

BRUTAL WORK OF BURGLARS.

Aged Woman Is in a Critical Condition.

Pittsburg, April 1.—Mrs. Ann Ward, aged sixty years, is lying in a critical condition from the effects of brutal treatment by three masked burglars at her home early yesterday. Mrs. Ward and her daughter were awakened by the presence of the burglars at their bedside, each woman finding a revolver pointed directly at her head. Mrs. Ward undertook to resist the burglars, and while the daughter was held in subjection by one of the men another beat the mother into unconsciousness with a short club, literally crushing her skull. The husband and son of Mrs. Ward were sleeping on the third floor, having in their possession about $1,200, the booty the burglars evidently were after. Being awakened by the noise, Ward and his son hastened to the floor below, but the burglars had made good their escape, leaving no clue as to their identity.

DUE TO FEAR.

Coal-Black Negro in South Carolina Turns Brown.

Charleston, S. C., April 1.—The terror of being confined in jail with the added fear of a term in a federal penitentiary has caused a remarkable change in the color of Solomon P. Brown, a negro who was arrested for alleged pension frauds. Brown was a coal-black negro when he was sent to jail. When he was released on bond the experience was such that his color had changed to a dark brown and he is almost able to enter the mulatto class. The change of color is attributed to fear. Brown has since turned state's evidence, and the court this week will probably suspend sentence, in which event it is believed the negro will regain his former shade. The case is puzzling to the authorities.

A GHASTLY SUICIDE.

Woman Saturates Her Clothes With Oil and Then Applies a Match.

Canostota, N. Y., April 1.—Saturday night William Welch and his wife Mary quarrelled. Yesterday noon the woman, brooding over her trouble, saturated her clothes with coal oil, and, going out of the house to avoid setting fire to it, applied a match to her dress. People coming from church discovered her burned almost beyond recognition, but still conscious. They carried her to the house, but physicians could do nothing. Neighbors then gathered at the bedside and sung hymns until Mrs. Welch died. Although the flesh was burned from her face she feebly joined in the singing until she lost consciousness.

Destroyed by Fire.

Iona, Mich., April 1.—Fire destroyed the warehouse and elevator of Page & Co., entailing a loss of $55,000, half of which falls upon the Grand Trunk railway, which owned the elevator building. Grain and wool were destroyed.

New Hotel Burned.

New York, April 1.—The new Hendrick Hudson hotel at Park View, near Yonkers, was burned early yesterday. The building was to have been ready for occupancy May 1, and part of the furnishings had been put in.

PLACE FOR NORTHROP.

University President on International Congress of American States.

Washington, April 1.—The president has appointed a commission to attend the international congress of American states to be held in the City of Mexico some time this year. The bureau of American republics arranged for such a congress some months ago, with a view to drawing closer together the republics of North and South America, and congress made an appropriation in the sundry civil bill to provide for the necessary expenses of delegates representing this government. The president has appointed as delegates Prof. Cyrus Northrop, president of Minnesota university; Henry G. Davis of West Virginia, William I. Buchanan of Iowa, Charles M. Pepper of the District of Columbia and Volney W. Foster of Illinois.

The president has also completed the St. Louis fair commission. As the commission stands it is composed of Ex-Senators Thomas H. Carter of Montana, John M. Thurston of Nebraska, William Lindsay of Kentucky and George W. McBride of Oregon; ex-Representatives John Allen of Mississippi and M. H. Glynn of New York, John F. Miller of Indiana, F. A. Bates of Connecticut and E. D. Scott of Arkansas.

NATIONISM IN IOWA.

Three Joints in Centerville Are Smashed.

Centerville, Iowa, April 1. — Eight Centerville women, headed by a man, raided three joints, smashing two of them and breaking the plate glass windows and fixtures. The proprietor of the third joint destroyed his own liquors. The women warned the dealers to cease selling liquors, claiming saloons here have not complied with the mulct law.

From Poverty to Affluence.

Rapid City, S. D., April 1.—There is one happy man in this city at least. James A. Carew has been a miner and prospector for a number of years in the Hornblende mining district. Of late years he has been a sufferer from a bad case of rheumatism. He was laid up in his little cabin for days at a time, with nobody around to help him. He had a fine property that showed values in gold, but as long as he could not sell he was worse than a pauper. His case became so bad that he was brought to the poorhouse in this city, where he had been some time. His mine was sold a few days since, and he is now a rich man. He has left the poor farm and is now living in ease and comfort. He is well known all over the Black Hills.

Stepmother Wife Deserted.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 1.—The authorities here are endeavoring to locate Gus Becker, who married his stepmother at Sioux Falls, S. D., several weeks ago. She came here to meet him and it is reported that he passed through the city en route to Cleveland, Ohio, whence he came to wed her. She possessed some money and after he had married her he told her he wanted to go into the mattressmaking business. She let him have money to come to Sioux City to buy materials and she was to meet him here the following day and go back with him to Sioux Falls.

Sued for Damages.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 1.—William A. Snyder of this city has instituted a suit for $3,300 damages against Wesley J. Snell, a local furniture dealer, on the charge of alienating the affections of his wife. The case will be tried at the next term of the circuit court. Snell has been in business here several years. The plaintiff and his wife have three children. Snell claims the suit was commenced for blackmailing purposes.

Medals Awarded Stock Judges.

Fargo, N. D., April 1.—In the stock-judging contest at the agricultural college W. H. Workman of Grandin won the gold medal offered by the board of trustees for first prize and Bruce Clyde of Hamilton won second and the gold medal offered by Prof. Shepperd, ranking only one point below Mr. Workman in a scale of 600. The contest was close for a large class, as the first six men were within ten points of 600.

Early Settlers Going Fast.

Black River Falls, Wis., April 1.—The interment of Miles German at Irving cemetery takes away one of the very early settlers of this county who had reached his eighty-fifth year. The fatality list among very old people is the largest for the past six months of any six months since the organization of the county.

Iowa Town Suffers From Smallpox.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 1.—Lake City, Iowa, is suffering from the smallpox scourge in its most violent form. One death occurred and there are several more serious cases. All schools are closed and all gatherings at churches and lodges are forbidden. There are twenty-nine cases in town and conditions are very serious.

Boys Missing.

Litchfield, Minn., April 1. — Eugene McNeal and Frank Flynn, aged about thirteen years, are missing since Friday, and it is supposed they have hidden themselves in an emigrant car that was loaded and shipped from here for Kalispel, Mont. Friends say it is a case of reading trashy literature.

Stolen Money Found.

Manila, Iowa, April 1.—The first trace of the stolen express booty taken at this point has been found in a barn on a farm about one a half miles south from town. The sack contained $19 in silver. It was known to have had $450 in it. It was identified as one of the sacks stolen.

New Company South Dakota Guards.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 1.—Capt. W. W. Hubbard has received authority from the adjutant general to organize a company of the South Dakota state guards. Several members have already been enrolled and the full quota of fifty-five will soon be reached.

To Vote on Incorporation.

New Ulm, Minn., April 1.—The county commissioners have granted the petition of the village of Hanska to vote on incorporation, and have named April 29 as the date of election.

FRAUDS AT MANILA

OFFICERS OF THE COMMISSARY DEPARTMENT ARRESTED.

Sensational Developments Which Overshadows Interest in the Capture and Fate of Aguinaldo—How Widely the Frauds Have Extended Is Not Known, but It Is Believed They Are Far-Reaching—New Scandals Are Developed Daily—Investigation Being Made.

Manila, April 1.—Interest in the capture and fate of Aguinaldo is well nigh overshadowed in Manila by sensational developments, present and prospective, of frauds in the commissary department. How widely these extend has not yet been ascertained, but enough is already known to justify the belief that they are far reaching. Capt. Fred J. Barrows, of the Thirtieth volunteer infantry, quartermaster of the department of Southern Luzon, together with seven commissary sergeants, several civilian clerks, a prominent government contractor, the assistant manager of the Hotel Orient, the proprietors of three of the largest bakeries in Manila, a number of storekeepers and other persons have been arrested. The investigation has scarcely begun, but thousands of sacks of flour, a quantity of bacon and wagon loads of other goods, all bearing government marks, have been found in the possession of unauthorized persons.

It is alleged that the contractor in question, who has been doing a business approximating $100,000 per month, has spent huge sums in entertaining officers. A prominent commissary officer is accused of leading a scandalously immoral life. It is asserted that large quantities of stores have been lost or stolen in transit and also that there is a shortage in the commissary depot.

New scandals are developed daily. Illicit transactions have been traced back to June, 1900, and it is possible that there are others of earlier date. The exorbitant tariff on provisions makes the surreptitious sale of supplies immensely profitable. It is understood that other United States officers may be arrested. Lieut. Philip K. Sweet, of the Forty-sixth volunteer infantry, is prosecuting the investigation under the direction of Col. Wilder, chief of police.

-o-

Capt. Barrows, mentioned in the above dispatch, is from Minneapolis, where he is well known and prominently connected. His father was state oil inspector under Gov. Clough. Capt. Barrows was appointed a lieutenant in the Fifteenth Minnesota when that regiment was organized. He was promoted a captain on the death of Col. Shandrew. When the Fifteenth was mustered out he was given a commission as captain in the Thirtieth United States volunteers.

Aguinaldo Is Pleased.

Aguinaldo continues to express himself as pleased with and impressed by the courteous treatment accorded him by Gen. MacArthur. "I am a prisoner," said he, "but I am treated like a guest."

GIVES HIS LIFE FOR HIS MEN.

Commander of the Gunboat Petrel Dies Like a Hero.

Cavite, April 1.—At 7 o'clock yesterday morning a fire was discovered in the sail room of the United States gunboat Petrel, Lieut. Commander Jesse Mims Roper, commanding. The heat was intense, the smoke suffocating, and the flames difficult to extinguish. Lieut. Commander Roper was the first to descend into the hold, but he was forced to return to the deck. Others then went down. Seaman Patrick Toner was prostrated and was about to perish when Lieut. Commander Roper endeavored to rescue him and was suffocated in the attempt. Lieut. Josiah Stutts McKean and Cadet Lewis suffered severely in bringing the body of Lieut. Commander Roper to the deck. Twenty-two of the crew were prostrated, Toner, Evans, Flaherty, Larsen, Kesler, Kahey, Burton, Smith, Sullivan and Forsbern seriously, but all will recover. The contents of the sail room were destroyed but the damage to the gunboat was slight. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained. Possibly it was a case of spontaneous combustion. The death of Lieut. Commander Roper is greatly deplored. His body will be sent to the United States April 5 by the Buffalo.

BLOWN OVER A PRECIPICE.

Woman Falls Three Hundred Feet and Is Killed.

Cold Springs, N. Y., April 1. — Mrs. Daniel Patterson, accompanied by her husband and a party of friends yesterday visited "Table Rock," a plateau 800 feet above tidewater on Bull Hill mountain at this place. When they arrived there the wind was blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour. Mrs. Patterson was lifted from her feet and carried over the precipice and fell a distance of 300 feet before she struck among the rocks. When her husband reached her she was unconscious and just breathing her last. She died within a few moments.

MINE DISASTER.

Many Men Thought to Have Been Killed in New Mexico.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 1.—An explosion occurred Friday night in the Weaver mine at Gallup, operated by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Three are known to have been killed outright, and many others who were cut off in the mine are believed to have died from suffocation.

Terrible Blizzard in Texas.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 1.—One of the worst blizzards of the season is prevailing in Northwest Texas. Four inches of snow on the level is reported at Quanah. The thermometer registered 25 above at the Texas line.

Two Detectives Fatally Shot.

Mobile, Ala., April 1. — Detective Ed Morris and Policeman John Bressingham attempted to arrest two negroes suspected of murder. One negro resisted and probably fatally shot both officers. He in turn was killed.

NEARLY A RIOT.

Rough House in Denver Caused by an Unpopular Fight Decision.

Denver, March 31.—At the end of a ten-round go before the Colorado Athletic club last night between Dave Barry of Toronto and Kid McPartland of New York Referee Floto, who is also manager of the club, awarded the fight to McPartland. Floto immediately left the ring amid the jeers of the entire audience and followed by Pat Early, manager for Barry. When they reached the office of the club Early struck Floto several times in the face, and was proceeding to pound him when bystanders separated them. The police cleared the house and prevented what threatened for a time to be a riot. The fight was even up to the fifth round, when Barry began pounding McPartland's heart with his right. He blocked nearly all of the Kid's leads, and landed his right in return invariably. An old wound over the right eye was opened in the eighth, and bled profusely till the finish. McPartland was weak in the ninth from Dave's persistent punching over the heart, and Barry seemed to be the stronger at the end.

COUNTERFEITERS CAPTURED.

Raid by Secret Service Officials Results in Two Captures.

Chicago, March 31.—The recollection of a type of counterfeit coins which bothered him fifteen years ago served Chief of Secret Service Porter well yesterday. It also proved the undoing of Henry Racke and Charles Brickwell, who are now locked up, charged with having made and passed coins of the same pattern. The counterfeit money consists of half-dollars, quarters and dimes which are so carefully made that Capt. Porter pronounces them the most dangerous that have appeared in many years. In a raid on the rooms of the men a box full of these coins and a complete counterfeiters' outfit were discovered. The prisoners admitted their guilt after being arrested, and, after waiving examination, were held to the federal grand jury in $1,000 bonds each.

BY ASSASSINATION.

Russian Students Decree the Death of Two Officials.

Berlin, March 31.—Death by assassination is the decree which the Russian students' secret organization has pronounced upon the czar's ministers of war and the interior, and the sentence has been transmitted to the condemned men. Advices from St. Petersburg say that similar sentences were communicated to M. Bogolepoff and M. Pobledonostzeff just before the murder of the former and the attempt on the life of the latter. The minister of the interior has forbidden the newspapers of Russia to mention the court proceedings arising out of the student outbreak. Grand Duke Vladimir, the czar's uncle, is organizing a mediation commission to inquire into the students' complaints and try to induce them to discontinue further revolt.

FILIPINO CIVIL SERVICE.

Educated Natives to Be Employed in the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Washington, March 31. — The civil service commission has decided to request the Philippine civil service board at Manila to hold regular classified service examinations to secure well educated Filipinos between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five for service as aides in the coast and geodetic survey, which plans to press its work in that archipelago, beginning about June 1. One of its officials is already at Manila. The prospective Filipino appointees will receive $720 a year salary to begin with, and must have qualifications that include the higher mathematics, astronomy, physics, surveying, geography and two modern languages.

INSULT IN THE SOUTH.

Tennessee Lawyer Shot and Killed by Angry Husband.

Nashville, Ten., March 31.—Richard Darnell, one of Tennessee's most prominent lawyers, whose home is in Tiptonsville, was shot and killed by a man named Beazley. The shooting, which was the outgrowth of an insult offered by Beazley to Mrs. Darnell over the telephone, has caused the greatest excitement in Tiptonsville and a lynching is expected. The men met in a drug store. Beazley, without a word of warning, opened fire and shot Darnell through the stomach and back. The lawyer died within half an hour.

FLOOD IN TEXAS.

Six to Twelve Feet of Water in the Basements of Dallas.

Dallas, Tex., March 31. — A terrific rain and considerable hail fell over Northern Texas. The damage at Dallas will probably reach $100,000. There is six to twelve feet of water in basements. Many small bridges were destroyed. One wholesale whisky house has $200,000 worth of whisky under water, and it is estimated the actual loss at not less than $25,000.

Guests Lose Their Clothes.

Newport News, Va., March 31.—Fire damaged the Augusta hotel, Hampton, to the extent of $2,000 yesterday, the loss being confined chiefly to the furniture and fixtures. The house was well filled with guests, all of whom escaped without injury, but several lost all their belongings. The blaze started in the dry goods store of Mrs. C. W. Betts, on the ground floor of the building. The loss is covered by insurance.

Serious Result of a Duel.

Budapest, March 31.—In a duel resulting from a debate in parliament between Deputies Gyoerffy and Rakovszky, the former was wounded in the thumb.

Ball Pierced the Brain.

Burlington, Iowa, March 31. — Jake Decker, night flagman in the employ of the Burlington road, was instantly killed by Morris Dowling while passing his revolver to him for examination. The ball passed through the brain.

Attempted Criminal Assault.

Washington, Iowa, March 31. — Thomas Wilson, an aged farmer living near here, was indicted by the grand jury for attempted criminal assault on a twelve-year-old girl who had been assisting with his housework.

BOERS DRIVEN OFF

ATTEMPT TO LOOT A TRAIN RESULTS DISASTROUSLY.

Two Hundred Men Wreck a Train by Means of a Mine, but Lose Six Men When They Advance to Secure Loot — British Bring in Fifteen Hundred Horses Captured From the Boers—Gen. French Inflicts Serious Losses on Boers and Takes Fifty Prisoners.

London, April 1.—A dispatch to the war office from Gen. Kitchener, dated Pretoria, March 30, says that a train was derailed by a mine near Pan. Two hundred Boers who were advancing to loot the train were driven off with a loss of six killed. The British sustained no losses. A train of empty cars was wrecked last night at Olifantsfontein. Nobody was hurt. Fifteen hundred horses and other stock from the Orange River colony have been brought in recently. The troops making the capture killed seven Boers, wounded nine and captured seventy. Gen. French reports from Vryheid that between March 16 and March 27 his command has killed or wounded 17 Boers and taken 51 prisoners; 93 burghers surrendered. The British also captured 100 rifles, 5,950 rounds of ammunition, 475 horses and much other stock.

ROYAL SEPARATION.

Church Row May Cause Portugal's King and Queen to Part.

London, April 1.—When the King of Portugal came to London in connection with the queen's funeral he received a deputation of Protestants, to whom he made a speech, promising a continuance of the enlightened policy of religious toleration in his dominions. The speech was manly and courageous and widely reported. It was commented upon in Portugal, and while it elicited the enthusiastic approval of the Liberals, it served to accentuate the feud between the king and the religious orders, which was originally caused by the alleged interference of the Jesuits in the secular affairs of the government of that country. The first unhappy result of the friction was trouble in the royal household itself, the queen taking sides with the church. According to advices just received from Lisbon this breach has widened, and there is said to be a probability of a separation of the royal couple.

WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

British Troops Clearing the Eastern Transvaal Country.

London, April 1.—A special dispatch from Standerton says the imperial Light Horse have captured Commandant Prinzloo and a convoy of twenty-eight wagons. Commandant Englebrecht, the dispatch says, has surrendered. The British are sweeping the eastern Transvaal clear of everything useful to the Boers. All standing crops have been destroyed, but the women and children are being cared for. Five hundred of them have been conveyed to Utrecht, where their wants are well attended to.

Pretoria, April 1. — The Boers derailed and plundered a freight train near Johannesburg last night.

REVOLUTION IS DYING OUT.

The Crisis in Russia Is Apparently Ended.

Vienna, April 1.—The Lemberg Journal, in a description of the riots in St. Petersburg on Sunday last, says that 800 workmen marched along the Nevski Prospekt toward the winter palace, singing revolutionary songs. The Cossacks attacked them, and, aided by the infantry, dispersed them after a struggle, in which several on both sides were killed. Proclamations have been displayed calling the people to arms, but there has been no response.

St. Petersburg, April 1.—Peter Karpovitch, the student who recently shot and killed M. Bogolyepoff, minister of public instruction, has been sentenced to twenty years at hard labor.

FIREMEN HURT AT KANSAS CITY.

Packing Company's Main Building Burns—Chief Hale and Four Men Injured.

Kansas City, April 1—A fire in which $200,000 worth of property was destroyed and five firemen, including Chief Hale, were injured, occurred at the Jacob Dodd Packing company's plant in Eighth street, near the Kansas line. The cause of the fire is not known. It was first discovered in the box factory, which is directly under the butterine department, after it had gained considerable headway. The night watchman had just gone on duty and the other employes had gone home. All of the available firemen in the city were on the scene, but it was evident it would be impossible to save the main building. The fire burned fiercely for three hours. The firemen prevented it from spreading to the other buildings, but the main building was a total wreck.

STRIKE IN INDIANA.

Coal Miners in Brazil District to Quit Work.

Brazil, Ind., April 1.—The conference of block coal operators and miners, which has been in session here two days endeavoring to reach an agreement, has adjourned sine die and work has been ordered suspended in all the mines of the county, making thousands of workmen idle. Both sides declare they will not yield. The miners will call upon President Mitchell to aid in settling the trouble.

Indian Killed by Train.

Hastings, Minn., April 1. — William Goodthunder, a young Indian from Prairie Island, aged about twenty-four years, was instantly killed about half a mile below East Hastings by being struck by a train.

The board regulating the Scottish manufactured iron trade wages has decided that there was a decline in the selling price in January and February which equals 10 per cent reduction in wages. The reduction begins immediately.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 25.—The thirty-second session of the Minnesota legislature will adjourn April 12. The substitute resolution fixing the date of adjournment adopted in both houses Saturday afternoon, carries with it a recommendation for an extra session, to be called by the governor in February, 1902, for the consideration of the tax commission's report. The thirty-second session abbreviated by thirteen days of the statute limitation of ninety days will be the first shortened session in the history of the state.

Representative Laybourn, St. Louis, introduced in the house a bill providing for the distribution of 90 per cent of the total amount of railroad gross earnings tax received by the state to counties, cities and villages and organized towns, in lieu of the present system under which the state retains the whole amount.

The uniform text book bill, recently introduced in the senate by Senator Reeves, was introduced in the house by Representative Berg, Rosseau. The bill provides for the appointment by the governor of a text book commission, whose duty it shall be to decide upon a uniform series of text books covering the common branches to be used in the public schools and to enter into contracts for the purchase of the books decided upon.

In the Senate.

The legislature is asked to appropriate $35,000 for the revision and codification of the state laws in a bill introduced by Senator Lord. It results from the public hearing several weeks ago, at which leading members of the bar urged that there is a necessity for such action.

A good roads bill, introduced by Senator Johnson, declares that all Minnesota roadways are regarded as being two rods wide, and makes extensive provisions for their care and maintenance.

State Treasurer Block's bill providing for a board of deposit to determine where state funds shall be placed was recommended to pass by the senate.

Senator Wilson secured the passage of a bill authorizing the tax commission to secure and examine witnesses and to have books and papers affecting its work produced in evidence.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 26.—The Dunn direct primary election bill, passed by the house, was reported to the senate yesterday from the committee on elections without amendment and with the recommendation that it pass.

Senator Du Toit introduced a bill providing that at the next senatorial election senators from uneven numbered districts shall be elected for but two years, the term of all senators thereafter to be as at present—four years. This bill is designed to permit half the senate members to hold over at each election.

The Torrey house bill providing for the sale of the state capitol lands in Kandiyohi county was recommended for passage.

After killing a similar bill from Senator Wilson the upper house has recommended that J. A. Peterson's constitutional revision bill be passed.

In the House.

A resolution empowering the bribery investigating committee to summon witnesses, administer oaths and later submit the testimony taken, to the house, was adopted without opposition.

Representative Hurd introduced a bill providing for the distribution of the portraits of the Minnesota state officials and legislators among themselves and various libraries at a cost to the state of $5,000.

The house practically cleared up the calendar yesterday. The most important measures passed were those permitting voters to vote for all presidential electors by making one cross, and amending the game and fish laws. The latter makes the closed season for woodcock or upland plover from Nov. 1 to Sept. 1; for trout, Sept. 1 to April 15, and for black, gray or Oswego bass, March 1 to June 1.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 27.—The Halvorsen anti-cigarette bill met its death in the senate yesterday. After concurring in the house amendments the senate killed the bill and emphasized its action by defeating a motion to reconsider by a tie vote.

The first measure of the session relating to the taxation of the street railway corporations was introduced yesterday by Senator Hospes of Stillwater. The bill purports to compass the entire situation by proposing the submission of a constitutional amendment applying a gross earnings system of taxation to such interests.

The senate passed the house bill providing for the building of bicycle paths throughout the state.

In the House.

Mr. Sageng introduced a bill providing for the public ownership of telephone systems. The bill authorizes supervisors of townships, having received the sanction of a majority vote of the qualified electors of the township, to levy a tax for the construction of a township telephone system.

The Hemstead baby farm bill was yesterday passed by the house. The same bill, introduced by Mr. Chilton, has passed the upper house and substitution will be effected in one of the houses to allow the bill to become a law.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 28.—After a repetition of the scenes of last week, minus the sensational thrills furnished by the Washburn-Jacobson charges of bribery, the railroad gross earnings bill was yesterday taken up from the table on motion of Mr. Jacobson by a vote of 57 to 56. Before adjournment consideration of the bill was made a special order for 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning.

After visiting the exposition city the Pan-American commissioners issued the ultimatum that unless the state stands ready to appropriate another $30,000 it will be better to withdraw the previous appropriation of $20,000 and have no exhibit at all. Commissioners Hall and Morton appeared before the senate and house and presented a report, prepared at the request of Gov. Van Sant.

A bill aimed at restriction of the operations of fake mining stock dealers was yesterday introduced by Mr. Roberts of Hennepin.

In the Senate.

After an all-day fight in the senate yesterday the Schaller bill extending and increasing the Anoka and Hastings asylums was defeated by a vote of 32 to 22, and then reconsidered and laid on the table. The six years' fight that closed with the construction of the two institutions was reopened and gone over again in a heated and long drawn out wrangle.

The Nichols bill, imposing a 5 per cent gross earnings tax on express companies, passed the senate yesterday and will become a law as soon as signed by the governor.

The salary of the insurance commissioner is increased from $2,500 to $3,000 a year, the salary of the deputy commissioner from $1,800 to $2,000 a year, and three new employes allowed the department by a bill introduced by Senator McGill.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 29. — The primary election bill came up as a special order before the senate yesterday morning and no sooner was the first section read than amendments were offered in wholesale quantities. Senator Grindeland wanted the time of the election in rural districts set for June. Senator Wilson wanted June made the date in cities as well. Senator Young made a lengthy speech demanding that congressional and judicial officers be exempt from the provisions of the law. Senator Johnson finally moved that the senate consider the various classifications of offices to be included in the bill in turn and then refer the section in question to a committee of three for redrafting. This motion prevailed and voting accordingly commenced. By a vote of 31 to 24 the senate decided to include state officials; by a vote of 49 to 7 to include congressional candidates and by a vote of 45 to 8 to include judicial officers. The bill was then made a special order for this morning.

The senate committee on finance submitted the biennial general appropriation bill yesterday, covering the expenses of the various state departments until another legislative session. The aggregate amount is $252,320, in addition to the regular standing appropriations.

The opposition in the senate to the Deming bill that will liberate the Younger brothers from the state prison, exhausted itself in the debates when the measure was on general orders. It came up yesterday on the calendar and was passed by a vote of 40 to 17.

The senate bill creating a state highway commission and carrying the provisions of the constitutional amendment into effect was defeated yesterday on the calendar.

In the House.

With the signature of the governor the board of control bill will become a law. The changes made by the senate were agreed to by the house yesterday after a disultory debate that developed no serious opposition, by a vote of 96 to 12.

The Nichols bill taxing the gross earnings of express companies came up for concurrence in senate amendments. The bill was passed after considerable debate at the 6 per cent rate fixed by the senate.

The house failed to pass the bill increasing the salary of the chief game warden yesterday. It was lost on a tie vote of 55 to 55. Sixty votes were necessary.

The J. D. Jones bill, reserving all minerals on state lands to the state, has passed both houses and will become a law as soon as the governor signs it.

NEW GOEBEL TRIALS.

Caleb Powers and James Howard Will Be Tried Again.

Frankfort, Ky., March 30.—The court of appeals granted new trials to Caleb Powers and James Howard, sentenced to life imprisonment and death, respectively, in connection with the shooting, in February, 1900, of Gov. William Goebel. In the Howard case the entire court concurred, but in the Powers decision Judges Hobson, Painter and White dissented. The decision in the Powers case holds the Taylor pardon not valid, that the indictment is good, but orders a new trial on the ground of erroneous instructions to the jury and admission of incompetent testimony. The Howard case is reversed because of erroneous instructions, incompetent evidence admitted in the trial and other minor points.

TWO SENATORS IN NEBRASKA.

Millard of Omaha and Governor Dietrich.

Lincoln, Neb., March 30. — After a deadlock of two and a half months the Republicans of the Nebraska legislature nominated J. H. Millard of Omaha and Gov. Charles H. Dietrich of Hastings for the long and short terms, respectively, in the United States senate. A joint session of the legislature at noon ratified the caucus nominations. Each received seventy votes, the full Republican strength. Mr. Millard will succeed Senator Thurston and Gov. Dietrich is the successor to the late Senator Hayward. If there had been no choice yesterday Nebraska would not have been represented in the United States senate.

FIGHTING IN MANCHURIA.

Russians and Chinese at It Again—Chinese Lose Heavily.

London, March 30.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail says that there is renewed unrest in the south of Manchuria. There has been fighting on a considerable scale at Kobansy and Sininitin. A Russian colonel was killed. The Chinese losses were severe.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee is confined to his room in Omaha with a severe attack of grip.

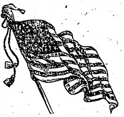
WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3, 1901.



THE DRUMHEAD BUSINESS.

A Huge Long Island Industry Which Prospers by War.

Few people know that more than half the banjo and drum heads sold in the United States are made on Long Island. Near the railroad station at Cold Spring is a little red building surrounded by frames, in which skins are stretched for drying, while near by is an artificial pond, with wooden sides and bottom, filled with a chemical mixture. It is an unpretentious establishment, but in our two wars and in the peace between it has fathered a great deal of noise. The business was established in 1860, and success was almost immediate. Competition was strong after the rush of war orders was over, but the business has advanced in importance until now there are but three factories in this country whose opposition can be felt. Two of these are in Brooklyn and the other at High View, N. Y.

New York markets furnish the salted raw skins from which the drumheads are made. The hair is removed from the skins by a chemical bath in the artificial pond, and the skins are then stretched on the racks and dried. A thorough scraping removes any particles of fat or flesh that may have adhered to the dried skin, which is then the thickness of parchment. The skins are thoroughly bleached in the drying process and are then ready for cutting into heads. During the Spanish-American war the factory was fairly swamped with orders for drumheads, 500 dozen heads often being ordered at one time. The principal demand was for the "tenor" drum, on which a loud accompaniment to the fife or bass instrument can be produced.

Kangaroo skins make the costliest drumheads. When dressed, they are showy, but beyond their appearance and name they are of no greater value than heads made from calfskin. Sheepskin is used for cheap toy drums.—New York Post.

QUAINT COLONIAL NAMES.

How the Offspring of Our First Colonists Were Christened.

It is an interesting study to trace the underlying reason for many of the curious names which are given to the offspring of the first colonists. Parents searched for names of deep significance—for names appropriate to conditions, for those of profound influence presumably on the child's life.

The Rev. Richard Buck, one of the early parsons in Virginia, in days of deep depression, named his first child Mara. This text indicates the reason for his choice: "Call me Mara, for the Almighty has dealt very bitterly with me. I went out full, and the Lord has brought me home empty." His second child was christened Gershom—for Moses' wife "bare him a son and called his name Gershom, for he said I have been in a strange land."

Many names have a pathos and sadness which can be felt down through the centuries. Dame Dinely, widow of a doctor, or barber surgeon, who had died in the snow while striving to visit a distant patient, named her poor babe Fathergone.

The children of Roger Clapp were named Experience, Waitstill, Preserved, Hopestill, Wait, Thanks, Decide, Unite and Supply. Madam Austin, an early settler of old Narragansett, had 15 children. Their names were Parvis, Picus, Piersus, Prisemus, Polybius, Lois, Lettice, Avis, Anstice, Eunice, Mary, John, Elizabeth, Ruth, Freelove. All lived to be threescore and ten, one to be 102 years old. Edward Bendall's children were named, Truegrace, Reform, Hoped For, More Mercy and Restore. Richard Gridley's offspring were Return, Believe and Tremble.—"Child Life in Colonial Days."

A Sympathetic Memory.

In a western Massachusetts town lives a young woman who is blessed with both discrimination and tact.

The first of these admirable qualities she has displayed by her two marriages. Her first husband was a minister, a most delightful man. He died, and after a lapse of five or six years she was united to his only brother, who was a successful lawyer in New York.

On her library desk stands a picture of the first partner of her joys and sorrows, and one day a curious caller asked whom the photograph represented.

"That," said the hostess, with evident emotion, "is a picture of my husband's brother, who died eight years ago and who was very dear to us both."—Youth's Companion.

Generous.

"What's your fare?" asked old Flintskin of his cabby the other day and was met with the stereotyped reply:

"Well, sir, I will leave that to you."

"Thank you; you're very kind," said old F., buttoning up his pockets and walking off. "You're the first person who ever left me anything yet."—London Fun.

KEPT TALLY ON FIBS.

THE ASTONISHING RESULT OF ONLY ONE DAY OF COUNTING.

An Investigator's Discovery of What an Enormous Bouquet of the Flowers of Fable Adorns the Daily Speech of the Average Mortal.

"Do you know that the average American is a hopeless and incorrigible and unmitigated liar?" said an amateur cynic of Baronne street. "I don't mean he lies viciously, but suave mendacity glides off the end of his tongue as easily as molasses flows from a spigot on a warm day in summer. He does it unconsciously, habitually, automatically—just as his lungs expand and his heart palpitates and his hair grows, without any special attention from the rest of his system. He does it because he can't help it. The thing has become a second nature.

"I had all this brought home to me," continued the amateur cynic, "by a very simple little experiment which I tried on myself and a few others no longer ago than yesterday morning. Did you ever see a pocket counting machine? Well, it's a little device shaped like a watch. Whenever you press the stem the needle on the dial jumps a point, and it registers in that way up to several thousand on the principle of a cyclometer. They are used by anybody making long counts and are very handy, because they never forget where they leave off.

"But, to come to the point, something happened to remind me of our national vice of untruthfulness as I was getting up yesterday, and I determined to 'keep tab' on myself and ascertain, if possible, how many actual, out and out lies I put into circulation in the course of the day. I chanced to have one of the little counting machines I have just mentioned, so I slipped it into my pocket and started out.

"The first lie I told was right at the door. Smithson was passing and stopped to shake hands. 'Hello, old man!' said I. 'Delighted to see you,' when as a matter of fact I was deuced sorry to see him because I owe him ten. I gave the counter a squeeze and hurried on, but before I got to the office I had jogged it nine times.

"What did I jog it for, did you ask? Oh, trivialities, mere trivialities, but at the same time point blank lies, every one of 'em. Whenever I opened my mouth out dropped some confounded hyperbole. I told Jones the joke he insisted in springing on me was the 'best I ever heard' and then made a double rally in assuring his wife she was looking remarkably well when she was looking exactly like a scarecrow. I told another friend I never laughed so much in my life as I had at something or other, I don't remember now what, and still another that I hadn't slept a wink for three nights when I had neuralgia lately—all lies, bald lies, in spite of their harmlessness.

"When I reached the office and looked at the dial, I was horrified. 'Good heavens!' I said to myself. 'It seems to be physically impossible for me to speak the plain truth in the paltriest matters. I'll just remain perfectly quiet for half an hour and keep check on Boggs.'

"Boggs is our head bookkeeper and a pillar in one of the suburban churches," continued the amateur cynic. "He wears rubber overshoes in wet weather, cultivates sandy side whiskers, carries a gingham umbrella, belongs to a building and loan association and has all the other marks of severe respectability. I had supposed him to be the quintessence of cast iron veracity, but when I sat down in cold blood to put him on record I was astounded at the blase fashion with which he frivoled with the truth. I pushed the button on him 15 times in 27 minutes; then he got into a whispered conversation with a caller, and I lost the thread of his remarks. But I am certain if I had been in earshot the counter would have had hard work keeping up with the procession.

"That relieved my mind somewhat, and later on, when I made a quiet test of several of the other fellows in the office, I came to the conclusion that I was no worse than the average, but the average was pretty tough. As far as my investigations went, the invoice clerk held the record. He is a guileless sort of chap, with modest manners and a freckled nose, and I never supposed he had any imagination concealed in his peg topped cranium, but he forced me to push the indicator up exactly 22 times in 15 minutes. During the last part of the stretch, however, he was trying to trade off a secondhand bicycle, and that naturally swelled the returns.

"Of course I soon realized that the idea of keeping count on my own mendacity was entirely impractical and abandoned the effort, but the other data has furnished me with abundant food for thought. My brother-in-law, by the way, insists that we would make a great mistake in trying to weed these flowers of fable out of our daily speech. He says we lie continually and systematically because everybody else lies, and a man who would start out to tell the plain, cold, raw, rectangular truth about everything in life would be little better than an anarchist. He would upset all established standards of value and make it necessary almost to recast the language. Besides, nobody would believe him. But my brother-in-law is a doctor," added the amateur cynic thoughtfully, "and maybe that makes a difference."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

ST. HILAIRE, - MINNESOTA
Wednesday, April 3, 1901.

Athletic sports are taking strong hold in the European universities. The football team or "equipe" of Louvain university has recently defeated the teams of Liege and of Brussels.

Japan has greatly increased her cavalry in the last few years, and still more recently added nearly forty field batteries to her artillery, and as the country itself produces no horses suitable for this purpose, the necessity for importing them is urgent.

The removal of a man's veins would seem an impossible operation. A New Orleans man's subveinous veins from his groin down stood out like whipcords, were immensely swollen, and gave him intense pain. An operation was finally resorted to, and the veins were all successfully removed, leaving only the arteries.

The other day a man made a tour of the diamond houses in Maiden Lane, New York, with a pair of diamond earrings, for which he had paid twenty years ago $700. In all but two places the stones were pronounced faultless, but cut in an old fashioned style, and the highest offer he received anywhere for them was $150.

To determine whether the shore line has not been shrinking a corps of engineers belonging to the United States coast and goedetic survey department has been at work on the Pacific coast. It is believed that the results of their labors will show the Pacific to have sunk several inches within the century and to be going down now much more rapidly than the Atlantic.

The recent census taken throughout Switzerland has shown a remarkable increase in the number of inhabitants. Perhaps the most extraordinary growth is in the Canton of Zurich, whose population in 1888 numbered 337,183, but now it is 428,030, an increase of 90,847 inhabitants in twelve years. This is considered a world's record. Geneva has increased by 21,412 persons during the same period.

Paris is about to lose one of its great historical landmarks. The old Temple market is doomed to demolition. Its ancient stronghold and palace, once the home of knights and royalty, afterward a state prison, monastery and market, and associated with the most momentous events of the history of France and its capital, went through all the stages of power and pomp, decline and fall, and now ends as a resort of rag pickers and beggars, and a rendezvous for thieves and junk dealers.

The superintendent of the New Haven schools has recently recommended that all his teachers wear short skirts the year around, on account of the hygienic effect upon the scholars. The authorities of El Paso, Texas, have gone a step further, and prohibited the admission of teachers to their public schools in skirts that touch the floor. An excellent remark in the same direction is contained in a recent letter by the Princess Reuss in a London newspaper: "I think it the most absurd and disgusting performance to perform the duties of crossing sweeper and janitor minus the salary."

The foreign ministers at Pekin have prepared a list of high Chinese officials whose execution they demand as a punishment for their complicity in the Boxer outrages and the attack on the legations. Of the expediency of this demand, in certain instances, there may be some doubt; but of its substantial justice, assuming that the officials did what they are reputed to have done, there can be no question. While the attempt is being made to distribute responsibility and to exact penalty for these crimes, neither the foreign ministers at Pekin nor the powers which they represent can afford to be indifferent to certain other crimes, still more inexcusable and atrocious.

A church choir, complete in all its parts and composed exclusively of Chinese vocalists, accompanied on the organ by a young Chinese matron, is one of the unique practical sights and results of Christian effort in San Francisco. Of course it has required years to accomplish this result, but in those years the zeal and hope of the Rev. J. M. Condit and his missionary wife have known neither flickering nor wavering. As a result, Dr. Condit presides Sunday after Sunday at the services in the Presbyterian Chinese church on Stockton street; a Chinese congregation composed of men, women, children and infants in arms attends for worship, and now sufficient advance has been made to have the music of the service rendered by a double quartette of male and female voices.

England has ordered five Holland submarine boats—her first experiment in submarine navigation. France has ordered twenty-three new boats to add to her already large submarine fleet and has begun experiments to test the effect of a plunging fire on objects under water. We have eight submarine boats built or under construction, but we are evidently going to have no monopoly of the new method of warfare. It might have been worth our while to buy up the Holland patent and prevent foreign nations from supplying their fleets with our inventions.

The Texas legislature has decided to submit to popular vote an amendment to the state constitution making the payment of a poll tax a prerequisite to voting. The proposer amendment requires that the citizen shall present a receipted poll tax bill or shall make oath that the tax has been paid before he will be allowed to vote. It is stated that the object of the amendment is to increase the public revenues and make more difficult and burdensome the colonization of Mexican voters in the districts bordering on the Rio Grande river at election times.

EASTER ETCHINGS

The customs, traditions and superstitions connected with Easter are almost innumerable. Their origins are in many cases impossible to determine, because they evidently took place at a time when the season was still pagan in its character. Others, again, are directly connected with the Christian observance of the festival. The early Christians in many countries used to greet one another on Easter morning with the salutation:

"Christ is risen."

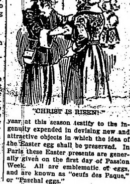
The reply to this was:

"Christ is risen, indeed, and hath appeared to Simon."

"This custom, it is said, is still observed in the Greek church.

The giving of eggs at Easter, or the spring festival, is one of the most widely known, as it is also one of the oldest, of the customs. From the remotest times the egg has stood to the Eastern nations as the symbol of the universe, and its breaking at that time has represented the opening of the new life of the year. When the custom was carried over into Christian practice the Easter eggs were usually sent to the priests to be blessed and sprinkled with holy water. In later times the coloring and decorating of the eggs was introduced, and in a royal roll of the time of Edward I., which is preserved in the Tower of London, there is an entry of 18d. for 400 eggs, to be used for Easter gifts.

In the last few years artificial eggs of candy, china and other materials, and egg-shaped articles of all kinds, have largely replaced the real eggs as Easter gifts. The shop windows each year at this season testify to the ingenuity expended in devising new and attractive objects in which the idea of the Easter egg shall be preserved. In Paris these Easter presents are generally given on the first day of Passion Week. All are emblematic of eggs, and are known as "oeufs des Paque," or "Paschal eggs."



"CHRIST IS RISEN!"

THE SONG OF THE HAND-ORGAN MAN

By Edgar S. Wiers.

There's the trip of little feet
Dancing in the busy street,
Up and down, to and fro,
Two by two the dancers go.

When I come to share my music with the little ones I love,
There is gladness in the faces at the windows up above.
Mine to brighten, cheer and lighten hours that else were dull and drear,
Humble though my occupation, 'tis a ministry of cheer.
And the mothers' hearts are lighter,
For the babies' lives are brighter
When they hear the merry music of my organ.

Mine the weary turning of the ceaseless creaking crank,
But I rouse the children's laughter, girlish glee and boyish prank;
Mine to see their faces brighten with a welcome glad and sweet;
Mine the ministry of music to the children of the street.
Their happy faces greet me,
As they come in throngs to meet me,
And they dance about my organ all the morning.

The little ones are weary with the rumbling of the wheels,
The quiet of their baby lives the noisy traffic steals.
I bring them sweet refreshing, and my work is one of cure,
The ministry of music to the children of the poor.
The little ones in glee
Come romping out to me,
And they're better for their dancing in the morning.

Children's Easter

It was the Saturday before Easter, and the children all ran out to the barn to hunt eggs, with Egypt, the tame crow, hopping after them. Nanny was sure there must be several dozen eggs in the hen house, Billy thought the haymow was the best place to find them, and Kitty said she had seen old Topknot flying out from Dobbin's manger. Egypt said nothing, but I rather think he knew as much about the nests as they did.

Egypt was a sly old fellow. He liked buttons and pennies, but he had the greatest fancy for pins. He would pull them out of every pin cushion in the house when he could get a chance, so you might search through room after room, and not come across a single pin. Nobody knew what he did with them all. He was fond of eggs, too, and I am afraid this was the reason that the children had such a long hunt for them, and found so few.

At last they climbed up the long ladder into the mow. The hay was piled almost to the roof and covered the windows. It was so dark that Nanny and Kitty were a little bit afraid, but Billy went first, floundering along in the hay, just as you wade through a snow drift.

"Guess there are nests on this beam," said Billy, "but it's so dark I can't see. I'll feel."

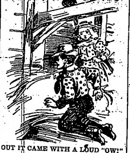
In went billy's hand, and out it came in a second, with a loud "Ow!"

"It's hornets or yellow-jackets or something!" he screamed. "Fetch the barn lantern, Kit, and I'll knock 'em out!"

Kitty brought the lantern, and then ran to the other side of the barn, for fear of the yellow jackets. Billy held the lentern over his hear and peeped in.

What did he see? Not hornets, but pins.

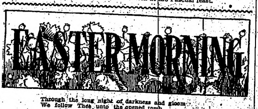
He had run his hand into Egypt's own little "hidy-hole," where the sly little rogue had laid away a whole pile of his favorite treasures. No wonder they pricked like hornets. But what the queer old bird was saving them for I never knew.



OUT IT CAME WITH A LOUD "OW!"

Origin of Easter Hats

To neglect the putting on of some entirely new article of dress on Easter Sunday was regarded by the English of olden times as sure to bring bad luck, and certainly this is one of the practices which has lost nothing with the increase of years. Only now it has been slightly altered, so that to have no new clothes to exhibit at the Easter parade is considered sufficiently bad luck in itself, without the fear of any further misfortunes that may result from it. After donning their new Easter garments the English country people dined off tansy pudding and bacon or tansy pudding and "good red herring," the tansy being the symbol of the bitter herbs commanded to be eaten at the Paschal feast.



EASTER MORNING

Through the long night of darkness and gloom
We follow Thee unto the opened tomb,
And, standing by its side,
Behold life glorified,
Know immortality,
Because of Thee.

Through the bright morning still we follow Thee,
Our fears forgot, our faintest doubts shall flee.
Let praises linger long,
For death is conquered.
Lo! the farthest skies
Are filled with song!

O heart, rejoice! Art blinded at the door
Of thy safe tent? Thy Pilot went before,
He leads thee in; then sing,
"Ours is the victory,
O suffering One,
Because of Thee!"

Homeless ere yet He knew the darkened tomb,
Homeless henceforth no more; in each glad heart His home.
Wake! every flower of spring,
And swell the Easter song,
And every bird awing
The praise prolong!

RUSSIAN SACRED PICTURES.

Icons That Stand on Shelves Opposite Russian Doors.

They are to be seen everywhere—the icons, or sacred pictures of the Russians. They are found standing on a shelf opposite the door of every Russian room, be it shop or private house, market stall, or railway booking office. Many also are found in the streets, outside churches or in shrines where passers-by stop and make obeisance. It is a matter of wonder to the stranger when his droshky driver stops suddenly in the middle of the road, doffs his hat and mutters a few words of prayer. His devotion to the icons seems to the foreigner as strange as the fact that he devoutly crosses himself before he entrusts himself and his vehicle to a bridge. A writer in the Sunday Magazine explains that icons vary much in material and value, but little in style. The style is always strictly Byzantine, and is copied faithfully from some old picture, in its turn a slavish copy of another. The story of the manufacture of the icons is interesting. Most of them are made in the Province of Vladimir by peasants who work at them in their cottages. Very much like an up-to-date factory process is the fashioning of these pictures. The work passes from hand to hand. One man makes the boards, another paints the backgrounds, a third puts in the figures, and the picture passes on from fashioner to fashioner until all is complete. It is said that as many as two millions of icons are produced each year. Some of those hung in the churches are valuable, being, like that of Our Lady of Kazan, in the cathedral in St. Petersburg, covered with, and indeed almost made of, precious stones.—Youth's Companion.

IN THE CRADLE OF THE PLATTE

By S. H. M. Byers

A little stream in the canon ran,
In the canon deep and long,
When a stout old oak at its side began
To sing to it this song:

"Oh, why do you laugh and leap and sing,
And why do you hurry by,
For you're only a noisy little thing,
And a great stout oak am I.
A hundred years I shall stand alone,
And the world will look at me,
While you will bubble and babble on,
And die at last in the sea."

"So proud and lofty?" the stream replied,
"You're a king of the forest, true,
But your roots are dead, and your leaves all dried,
Had I not watered you."

The oak-tree rustled its leaves of green
To the little stream below:
"'Tis only a snow-bank's tears, I ween,
Could talk to a monarch so.
But where are you going so fast, so fast,
And what do you think to do?
Is there anything in the world at last
For a babbling brook like you?"

"So fast, so fast, why should I wait,"
The hurrying water said,
"When yonder by the canon gate
The farmer waits for bread?
Out on the rainless desert-land
My hurrying footsteps go,
I kiss the earth, I wet the sand,
I make the harvests grow.

"And many a farmer, when the sky
Has turned to heated brass,
And all the plain is hot and dry,
Gives thanks to see me pass;
By many a sluice and ditch and lane,
They lead me left and right,
For it is I who turn the plain
To gardens of delight."

Then hurrying on, the dashing stream
Into a river grew,
And rock and mountain made a seam
To let its torrent through;
And where the burning desert lay
A happy river ran,
A thousand miles it coursed its way,
And blessed the homes of man.

Vain was the oak tree's proud conceit,
Dethroned the monarch lay,
The brook that babbled at its feet
Had washed its roots away.
Still in the canon's heart there springs
The desert's diadem,
And shepherds bless the day that brings
The snow-bank's tears to them.

Spain's Convents and Monasteries.

Spain now boasts of possessing more convents, more monasteries and more Jesuit colleges, seminaries and establishments of all kinds than at any time under the houses of Bourbon and Austria. The last census, in 1897, showed 28,549 nuns, 45,328 monks and priests, 1,200 Jesuits 9 archbishops, 51 bishops, 55 deans and 1,213 canons in the country. The religious houses of every kind exceed two thousand. It is not possible to ascertain their real wealth or the value of their movable property. They pay no duties on their real property, and none on their workshops, as they are not enrolled on the registers of ratepayers, only having to pay on capital invested in stock.

Mixture to Clean Mahogany.

Here is an excellent mixture to clean mahogany or walnut furniture. Combine one pint of linseed oil, one pint of best vinegar and half a pint of spirits of wine. Dip a soft cloth into this mixture and rub over the furniture, and then wipe thoroughly with a clean soft cloth. Always shake the fluid before using.—Exchange.

Easter.

Easter comes to April's tryst,
With a garland on her hair,
And a gown of silk and vair;
On her breast an amethyst—
Fastened in a silver twist,
With pale cowslips faint and fair,
In the rosy breast-knots there.

Fresh from off the rainbow stair
Shine her little feet, made bare
Of all shoes, for she has found
God's green earth is holy ground.
Delicate and debonnair
Windflowers, of coming 'ware,
With faint sweetness take the air.

After her the blossomed pear
Flings its flowers, the vetch and tare
Know her, even as the rose
In its bud her passing knows,
Dreams her look of love and care,
And, fast-shut, more lovely grows,
Till June gather it to wear.

After her the West wind blows,
And the rain before her goes,
Companied with flying mist;
Fearless of their human foes,
Conies shy and timid does,
Ewes and lambs beside her pace,
Looking in her lifted face.

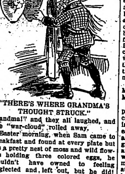
All things in her sweetness share,
All would stay her, and none dare
Keep her here a fortnight's space.
Seven days we see, of grace,
Easter in this earthly place.
Easter, kindling grass and clod
With the eyes that have seen God.

Live Easter Eggs.

Sam Lee was a great chicken-fancier, for a small boy, and like most people with a fad had no patience with the fads of others; so when one day he was telling his mother of a lovely brood of bantams he had seen ("Not much bigger than bumblebees, mother, honest!"), he was provoked when Grace came in with a basket of eggs to color for Easter, and took off his mother's attention by her questions.

"Easter eggs!" he scornfully said. "What good are they? You can't eat 'em! You can't hatch 'em! It's all just nonsense!"

Grace retorted hotly, and a quarrel seemed very near indeed; but just then grandma snapped her fingers sharply, in a funny way she had. Mother said; "There, another thought has struck grandma!" and they all laughed, and the "war-cloud" rolled away.



"THERE'S WHERE GRANDMA'S THOUGHT STRUCK."

Easter morning, when Sam came to breakfast and found at every plate but his a pretty nest of moss and wild flowers holding three colored eggs, he wouldn't have owned to feeling neglected and left out, but he did! More than that, the family certainly looked at him with a queer smile, and grandma even left the table "smiling all over her face." Could it be they were smiling at his discomfiture? Sam plucked up pride, and even was generous enough to admire the baskets.

"When he went to his room to get ready for church, he saw the joke! There on his gas-fixture hung two large, handsome, egg-shaped Chinese lanterns, just what he had wanted.

"Ah!" said Sam, "there's where grandma's thought struck!"

He started to take them down, and heard a strange scrambling sound! Hastily opening them, out fluttered a tiny pair of silver bantams, and the little rooster flapped his wings and crowed!

"Hurrah!" cried Sam, as he dashed downstairs to plant a resounding kiss on each of grandma's soft cheeks. "Those Easter eggs are something like!"—Lizzie E. Johnson.

THE EASTER HARE

Doubtless many people have wondered what relation to the Easter season is borne by the hosts of candy hares and rabbits which are displayed by the confectioners, side by side with the Easter eggs. This association of the hare with the festival is an old custom among the Germans and has doubtless had its origin in the fact that the hare is a legendary relative of the moon.

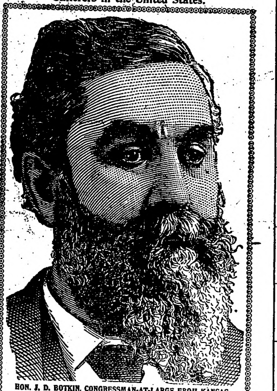
There are several reasons given as to why the hare was chosen to symbolize the moon. It is a nocturnal animal, and there was an ancient superstition that the hare could change its sex, like the moon, which was fabled sometimes as masculine and sometimes as feminine. Again the young of the hare, unlike those of rabbits, are born with their eyes open, and it was a tradition that the hare, thus born with open eyes, never closed them. Hence it came to be identified with the full moon, "the open-eyed watcher of the skies at night." The Egyption name of the hare was Un, meaning "open," "to open," or "the opener." Gradually, in the often curiously mingled symbolism of olden times, the hare seems to have been associated with the opening of the new life of the year in the spring, and hence with Easter and with the Easter eggs.

CONGRESSMAN BOTKIN

The Well-Known Kansas Statesman, Cured of Catarrh of the Stomach by Pe-ru-na.

AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' SUFFERING.

More Evidence of Interest to the Millions of Catarrh Sufferers in the United States.



HON. J. D. BOTKIN, CONGRESSMAN-AT-LARGE FROM KANSAS.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, Congressman Botkin, of Winfield, Kan., whose fame is a national one, says of Peruna:

My Dear Doctor:—"It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peruna and Manalin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Peruna is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections."—J. D. Botkin, Congressman-at-Large.

CONGRESSMAN BOTKIN is one of the most influential and best known men in the State of Kansas. Whatever he may say on any subject will be accepted by the people as the truth. So famous a remedy as Peruna could not have well escaped the attention of so famous a man. He not only has heard of the remedy, but he has used it and was relieved of an affliction of twenty-five years' standing. Peruna is the one internal remedy that cures chronic catarrh. It cures catarrh wherever located. This is a fact that the people are rapidly finding out, but there are still a large multitude who need to know it.

Mr. Frank Richter, of Winona, Minn., says in a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company:

"As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I know what it is to be afflicted with this awful disease and consider it my duty to say a word in behalf of the remedy which gave me such relief. Peruna cured me, and I know it will cure any one else who suffers from this disease. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the curative effects of this medicine. Peruna is a well tested and frequently used remedy, and for catarrh of the stomach it is unsurpassed.

"My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers and five bottles cured me."—Frank Richter.

The gastric juice is secreted by the mucous follicles of the stomach. When this juice is normal it digests (dissolves) the food without producing any disturbance whatever. If, however, the gastric juice is not normal, digestion causes many disagreeable symptoms. This condition is known as indigestion. Peruna will cure this.

Mrs. Selina Tanner, Athens, O., writes: "I cannot find words to express my thanks for your kind advice. I never once thought I had catarrh of the stomach. I commenced taking Peruna as you directed. My stomach continued to hurt me for about two weeks after I began the medicine and then it stopped. I now have a good appetite while before I was nearly starved."—Mrs. Selina Tanner.

Mrs. Selina Tanner.

Mr. L. O. Marble, of Geneva, Neb., writes:

"I do believe that my catarrh is entirely cured. I have not had any trouble with my stomach for a long time. I am as well as one of my age could expect (seventy years). I have had the catarrh ever since I was a young man, and have doctored for it for years and got very little better, but thanks to you and your Peruna and Manalin I believe I am well of it. I can eat anything now and it doesn't hurt me, and Peruna is the only thing I have ever found that will cure the catarrh. I believe it is the only cure for catarrh, and I hope every one troubled with catarrh will try Peruna and be cured."—L. O. Marble.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

General Manager Shute of the Crookston Lumber Company came up yesterday to look after business matters.

Fred Dahl, who has been attending school all winter at Crookston returned home Saturday to spend his vacation.

A fine line of Easter millinery just received by Mrs. E. L. Eikhoff. The ladies are invited to inspect the same.

MARRIED; Last Saturday, Hilma Johnson to Olof Johnson by Rev. A. M. Lunde at the home of Iver Johnson.

—Do you want to sell your farm? Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Olson returned yesterday from Little Falls and will again make St. Hilaire their future home.

Rev. A. M. Lunde and sister spent Sunday in Crookston attending the spring conference of the Norwegian church.

County Attorney Grady went to St. Paul Monday to look after a case before the supreme court which convened yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Seiter of St. Paul arrived last week and are now comfortably located in their new home over the barber shop.

C. A. Brummond has purchased the Olson residence on Water street and expects to move into the same the latter part of the month.

Teams are at work hauling stone for the foundation of a house to be built for Mr. Ames, the popular manager of the mill company's office.

—It is better than ready money because it cures rheumatism, constipation sick headache, indigestion. Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure.

W. A. Case, the Modern Woodman organizer spent Sunday with his family leaving Monday for Breckenridge where he had a camp to look after.

Miss Helen Hannay is spending the week in Crookston, the guest of the family of Hugh Robertson of the First National Bank of that place.

Attorneys Lee and Richardson of Thief River Falls passed through here Monday enroute to St. Paul. Both have cases before the supreme court.

The Mission Friends sewing society will meet with Mrs. Rev. J. Olson Thursday afternoon April 4th at 2 o'clock. All the ladies are invited to come.

Matt J. Johnson's celebrated blood and rheumatism cure advertisement appears in another column this week. Look it up and see where it can be bought.

Miss Carry Hoff, the milliner, has just received a fine stock of the very latest in hats and invites the ladies of St. Hilaire and vicinity to call and look them over.

S Harris tiring of the long cold winters in this country started the first of the week with his family for Everett, Washington where he intends to reside permanently.

Grover Gleveland is now the only living ex-president of the United States. A presidential term being but four years it seems rather strange that this should be the case.

J. H. Penno, our pioneer barber, disposed of his property to O. A. Seiter and started the first of the week for Everett, Wash., where he intends to make his future home.

Fred Miller, H. E. Ives and M. E. Bjerk went to Crookston Friday and saw the "Prisoner of Zenda." They are unanimous in pronouncing it one of the best plays ever seen.

The depot platform was crowded Monday with friends and Royal Neighbors to bid farewell to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Penno, Mrs. H. Tway and S. Harris and family who left on that day for the coast.

C. S. Orwall of Clarkfield, this state, was here last week and purchased two lots of E. M. Hoff on Broadway on which he will erect a brick building, work to begin at once, in which he will open a state bank.

Yesterday was house moving day and no less than five different families changed location. The draymen had their hands full of the much despised work of wrestling heavy stoves and a hundred and one other articles.

O. A. Seiter, the new barber who recently purchased the J. H. Penno barber shop took possession of the same Monday. He is an A No. 1 barber and with his assistant is bound to please the patrons of his handsome, equipped shop.

Timothy Craig, a well known lumberman an cruiser of Thief River Falls returned from the woods last week. The Press says he was suffering from an eruption supposed to be small pox and the authorities promptly quarantined him on a farm near that city.

The school board held a special meeting March 27 for the purpose of hiring teachers. The same corps of teachers were hired unamiously for the coming school year. J. B. O,Brien, principal, Laura J. Betts, grammar grade, Ellen B. Brady, intermediate grade and Mary A. Kyle, primary grade.

A crew of men were seen high in the air, the first of this week, adding 36 feet to the lumber company's already lofty smoke stack. They report that everything looked busy and prosperous in St. Hilaire and Red Lake Falls, but that Warren and Crookston were too far off to make out anything but the highest kickers.—Thief River Falls Press.

The Minneapolis Fire and Marine Insurance Co., that recently, went to the wall and placed in the hands of a receiver is now calling on policy holders to pay second assessments. The mutual insurance company will prove an expensive luxury to policy holders. St. Hilaire is very fortunate as only two or three are stockholders—to their sorrow.

A bulletin just issued shows the area of Minnesota to be 83,395 square miles. The state has a water surface of 4,160 square miles, which is exceeded only by that of Florida. The total area of United States is 2,622,933 square miles including Alaska and Hawaii. Itasca county is the largest in Minnesota, with an area of 5,575 square miles, over four times as large as the state of Rhode Island, which has only 1,250 square miles.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

The Minnesota Swedish Lutheran conference at their last meeting at Stillwater, Minn., went on record in opposition to secret societies of any character whatsoever, even condemning labor unions. The action of the conference, it is said, will result in the disbandment of about 100 local churches. The majority of the members are affiliated with societies of one kind or another, and announce their intention of leaving the church.

A bad story is being circulated about one of the local members of the "Buffalo" lodge, who recently visited his best girl down at St. Hilaire. He hadn't been in her presence very long, however, when the youny lady discovered him to be asleep. She lost no time in giving him a shaking up, and coming to, he let a bellar, exclaiming, "Buffalo" offered the grip and challange—then rubbing his eyes he discovered where he was at, and—well he felt like dropping through the floor.—Thief River Falls News.

On last Wednesday afternoon Congressman Eddy arrived from Washington for the sole purpose of being initiated in the Glenwood Camp of Modern Woodmen of America. The initiation was duly and successfully performed by the combined efforts of members of the local camp and the camps at Westport, Villard, Sedan, Lowry, and Starbuck. There were upwards of one hundred Woodmen in attendance and had a splendid time. Mr. Eddy returns this afternoon to Washington.—Glenwood Herald.

Three Great Railway Systems.

Three great railroad schemes will probably be realized in the 20th century From Cairo to the Cape is building, from St. Petersburg to Vladivostock is being rapidly pushed to completion, and a third great road from New York to Buenos Ayres is already projected. Of this last system, 4,500 miles are already in operation and 4,300 would be required to complete it. The total mileage of the three systems, when completed would be 18,000 miles of which 9,000 are now in use.

One thing can be said definitely in regard to the coming century it will produce for health or appetite nothing better than "Golden Grain Belt" beer, for it is absolutely pure, brewed from prime barley and selected hops, and aged with the utmost care; finally, it is bottled with absolute cleanliness and sent out to all parts of the country to make men strong and healthy. If you wish to better your health, keep this beer in your house. Order from your dealer or Alex Thompson, Crookston.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

AN ACCESSION

To the Ranks of Crookston's Professional Men, is Attorney R. M. Hayes.

A Times representative called on Attorney R. M. Hayes, who recently came here from Blue Earth City to establish himself in a practice of law, and found him comfortably located in an elegant suit of office rooms above the Merchants Nat'l bank. The rooms have recently been remodeled and newly decorated, and make one of the most complete and attractive office suits in the city. Mr. Hayes is not a novice in the practice of law, but has had five years experience and left a good business, including several important cases in district court in southern Minnesota, to cast his lot in Crookston.

"That country" said Mr. Hayes "is getting too slow and conservative for a man with energy and young blood in his veins." "I am satisfied that the great Red River Valley where marvelous growth and development is the order of the day and will be for years to come, offers a broader field and larger inducements for the energies of a progressive man in any profession.

"I did not come to Crookston because I thought my services were especially needed here, nor because I had no practice in Faribault county. I am simply correcting the mistake I made in locating in southern Minnesota five years ago, where the people have seated down to the staid old New England style of doing business instead of coming at once and casting my lot with the hustlers in the Red River Valley.

Mr. Hayes' forte is in conducting district court cases, and he will make a specialty of that branch of the law, also of the law of real property. The Times confidently expects to see Mr. Hayes take a leading position at the Polk county bar.—Crookston Daily Times.

Sale of Ditching Jobs.

Notice is hereby given, that, on the twenty-second day of April A. D. 1901 at 10 o'clock a. m. at the auditors office in the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls, Minnesota. I will sell the jobs of digging and constructing the entire work of Terrebonne Ditch No. 2 of said county of Red Lake Minnesota, located and established by the board of county commissioners of said county, by their order bearing date the 9th day of January A. D. 1901 in linear sections of one hundred feet each; each of said sections to be known and numbered by the stake or monument set by the viewers at the foot of each of said sections as shown on the viewers' report, thereof, reference to which said report is herein made for greater certainty, commencing at the one including the outlet, and thence in succession up stream to the one including the source, to the lowest responsible bidder or bidders; said work to be completed at the time and in the manner specified in the said viewers' report, reference to which has been and is now made, and no bid will be entertained which exceeds more than thirty (30) per cent, over and above the estimated cost of the construction of the part of said work covered by said bid; and the successful bidder will be required to give a satisfactory bond, with two freehold sureties, payable to the county, for not less than double the amount for which the same is sold, to be by me approved, conditioned that said successful bidder will faithfully perform and fulfill his contract, and pay all damages which may accrue by reason of the failure to complete the work within the time required in the contract therefor.

The said order, estimates, profile, etc. are on file and may be seen at any time during office hours, in my office.

Dated this 18th day of March A. D., 1901.

ADAM ZEH,
County Auditor Red Lake County,
State of Minnesota.

The Growth of St. Hilaire.

(The following was written by Lester Allen age 12, pupil of Seventh Grade.)

St. Hilaire has grown more in the last year than ever before. It has also been made pleasanter.

Last year there was but one public well, one large hotel and no pool room. There were a great many empty houses built to rent or sell and most all belonged to the Mill Company and St. Hilaire Townsite Company. There was no sidewalk on Minnesota street and those in the main part of town were very poor.

Now there are two wells, two large hotels and a pool room. There are no houses but what are rented or sold and there is a sidewalk on Minnesota street and most all those in town are new. There is also another Land Office and Meat Market. There are more men to work in the mill which has also been improved and there is more lumber being shipped. This mill is said to be the largest and best in northern Minnesota. There are houses being built and also moved into town. There has also been a ditch dug about a mile from town which flows into the river and drains all the land northwest, west and south of town and the river drains it on the east so that the land is much drier. Gravel has also been put on Main street so as to make better roads.

INVENTION OF PRINTING.

The Chinese Developed the Art Centuries Before Guttenberg.

Feng Tao (A. D. 881-954) is best known to the Chinese as a versatile politician who served, first and last, under no less than ten emperors of four different houses, and gave himself a sobriquet which finds its best English equivalent in the "Vicar of Bray."

In his history of "Chinese Literature," published by the Appletons, Dr. Giles tells how Tao presented himself at the court of the second emperor of the Liao dynasty, and positively asked for a post. He said he had no home, no money, and very little brains; a statement which appears to have appealed forcibly to the Tartar monarch, who at once appointed him grand tutor to the heir apparent.

By foreigners, on the other hand, he will be chiefly remembered as the inventor of the art of block-printing. It seems probable, indeed, thatt some crude form of this invention had already been known in the Tang dynasty: but until the date of the Feng Tao, it was certainly not applied to the production of books. Six years after his death the "fire-led" house of Sung was finally established on the throne, and thenceforward the printing of books from blocks became a familiar handicraft with the Chinese people.

INDIAN MISSIONARY'S STORY.

Years of Toilsome Ministry Among the Choctaws.

Little York, Ind., April 1.—(Special).—Twenty-five years ago the Rev. C. H. Thompson left Indiana. For a time he preached in Arkansas, afterwards entering on the regular missionary work among the Choctaw Indians.

For five years he lived and labored among the full-bloods of the Western prairies, until, on April 5th, 1885, having lost his wife, he left the circuit on which he had preached so long, and commenced traveling missionary work among the Indians of the various tribes scattered in the West.

This irregular work involved a great deal of travel over the prairies. The drinking of so much alkali water brought on kidney troubles which terminated in Diabetes.

Finally, while laboring among the Creek Indians at Wagoner, Indian Territory, this noble man was stricken down completely. A Chicago specialist was summoned, and after a careful examination declared that there was not the slightest chance of his recovery. Besides the prescriptions of the doctors, he tried many other medicines, but all to no avail. He says:

"I had concluded that my days were drawing to a close, when I picked up an almanac telling of the cures of Diabetes by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I sent for two boxes. I gained strength and spirits from the time I commenced to use them, and so I sent for more. I am now completely cured, and have not the slightest symptom of my old trouble.

"I am 68 years of age. I tell everybody of the wonders Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me. I can certainly endorse them heartily, and vouch that they are all that is claimed for them. They have certainly been a God-send to me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy, and they never fail.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TWO-YEAR ADVANCE.

Amounts to About $4 Per M. for No. 3 Boards.

The present price of what there is left at Duluth of old No. 3 boards is about $12.75, and sales of more or less importance are being made every few days at this price. The sales are for the most part small; indeed, they have to be. Local manufacturers say that the same demand that has existed in Duluth, and under which the enormous sales of the past month or so have been made, has been manifest at other white pine centers, and that the stocks at all points are about as well sold out as they are there. The sales of last week were, perhaps, 7,500,000 feet, mostly the lower grades, and to all markets, chiefly to the East. A good many local manufacturers have determined to hold to $13 and better for the No. 3 boards of the cut of the coming summer, and others say they must get not less than $14 if they are to make any money.

It was two years ago now that the great advance sales for the summer cut of 1899 had been made. These sales were on a basis of $9 for No. 3 boards and lumbermen thought that a splendid price. The price of lumber advanced and kept on advancing till the summer. No. 3 boards brought $12 for small lots, though there was no great amount sold over $11.75. With the price now at $12.75 there is a still further advance and another one is looked for. Lumbermen claim that the advance in the cost of logging from two years ago fully warranted them in the advance from $9 to the figures that were secured last summer, and that the rise in stumpage warrants them in a still greater advance.

Suits for damages on account of personal injuries have been filed against the Cloquet Lumber company by Peter Olson, who wants $5,000, and against Alger, Smith & Co. by Alex Cattenach, who also wants $5,000. Both men were injured in January, one in the mill and the other rolling logs.

Indications are that there will be from 30,000,000 feet to 40,000,000 feet of shortage in the log crop for the mills of Duluth and Superior. It is impossible to tell just what efforts may be made later to remedy by summer logging the shortage of the winter, but with the ordinary amount of summer logging and the present situation in the woods, it is not likely that more than 390,000,000 feet of logs will get to the mills during the season. The cut of last year by the same mills was about 425,000,000 feet. This shortage is due, of course, to the early break-up in the woods, where roads are very bad and where many camps have already come out from all parts of the district. Summer logging undertaken for the immediate necessities has usually proved itself, here at least, a very costly undertaking and hardly worth the candle.

About 48,000,000 feet of logs are banked along the south shore of Lake Superior, between the Superior entry and Bark point, and are coming toward Duluth. Among these are 12,000,000 feet by Fisher & Brown, 12,000,000 feet by McGinnis & Co., 8,000,000 by Riley & Davidson, 7,000,000 feet by Charles Sampson and 6,000,000 feet by Corcoran Brothers.

The Cross River Driving and Boom company, at Cross river, a stream about 125 miles northeast of Duluth on the shore of Lake Superior, is about to improve the stream for driving purposes and to erect a mill there.

Many camps have been broken and Duluth is full of woodsmen. Incoming trains from every direction are running extra coaches for woodsmen and the vicinity of the union station is crowded with them.

A great deal of spruce and cedar is being put in along the north short in Cook county, and there is some pine also, far more, indeed, than ever before. The Coolidge Fuel and Supply company is active in cedar and spruce logging, and Charles J. Johnson of Grand Marais is putting in a lot of both pine and cedar.

Pineville, Ky., March 27. — A man supposed to be J. C. Durham, wanted at Santa Clara, Cal., for the murder of six people was arrested here yesterday by detectives on a reward of $10,000. The man had been working in a sawmill for some time. His arrest was made on information from California to the effect that Durham was drifting this way and a watch had been kept for some weeks.

A PIONEER MAY DAY.

Preparations Complete for an Interesting Meeting May 11.

The Minnesota Territorial pioneers have completed arrangements for a May day picnic at the log cabin at the state fair grounds May 11. The committee of arrangements met in St. Paul recently and prepared the following program:

At 10 a. m. a reunion of members and tree planting; at 10:30, arrival of old Concord stage coach with a load of pioneers; business meeting in the log cabin; banquet in institute hall, followed by brief addresses from ex-Gov. J. S. Pillsbury, ex-Gov. Alexander Ramsey, the first territorial governor and the only surviving "war governor;" S. R. Van Sant, governor; Archbishop Ireland, Congressmen Loren Fletcher and Frank M. Eddy, E. W. Durant and William Pitt Murray. The ladies will set tables for 500. Among the toasts to be responded to by pioneers will be:

"The Territory of Minnesota," "The State of Minnesotat," "The Early Missionaries of Minnesota," "Territorial Delegates of Minnesota in Congress," "The Pioneer Women of Minnesota," "Minnesota in Congress To-day," "The Territorial Pioneer of Minnesota," "The Pioneer Dead; May Their Memory Be Ever Fresh and Enduring to Our State," "The Pioneer With Us To-day."

One of the amusing features of the day will be an old-time dance in the cabin, in which the pioneers from 75 to 102 years of age will participate, having as partners the grandchildren of pioneers.

Souvenir Book No. 2 is almost ready, and will contain a list of pioneers who have died in the past two years. This list includes a large number of names from Hennepin county.

EXPERIMENT IN FLAX.

Duluth Publisher Trying to Improve the Yield in the Northwest.

Charles H. Thornton of Duluth, publisher of the Daily Commercial Record, is trying to introduce Argentine Republic flax seed into the Northwest. Last year he sent for samples of seed from Bombay, Calcutta and Argentine Republic, and had them sown in North Dakota. The Argentina lot amounted to about fifteen bushels. The Bombay seed brings a higher price than any other in the world, but it did not thrive in North Dakota soil. The same was true of the Calcutta seed, but the Argentina seed all showed fine results and produced much better flax than that raised from the Northwestern seed. These investigations led Mr. Thornton to make an attempt to introduce a larger amount of the seed this year, in fact to lay the ground work for the introduction of the seed generally throughout the Northwest. Some time ago he arranged with a Buenos Ayres seed man to select seed for him, and in a short time he will receive about 8,000 bushels of Argentina seed. Practically all of it is already sold.

With reference to the seed used last year, McCabe Brothers, large farmers at Glasston, N. D., said of the crop: "We think it will average from five to eight bushels more per acre than the common seed."

The experiment is creating much interest among the elevator and flaxseed interests.

AFTER MINNESOTA LAND.

Iowans Look to the North—Cheap Lands Attract Many.

The Iowa farmer and the Iowa business man are frequent visitors in the Twin Cities this spring. They come to look for information regarding the prairie lands of Northern Minnesota and the Dakotas. The Red river valley, as the result of the advertising given it by No. 1 hard wheat, is a special favorite with them. A delegation from Estherville and Huntington passed through St. Paul recently, bound for Grand Forks, near which it has an option on a tract of considerable extent. It will also take a look at the valley country north of Crookston. Mr. Delavan, one of the party, is state game and fish warden in the Hawkeye state. He says that the Iowa farmer has made money during the past ten years and the ordinary interest rates now ruling are not to his liking. He thinks he can obtain more for the use of his money in Northwestern realty investments and is following that clue. Mr. Delavan says that the cheap lands of the Northwest are the one big hope which the renter in the high-priced states clings to.

What Will Become of China?

None can foresee the outcome of the quarrel between foreign powers over the division of China. It is interesting to watch the going to pieces of this ancient but unprogressive race. Many people in America are also going to pieces because of dyspepsia, constipation, blood, liver and stomach diseases. We are living too fast, but strength, vigor and good health can be retained if we keep off and cure the above diseases with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

"I Followed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Now I am Well."

A woman is sick—some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story.

She holds back something, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and this completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it a wonder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician. This is the reason why hundreds of thousands of women are now in correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can give every symptom, so that when she is ready to advise them she is in possession of more facts from her correspondence with the patient than the physician can possibly obtain through a personal interview.

Following we publish a letter from a woman showing the result of a correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. All such letters are considered absolutely confidential by Mrs. Pinkham, and are never published in any way or manner without the consent in writing of the patient; but hundreds of women are so grateful for the health which Mrs. Pinkham and her medicine have been able to restore to them that they not only consent to publishing their letters, but write asking that this be done in order that other women who suffer may be benefited by their experience.

Mrs. Ella Rice, Chelsea, Wis., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I was troubled with falling and inflammation of the womb. I suffered very much with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and was not able to do anything. What I endured no one knows but those who have suffered as I did. I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I doctored with the physicians of this town for three months and grew worse, instead of better. My husband and friends wished me to write to you, but I had no faith in patent medicines. At last I became so bad that I concluded to ask your advice. I received an answer at once advising me to take your Vegetable Compound, and I did so. Before I had taken two bottles I felt better, and after I had taken five bottles there was no happier woman on earth, for I was well again. I know that your Vegetable Compound cured me, and I wish and advise every woman who suffers as I did to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Believe me always grateful for the recovery of my health."—MRS. ELLA RICE, Chelsea, Wis.

FLOODS IN THE EAST

REPORTS OF LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.

Various Points in New England in Great Danger—Rivers Swollen by Recent Rains and the Unusual Amount of Snow in the Mountains—Police Sound the Flood Alarm Along the Merrimac, and Business Men Make Energetic Efforts to Protect Their Property.

Boston, April 8. — The intermittent rains of the past week will result in floods in various parts of New England, where streams of the extensive watersheds are in freshets higher than for a number of years. It is not known yet if there has been any loss of life or property, but associated Press reports from various points of New England indicate great danger. There is an unusual amount of snow and ice in the mountains of Vermont and Maine so the great rivers that drain them are overtaxed to carry off the extra water. The Penobscot river, fed by manifold tributaries from the great chain of mountains, the Merrimac river, fed by its main arteries which find their source in New Hampshire, and the other great waterway, the Connecticut, which gathers together the waters of about all the rest of New England, are all very high.

-o-

Haverhill, Mass., April 8.—From the Pemigswasset valley on the north to the confluence of the Merrimac river with the sea, the freshet reports received here last night indicate that the Merrimac river is likely to burst its banks at many places with a volume of water that will exceed that for many years. The police sounded the flood alarm last night and business men on the river front began energetic efforts to protect their property. At a late hour the levee water was within 2 1-2 feet of the street, and as high tide comes to-day it is expected that streets on a lever with the levee will be flooded. All day long communication was kept up with cities on the Merrimac and its tributaries, Plymouth and Lincoln reporting a rainfall during the night of 1.73 inches. At Manchester the water was 6 feet 5 inches on the dam and the rise on the Lawrence dam was 5 inches hourly. The more active volume of water which last night was overflowing the lowlands at Concord and Manchester, will not reach here until to-day noon, so that the greater part of the damage will not be done until that time. There were all sorts of reports during the day of bodies being found in the river, but none could be intercepted. A woman's body is known to have floated down from Lawrence and it was understood that a man's body and one of an infant had been seen below Lowell.

ATTACKED THE PREACHER.

Drunken Rowdies Raise Cain in a Church.

Elwood, Ind., April 8. — Saturday night during a convention of the members of the Holiness church which is being held in this city, Rev. Hass, in the midst of his discourse, was attacked by a gang of drunken rowdies, their ages ranging from seventeen to twenty years. Rev. Hass was knocked down and trampled upon in his pulpit. A general scrimmage took place, the women and children fainting and screaming. A riot call was sent in and the police arrested three members of the gang. The church after the riot resembled being struck by a cyclone instead of being a house of worship.

HULK OF MERRIMAC DESTROYED.

Collier Sunk at Santiago to Bottle Up Cervera's Fleet Blown Up.

Santiago, Cuba, April 8.—The collier Merrimac, which was blown up and sunk in the harbor by Constructor Hobson while Admiral Cervera's fleet was inside in 1898, was successfully destroyed by a ton of dynamite Saturday. Hitherto it has been extremely dangerous for vessels to attempt the narrow entrance to the harbor, but now that this wreck has been destroyed it is perfectly safe. A great crowd of people on shore witnessed the blowing up of the old hulk.

ACTION INFURIATES MOB.

Demonstration Against Russian and Italian Consulates at Geneva.

Geneva, Switz., April 8.—A serious demonstration against the Russian and Italian consul occurred Friday evening in connection with the extradition of Jaffei, an alleged accomplice of Gaetano Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert. The mob tore down and shattered the coat of arms at the Russian consulate, but were prevented by the police from doing material damage elsewhere.

REPLIES REJECTED.

Cubans Desire to Send a Commission to Washington.

Havana, April 8. — The convention held a private session to consider the proposed replies of Senores Quilez and Giberga to the Platt amendment. Both were rejected. There was a special session Saturday night to consider the question of sending a commission to Washington to discuss the matter.

Killed by His Brother.

New York, April 8.—Pietro Paglini was shot and killed in Paterson, N. J., last night by his brother Sabbata. The latter, who also wounded his father, is in the hospital with his head badly injured by a blow delivered by the man now dead, who attacked Sabatta with an axe. The brothers quarreled over a game of cards.

Miners May Strike.

Altoona, Pa., April 8.—Two thousand miners in the Lilly and Bens Creek field have taken action by resolution that they will strike Tpril 16 unless the full scale adopted at the Altoone convention is granted by that date.

Big Elevator Destroyed.

St. Louis, April 8.—Sparks from a switch engine yesterday set fire to the big elevator owned by the St. Louis Elevator and Storage company and in less than two hours the big building was in ashes. Loss, $650,000.

A THREE-TIME WINNER.

Carleton College Wins First Place in the Oratorical Contest.

St. Paul, April 7.—For the third consecutive year Carleton college won last night the first place in the annual oratorical contest, in which Carleton competes with Macalester college, Hamline university and the University of Minnesota. Carleton also won second place last night. Hamline came third. The winner of first place was J. A. Burnquist, who spoke of "The New National Ideal." F. O. Leonard, the winner of second place, spoke on "The Value of National Precedents." George B. Babcock's subject was "Daniel O'Connell. Mr. Burnquist will represent Minnesota at the interstate oratorical contest at Des Moines May 2. The states heard there will be Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Minnesota, Iowa, Colorado, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Missouri and Kansas.

SHOT SISTER AND BROTHER.

The Former si Dead and the Latter Is Dying.

Grand Forks, N. D., April 7.—Charles Boecher, aged sixteen, the son of Herman Boecher, a farmer living five miles southwest of Blanchard, Traill county, last evening shot his sister, aged ten, and his brother, aged six. The girl is dead and the boy is not expected to live. The shooting is supposed to have been accidental, but this does not appear to be certain, as only the children were present at the time and the boy who did the shooting has disappeared. As nearly as can be learned, Mr. and Mrs. Boecher had gone to church, leaving their children and several neighbors' children in charge of the oldest son, Charles. The boy had been getting his gun ready to go goose hunting, and in some way the weapon was discharged.

FEDERAL INDICTMENTS.

A White Man and an Indian Must Stand Trial.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—In the United States court the grand jury returned indictments against Frederick Benedict, an old resident of Bon Homme county, for selling liquor to Indians, and against George Campbell, a pupil in the government Indian school at Chamberlain, for criminal assault on a young Indian girl, also a pupil in the school. The cases against Michael O'Shea, ex-postmaster at Running Water, and William Crook of Egan were dismissed. The latter was charged with selling liquor to Indians while the former, who is a justice of the peace, was accused of acknowledging a signature to his wife's bond as postmistress at Running Water when the party had not personally appeared before him.

AUGUSTA'S LOSS.

Sixty Thousand Dollars' Damage in a Business Section Fire.

Helena, Mont., April 7.—Almost the entire business portion of Augusta was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $60,000. The fire originated in the Odd Fellows' hall and soon spread until it had consumed every building on Main street except the Hotel Augusta. The chief losers are J. C. Adams & Co., general store, $40,000, insured for half; three saloons, averaging $2,500, and Smith's store, none of whom were insured. It is thought the fire originated in the acetylene plant in Adams' store.

Exterminating Gophers.

Fargo, N. D., April 7.—Some of the counties intend to take advantage of the gopher law this year and make an effort to exterminate the pests. Under an act passed in the '99 legislative session the commissioners of any county are authorized to levy a tax not exceeding 4 mills on the dollar of assessed valuation upon all real estate in the county, the proceeds of which shall be used for promoting the destruction of the little pests.

Wahpeton and Breckenridge United.

Wahpeton, N. D., April 7.—The new steel bridge between this place and Breckinridge has been opened to traffic. It has 160 feet span, clear over the Bois de Sioux river. The roadway is twenty-four feet wide and has a footway six feet wide on each side. It took 100 tons of metal, six car loads, cost $9,000 besides the water wall and high grading at each end. The contractors were Schuler Bros. of Wahpeton.

Crashed Into the House.

Wicona, Minn., April 7.—An unusual fatality occurred at Fountain City. A large rock became loosened from the bluff's side and crashed down through the residence of Henry Robler. It struck Mrs. Robler, who was in bed with her husband, and carried her down, causing her death. Mr. Robler was injured only slightly.

Funds for Epworth League.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—Rev. J. O. Dobson, presiding elder of the Sioux Falls district of the Methodist Episcopal church, has charge of the collection of funds for caring for the Epworth league assembly at Canton the coming summer. He reports that he has now nearly $6,000 raised.

Snow and Rain

Huron, S. D., April 7. — Thursday night's rain and snowstorm covered the entire Jim river valley. Thus far the precipitation for April exceeds that of any April for three years, and farmers report ample moisture for seeding. In some localities the ground is too wet.

Despondent Strikers' Suicide.

Helena, Mont., April 7.—George H. Connors, a striking Anaconda machinist, committed suicide at that place by shooting. He was despondent because he was out of employment. He had opposed the strike, but went out with the others. He leaves a wife and three children.

County Auditors' Convention.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 7.—A meeting of the county auditors of the northern part of the state has been called for Aberdeen on April 18. The purpose is to devise a more equitable method of assessment in the state.

Steel Wagon Bridges Ordered.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 7.—The board of county commissioners has awarded the contract for five steel wagon bridges to the Gillette-Herzog Company of Minneapolis. The contract price is [illegible]

RAZE ALL THE FORTS

ALLIED COMMANDERS REACH AN AGREEMENT.

All the Forts at Taku, Tien-tsin, Peitang and Shanhai-Kwan and Along the Railroad From Tien-tsin to Pekin Will Be Destroyed—Camps and Arsenals Will Also Be Destroyed—Gen. Chaffee Announces That the Americans Will Evacuate China at the End of April.

Pekin, April 8.—The commanders of the several foreign contingents met yesterday at Count von Waldersee's headquarters and decided to raze all the forts at Taku, Tien-tsin, Peitang and Shanhai-kwan and along the railway within 2,000 meters of the line. It was also decided to destroy all the camps and arsenals except the west arsenal at Tien-tsin, which will be used as a barracks for the permanent military guard. Ten posts will be established between Pekin and Shanhaikwan, which will be garrisoned by 6,000 men. Two thousand troops will be stationed at Tien-tsin, but 6,000 will remain there temporarily. The number to remain in Pekin has not yet been decided upon.

American Evacuation.

Gen Chaffee has announced that the American troops will evacuate China at the end of April. He hopes that he may induce others to consent to an early withdrawal.

Additional confirmation has been received here of an incipient rebellion in Mongolia. It is feared that Gen. Tung Fuh Siang and Prince Tuan are at the bottom of the trouble.

Messengers who have just arrived from Singen-fu confirm the reports of the ravages of the famine in that province. It is estimated that 3,000 persons are dying daily from starvation. Sixteen public soup kitchens have been established, but they are utterly insufficient to relieve the hunger. The court appears to be very little distressed by the sufferings of the people. It is still indulging in amusements. It has received supplies of silver and rice from the southern provinces.

AGUINALDO WORKS FOR PEACE.

Sends an Agent to Insurgent Leaders to Treat for Their Surrender.

Manila, April 8.—Trias, the Filipino general who recently surrendered, will shortly leave here for Lipa and Batangas, bearing credentials from Aguinaldo with which to treat for the surrender of the insurgent generals, Malvar, Tinio and Lucban. Generals Alejandrino, Lacuna and Cailles have been outlawed for violating the rules of war, and the remaining recalcitrant rebel chiefs are of no importance. Gen. Trias also will go to the Southern islands on a similar errand. The following surrenders have been reported officially: The insurgent Gen. Arejola, with 30 officers and 800 men, at the town of Nueva Caceres, in the Province of South Camarines, Southern Luzon; the remainder of the command of Maj. Pablo Tecson, consisting of 19 officers, 173 men and 133 rifles, at the town of San Miguel de Mapumo, Bulacan province, Central Luzon, and 16 officers and 70 men in Bulacan province and at other points.

STREET CAR DROPS INTO CANAL.

Bridge Across James Street in Syracuse, N. Y., Gives Way.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 8. — While a car on the East Side Suburban line of the Syracuse Rapid Transit company was crossing the James street bridge over the Oswego canal in the heart of the city the bridge suddenly gave way, dropping the car and its forty passengers to the dry bed of the canal thirty feet below. Several persons who were crossing the bridge at the time went down with the car, while a horse and loaded lumber wagon piled on top of the heap. Thirty persons were injured. It is not believed that any deaths will result, although there are reports of several of the worst injured being dangerously hurt.

He Guards Aguinaldo.

Cannon Falls, Minn., April 8.—Lieut. Gilbert A. Youngberg, whom the Manila dispatches report as being one of the officers selected to guard Aguinaldo, is a Cannon Falls boy and was sent to the Philippines last fall. He graduated last summer at West Point, standing well up toward the head of his class.

Murderer Gets Life Sentence.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 8.—Charles Rogers, who shot and killed his father-in-law, Milburn Baty, and seriously wounded his wife on March 10, was given a life sentence by a jury yesterday.

Kruger Leaves Utrecht.

Utrecht, Holland, April 8.—Mr. Kruger has started for Hilversum, where he will stay for some time. The burgomaster and a big crowd bade him farewell at the railroad station.

Michael to Study Russian Methods.

St. Petersburg, April 8.—It is stated that Grand Duke Michael, the heir apparent, will soon begin a tour of the empire for the purpose of studying administration methods.

Schooner a Total Loss.

Gloucester, Mass., April 8.—The three masted schooner Hyenia of Calais, Me., went ashore at East Gloucester and is a total wreck. Capt. R. B. Dix and Steward Fuller were lost. The other two members of the crew were saved.

Wrecked by a Cow.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 8.—A special Sunday double-header freight train running from Oakdale to Dayton, Tenn., was wrecked, the front engine striking a cow. Both engines were ditched. Several were injured.

Four Men Injured.

Kansas City, April 8.—By the derailing of an engine and a number of empty freight cars on the suburban belt line four members of the [illegible] were injured [illegible]

MOTHER AND CHILD DROWNED.

Frightened Horse Plunges Over an Embankment Into the River.

Milwaukee, April 8.—Mrs. Michael Hart of the town of Lake and her seven-year-old daughter, Mary, were drowned in the Kinnikinnic river at the Kinnikinnic avenue bridge in this city at an early hour yesterday morning. Mrs. Hart, accompanied by her husband and daughter, had been visiting friends and started for home at about 3 o'clock in a light top buggy drawn by a young nervous horse. As they neared the bridge, which was closed for repairs, the horse became frightened by a passing train and ran away, plunging over the embankment, dragging the buggy and its occupants with it. Hart, who had been thrown out of the buggy as it went over the embankment, was saved, a policeman throwing a rope to him and hauling him ashore, but the mother and daughter were caught by the buggy top and carried to the bottom of the river and were drowned, as also was the horse. The bodies have been recovered.

SHOT BY THE SHERIFF.

An Alleged Horse Thief Rounded Up by a Posse.

Dickinson, N. D., April 8.—One McPeak, alias Jim McCarthey, an alleged horse thief, was arrested yesterday morning by Sheriff John Goodall and a posse of deputies and in attempting to get away was shot. He was brought here last night. Walter Y. Barnet has been convicted of horse stealing after one of the hardest fought trials in Western North Dakota. Barnet shipped stolen horses to Lake City, Iowa, and when detected and arrested attempted to shield himself with a bill of sale purporting to have been given by some unknown party, but which the state reasoned was writtened and signed by himself after his arrest. No case in court for many years has so interested stockmen as this one. Wholesale thieving has been going on for many months. Barnet will likely get the maximum sentence of five years.

PERISHED IN THE FIRE.

Woman's Body Found in the Ruins of Her Store.

Ada, Minn., April 8.—Miss Maggie Riggers, a milliner and dressmaker who has operated a millinery establishment here for a number of years, was burned to death yesterday. She roomed in the back of her store building, a small frame structure on the principal business street in the village. All efforts to rescue Miss Riggers from the flames were of no avail. Her charred body was found lying close to the door opening onto the street, and the supposition is that when she reached the door she was overcome with smoke and heat and swooned before she was able to unlock the door. The fire was confined to the one building. The origin is unknown.

DIVIDES $30,000 BOODLE FUND.

Treasurer Gives Each County Share of Money for School Fund.

Helena, Mont., April 8.—The last act in the history of Montana's famous $30,000 boodle fund that grew out of the Whiteside bribery exposure in the sixth legislative session was played Saturday, when, in accordance with a law passed by the late legislature, State Treasurer Barrett sent a check to different county treasurers of the state for amounts in proportion to the number of school children in the several counties. Silver Bow county, on account of its large population, received one-fifth of the $30,000.

QUARREL OVER A WOMAN.

Albert Lea Citizen Stabbed by a Morristown Man.

Faribault, Minn., April 8. — Fred Schultz, son of Albert Schultz, was stabbed by Charles Hoffmeister of Morristown. The wound, which narrowly missed the jugular vein, required five stitches. He also received two wounds in the arm. The quarrel was over a woman. Hoffmeister is under arrest. Schultz will probably recover.

Loggers Ready for Driving.

Bemidji, Minn., April 8.—The spring rains have carried away most of the snow, and the ice is rapidly rotting away from the lakes and streams. The loggers are all busy getting ready for the drive. The logging operations now being carried on are by the companies near railroads. The loggers who own their own horses are making contracts for their use to the railroaders for the summer. Many of them will be used in the construction work on the Minnesota & International railroad, which is being extended north of here.

After Horse Thieves.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 8.—Officers are on the track of what appears to be a regularly organized band of horse thieves who for several months have been operating in Sanborn and adjoining counties. It seems to be their practice to run stolen animals into North Dakota, where they are disposed of. Suspicion strongly points to certain individuals as being the chief members of the band, and their arrest will doubtless follow in a short time.

School Teacher Makes Money.

Miller, S. D., April 8.—Edith Campbell, a young school teacher here, has just cleaned up $250 on a land sale. She was undecided some time ago whether to invest her savings in a quarter section of land or in a piano. She bought the land and sold it for a $250 advance. She has since entered the Huron college, where she will finish her education.

Killed by a Tooth.

Milwaukee, April 8.—Mrs. Annie Oleson, a cook, inhaled a tooth which lodged in the lower lobe of the left lung, causing her death.

Serious Cutting Affray.

Grand Forks, N. D., April 8.—At Oberon, George Wagner and Charles Gilligan, Northern Pacific section foreman, engaged in a fight and Wagner was seriously cut. Gilligan was arrested.

FIGHT TO A FINISH

BOERS WILL NEVER GIVE UP THE STRUGGLE.

British Government Warned Not to Be Confident of an Early Termination of Hostilities, Nor to Believe Stories That the Boers Are Tired of the War—Boers Must Be Completely Crushed Before a General Surrender Is Possible—Real Fighting Men Will Not Give Up.

London, April 8.—Lord Kitchener has informed the war office that eighteen volunteer companies freed by reliefs are coming home and that arrangements are in progress for the speedy relief of many more volunteers. He proposes that in order to meet the demand fresh troops be sent to the front to replace the stale men.

The Pretoria correspondent of the Morning Press warns the government not to be confident of an early termination of hostilities, nor to believe the stories that the Boers are tired of war. He says: "It becomes daily more evident that the Boers intend to fight to a finish. Many are surrendering, but they are men of no standing. The real fighting men are still on commando, and although the recently successful British operations tend to bring the end nearer, it is evident that the Boers must be completely crushed before a general surrender is probable."

It is reported from Brussels that Acting President Schalkburger has removed the seat of government to Leydsdorp.

According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Hilservum Mr. Kruger has expressed an intention to go to the United States in June and visit Washington, New York, Chicago and Boston.

"It is stated," says a dispatch to the Times from Kroonstad, "that Gen. Dewet and Gen. Botha met at Vryheid."

MILLIONS KILLED BY PLAGUE.

Census Returns From India Show Serious Loss in Population.

London, April 8. — The depopulation of India through famine and cholera is assuming alarming proportions. The latest advices from Simla say the census returns of the central provinces show a decrease of over 1,000,000 since 1891, when under normal conditions an increase of 1,500,000 might have been expected. It is estimated that 5,000,000 of persons have died in India since 1896 from causes directly due to the famine. In Western India things are even worse. The Oodeypoor State returns show a decrease of 84,000, or 45 per cent of the population. The State of Bhopal shows a decrease of 200,000, and the District of Banda shows a decrease of 124,000. In Bombay city the population has diminished by 50,000. The localities which escaped the plague show a satisfactory though uncompensating increase. For instance, Madras has gained 8 per cent over 1891.

WYOMING OIL DECLARED BEST.

Experts Pronounce It Highest Grade Ever Found.

Cheyenne, Wyo., April 8.—An analysis byNew York experts of oil discovered recently near Evanston, in the extreme southwestern part of Wyoming, shows it to be the highest grade of illuminating oil ever discovered in the world. There is great excitement here over the report from New York, and although 1,000 acres have been filed upon during the last few weeks there will be a big rush to the district. Oil was first discovered in Southwestern Wyoming twenty-five years ago, but little attention was paid to it until a month ago, when railroad men, while sinking a well in what is known as Pioneer Hollow, struck a flow of oil. Local experts pronounced the oil high grade and a rush set in.

THEN SHE FAINTED.

Telephone Girl in Kentucky Displays Much Heroism.

Ashland, Ky., April 8. — Miss Ella May Wilson, night operator at the Citizens' Telephone exchange here, displayed much heroism during a fire which destroyed the exchange. While the switchboard was on fire and miniature forks of lightning were darting from the board she stuck to her post and called up the manager and had the current shut off at the light plant, although her hands were badly burned in the operation. After performing her duty Miss Wilson fainted and was found lying on the floor when the manager reached the office.

A Persistent Fire.

New York, April 8.—During Saturday night a fire which broke out at different times did damage to the extent of $175,000 to stock of the Sudhaus Paper Box company and the machinery belonging to the company, as well as to the stock of Swetzer, Pembrook & Co., both firms occupying the building at 63 and 85 White street. The fire broke out at 10 o'clock at night and was supposed to have been overcome in a short time with a small loss, but at 3 o'clock Sunday morning flames again broke out in one of the upper floors which was occupied by the Sudhaus company.

Fargo Artist Honored.

Fargo, N. D., April 8.—The pleasing information comes from Buffalo that the art judges of the Pan-American exposition have accepted two miniatures painted by Miss Male Douglas of Fargo. The artist is a daughter of Col. Douglas of this city. She is studying in the East.

Raided by Burglars.

Kenosha, Wis., April 8.—A gang of Chicago porch-climbers dropped in on Kenosha Saturday night and as a result four houses were burglarized and jewelry and diamonds to the value of nearly a thousand dollars taken.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 30. — The 4 per cent gross earnings tax bill met only a show of opposition in the house yesterday and was passed by a vote of 79 to 34. The only feature of the concluding stage of the fight was Representative Dobbin's effort to carry out the plan for its defeat framed several days ago, and change the rate to 5 per cent in hope of a deadlock. His own and one other vote went on record for the change, while 110 representatives declared against it. The debate that preceded the roll call on the passage of the bill was perfunctory.

The bill received a stormy reception in the senate and after being referred and recalled several times was finally sent to the committee on taxes and tax laws.

The house passed a concurrent resolution asking the president to name one of the new battleships "Minnesota."

Representative Walter Nelson has introduced a bill requiring railroad companies to accept bicycles as baggage without additional charge and issue checks for their transportation.

In the Senate.

The only advantage the direct primary bill obtained in the senate debate yesterday was a vote for reconsideration of the former action, by which a committee, yet to be appointed, was instructed to redraft its first section to include state officials. Another delay was secured and the bill will not come before the senate until Tuesday morning, when it will be taken up as a special order at 11 o'clock.

Senator Stockwell introduced a bill providing for local option in methods of levying taxes.

Senator Brower introduced an appropriation bill carrying $108,525 for the St. Cloud reformatory.

A bill from Senator Knatvold increases the term of the superintendent of public instruction from two to four years and fixes his salary at $2,500.

Senator Sivright introduced a bill providing for the appointment of two inspectors of normal schools.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 1. — After a spirited and lively debate the Umland divorce bill was recommended to pass. The measure provides that no marriage of either party shall occur until six months after divorce.

After a scrimmage in the senate Saturday the two bills from Senator Young, providing for the compromise of the Little Falls & Dakota land grant litigation, were recommended to pass.

The farriers of the state scored a victory in the senate and secured a recommendation for passage of their bill introduced by Senator Benedict, providing for liens on horses and other animals for the cost of shoeing.

In the House.

The Peterson bill making telegraph companies peculiarly liable for damages incidental to mental anguish caused by delay in the delivery of messages was, after a debate of an hour, taken from the table and placed on the house calendar.

The Sikorski bill permitting the taking of fish for food purposes with nets from the Mississippi river below St. Anthony Falls was passed by the house. The bill provides that the mesh of the nets used shall not be smaller than two and one-half inches.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 2.—Senator Daly introduced a bill which provides a method for contesting the election of state officers. At present there is no such provision in the statutes.

The Halvorsen anti-cigarette bill has been reintroduced. Minor changes have been made to avoid the bar against the introduction of bills identical with defeated bills.

Minnesota may have a third state asylum for the insane, established on the cottage plan, at Grand Rapids, in its northern pine woods. A bill from Senator McCarthy sets aside $75,000 for the purpose.

The Hurd resolution requesting the president to name one of the new battleships "Minnesota" passed the senate under suspension of the rules.

Senator Horton's bill codifying the insurance laws of the state was passed by the senate.

After a sharp debate the McGill bill providing for teachers' retirement fund was voted down, then reconsidered and finally placed at the head of general orders for amendment.

In the House.

Representative Ofthsun of Pope introduced in the house a bill arbitrarily to fix the maximum rates railroads may charge for the transportation of cereals, potatoes and coal within the state.

Yesterday was the last day for the introduction of bills. The last bill received by the house was No. 732, introduced by Representative Sweet of Hennepin. The bill provides that cities authorized to maintain sinking funds may invest such funds in their own city bonds if a rate of 31-2 per cent may be insured.

The governor's veto of the Sweet bill for a uniform system of accounting was yesterday received by the house, and, on motion of Mr. Roberts, laid on the table, pending an investigation as to the alleged conflict between the provisions of the Sweet bill and the board of control bill.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 3.—Victories for the Dunn direct primary election law marked every stage of its progress through a fierce all-day fight in the senate yesterday. Its important sections have been passed on, and the upper house will pass the bill to-day, amended only in unimportant features. The scope of the law is unchanged. The amendments attached yesterday are of no special importance, with one exception. Elective park, library and school board officers in cities of 50,000 or less are excepted from the operation of the act by an amendment from Senator Barker. An amendment from Senator Schaller provides that candidates for offices affording no compensation shall not be required to pay nomination [illegible]

[illegible] sioners, inmates of the soldiers' home to retain from their pensions for personal use the sum of $8 per month in lieu of $4 per month, as under the present law.

The house bill authorizing the state auditor to draw his warrant for $19,947 to liquidate claims against the state accruing under the law of 1895 offering a bounty of 1 cent per pound on beet sugar manufactured in the state, was lost by a vote of 55 tto 55.

The house passed the Alford bill for the restoration of full rights of citizenship to persons who have served sentences in Minnesota jails or prisons under conviction of felony.

Representative Pennington's bill authorizing county commissioners to allow county superintendents of schools receiving not more than $1,200 a year $250 for traveling expenses was passed.

Representative Riley's bill giving blacksmiths a first lien on horses and oxen in security for unpaid shoeing bills was passed.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April [illegible].—After the hardest fight the senate has witnessed during the session the Dunn direct primary law was put upon its final passage at 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and passed by an overwhelming majority. Forty-five out of the sixty-three votes in the upper house were cast for it, and only twelve against it. Three of the six senators absent or not voting had declared for the bill and would have recorded their votes had they been present. This was the result of four days of the hardest kind of parliamentary warfare, that continued in and out of working hours without cessation. A few additional changes were made in the bill yesterday, but none of them will stir up opposition in the house. The action of the lower branch will make it a law and Gov. Van Sant has indicated that he will sign it as soon as presented. The bill goes back to the house with few changes of importance. The Ives amendment eliminates the declaration of previous political affiliation upon oath, but provides, as did the original bill, that the primary voter must signify the party he wishes to vote for and can receive but one ballot. The Schaller amendment remits nomination fees of candidates for offices offering no compensation.

As the Dunn bill now stands it includes all offices exxcept those of the state government. Congressmen, judges of the district court and members of the legislature and all city and county officials will go through the next campaign under its provisions.

The pressure of bills yet to be acted upon became apparent in the senate for the first time yesterday. A dozen measures against which there is no opposition were lifted from general orders and placed on the calendar to expedite their passage.

In the House.

The Bush tax ferret bill was recommended for indefinite postponement by the house in committee of the whole. The bill turned down was a substitute for the original tax ferret bill introduced by Mr. Bush early in the session.

Senator Buckman's bill making it a misdemeanor for an employe to secure railroad transportation to be thereafter paid for in labor and then refusing to perform the labor was yesterday passed by the house.

The Shell national guard bill was passed by the house. The bill provides that the governor may from time to time change the formation of the several organizations to make them more nearly conform with the formations prescribed by the United States army regulations.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 5. — The Jacobson gross carnings bill, to raise the tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent, was passed by the senate yesterday morning by a vote of 53 to 8. The vote was taken after a spirited debate. The bill only becomes a law after being submitted to the people at the next general election.

The Phillips bill, amending the "truant act" of two years ago, has passed the senate and will go to the governor for his signataure.

By a vote of 26 to 5 the Dorsey bill providing for the publicataion of a history of the Minnesota volunteer troops in the Spanish war was lost. It lacked six votes of the majority required. The measure carried a heavy appropriation.

The finance committee substitute for the Daugherty sanitorium bill for consumptives passed the senate yesterday. It was redrafted to carry an appropriation of only $1,000 and then submitted in place of the former bill that asked $10,000.

In the House.

The house refused to concur in the senate amendments to the Dunn primary election bill. Messrs Dunn, Roberts and Schutz were named as conferees on the part of the house.

Representative Berg's bill authorizing boards of supervisors to collect a portion of road taxes in cash and use the same for the purchase of road building machinery was killed in the house.

Senator Smith's bill for the establishment of municipal employment agencies in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth was passed by the house.

NO LONGER A MENACE.

Stray Submarine Mine Has Been Discovered and Blown Up.

Norfolk, Va., April 5.—S. H. Mitchell of the United States artillery department reports having successfully blown up a stray submarine mine near Sacketts Harbor, Va. The mine was one that had been planted during the Spanish war at Port Royal, S. C., or some other point in that vicinity. The mine had broken loose and since that time had been drifting at sea. Some farmer discovered it a few days ago thrown up by the tide.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10, 1901.

A Sentimental Farmer.

"These sheep pictures of Mauve's are beautiful," said Mr. L., the art instructor of the summer art school, to his class as he turned over a lot of reproductions from the great artist's paintings. "They are so gentle, so tender, so suggestive of pastoral peace and quietude!"

"Oh, I do love sheep!" exclaimed one of the girls. "They are so dear! Don't you think so, Mr. L.?"

Mr. L. looked thoughtful for a moment: then he said:

"My father, who was a farmer, kept sheep for 20 years. He was an old man when he decided to give up the practice—an old man, but as full of sentiment and feeling as he had ever been. I shall never forget the day when the purchaser of the flock came to take them away. My father stood in the barnyard and watched till the last sheep had passed through the great gate into the road, waited till the last faint bleating of the flock had died away in the distance; then he turned to me with a face full of emotion." There were tears in the eyes of the "class," and their girlish hearts were touched by the pathetic word picture. Somebody said "Ah!" in a long drawn fashion. "He turned to me, my poor old father," the artist continued, "and said in a low, earnest voice, "William, I'd go five miles any day to kick a sheep!"—Leslie's Weekly.

His Goal the Letter "V."

When the late Horace Maynard, LL. D., entered Amherst college, he exposed himself to ridicule and jibing questions of his fellow students by placing over the door of his room a large square of white cardboard on which was inscribed in bold outlines the single letter V. Disregarding comment and question, the young man applied himself to his work, ever keeping in mind the height to which he wished to climb, the first step toward which was signified by the mysterious V.

Four years later, after receiving the compliments of professors and students on the way he had acquitted himself as valedictorian of his class, young Maynard called the attention of his fellow graduates to the letter over his door. Then a light broke in upon them, and they cried out:

"Is it possible that you had the valedictory in mind when you put that V over your door?"

"Assuredly I had," was the emphatic reply.

On he climbed, from height to height, becoming successively professor of mathematics in the University of Tennessee, lawyer, member of congress, attorney general of Tennessee, United States minister to Constantinople and finally postmaster general.—Success.

Snuff Spoons.

All the world is familiar with snuffboxes, but snuff spoons are pretty little refinements of which this generation has hardly heard. Very probably they came into use about two years after Sir George Rooke's expedition to Vigo bay in 1702, when he captured half a ton of tobacco and snuff from the Spanish galleons, and snuff thus became a common article in England.

One of the characters in a comedy published at Oxford in 1704, entitled "An Act at Oxford," by Thomas Baker, says, "But I carry sweet snuff for the ladies," to which Arabella replies: "A spoon too. That's very gallant, for to see some people run their fat fingers into a box is as nauseous as eating without a fork."

In the forties and fifties snuff spoons were still in use on the Scottish border. They were of bone and of a size to go into the snuffbox. People fed their noses, it was said, as naturally as they carried soup to their mouths. As late as 1877 a farmer at Norham-on-Tweed was seen using one.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Marvelous Chicken Legs.

The mechanism of the leg and foot of a chicken or other bird that roosts on a limb is a marvel of design. It often seems strange that a bird will sit on a roost and sleep all night without falling off, but the explanation is perfectly simple. The tendon of the leg of a bird that roosts is so arranged that when the leg is bent at the knee the claws are bound to contract and thus hold with a sort of death grip the limb around which they are placed. Put a chicken's feet on your wrist and then make the bird sit down, and you will have a practical illustration on your skin that you will remember for some time. By this singular arrangement, seen only in such birds as roost, they will rest comfortably and never think of holding on, for it is impossible for them to let go till they stand up.—Presbyterian.

Censorship in China.

The censorship is a very real thing in China. There any one who writes an immoral book is punished with a 100 blows of the heavy bamboo and banishment for life. [illegible]

On the Government.

They were two big, burly Indians. The long eagle feather in the hat of one who is known as "chief" and the bright red ostrich tip in the sombrero of the other would have told that if the unmistakable features had not evidenced it. A government employee, it matters not who, but one who may possibly in certain events happening make a "stake" out of the tribe to which these Indians belong, was doing the honors of the capitol and showing the braves about the corridors. They left the Indian committee room and came to the door of the house restaurant.

"Let's have a bite to eat," suggested the man with the graft.

"All right," was the quick reply of the aborigines.

At the luncheon counter the one who could master the most English asked, "Guv'munt pay?"

"Oh, yes," responded the host, thinking that the quickest way to inform them that they would not have to stand good for the bill.

"Ugh!" grunted the brave, "we eat lot, guv'munt pay." And they did—four cups of coffee each, half a dozen hard boiled eggs, three ham sandwiches, one dozen doughnuts, a whole baked chicken, ice cream, a whole pie each and besides that a thirst for fire water that was absolutely appalling. The luncheon counter looked as though a cyclone might have paid it a visit by the time the Indians got through, and the bill that the "guv'munt" clerk had to foot made his week's salary look like 7 cents.

"Guv'munt heap good," grunted the brave as he picked his teeth in true "white brother" fashion in the corridor. "We eat here again." But it will not be in company with that particular clerk.—Washington Star.

"How Soon We Are Forgot."

A writer in a Washington newspaper, in a column devoted to instructive and entertaining chat about the capitol, expresses surprise because in the basement of the building are portraits of "worthy old gentlemen" forgotten by "nine-tenths" of the visitors to the building and wonders somewhat why Richard Montgomery, Thomas Mifflin, Charles Thomson and Francis Hopkinson should find a place in the memory of the painter and on the wall of the senate basement.

The writer had looked in Fiske's "History of the United States" and could not find either Thomson or Hopkinson. When he goes to Quebec, he may find the mark to indicate where Montgomery fell while trying to capture the citadel and the house in which he died. At St. Paul's church, New York, he can find his tomb. Mifflin he can find as the president of the congress that received Washington's resignation, and Thomson he will discover to have been regarded as one of the brightest men of the Revolutionary time, while he has but to look at the original Declaration of Independence to see "Fras." Hopkinson's name, one of the best known of all signers because of the brilliancy and variety of his accomplishments.—New York Times.

A Decisive Step.

His chum came in and found him slipping a lock of hair into an envelope, not furtively or surreptitiously, but just placing it under cover in a calm, businesslike way.

"Hello!" says the visitor. "What's up?"

"Nothing," he answered. "I'm only sending back Miss Hamilton-Highlow's hair, that's all."

"Engagement off again?"

"Yes."

"How many times does this make?"

"Five. It's final this time, though, one way or the other."

"Does she say so?"

"Oh, she always says it's final. I'm deciding things just now. It's off forever or cards out soon!"

"How do you do it?"

"Little scheme of my own. You know the color of her hair, don't you? Warm brown, with a little raw umber in it. Well, this sample of hair I'm doing up is red—good, regular, standard red. I tell you we're going to get down to genuine emotion this time. She'll know whether she loves me or not, and if she does she'll walk me in by the ear."—London Mail.

A Coffee Barometer.

A cup of hot coffee is an unfailing barometer if you allow a lump of sugar to drop to the bottom of the cup and watch the air bubbles arise without disturbing the coffee. If the bubbles collect in the middle, the weather will be fine; if they adhere to the cup, forming a ring, it will either rain or snow, and if the bubbles separate without assuming any fixed position changeable weather may be expected.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Those Boston Girls.

Carrie—That awful Tom Browne offered to kiss me.

Bertha—You don't mean it!

Carrie—I do, and I told him if he did I'd slap his face.

Bertha—And what did he say to that?

Carrie—He didn't say a word. He just kissed me.

Bertha—And you slapped his face?

Carrie—No: to tell the truth, I was so flustered I forgot all about it.—Boston Transcript.

At Variance.

"There's a whole lot of difference," remarked the freckled fanatic, "in wishing you were dead and wishing you were in heaven."—Indianapolis Sun.

Yard was once any stick, rod or pole. The expression is still used with this meaning when applied to various parts of a ship's equipment, as yardarm, sailyard and the like.

A wise man thinks before he speaks, but a fool speaks and then thinks of what he has been saying.

We Want Correspondents

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. [illegible]

How a Woman Loves.

Whenever I hear his name, I could faint. When I see him, I could sink into the ground. At the sight of his handwriting I grow cold from head to foot, I tremble, my heart aches so that it seems breaking in two. I long to be with him, yet when I am with him I have nothing to say. I have to escape and be miserable all alone. He is my thought all day; the last before I sleep, the first when I awake. I could cry and cry. I try to read, and I remember not a word. I like playing best, for then I can almost imagine that he is listening. But when I stop playing and look around I find myself in an empty room. It is awful. I call his name; no one answers. I whisper it; still no answer. I throw myself on the ground, and I say, "Think of me, think of me; you shall; you must; you do think of me!" It is great torture and a great despair. Perhaps it is a madness too. But it is my way of loving. I want to love while I live. If I knew for certain that he loved me—me only—the joy, I think, would kill me. Love! Do you know, poor little angel, what it means? Sometimes it is a curse.—From "Robert Orange," by Mrs. Craigie.

Cured by Forgetting.

This is an English story, and, strange as it may seem, it made a hit when it was told at the Lambs' club, says the New York Telegraph. It was perpetrated by Lawrence d'Orsay, the English actor. Several members of the club spun yarns of dubious merit, when Mr. d'Orsay in his peculiar way began:

"Now, gentlemen, I'll relate a story."

One man present pulled out his watch, and they all thought it was going to be a serial. One or two started to go, but the actor stopped them by his assurance that the story wouldn't be very long.

"There was a friend of mine in London," he said, "who was an incessant cigarette smoker. Finally he lost his memory. Then he forgot to smoke cigarettes, and he got well again."

Mr. d'Orsay effected his escape through the assistance of a friend who knew him when he didn't tell such stories.

A Masculine Lady's Maid.

A Bostonian while exploring the files of a paper printed in his town a century ago came across this rather startling advertisement: "S Rogers informs those ladies who wish to be dressed by him, either on assembly or ball days, to give him notice the previous day. Ladies who engage to and don't dress must pay him half price."

SUPPLEMENT TO THE

St. Hilaire Spectator.

ST. HILAIRE, MINNESOTA.

Wednesday, April 10, 1901.

The prediction is made that the severe winter in the north woods of the Adirondack mountains has killed more deer than hunters made away with last fall.

A stage wedding of two members of a burlesque troupe was announced to be performed in a Washington theater, but the high contracting parties found it impossible to secure the services of a person competent to perform the ceremony.

The Rev. John Nalle of Trappe, Pa., recently celebrated the 100th anniversary of his birth. He was born near Westminster, Ind., February 18, 1801, and is probably the oldest clergyman in the United States. Mr. Nalle was ordained at the age of 40.

Senate document No. 177 gives a report of tests of fireproof woods from the torpedo-boat Winslow, the purpose being to determine whether the process is enduring. The result was very satisfactory, showing that the wood treated five years ago had lost none of its fireproof qualities.

While cutting up a poplar at his saw mill in Lee county, Va., C. R. Kesterton found an augur hole plugged by a pin. On removing the pin he found in the hole five $20 gold pieces bearing dates between 1850 and 1860. The coins are supposed to have been hid there for safe keeping during the civil war.

While Mr. Carnegie was depleting his fortune by $5,200,000 for libraries in New York, Mr. John D. Rockefeller was increasing his by $6,200,000, representing a single quarterly dividend on his Standard Oil stock. If Mr. Rockefeller wanted to get rid of his profits on that stock alone he would have to build about one $80,000 library a day.

Out of $34,932,644 contributed in 1900 by charitable persons in the United States to educational institutions only a little more than $1,000,000 was given to southern schools and colleges. This amount includes donations for institutions intended for the exclusive instruction of both whites and blacks, and but a small part of it came from the hands of northern givers.

The billposters' association of England exercises a censorship over the posters appearing on the London hoardings. A recent case was the poster of the play "Greed of Gold." The scene pictured showed a woman in the foreground, in light attire, with her throat cut. All the members of the association refused to post it. The duties of the censors are said to be exercised with tact and discrimination.

The fate which seems to come to all communistic colonies has overtaken the Altruistic association formed about a year ago near Burlington, N. J. The plan of the promoters was to form a settlement where there should be no police or magisterial system and no laws or rules save those of courtesy. The novelty of farm life soon wore off, and many of the colonists returned to the busy world, where pay was better and life more exciting.

Mrs. Ella Downey of Fontanelle, Ia., seeks divorce on altogether unprecedented grounds. Her husband, Frank Downey, suffered the amputation of an arm last fall and has kept the dismembered limb ever since. This was bad enough, but whenever he gets in a tantrum he brandishes it around the house, knocking dishes off the table and beating the dog with it, thereby severely shocking his wife's nervous system. Wherefore the lady seeks separation and alimony.

It has long been a disputed question whether America was peopled from Asia. The chief argument against the theory that man made his approach to this continent across Bering strait has been the lack of resemblance in culture between the aborigines of this country and the known races of Asia. This may be accounted for, a Washington scientist maintains, by the fact that all the Asiatic arts and customs would in the course of generations have been frozen out of any migratory peoples in their getting around Bering strait. As the tribes moved northward they would lose the characteristics of their life, one after another, notably agriculture and domestic animals, until finally, pressing near the polar circle their whole energies would be absorbed in finding food and keeping warm. With his culture thus frozen out, according to this theory, early man crossed Bering strait, and as he moved southward on this continent developed improved ways of living, but after such a long interval of time that the new customs were entirely distinct from those of Asia.

The new French law as to the provision of seats for shop assistants came into force on Jan. 1. All shops and similar places where goods are offered for sale by a female staff must be provided in each room with a number of seats equal to that of the women there employed. This law differs from that which will come into force in Germany on April 1. The latter provides only for "a sufficient number" of seats. The English law of 1899 provides one seat for each three women employed, the supposition being that all are not idle at the same time.

Some idea of the magnitude of the requirements of an army such as the British now have in the field in South Africa is afforded by the details given of the stores and animals sent out up to a short time before the occupation of Pretoria. These included 170,000,000 small-arm cartridges, 500,000 artillery cartridges of various calibers, 175,000 horses and mules gathered from all parts of the world, 300,000 khaki suits, 370,000 pairs of boots, 420,000 blankets and tents, sets of camp equipage, harness and other articles in similar proportions.

Beautiful and Rich

Indian Maidens Intermarry with the Whites.

From the intermingling of the white and the red blood in the Indian territory there has grown up a race notable for the beauty and grace of its women. The girls of the Indian territory are no more the wild, untamable, dusky beauties of early Indian fiction than they are the wretched creatures found among some of the tribes today. They are to all intents and purposes on the same plane with white women of education and refinement, except that the strain of wild, strong Indian blood in their veins gives them a tinge of richer color, a brighter eye, a more lissome grace than their white sisters possess. Reckoned in fractions of blood, these Indian beauties are more Caucasian than aboriginal American. All of them, however, are Indians, politically and socially; they hold firmly to their membership in the tribes. Many of them are one-quarter or one-eighth, or even one-sixteenth or one-thirty-second Indian; but the red strain is stronger and shows, if not in some lingering richness of color or in the molding of the face, at least in an all but indefinable fascination and grace, the heritage of a forest people. Among them one may find perfect blondes, with the Indian strain still salient and palpable. And although they have succumbed to the corset of civilization, in almost all cases they have their less trammeled ancestresses to thank for the blessing of well-nigh perfect figures. And one other of woman's best gifts they possess: clear and low voices, with not a trace of the guttural intonation which is common to original Indian tongues. Raised amid scenes of the bloodless conquest of their race by the whites, they look without concern upon the destruction of tribal customs and the thinning out of old blood. To this last they even contribute, for so seldom does one of them marry an Indian that such an event is commented upon in the territory as remarkable. Before the middle of the last century a Cherokee woman one day met a hunter in the forest. She was frightened at his white skin and fled thinking him an evil spirit. But he was fascinated by her beauty and pursued her into camp, where he learned that she was the daughter of a friendly chief. The hunter laid seige to the heart of the dusky belle and finally gained her consent to marry him according to tribal customs then in vogue. This hunter and his squaw raised a half-breed child, who was a great curiosity to the redskins. As years sped by other hunters invaded the domain of the five tribes of the Indian territory and married other dark-skinned beauties. Intermarriage in the Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, Chickasaw, and Seminole tribes has flourished to such an extent within the last quarter century that the full-blood element is now on the verge of extinction. The old men of the tribes are becoming alarmed and have passed laws against intermarriage. Some of these laws are very severe, almost prohibitive, in fact. The young Indian women object to these laws, because they do not want, as a rule, to marry the men of their own tribes. The Chickasaws are the strictest regarding intermarriage. A law recently placed on their statute books requires any white man applying for a license to marry a Chickasaw girl, first, to produce evidence that he has resided in the Chickasaw nation two years, next to furnish credentials as to his good character and third, to pay $1,000 for the marriage license. Of course, the girl has and sometimes takes the privilege of eloping, at the cost of losing her right in the tribal lands and money, and of disgracing herself in the eyes of her relatives. Her headright is something worth considering. A right in the Chickasaw nation is valued at from $5,000 to $8,000. The intermarriage laws of all the four nations named are about the same, excepting that the Chickasaw nation charges $1,000 for a license, while the others only ask $10. There is good reason for these laws. Many fortune-hunters, attracted by the wealth of the Indian maidens, have in the past married into the tribes, gained control of large tracts of land, fostered outlaws, and raised bad families. There were few happy marriages, and not until the wise men of the tribes met and passed an act making every white man show his credentials before the license was issued, was there a betterment of these conditions. The character of each applicant was carefully examined before he was admitted. For several years thereafter respectable and industrious white men married into the tribes and their children married whites. It was so on down the line until today the eight, sixteenth, and thiry-second part Indian predominates. Of pure bloods there will be none in a few years.—Chicago Journal.

Roses Replace Violets.

For the first time in many years the violet has lost its place as a fashionable flower in woman's spring head gear. The rose has crowded the modest purple flower out.

The milliners say that it is due to a whim of the young queen of Holland. The rose is Queen Wilhelmina's favorite flower. She wears roses, pink and white and red, whenever and wherever she can, and when her wedding trousseau was made in Paris the makers had to put lots of roses in her finery.

That set the fashion in Paris, where there are not beautiful royal brides every year, and all the Parisian milliners took the rose into high favor. Paris sets the pace for the fashions here, so New York women are wearing roses too, and violets only hold their own at the florists.

Two Products of the Pen.

In sending to George Bancroft a specimen of the pork raised on his farm in Vermont Mr. Evarts wrote this characteristic note, which was found preserved among the historian's papers after his death: "Dear Bancroft: I send you two products of my pen today—my usual half barrel of pig pork and my eulogy on Chief Justice Chase."

War Fatal to Docked Horses.

The habit of docking horses' tails is held by humane persons in England to have been one cause of the large loss of horses in the English army in South Africa. The regular army horses have the natural tails, but as volunteer soldiers are called for in time of war so volunteer horses are drafted, and in England the fashion outside of the army is to dock the tails of horses. The chief scourge of animals of the African campaign has been the flies and against these pests the docked horses had no protection. The agony they suffered contributed undoubtedly to the heavy mortality among the animals.

The claim is made for South Dakota that it has for the third consecutive year produced more wealth per capita than any other State in the Union, the total for this year being $106,500,000. Of this sum $27,000,000 comes from live stock, $18,000,000 from corn, $15,000,000 from wheat and $12,000,000 from minerals.

Central African Fashions.

Bangles, necklaces and belts made of fine copper are commonly worn as ornaments by the native tribes of Central Africa. Miss Caddick, in her delightful account of her journey in Central Africa, describes the ingenious way in which the natives manufacture the wire from the rough copper. They draw it into the finest possible strands which they twist on hair. The men cut a hole through a tree, into which they put a piece of iron with a small perforation in it. The strip of copper is tapered to a point and put through the hole in the iron. The natives catch hold of the end with a kind of pincers; then a good number of them hang on to it and pull it through. This process is repeated through smaller holes in the iron, till the wire is fine enough. All the ornaments are beautifully made, and the wire is extremely fine and flexible. Some of the men wear five copper wire belts, "manyetas," as they are called, which fit the body very tightly. The manyetas are very difficult to buy, and I was at first puzzled to account for this. After a time I came to understand that the belts, being so small, were extremely difficult to get off. The poor men required time, and were obliged to use a good deal of oil before they could wriggle out of them. These manyetas are very heavy, and the weight and size greatly astonished me, as natives usually seem to dislike wearing anything tight or heavy. But fashion, in Africa as in England, makes martyrs. The women wear thick brass wire coiled round and round their arms from wrist to elbow and in the same way around their necks in a deep collar, which must be heavy and uncomfortable.—Youth's Companion.

Ruskin's Advice to Girls.

The recent publication by an English club of some letters of Ruskin to girls recalls the establishment by him of a rose fete in the Girls' High School at Cork. At his suggestion a queen was elected yearly, to whom he gave a gold cross and a set of books, [illegible] the latter for distribution among the girls. Pieces of native gold and silver and curios of interest and value were presented by him to the pupils at various times. One of his letters can be read with profit by all women, not alone girls: "The chief danger for young girls in this great 'today' of their own and the world's age is the temptation to restlessness, whether in curiosity, pleasure, or pride. I want them all to be earnestly, thoroughly, thoughtfully intelligent of what is close to them, and under their care—happy, not in one day, as the happiest of their lives, but in the daily current of their time; and proud in rightly knowing and rightly doing whatever they are called upon—not by fame, but by love—to do for any who love them, for all who are dependent upon them."—Chicago Times-Herald.

Cavalry Fencing Horse.

M. Moulon, assistant instructor of fencing and sword practice in the French army, has invented a fencing horse, a device which is highly spoken of as being a great improvement over all other methods of teaching young cavalrymen in the exercise of sword and lance. The apparatus advantageously replaces the five or six stationary manikins of the old system, but it also answers for half a dozen combatants on foot or on horseback armed "a la latte" or with the lance, watching, striking, pricking, cleaving or running through with a real conviction that is interesting to observe. The minister of war has authorized the heads of cavalry corps to employ this "fencing horse."

An Enormous Eel.

A conger eel, nearly nine feet long, two feet and four inches in girth and weighing 148 pounds was recently caught on the beach at Snettisham, near Hunstanton, England. The fisherman's attention was attracted to it by some seagulls hovering over shallow water, where the eel was captured after a long struggle [illegible]

THE BEST HE EVER SAW.

A Missourian Pronounces on the Farming Possibilities of Western Canada.

Just at present considerable interest is being aroused in the fact that a few new districts (of limited acreage) are being opened out by the Canadian government in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia (western Canada), and any information concerning this country is eagerly sought. Mr. W. R. Corser, of Higginsville, Lafayette Co., Mo., was a delegate there during last summer, and writing of his impressions he says:

"I found surprising yields of grain of all descriptions. One farmer I visited threshed of 175 acres:

"600 bushels of wheat from fifteen acres, 40 bushels to acre.

"600 bushels of barley from ten acres, 60 bushels to acre.

"15,000 bushels of oats from 150 acres, 100 bushels to acre.

"The samples were all No. 1.

"I also saw a considerable number of stock. Swine do well and there is no disease amongst them. They are a good source of income to the farmer. The cattle on the range beat anything I ever saw. Fat and ready for beef, fully matured and ripened on the nutritious grasses of the prairie. I am firmly convinced that this country offers better facilities for a poor man than any I have ever seen."

Information concerning these lands can be had from any agent of the government whose advertisement appears elsewhere in this paper.

Boil Eggs in Cold Water.

"This egg tastes as if it had been boiled in hot water," said the emancipated young woman with the short hair. "I can always tell in a minute if an egg has been cooked in that way."

Her companion had not learned quite so many things, and was quite satisfied with her egg. She only murmured, softly:

"I never heard of an egg being boiled in cold water, did you?"

"It is high time you were introduced to this institution," her wise friend continued, "and I am delighted to illuminate you, even at the risk of arousing more or less sarcasm. An egg to be boiled properly for human consumption should be put into cold water and then placed over the fire. Then it cooks with the water. The egg cooks, moreover, thoroughly and from the inside.

"Ask a physician or a trained nurse how to boil an egg so that its greatest nutriment and flavor shall be preserved. Either of them will tell you to put it in cold water. The old way of dropping an egg into boiling water has long been given up. It used to cook the egg suddenly and destroy its flavor.

"So don't be sarcastic because you haven't heard of the century's advance."—New York Sun.

A WOMAN'S HEART.

Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer Tells a Harrowing Tale of Suffering.

M'Carron, Mich., April 8.—(Special.)—Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer of this place has given the following interesting letter for publication:

"For years I suffered intense pain in the region of the heart. I doctored with the best physicians. Some of them would relieve me for a short time, but the pain always returned. My heart was so bad that I would have to sit up in bed for hours to get relief. I would lie awake almost all night. I am 62 years of age, and no one can understand how much I suffered with this Heart Trouble.

"About a year ago I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and commenced to use them. From the first my condition improved. The pain in my heart gradually grew less, and my general health much better, and now I can say positively that I am entirely cured. I can sleep all night, and enjoy almost perfect health. I thank God for the cure that has come to me through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have thought long over the matter of giving this letter for publication, and am doing so now without any solicitation whatever, and simply because I feel it my duty to express the profound gratitude I feel for my recovery, and to let others, who may be suffering as I was, know how they may find a cure. I know that nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me, because I have taken no other medicine for over a year. I feel better now than I have for many years, and it is all due to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Mrs. Dyer's case and its cure has attracted a great deal of attention, and her letter is a splendid tribute to the curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O? It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

LOVE NATIVE STATE.

MISSOURIANS IN EXILE ARE ORGANIZING.

Two Clubs of Persons from That Big State Formed in Outside Territory, One in Chicago, the Other in Texas—Prominent Men Join.

Although Missourians are to be found in every state in the Union and make up a large number of the original settlers and prominent citizens of the states west of the Mississippi, they have always been so busy extending their influence and investing their capital, possibly, that they have failed to cultivate that state spirit and fraternal feeling which some other states have manifested to such a pleasant degree, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Every man who has left the state has, however, deep in heart a warm spot for "old Missouri," and it was only necessary for some one to take the initiative in order that the Missouri club might hold its own with other kindred organizations. There are at present only two Missouri clubs, one formed recently in Chicago, and the Missouri association of Texas, a still younger society, with headquarters at Dallas, but both of these promise to become flourishing organizations, and the pioneers in the movement are indulging in great expectations in regard to the World's Fair. It is confidently expected that by that time nearly every state in the Union will have its Missouri club. The Missouri club of Chicago was organized November 12, and started with a membership of fifty, most of whom are well-known business and professional men of Chicago. The club rooms are in the Western Union building, where business meetings will be held, social affairs being enjoyed at the Grand Pacific hotel. The club will have a ladies' auxiliary, the object being to promote sociability among ex-Missourians. Dr. Coleman G. Buford was elected president. Dr. Buford is a physician who began practicing in Chicago in 1893. He was born in Lafayette county, Missouri, in 1872, receiving his early training in the Wentworth Military academy at Wentworth, Mo. He was graduated from the Northwestern Medical college of Chicago in 1894. He spent two years of practical work in the insane asylum at Kankakee, afterward studying surgery under Dr. Christian Fenger for three years. He has since 1896 been instructor of surgery in the Northwestern Medical school at Chicago. The Missouri Society of Texas was recently formed at Dallas, Tex., the purpose being to promote fraternal association and good fellowship among the ex-Missourians of Texas. All persons who are now residing in Dallas who formerly lived in Missouri, and members of their families, are eligible to membership. Thomas D. Miller, manager of the Dallas Gas and Fuel company, is president; Dr. A. M. Elmore, a prominent physician, is vice-president; H. L. S. Kniffen, a wholesale coal, grain and lumber dealer, is treasurer, and Thomas B. Love of the law firm of Moroney & Love, is secretary. The directors are Judge E. B. Perkins, general attorney of the St. Louis and Southwestern railroad of Texas; Hugh N. Fitzgerald, managing editor of the Dallas News; Dudley G. Wooten, a prominent lawyer, and J. W. Maxwell, general superintendent of the Missouri, Kansas and Texas railway, of Texas. All these gentlemen live in Dallas, and those from Austin are Hon. Joe Lee Jameson, state revenue agent, and Hon. J. S. Kendall, state superintendent of public instruction; Paul Waples, a wholesale grocer at Fort Worth; R. V. Bowden, a lawyer of El Paso; Judge J. A. L. Wolfe, a lawyer of Sherman, and William C. Cloyd, of the Rusk Journal, of Rusk, and other members. The society proposes to co-operate in every way to promote the best possible representation of the interests and resources of Texas at the St. Louis World's Fair, and will endeavor to procure the governor of Missouri and his staff, the state officers and prominent Missourians. The association is carrying out a systematic plan by which they hope to enroll as members every ex-Missourian now living in the Lone Star state.

Education in Philippines.

The first industrial and manual training school ever opened in the Philippines has just begun operations in the city of Dumanguete, in the island of Negroes, with a Princeton man in charge. He is the Rev. Leon C. Hills, a graduate of Princeton Theological Seminary, and the school was established through the munificence of H. B. Silliman of New York city, who gave $10,000 for the purpose. A two-story school building is now being built, the first story of stone, and the second of some kind of hard wood, and not bamboo, which the natives use for almost every sort of building. The roof is to be of metal. Besides the school building there will be a small chapel (Presbyterian) and a manual training school building, where little Filipinos are to be taught carpentering, iron working, etc. A hundred acres of land have been purchased on which to teach the youngsters agriculture. The city of Dumanguete was selected because of the friendly attitude of the natives toward the Americans.

Butterfly's Wings.

The slow flapping of a butterfly's wings, according to Sir John Lubbock, produces no sound, but when the movements are rapid a noise is produced which increases in shrillness with the number of vibrations. Thus the house fly, which produces the sound F, vibrates its wings 21,120 times a minute, and the bee, which makes a sound of A, as many as 26,400 times. Prof. Narcy, the naturalist, succeeded by a delicate mechanism in confirming these numbers graphically. He fixed a fly so that the tip of the wing just touched a cylinder which was moved by clockwork.

INTRODUCED BY A WOMAN.

Navel Oranges First Brought to America by Fair Horticulturist.

At this season of the year, when the seedless orange is accepted as a matter of course upon the daily breakfast table, it is worth while recalling that its introduction into the United States was due entirely to the efforts of the department of agriculture, whose attention was called to it by a very observant and intelligent American woman. This woman, while traveling in the province of Bahia, Brazil, in 1868, observed that the oranges of that province were much superior to those raised in the United States, and mentioned this fact in a letter to the then commissioner of agriculture, a personal friend. Further correspondence resulted in an order for twelve young plants, which arrived in Washington safely packed in wet moss and clay. All the plants thrived in the department grounds, and the distribution of buds began shortly afterward, but failed to attract much attention until 1879, when two trees came into bearing on the place of Horatio Tibbetts, at Riverside, Cal. The first crop consisted of but sixteen oranges, but the fruit was considered phenomenal in character, and these two trees have been the propagators of all the famous Riverside groves, which now have an annual output of 1,600,000 boxes of "naval," or "seedless oranges." It was doubted at first whether a seedless fruit could be propagated to a point of profitable production, but later, when the possibility was realized, Mr. Tibbetts disposed of buds at the rate of $5 a dozen. This was as late as 1884. The revolution wrought in the orange production of California by the naval orange has been complete, as it has practically superseded every other variety in the famous Riverside district. For some reason the navel orange does not appear to thrive in Florida, and its cultivation is consequently confined almost entirely to California.—Philadelphia Record.

What the Fool Said.

An Ignoramus, not knowing the author of the line, "Though lost to sight, to memory dear," appealed to a Person of Discretion, says the New York Sun. "You don't mean to tell me you don't know?" laughed the Person of Discretion so rudely that the Ignoramus slunk away, ashamed. Plucking up his courage he approached a Diplomatist. "The same author who penned the line, 'Consistency, thou art a jewel,'" was the answer. The Ignoramus asked a Man Who Is Never Caught Napping. "Of course, I know the author," said the Man Who Is Never Caught Napping. "It's—ahem—confound it, I've forgotten. The name is on the very tip of my tongue, but—how stupid—I know perfectly well, you know, but your asking me has knocked it clear out of my head." The Ignoramus went to a Wise Man and told him all. "Three separate students upon three separate occasions were asked three different questions," said the Wise Man, oracularly, "The first question was, 'What was the exact number of the ancient Greek chorus?' the second, 'What is the cause of the aurora borealis?' the third, 'What is the source of animal heat?' To each question each student gave the same answer, 'I did know, but I've forgotten,' and each instructor, it is said, made the same comment; 'To think that the only man who ever knew should have forgotten!'" Still mystified, the Ignoramus asked a Fool—there was no doubt about his being a Fool, because everybody said so. His answer proved it. "I don't know," said the Fool.

Got a Job Lot of Rubies.

James O. Beaudry, a Minneapolis man, is being congratulated upon the remarkable fortune which has attended a chance purchase of his. Some five years ago, while in Halifax, Nova Scotia, he chanced upon a Russian who had in his possession several rough stones of a peculiar red color. Mr. Beaudry was impressed with the appearance of the stones and finally procured one for a mere song and placed it with some other trinkets, all of which he soon lost sight of. About three weeks ago the circumstance was brought to his mind by seeing another stone which resembled the one he had bought. He looked up his possession and, after examining it a little, took it to a local jeweler for examination. A close scrutiny of the stone led to the belief that it was some kind of a ruby and, at the suggestion of the jeweler, it was sent to New York for the opinion of an expert. The stone proved to be a Siberian ruby, from the mines in the northwestern part of Siberia, and some idea of its value may be obtained from the fact that it is worth $75 per carat. The Minneapolis man has ten stones which were cut from the rough piece. Four of these weigh each one and three-quarters carats, two weigh one carat, two seven-eighths of a carat each and two of the smallest are each one-quarter carat in weight.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Great Britain's New Coinage.

In answer to an inquiry by the press respecting new coinage the deputy master of the mint has issued the following statement: "The issue of coins of the present pattern will continue until his majesty in council issues a proclamation giving currency to coins of new design. The preparation of new designs and disks is necessarily a work of time, and it is not possible to say when the new coinage will be ready. It will be distributed as usual, so far as England and Wales are concerned, through the Bank of England, and will not be issued by the mint direct to the public, except in the case of bronze, when the present regulation will be observed."

DEERING AT PARIS IN 1900.

The Famous Chicago Harvester Company Received More and Greater Honors than Were Ever Before Accorded an American Exhibitor in the History of Expositions.

America may well feel proud of the interest which her citizens took in the Paris Exposition and the elaborate exhibits which were prepared with consummate skill and displayed in a manner not excelled by any other country. Those of Harvesting Machinery in particular were most complete and interesting. The Deering Harvester Company, of Chicago, America's foremost manufacturer of this line of goods, was accorded the position of honor, having contributed more to the advancement of the art of harvesting than any other manufacturer, living or dead, and with a greater array of important inventions to its credit than any other company in the world.

Visitors to the Exposition were prompt to accord the Deering exhibits supreme honors, and it only remained for official mandate to ratify the popular verdict, which was done in a manner as substantial as it was well-merited. Each one of the seven Deering exhibits secured the highest award in its class.

In addition to four high decorations, the Deering Harvester Company received twenty-five awards, or twenty-nine in all, as follows: Decoration of Officer of the Legion of Honor, Decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, Two Decorations of Officer of Merito Agricole, a Special Certificate of Honor, The Grand Prize, Six Gold Medals, Six Silver Medals and Eleven Bronze Medals, including Deering Collaborator Medals.

The Decoration of the Legion of Honor was instituted by Napoleon Bonaparte when First Consul in 1802, and is only conferred in recognition of distinguished military or civil achievements. It is the highest distinction in the gift of the French Republic.

The Decoration of the Merito Agricole is an honor of but slightly less importance, which is conferred upon those who have contributed greatly to the advancement of agriculture.

An Official Certificate of Honor was accorded the Deering Retrospective Exhibit, which showed the improvements in harvesting machinery during the past century, and excited the highest praise of the French Government Officials who had entrusted to the Deering Harvester Company the preparation of this most important exhibit. By special request this exhibit has been presented to the National Museum of Arts and Sciences at Paris, where it has become a permanent feature of that world-famed institution.

The Deering Twine Exhibit and Corn Harvester Exhibit, both of which received the highest awards, have by request of the French Government been presented to the National Agricultural College of France.

There was no field trial, either official or otherwise, in connection with the Paris Exposition, but the most important foreign contest the past season was held under the auspices of the Russian Expert Commission at the Governmental Farm of Tomsk, Siberia, August 14th to 18th. All the leading American and European machines participated and were subjected to the most difficult tests by the Government Agriculturist. The Expert Commission awarded the Deering Harvester Company the Grand Silver Medal of the Minister of Agriculture and Domain, which was the highest award.

The Deering Harvester Works are the largest of their kind in the world, covering eighty-five acres and employing 9,000 people. They are equipped with modern automatic machines, many of which perform the labor of from five to fifteen hands.

This Company is also the largest manufacturer of Binder Twine in the world, having been first to produce single-strand binder twine, such as is in general use today, making over a third of the product of the entire world. The output of its factory for a single day would tie a band around the earth at the equator, with several thousand miles to spare. The annual production would fill a freight train twenty miles long. Made into a mat two feet wide, it would reach across the American continent from ocean to ocean.

Deering machines are known as LIGHT DRAFT IDEALS, consisting of Binders, Mowers, Reapers, Corn Harvesters, Shredders and Rakes.

This company exhibited at the Paris Exposition an Automobile Mower, which attracted much attention, and exhibitions were given with one of these machines in the vicinity of Paris throughout the season.

Julius Pleth, the St. Hilaire real estate boomer passed through here Saturday evening on his way to St. Paul. To a Journal reporter he stated that his page advertisement in the St. Hilaire Spectator had brought him 16 sales within the past two days. Thus it will be seen that advertising pays.—Crookston Daily Journal.

Fresh skimmed milk is one of the most valuable foods for laying hens. Its liberal use not only answers as drink but also supplies to a liberal degree the needs of the hen for animal food. Pullets fed with a mixture of corn meal and wheat bran, mixed with skimmed milk, have continued to lay a liberal supply of eggs throughout the winter. Milk is also found to be one of the best foods for little chicks, promoting their health and rapid growth. Coarse ground corn meal scalded with milk seems to be a most perfect food for them. When poultry and eggs are worth more than twice as much per pound as pork, it will certainly pay to divert a portion of the milk on dairy farms, usually going to the pig trough, to the chicken pen instead.

American Superiority.

Both Germany and Russia have sent representatives to this country to study American railway methods. Chauncy Depew has often said with pardonable pride that if one would best realize the great superiority of America in its methods of doing things, he should travel on an European railroad. The people of Europe have other lessons to learn of America. Like our railroads, an American brew of beer, known as "Golden Grain Belt," brewed from the purest barley malt and hops, is the most healthful and nourishing ever produced. It tones up the blood and strengthent the nerves. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

Will Redeem Stamps.

The war revenue reduction act becomes operative on July 1, 1901, and the treasury officials are already taking steps to redeem the stamps in the hands of the public. They have issued the following statement:

"All documentary and proprietory revenue stamps in the hands of purchasers on and after July 1, 1901, will be redeemed by the government act of May 12, 1900. Such stamps should by presented for redemption by the owners thereof to the collector of internal revenue from who they were purchased who will supply the applicant with necessary forms and instructions for the preparation of his claim. It is probable that regulations will be prepared and issued providing for the redemption of the imprinted documentary stamps without requiring the destruction of the checks or drafts on which they are imprinted.

Auditor's Notice of Pendency of Petition.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss.
COUNTY OF RED LAKE. }

Whereas, the viewers appointed by the board of county commissioners of said county of Red Lake at their session held on the 13th day of November, 1900 upon the petition of John Marleau and others, bearing date the 20th day of September, 1900 and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public drainage ditch along the route proposed therein, have made their report and filed the same in my office.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said board of county commissioners, at their special session to be held at the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 13th day of May, 1901, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The place of commencement of said main drainage ditch at its source is as follows: Beginning at a point 100 feet east of the quarter section corner between sections 1 and 6 of township 151 of range 43 and 44 w.; thence west along the quarter section line in sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 to a point 2063 feet west of the quarter section corner between sections 3 and 4 in township 151 north of range 44 w.; thence north 60 degrees, west a distance of 600 feet, to an outlet in small coulie in section 4 aforesaid; and branch ditch as follows: Beginning at a point 320 feet south of the quarter section corner between sections 9 and 10, township 151, range 44; thence running north, parallel to the section line and 22 feet distant easterly there from, to quarter section corner between sections 3 and 4, township 151 north of range 44 w.; having for an outlet the aforesaid main ditch.

The names of the persons through whose lands the proposed maid and branch drainage ditches pass are as follows: John Joachim Busse, Anna Hartle, Joseph Bole, Frank Gangnow, Geo L. and Mary B. Cheodle, Gideon Poirier, John Marleau, Napoleon Constant, Henry Schickling, Margaretta Walter, William Marleau, Mary Massolt, Michael Kees, Hubert Lennertz, Morris Healy, Lena Schreiter, N. J. Pinault, Daniel Linnehan, Prosper Wilmes, Blondina Detling, Claus Henricks, D. S. B. Johnston Land Mortgage Co., and Great Northern Ry. Co.

The names of the owners of the lands that will be effected thereby as shown by the last tax duplicates of said county are:

The Grand Opera House at Crookston offer theatre goers some excellent attractions during the present month, among these are Al. G. Fields Greater Minstrels on April 12th, considered the best on the road. Lewis Morrison's complete production of "Faust" on April 21th and on April 26th comes the one particular event, the appearance of Madame Modjeska who has long been acknowledged as the greatest exponent of tradegy on the English speaking stage.

There has been ninety cases of smallpox in Minneapolis since Jan. 7th, when the present health officer took charge of the department. Not a single one of these persons was ever successfully vaccinated previous to the time of exposure to the disease. More than that out of all the hundreds of persons exposed directly during this time, not one came down with the disease who was vaccinated within three days after the exposure, and but a very few who were vaccinated at any time afterwards. A genuine old fashioned case of smallpox was discovered in a South Minneapolis boarding house where there were eighty boarders, all of whom had been exposed to the disease. Every one of the eighty were vaccinated within the three days, and not a single secondary case developed among them. This [illegible]

DO YOU FEEL LIKE THIS?

Pen Picture for Women.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

MRS. JOHN WILLIAMS.

No other medicine has such a record for absolute cures, and no other medicine is "just as good." Women who want a cure should insist upon getting Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when they ask for it at a store. Anyway, write a letter to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her all your troubles. Her advice is free.

PRINTING WITHOUT INK.

Process That Is Proving a Great Success in England.

Printers are said to be much interested in the work of an English photographer, a Mr. F. Greene of London, who has met with considerable success in producing a paper by means of electricity which may be printed upon without employing inks or the use of any previous sensitising matter by saturation, as has hithertofore been done. Instead of saturating this "electographic" paper with the sensitising materials, as has hitherto been done, it has been found best to mix them with the pulp in the process of manufacture, and so a radical departure has been made and a new machine-made paper has been invented that has rare properties. The chemicals used are abundant and cheap, so that this paper can be produced as cheaply as common paper. The prepared paper is stable and colorless, it is unaffected by any other agent than the electric current; may be kept indefinitely and sent to the press directly from the roll as manufactured, with no preliminary treatment whatever; yields instantly a dence black, permanent print, requires no subsequent fixing or development; indeed, is ready for distribution immediately, as there is nothing like ink to smirch or require drying; briefly, it meets all the requirements of a perfect medium for electric printing. The machine for electric printing is simply an ordinary press divested of all its inking mechanism and having the cylinder or paper-bearing surface covered with a suitable conducting metal. The work of "make-ready" is the same as for ordinary printing, and line blocks, electrotypes, wood cuts, half-tones, engravings and all kinds of designs in relief may be used at will. The form is connected with one pole of the dynamo or battery—for most purposes the current may be taken from an ordinary incandescent light wire—the paper-carrying cylinder or surface is connected with the other pole. Thus the metal surfaces of both cylinders are the electrodes, while the paper is in reality a very thin cell in which the pulp is an inert medium and the contained chemicals the electrolyte, which is to be subjected to electrolysis. As the cylinders approach each other to press the paper as it is fed between them, the current is switched on automatically and flows from one cylinder through the paper at the points of contact to the other cylinder, the impression being produced instantly by electro-chemical action.

BROKERS IN INVENTIONS.

Disappearance of the Unscrupulous Speculator—Odd Ideas.

Inventors, as every one knows, are deficient in business sense. Left to themselves, they seldom realize great profit from their work. They offer a golden opportunity to business men, who are not slow to take advantage of it. Two types of men make their living out of the inventor. One is the speculator, the other the legitimate broker of inventions. There are not so many speculators as there used to be twenty years ago. Many made fortunes out of the simple-minded inventors. The most notable case was that of one who bought ten patents from a poor fellow in Washington for $3,000, and in the next ten years cleared nearly $1,000,000 on them in this country and in Europe. Brokers have progressed steadily and are now members of a recognized calling. Many of them are thorough mechanics and good, practical scientists. Such as these are bound to be successful. Others are merely clever salesmen, who at times make money and at other times have their labor for their pains. Their calling is full of odd and interesting features. They meet inventors of every type, from those who have genius to those who are cranks and dreamers. It is among the latter that they find queer inventions, some of which, though ingenious, are not patentable. One of these was a policeman's club, which at the end was perforated so as to form a red pepper box. A small spring in the handle opened the box and enabled the wielder of the club to blind his enemy as well as to beat him. A second spring threw out as radii from the club a number of small knife blades, which would cut to pieces the hand of any one who tried to snatch the club away. It was refused a patent by the examiners on the ground "of its cruelty and inhumanity." Another non-patentable invention was a lady's fan, in the stick of which was concealed a poisoned dagger.—New York Post.

George Washington's Gold Medal.

Locked up in a safe at the Boston public library is the gold medal awarded George Washington by the Continental congress by a vote of March 27, 1776, for his services in expelling the British from Boston, March 17, 1776. As a souvenir of the anniversary of evacuation day about 80,000 medals, made from this design and one-half the size of the original, were distributed to the school children of Boston recently. The medal was bought from one of Washington's heirs twenty-five years ago.

Norse Soldiers Use the Ski.

In Norway the ski is in constant use during the winter and the ease with which great distances can be covered is surprising. Peasants are thus able to get about their work and visit friends in far-away district. Sportsmen, with gun on back and stick in hand, set out in pursuit of game on ski and the soldiers are reduced to this means of getting about when exercising. A regiment of soldiers on ski is a sight by no means uncommon in and around Christiania.

If every one in the world were healthy and happy what a glad day Easter would be. But the sun rises every Easter morning on a multitude of sick and afflicted. The Easter lilies gladden the hearts of the sick and well alike.

But to the sick something more than the Easter lily is necessary to bring that hope and cheer which every one expects on Easter day. The well need no physician, but the sick need a remedy.

Nearly one-half the people in the United States are suffering from some form or phase of catarrhal ailment. These ailments take different forms at different seasons of the year. In the springtime catarrh assumes a systemic form, producing nervousness, lassitude and general languor.

Systemic catarrh deranges the digestion and through deranged digestion it impoverishes or contaminates the blood. Thus we have blood diseases and nervous derangements through systemic catarrh.

Peruna is a specific for these cases. No other remedy yet devised by the medical profession is able to successfully meet so many phases of spring ailments as Peruna.

Men and women everywhere are praising Peruna as follows:

A First Class Tonic.

Wm. A. Collier, Assistant Paymaster U. S. N., writes: "I have taken Peruna, and recommend it to those needing a first-class tonic."

A Great Tonic.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator and Ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes from Edgefield, S. C.: "I have been using Peruna for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine and besides a great tonic."

Splendid for the Nerves.

Robert B. Mantell, the famous actor, writes from New York City: "Peruna is splendid and most invigorating—refreshing to the nerves and brain."

For General Debility.

Hon. Jno. V. Wright, of the Law Department, General Land Office of Tennessee, writes: "I wish every one who is suffering with general debility or prostration could know of Peruna."

A Spring Tonic.

Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, Lynchburg, Va., says: "There is no better spring tonic than Peruna, and I have used about all of them."

A Good Tonic.

Captain Percy W. Moss, Second Arkansas Volunteers, writes from Paragould, Ark.: "I find Peruna a very good spring tonic, and will readily recommend it at any time."

Builds Up the Entire System.

Miss Jennie Johnson, 3118 Lake Park avenue, Chicago, Ill., is Vice President of Chicago Teachers' Federation. She writes: "Peruna restores the functions of nature, induces sleep and builds up the entire system."

Makes Steady Nerves.

D. L. Wallace, Charter Member International Barbers' Union, 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota, writes: "I now feel splendid. My head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy my food and rest well."

The Best of Tonics.

Hon. W. C. Chambers, Chief Justice of Samoa, says: "I have tried one bottle of Peruna and I can truthfully say it is one of the best tonics I ever used."

A Grand Tonic.

Mrs. Gridley, mother of Captain Gridley, of the "Olympia," writes: "I used Peruna and can truthfully say it is a grand tonic."

For Overwork.

Mr. Tefft Johnson, a prominent actor of Washington, D. C., writes from Fourteenth and "I" streets: "In the effort to improve a condition impaired by overwork, I have found nothing that has done as much good as Peruna."

For a Worn-out System.

Mrs. Catherine Toft, President "Valkyrien Association," 5649 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I often advise Peruna in cases of a worn-out system and a broken down constitution."

Inseparable.

"For drunkenness and general worthlessness," spoke the magistrate, "I shall sentence you, as an old offender, to solitary confinement in the county jail for twenty days."

"Solitary confinement!" contemptuously echoed Tuffold Knott, as the policeman led him away. "Solitary! I wonder if he thinks he's going to separate me from my regular thirst?"—

CUBAN OCCUPATION

IS PROLONGED BY REJECTION OF PLATT AMENDMENT.

Military Government in Cuba Will Continue and the Date of Inaugurating a Cuban Government Is Indefinitely Postponed—Suggestion Comes From Cuba That the Convention Be Dissolved and Another One Called—President Has No Desire to Increase Friction.

Washington, April 15.—It is now clear to the administration that the Cuban convention does not intend to take definite action on the Platt amendment or adopt an ordinance providing for relations the Cuban government must hold to the government of the United States.

The plan adopted to send a commission to Washington and yet give the commission no power to make agreements, shows how inexperienced these Cuban delegates are in political affairs. The commission will be unable to accomplish anything. The president cannot modify the plan already before the convention as defining the position of this government. The result will be that the military government in Cuba will continue and the date for inaugurating a Cuban government be indefinitely postponed. The suggestion has been made to the president that he command Gen. Wood to dissolve this convention and call another. This suggestion has come from Cuba. Its purpose is to enable the Cubans to adopt a constitution and also provide for the between Cuba and the United States. Cubans who are anxious for independence claim that the convention in session in Havana does not represent the Cuban people. They assert that a new election should be held and that the people of Cuba would accept the Platt amendment and elect delegates who would work in harmony with the views of the American congress.

The president has no doubt as to his power to call a new convention, but he has no desire to increase the friction in Cuba. The administration of Gen. Wood has been clean and able. It is accomplishing more for Cuba than could any civil administration under a new government. The business men in Cuba are well satisfied to have the convention haggle over the Platt amendment and delay the departure of the American soldiers because they fear the consequences of a change. The president is impressed with this view and will allow the Cuban convention to take its own time in discussing the Platt amendment or other propositions.

DOUBLE LYNCHING LIKELY.

Result of the Murder of a White Man in Florida.

Hastings, Fla., April 15.—Julius Eskew, manager of the Armstrong Turpentine company, near here, was shot and killed by Jim Kirby, a negro, Saturday night. The motive was robbery. Kirby escaped into a swamp, where he was captured with the aid of bloodhounds. While Sheriff Perry was waiting in the depot with the negro to take him to St. Augustine unknown parties fired through a window and put five bullets into Kirby's back. He thought he would die and made a confession, implicating Robert Lee, another negro. Bloodhounds are now after Lee. Eskew was well and favorably known in Florida. The crime has caused intense excitement in St. Johns county, and there may be a double lynching.

TORONTO BANK LOOTED.

Clever Swindler Makes a Heavy Haul.

Toronto, Ont., April 15.—A clever bank swindler made a heavy haul in Toronto Saturday, the total amount of which will not be known until the tellers of the various banks check up business to-day. A stranger claiming to live in Halifax opened an account in the Imperial bank Saturday morning, depositing $50. Shortly afterward he presented a check for $20, which was marked by the ledger keeper. Shortly before 1 o'clock, during the rush preceding the close, this check, raised to $2,445, was presented to the teller and cashed. The same procedure was adopted at the Bank of Commerce, where a check raised from $20 to $2,900, was cashed. It is believed several other banks were similarly victimized.

RENOUNCES HOME FOR STOLSTOY.

Ex-Capt. Diterix, Whose Sister Is Wife of Writer's Son, Gives Up Nationality and Religion.

Paris, April 15.—M. Diterix, an ex-captain of the Russian army, whose sister is the wife of Count Leo Tolstoy's son Andrew, has written an open letter to M. Pobiedonostzeff, chief procurator of the Holy Synod, which will be published in the Aurora of Paris. In this letter M. Diterix says he renounces his religion and nationality on account of the excommunication of Count Leo Tolthoy. M. Diterix is now residing in England.

WOMAN FLAGS A TRAIN.

Mrs. Anthony Roy Prevents Serious Wreck by Heroic Act.

Louisiana, Mo., April 15.—Mrs. Anthony Roy, living in the Snilbottom, prevented a serious wreck on the Chicago & Alton railroad Friday. She found that a bridge was on fire, and waded through a pond of water three feet deep and flagged a freight train with a red hood. She sent her daughter on the other side of the bridge with a red skirt to flag trains from that direction. The bridge was destroyed and her action saved the train.

Three Persons Killed.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 15.—A party of four people while crossing the tracks of the Lehigh Valley railway at South Wilkesbarre were run down by the Buffalo express. Three of the party were killed and one injured.

Killed His Brother-in-Law.

Wichita, Kan., April 15.—At Granite, Okla., yesterday J. W. New killed his brother-in-law, John Doyle. Both had revolvers, but Doyle did not attempt to use his. Bad blood had existed between them.

RAW RECRUITS RUN AWAY.

Over One Hundred and Fifty Desert Regiment at Leavenworth, Kan.

Leavenworth, Kan., April 15.—Over 150 newly enlisted soldiers of the Fourteenth cavalry regiment, recruiting here, have deserted. The only reason assigned is they were disappointed, believing that since Aguinaldo has been captured the new regiment would not be sent to the Philippines on account of the possible termination of the war. The missing soldiers are nearly all young recruits and were all from companies of the new regiment, which now numbers about 805 men. Friday was their first pay day and the deserters came to the city. A number purchased tickets to near-by cities and it was learned several passed through St. Joseph, Mo. A detachment of regulars has been sent out to bring them back. It is said the officers will promise not to try the recruits for desertion if they return within ten days. The exact number of the men missing is not known, but it is known to be in the neighborhood of 160. Telegrams have been sent in every direction to locate the missing men. It is believed all of them will be found and returned to the post.

CARRIE NATION ARRESTED.

Kansas City Police Jug Her for Obstructing the Streets.

Kansas City, April 15.—Mrs. Carrie Nation was arrested in this city last night on the charge of obstructing the street and hauled to the police station in a patrol wagon. She was released in a cash bond of $6 and will be tried in the police court this morning. Mrs. Nation lectured in Kansas City, Kan. Saturday night and came over to the Missouri side yesterday morning. She started on a tour of investigation among the down town saloons in the evening. A crowd of a thousand men and boys followed her, and at Twelfth and Walnut streets, where there are saloons on three corners, she was arrested because the crowd following her blockaded the street. She roundly lectured the saloon men whom she visited.

KIDNAPPING PLOT.

Sons of Wealthy Clevelanders Are Threatened.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 15.—It has developed that a plot was recently on foot to kidnap the sons of two wealthy East End residents. Letters of a threatening nature have been received by the families of the boys, and every effort is being made to guard them from harm. Two of the boys, Cyrus and David Ford, are sons of H. Clark Ford, a lawyer and real estate man who lives at 2164 Euclid avenue, and the third boy is the ten-year-old son of B. F. Whiteman of No. 2473 Euclid avenue. Mr. Whiteman is treasurer of the East End Banking and Trust company. Both families are wealthy, and it is thought that the boys were to be held for ransom. Detectives are at work on the case.

WHERE IS VIRGINIA LAKE?

Feared That Mishap Has Occurred to Sailing Steamer.

St. John's, N. F., April 15.—It is feared that mishap has occurred to the sailing vessel Virginia Lake, which sailed five weeks ago and should have arrived before this, having secured a good number of seals. Only two alternatives are tenable—either she is frozen up at some remote point on the northern coast, far from telegraphic communication, or else, she has been driven ashore on some outlying island as the steamer Hope was a fortnight ago, and is unable to wire details. The Virginia Lake has on board 270 men, largely from this place.

WAS A BLOODY BATTLE.

Two Killed and Four Wounded at Boone's Fork, Ky., Fight.

Whitesburg, Ky., April 15.—Further particulars of the big battle between Sheriff John Wright and his posse and the outlaws headed by Creed Potter and John Reynolds at Boone's Fork last Thursday, were received and another fight is anticipated in a few days. In the encounter Thursday Willie Wright and Isaac Millard, members of the posse, were killed outright, and four others, two on each side, were wounded.

Famous Bandit Killed.

Silver City, N. Mex., April 15.—Red Weaver, a well known border character and a reputed member of the famous "Black Jack" gang of bandits, has been killed at Alma, a mining camp seventy miles northeast of here. Weaver had threatened to kill Tod Holliman who had previously called him to account for certain remarks against a young woman's character. Later they met again and fired at each other simultaneously. Weaver fell dead with a bullet through his head. Holliman was exonerated.

Killed by a Deputy Sheriff.

Wallace, Idaho, April 15.—Jack Powell was shot and killed at Mullen Saturday night by Deputy Sheriff Williams. Three men fired from ambush at Deputy Sheriffs Rose and Williams about midnight, wounding Rose twice in the right arm and once in the right thigh. Deputy Williams fired six or seven shots in the direction of the flashes and fatally wounded Jack Powell. Powell was seen running away after the shooting and his body was not found until yesterday morning.

Big Coal Combination.

Springfield, Mass., April 15.—Lewis F. Newman of this city has successfully engineered a big coal combination with a capital of $5,000,000. The company will control 30,000 acres of undeveloped coal land in southeastern Ohio. George D. Duy, New York city, has filed an attachment of $150,000 against Mr. and Mrs. Lewis F. Newman in an action of contract to recover a claim for alleged services in connection with the coal combination.

To Succeed Fava.

Rome, April 15.—Marquis C. Carbonara di Malaspina, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the Argentine Republic, has been offered the post of Italian ambassador at Washington, to succeed Baron Fava.

Shot and Fatally Wounded.

Memphis, Tenn., April 15.—C. A. Ross of St. Louis shot and fatally wounded James Redmond of New York last night. The two men are followers of the races. The shooting resulted from a heated argument.

EMPEROR'S RETURN

FOREIGN MINISTERS DEMAND HIS PRESENCE AT PEKIN.

Chinese Envoys Are Notified That the Emperor Must Give an Immediate Answer to the Request for His Return to Pekin—His Presence of the Highest Importance as Connected With the Integrity of the Empire—Every Courtesy Will Be Shown Him—Prince Tuan Still at Large.

Pekin, April 15.—The request for the return of Emperor Kwang Su to Pekin having been ignored, Li Hung Chang was yesterday told that the emperor must give an immediate answer.

The emperor was assured that every courtesy would be shown him, and it was pointed out that his return was of the highest importance as connected with the integrity of the empire. It was suggested that he bring with him 20,000 men with which to assist in restoring order in Manchuria.

The Germans have chastized three villages near here where Capt. Bartsch was recently killed. They have also arrested three local officials.

It is reported that the notorious Prince Tuan has not been banished to the frontier as agreed upon, but is still at large with Gen. Tung Fu Hsiang and a Mongol prince, who is a relative of his, in the Province of Kansu. The court has not decided whether to of these people or to give up opposition to them. The court appears to be constantly wavering in its policy. Some days it seems to favor foreigners and reformers, and on others it resists them.

Insist on the Punishment

There was an explosion yesterday at the German military post near the residence of Li Hung Chang. Earl Li was greatly frightened. The explosion broke the glass in the windows of his rooms and some guests he was entertaining fled in terror.

The conduct of the ministers of the powers over the negotiations with the Chinese plenipotentiaries causes much adverse comment among the military authorities. Their dilatory tactics have prevented what might have been accomplished two months ago. Even now the meetings of the ministers are postponed for the most trivial causes.

CARNIVAL OF CRIME.

Reply of the Mafia in Sicily to a Threat of the Authorities.

Rome, April 15.—At the beginning of the year word was sent from Rome that the Mafia and other societies in Sicily must be stamped out at any cost, and the local authorities were threatened with degradation if they should any longer ignore their duty. The Mafia promptly took up the challenge, with the result that there has been a carnival of crime in the beautiful island. Since the beginning of February no fewer than fourteen men have been murdered and each corpse has been found with a paper thrust between his teeth bearing the words: "Thus the Mafia punishes its traitorous members." The victims were suspected of having given information to the police.

BRITISH VITAL STATISTICS.

Nearly 40,000 Illegitimate Births Recorded in One Year.

London, April 15.—Some interesting points are found in the annual report of the registrar general of births, deaths and marriages of the United Kingdom. In 1899 the marriages reached the highest number recorded since 1876, aggregating 262,334, or 16.5 per thousand. The births numbered 928,646, equal to 20.3 per thousand. There were 37,121 illegitimate children born; the deaths numbered 581,799, equal to 18.3 per thousand, and there were 2,844 suicides. This is the first year on record that not a single death from hydrophobia has been reported.

RUMORS ABOUT KRUGER.

One Report Says That He Was Stabbed.

London, April 15.—There have been unconfirmed rumors in circulation for the past few days that an attempt was made to assassinate Mr. Kruger. One story is that the man who intended to kill the former president of the South African republic was arrested before he could carry out his purpose. Another yarn, printed in Paris, is that the attempt to kill Mr. Kruger was actually made. The Paris Estafette says Mr. Kruger was stabbed and that his assailant has been arrested. The story is discredited.

BURNS HIMSELF.

Aged Insane Man Meets a Horrible Death.

Lincoln, Ill., April 15.—Saturday afternoon Carl Marsh, an old settler of Logan county about seventy years old, set fire to his home in Hartburg, a village near here and burned himself alive. He had some time ago suffered a stroke of paralysis and since has had fits of insanity. While the rest of the family was away from home he scattered straw over the floor of the house and set fire to it, locking himself in.

Finds Treasure on Kaiser Wilhelm.

Bremen, April 15.—It is officially reported that the three gold bars stolen from the specie room of the North German Lloyd line steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse during that vessel's last trip from New York were discovered by a steward during the cleaning of the ship near the second cabin.

Two Men Asphyxiated.

New York, April 15.—George T. Buckley and P. J. Sweeney, employes of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railway, who arrived in this city Saturday night were found dead of gas asphyxiation at the Ashland house.

Attempt to Destroy a Convent.

GIRL'S ESCAPADE.

She Dons Boy's Clothing and Hires Out as a Sheep Herder.

Yankton, S. D., April 15.—Edith Kelloge, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Charles Kelloge, who lives south of Pukwana, left her home last Friday and made her way to that place. She wore a boy's coat and cap and carried a bundle containing a shirt and pair of trousers. On arriving there she went to a barber shop and had her hair cut short. From there she wandered out south of town and changed her clothes, putting on boy's apparel. Proceeding on her journey, she arrived at Fred Kenna's house, where she hired out as a boy to herd sheep this summer. Mr. Kelloge came into town Monday afternoon looking for his daughter, and although he made diligent search he could find no trace of her. He started home and on his way stopped at Mr. Kenna's place and there found his daughter. Mr. Kelloge says the girl's mind must be affected, as she had never attempted to leave home before. The Kelloge family have sold their farm and are about ready to leave for Canada.

MONTANA'S CAPITOL.

State Commission May Have to Complete the Building.

Helena, Mont., April 15.—P. J. Donohoe, a Butte architect, who was engaged by Gov. Toole to investigate the work done upon the capitol building in Helena, yesterday filed a sensational report, in which he says that the state building commission will undoubtedly be compelled to complete the structure. He says that the specifications in many important particulars have not been followed, and although there remains to be finished 40 per cent of the work, the Montana Building company, which has the contract for the building, has been allowed and received all but $70,427 of the original contract price of $289,891. Architect Donohoe advises a "complete and untrammeled investigation at an early date." Gov. Toole and Secretary of State Hays and the state architect are now in the East examining the furnishings of public buildings, with a view of letting the contract for furnishing the new state house.

Held in Iowa.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 15.—Contrary to expectations Quincy H. Edwards, son of the postmistress at Nemo, S. D., who was recently indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of issuing fraudulent money orders and forging the name of his mother to the letters of advice, will not be tried during the present term of United States court here. Edwards is in the custody of the United States authorities in Iowa, and Judge Shiras of the federal court of that state has refused to grant an order for the transfer of the prisoner to Sioux Falls.

Fox River [illegible]

Kaukauna, Wis., April 15.—Fox river is higher than ever. Word was received here from Capt. Mann of the United States engineer department at Oshkosh last night that another section of the sluice would be opened on the Menasha dam. Preparations were made to receive the water. The long trestle bridge of the Northwestern Railroad company was weighted down with a train load of pulp wood and all mills situated on the government canal has watchmen protecting the banks. Serious damage was averted by the precautions taken.

To Prevent Floods.

Fargo, N. D., April 15.—The Midland Canal company, which was organized some time ago under the laws of New Jersey, will hold an adjourned regular meeting in Fargo April 20. Mayor Johnson of Fargo is president and Dr. Kelsy of White Rock, S. D., is secretary. A number of prominent Minnesotans and Dakotans are interested in the company, which was gotten up for the purpose of having the Red River valley drained and the waters at its source controlled to prevent the damaging floods that occur from year to year.

Many Applicants.

Luverne, Minn., April 15.—Prof. C. E. Young of Henderson, Minn., has been elected superintendent of the Luverne public schools to succeed Prof. F. E. Dean, resigned. There were thirty-five applications by letter and in person, some coming from as far west as Utah and east as far as Pennsylvania. The salary is $1,200 per year. Prof. Young did not apply in person, but sent the strongest array of recommendations ever presented to this school board. He is a graduate of the state university.

Arrested on Suspicion.

La Crosse, Wis., April 15.—Detectives Lyman and Cody arrested three men in La Crescent, Minn., whom the local police suspect of being professional clothing thieves and all-around crooks, and who are probably wanted by authorities in several places. They are Charles Johnson, Dave Bachous and Ed Powers, and when arrested were loaded down with a variety of clothing of fine grade which they had been trying to sell at ridiculously low prices. All the men were well dressed.

Militia Company for Redfield.

Redfield, S. D., April 15.—A militia company of seventy members has been organized here and the organization has been accepted by the adjutant general. The officers are H. E. Johnson, captain; G. P. Squire, first lieutenant, and Clay Carpenter, second lieutenant. The organization will be known as Company G.

New School for Balaton.

Balaton, Minn., April 15.—At a special school meeting this city voted to bond the district for $10,000 to erect a six-room brick school building. It is expected to have the work completed by Sept. 1.

Elopers Married in Iowa.

Winona, Minn., April 15.—News has just been received here of the marriage of Daniel Connors of this city and Miss Eva Wilson of Red Wing. The wedding took place on Friday at Mann, Iowa, and was a surprise to the friends of the parties.

WITH Doings In the State Legislature. THE LAWMAKERS

In the House.

St. Paul, April 8.—Resolutions of censure aimed at Representatives Washburn and Jacobson, who preferred charges of bribery in connection with the gross earnings bill, were introduced by Representative Laybourn of St. Louis Saturday, but went over without action of the house under notice of debate by Representative Allen. Mr. Laybourn will, unless the pressure brought to bear upon him prevails, force his resolutions to a vote to-day. The report of the investigation committee, which found that the charges could not be sustained, laid over from Friday night, came up before noon Saturday, and although a fight had been expected, was adopted without a dissenting vote.

The Younger brothers' hopes of liberty after imprisonment for twenty-four years, raised almost to the point of realization by the passage of the Deming bill providing for the parole of life prisoners, was suddenly dashed to earth by the action of the house in indefinitely postponing the bill recalled from the governor for the purpose of correction.

Representative Whitford's memorial to congress praying for the establishment of a national park in Northern Minnesota to include the Leech Lake, Cass Lake, Winnibigoshish and Chippewa Indian reservations, was recommended to pass by the house.

In the Senate.

The debate promised over the passage of the Johnson memorial instructing the attorney general to bring action against the Great Northern to test title to 271,565.94 acres of Northern Minnesota lands, did not occur in the senate, and the resolution was adopted and sent to the house.

Halvorsen's second anti-cigarette bill was killed after short debate.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 9.—The omnibus bill, carrying with it total appropriations of $3,737,000, prepared by the senate finance and house appropriations committees, was yesterday introduced in both houses and made a special order for 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning. The appropriation for 1901, which is to cover the expenses for 1902 and 1903, is larger by about $600,000 than the omnibus appropriation of 1899.

The two house bills to compromise the litigation over the Little Falls & Dakota land grant were passed in the senate yesterday. A determined effort was made to encompass their defeat, but after a long debate the measures passed without amendment.

An amendment was attached to the Umland divorce bill in the senate yesterday making the remarriage of any divorced person at a point outside of the state within the six months' limit provided an act in contempt of court. The offense is punishable, however, only when the remarried party takes up his or her residence in the state again and within the same time limit. The bill was then repassed and will go back to the house for concurrence.

The senate devoted some little time yesterday to the consideration of house bills, and twenty-five of them were recommended to pass.

In the House.

The Pennington bill providing for contests of the election of state officers was yesterday passed by the house.

The house passed the bill substituted for the Laybourn bill for the reconstruction of the insurance commissioner's office, which reconstruction involves the creation of four official positions.

The house yesterday passed the Larson reapportionment bill, which, if it meets with similar treatment in the upper house, will create one new senatorial district—the Sixty-fourth—and increase the membership of the house from 119 to 122.

In the House.

St. Paul, April 10.—The house yesterday reconsidered its action of Saturday in indefinitely postponing the Younger parole bill and returned it to the governor, legal lautherities having decided that the bill was improperly recalled from the executive office. The governor at once transmitted it to the office of the secretary of state where it will become a law without his signature.

The Johnson bill distributing $32,300 of the state internal improvement fund to the several counties was passed.

The house passed the Roberts bill providing for detention hospitals for alleged insane in Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties. The bill provides for the maintenance of separate wards in city and county hospitals for the detention of persons awaiting examination under information of insanity and those persons who are only temporarily deranged or in whose case doubt exists.

In the Senate.

The memorial to congress asking for immediate action toward the establishment of a park in the Leech Lake region, was passed after a one-sided debate, by an overwhelming majority. Only five senators, all but one from northern counties, voted against it.

The Washburn inheritance bill met strong opposition yesterday, but was finally passed by a vote of 33 to 11.

The bill to buy gold medals for Minnesota buttermakers who won them at the Paris exposition was passed.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 11.—The rate of tax levy for state revenue for 1902 will be 1.3 mills, the lowest rate in the history of the state. The Thirty-second legislature has dealt more liberally with state and public institutions than any of its predecessors, and at the same time established the lowest tax levy for state revenue in the history of the commonwealth. The existing conditions, it is believed, will make possible a further reduction of one-tenth of a mill when the levy for 1903 is fixed.

Mr. Swanson, chairman of the house ways and means committee, yesterday introduced a bill, passed under suspension of the rules in both houses, carrying with it an appropriation of $100,000 for state expenses for the biennial period ending July 31, 1903. This appropriation [illegible] bring the estimated expense for the biennial period up to a total of $5,800,000. The estimated revenue for the same period is $6,200,000, which will permit of a decrease of one-tenth of a mill in the next levy and still leave a surplus estimated at $200,000.

The Chilton marriage bill, one of the most widely talked of measures of the legislative session, has passed both houses and gone to Gov. Van Sant for his signature. It was taken up in the senate yesterday and on Dr. Chilton's motion the amendments attached by the house were concurred in and the bill given its passage.

Senator Wilson's bill appropriating $19,973.56 for the Minnesota Beet Sugar company was lost after a hard fight.

The senate passed the bill distributing $32,000 among the different counties for road and bridge purposes.

In the House.

The omnibus bill with the injection of two amendments carrying appropriations aggregating $7,000 was yesterday passed in both houses. The total amount appropriated is $2,744,600.

Mr. O'Neil, chairman of the house committee on parks, attempted to secure an amendment calling for an annual appropriation of $15,000 to be used by the attorney general, as provided by the park law, for the purchase of timber lands within the boundaries of the Itasca State Park. The amendment was summarily defeated, and later a similar one offered by Mr. Babcock appropriating $10,000 annually for the same purpose.

The house yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 63 to 40, passed Sherman Smith's bill to increase the compensation of legislators to $750 for the biennial period.

St. Paul, April 12.—Crowds filled the galleries and visitors thronged the floors of both houses last night and witnessed the closing scenes of the thirty-second legislative session. The rush of bills began at 8 o'clock and continued in an unending stream of roll calls, conference reports and minor debates until 10:30 in the house and until after midnight in the senate. In general interest and excitement, however, the closing session fell short of that of two years ago.

All the important measures of the session had been previously passed upon and that fact lessened the public interest in last night's session.

The remaining hours of the senate session were mildly disorderly, Lieut. Gov. Smith rapped for order repeatedly, but the noice was so great that much of the time the chair could hardly be heard. Waste paper, blotters and wads of newspapers assailed senators who rose, and the roll calls on bills became little better than a farce. Before 11 o'clock senatorial dignity vanished and the proceedings approximated a "rough house."

In spite of the confusion, the greatest of any "last night" in years old members assert, several measures of general public interest were put through, among them the Pennington house bill proposing a tax levy to be created by a constitutional amendment for a state road and bridge fund.

The national park memorial was killed for lack of two votes. The house and senate both passed memorials, but neither branch had acted upon the bill of the other. Senator Underleak called up the house bill and moved its passage under suspension of the rules. Forty votes were cast for it, but it needed forty-two to make the necessary two-thirds.

The log lien bill was killed in the senate.

The bill to prevent the spread of contagious diseases among domestic animals was passed.

The house finished its deliberations very abruptly after two hours' wrangling, in which nothing of importance was accomplished.

Both houses will meet this morning, approve the minutes, grant gratuities to employes and at noon adjourn sine die.

LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS.

Final Session Ends With a Sharp Debate in the House.

St. Paul, April 12.—Both houses of the Thirty-second legislature adjourned at noon yesterday, sine die, after having been in session for seventy-seven days. The net results of its work are shown in 305 new laws, with 120 bills in the governor's hands, that will become laws should he attach his signature. The final sessions were formal, the only incident being a sharp debate in the house on the well worn bribery theme.

The senate met at 10 o'clock and received the report of its legislative expenses committee. A few gratuities were conferred.

Things did not go so smoothly in the house. Dr. Dorsey called up the bribery charges by a motion to expunge Representative Laybourn's resolutions of censure directed at Representatives Washburn and Jacobson from the journal. Representative Laybourn replied, and with considerable heat maintained that in justice to himself and other members that suffered from the unproved charges, the resolutions should stand. After a general argument, he carried his point.

It is probable that the legislature will convene in February, 1902, for a special session, but it cannot meet except upon the call of the governor, which will not be issued until late in the year.

Loses His Feet.

Graceville, Minn., April 14.—Surgeons amputated both legs of John P. Lindquist about four inches above the ankles. Lindquist is the partially demented man who recently spent twenty-two days in a straw stack without food. Gangrene extended above the ankles, making the operation necessary to save his life. The patient's hands are in bad shape, but may be saved.

The Man Was Satirical.

P. P. Haskins of Cincinnati told the following anecdote at the Everett house, to illustrate the phase of human nature which leads people to claim to possess knowledge on any and all things:

"At a dinner party given some time ago in a Western city," said Mr. Haskins, "one of the bachelor guests turned to his very beautiful hostess and asked:

"'Mrs. Blank, do you know what causes the milky way in the heavens?'

"'Why, I did know, but I've forgotten,' was the answer he received.

"'That's a great pity,' said he, sadly shaking his head, 'to think that you, the only person in the world who knew the cause of this phenomenon of the heavens, should have forgotten it!'

"And he actually had the cheek to feel injured because the woman took him off her visiting list."—New York Tribune.

It Wouldn't Do.

Baron Munchausen had just written a letter to a friend.

He closed it with a flourish, a "yours truly," and signed his name.

Then, with a melancholy smile, he erased the word "truly."

"It would merely move him to derisive laughter," he said.—Chicago Tribune.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

The Wife and Mother-in-Law of Mr. Charles Keys.

Clarissa, Minn., April 15. (Special.)—No family in this vicinity is better known or more universally respected, than Mr. Charles Keys, the local School Teacher, and his estimable wife and mother-in-law. For a long time, Mrs. Keys has been in ill-health. Recently, however, she has found a cure for her ailments in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I cannot speak too highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills, or what they have done for me," said Mrs. Keys.

"My life was miserable, my back always ached, also my head. I was troubled with Neuralgia in the head and face, and suffered extreme pain, but thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills, all those aches and pains have vanished like the morning dew, and it now seems that life is worth living. I consider Dodd's Kidney Pills a God-send to suffering humanity. They may rightly be named the Elixir of Youth.

"While speaking of my own case and the wonderful benefit I have received, I might also add that my mother, who is now an old lady of 74 years and who lives with me, has been troubled more or less with aches and pains, as is natural with one of her advanced age. When she saw what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for me, she commenced to use them, and she says that they have done more for her than any other medicine she has ever tried.

"This testimony is given in the hope that others who may be afflicted as we were, may see and read it, and be benefited by it."

What Mrs. Keys says in her letter can be verified by reference to any of her many friends in the neighborhood. Dodd's Kidney Pills have already a wonderful reputation in Todd county.

Nothing has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy but Dodd's Kidney Pills.

One is not in the land of the living until they have passed from this world of dying.

Work In the Caisson.

It is the strain within the bowels of the working chamber, unnoticed generally while there; the change on coming into the outer air that the sand hog (the workman) dreads. Under an air pressure the blood is forced away from the extremities. It is driven from the exterior into the central organs, especially toward the brain and the spinal cord.

The man, exhausted by toil under these conditions, climbs a long ladder. He is in the airlock again, with the upper door alone closed. The lock tender jerks up the bottom door. With a twist of the valve he bustles the compressed air out. The ordinary atmosphere rushes in. The upper door is thrown up, and God's sun and air come to the prisoner. The reaction is too severe. The blood, released by the sudden vanishing of 30, 40, 50 pounds of air pressure on each square inch of the body, refuses to act normally. Heart and lungs weaken, vitality ebbs. A sand hog is never sure that the next trip may not be his last.

The practical limit below ground is 50 pounds of air pressure. The men that can work in that atmosphere are masters of their trade. Yet now and then a man is met with who has the strength to go farther.—Cromwell Childe in Leslie's Monthly.

Where the Leak Was.

Once, years ago, when Daniel Webster was secretary of state, there was an important foreign matter up for discussion before the cabinet, and the utmost secrecy was of course maintained, but the whole thing was blazoned about in a few hours after the cabinet meeting. So the president hastily sent for his cabinet to talk over this leak. Each man had a different idea of it.

Finally Mr. Webster arose, saying. "You, gentlemen, go on with your discussion, and I'll be back in a minute." In a few minutes he returned and repeated every word that had been spoken in the room in his absence. He explained that if, by standing close to the door outside the cabinet room, you held your ear to it, you could not distinguish one intelligible word; but if, moving back from the door and a little to one side upon a certain spot in the carpet, you kept an attentive ear, every word could be plainly heard as though whispered.

Some enterprising eavesdropper had been experimenting with the door and had found that upon that exact spot there was some acoustic property of the door or room that conveyed the sound in perfect entirety.—Saturday Evening Post.

A Modern Mother's Diary.

Tonight Clifford has said:

"Mamma, are the stars holes in the sky to let the rain through?"

I cannot sleep, such is my agitation.

Clifford is scarcely 5 years old, whereas, according to the best pedagogical authorities, Martin Luther did not ask this question until he was 7 and Alexander the Great, in all probability, not until he was 9.

I know not what to think.

One moment I feel assured that Clifford is evincing an unaffected humor, only in the next moment to be overwhelmed by the suspicion that he is bidding for newspaper notoriety merely.—Detroit Journal.

The "Camel's Hair" Brush.

"Contrary to the belief of most people, the camel's hair brush used by artists has nothing of the camel in it," said a manufacturer of soft brushes to a writer the other day. "There was a time when real camel's hair was used for the purpose. The ship of the desert, however, has long been superseded by the homely little squirrel. Not only is squirrel's hair very much less costly, but it is better, softer, more pliable and far more durable. At the present day it is doubtful if you could find a pound of camel's hair in all the brush factories in this country. However, there is no cause for fear that the graceful little squirrel will be exterminated. It is the European squirrel that furnishes the hair for the brushes, the covering of the American squirrel being too furry and soft for the purpose."—Washington Star.

Auditor's Notice of Pendency of Petition.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss.
COUNTY OF RED LAKE. }

Whereas, the viewers appointed by the board of county commissioners of said county of Red Lake at their session held on the 13th day of November, 1900 upon the petition of John Marleau and others, bearing date the 20th day of September, 1900 and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public drainage ditch along the route proposed therein, have made their report and filed the same in my office.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition; and that the same will be heard and determined before the said board of county commissioners, at their special session to be held at the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 13th day of May, 1901, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The place of commencement of said main drainage ditch at its source is as follows: Beginning at a point 100 feet east of the quarter section corner between sections 1 and 6 of township 151 of range 43 and 44 w.; thence west along the quarter section line in sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 to a point 2003 feet west of the quarter section corner between sections 3 and 4 in township 151 north of range 44 w.; thence north 60 degrees, west a distance of 600 feet, to an outlet in small coulie in section 4 aforesaid; and branch ditch as follows: Beginning at a point 320 feet south of the quarter section corner between sections 9 and 10, township 151, range 44; thence running north, parallel to the section line and 22 feet distant easterly therefrom, to quarter section corner between sections 3 and 4, township 151 north of range 44 w.; having for an outlet the aforesaid main ditch.

The names of the persons through whose lands the proposed main and branch drainage ditches pass are as follows: John Joachim Busse, Anna Hartje, Joseph Bole, Frank Gangnow, Geo L. and Mary E. Cheodle, Gideon Poirier, John Marleau, Napoleon Constant, Henry Schickling, Margaretta Walter, William Marleau, Mary Massolt, Michael Kees, Hubert Lennerts, Morris Healy, Lena Schreiter, N. J. Pinault, Daniel Linnehan, Prosper Wilmes, Blondina Detling, Claus Henricks, D. S. B. Johnston Land Mortgage Co., and Great Northern Ry. Co.

The names of the owners of the lands that will be effected thereby as shown by the latest tax duplicates of said county are:

Warning Against Forest and Prairie Fires

Office of State Forest Commissioner.
St. Paul, Minn., March 21, 1901.

Chapter 196 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for 1895 (Act of April 18th) constitutes Supervisors of towns, Mayors of cities and presidents of village councils Fire Wardens, and it is made their duty to take precaution to prevent forest and prairie fires, and if they occur, to go and extinguish or control them; and in emergencies to call upon any able-bodied male person, over eighteen years of age, to assist. Reports of such fires with particulars tending to fix responsibility therefor shall be made within reasonable time—usually within a week. The Forest Commissioner is required to provide and sign an abstract (as herein) of the penalties under said law, and it is made the duty of the County Commissioners of each county to cause said abstract to be published in at least three issues of the official paper in their respective counties each year between the 15th of April and 1st of November, and they are hereby instructed to publish this notice entire. Under said law.

The following are liable to a penalty not exceeding $500 or imprisonment in the state prison not over ten years or both:

Any person who maliciously sets or causes to be set on fire any woods, prairie or other combustible material whereby the property of another is destroyed and life is sacrificed.

The following are liable to a penalty not exceeding $100 or imprisonment not exceeding three months.

Any person refusing, without cause, to assist fire wardens in extinguishing forest or prairie fires.

Any fire warden who neglects to perform his duties.

Any person who wilfully, negligently or carelessly sets on fire, or causes to be set on fire, any woods, prairies or other combustible material thereby causing injury to another.

Any person who shall kindle a fire on or dangerously near to forest or prairie land and leave in unquenched, or who shall be a party thereto.

Any person who shall use other than incombustible fire wads for firearms or carry a naked torch, firebrand or other exposed light in or dangerously near to forest land.

Any person who shall wilfully or heedlessly deface, destroy or remove this or any other warning placard posted under the requirements of the above mentioned Act.

Any railroad company wilfully neglecting to provide efficient spark arresters on its engines; or to keep its right of way to the width of 100 feet cleared of combustible material; or which shall fail to comply with other provisions of Section 12 of the above mentioned Act.

The following are liable to a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $50:

Any railroad employe who wilfully violates the provisions of Section 12 of the above mentioned Act.

Any owner of threshing or other portable steam engine who neglects to have efficient spark arresters, or who shall deposit live coals or hot ashes without extinguishing the same.

Legislative Payroll.

The total legislative payroll this year amounts to $130,540.25, this to include the mileage of the members.

Many of the senators and representatives of the legislature had not drawn a dollar of their pay until adjournment and they had their full salary coming to them. The payrolls had to be taken to the Merchants hotel for the signatures of Representatives Wilcox and Rapp, who have been sick most of the term.

Tie a string about a yard long to a common door key and take the string in the right hand, holding it so that the key will clear the floor by three or four inches. If you hold it steady enough it will being to swing back and forth in a straight line. Let another person take your left hand and the motion of the key will change from the pendulum like swing to a circular swing. If a third will place his hand on the second person the key will stop. Try it, and explain if you can.

Farmers.

I have just received 50 bushels of fine dent seed corn "Pride of the North" which I believe if planted in the right kind of soil and properly cultivated, not less than four times, will get ripe in 90 days. I am not selling it, but giving it away as I am anxious to see how this kind of corn will do in this country, so while it lasts, farmers come in and get what you need free of charge.

JULIUS PLETH,
The St. Hilaire Land Man.

There were 234 death claims allowed at the March session of the board of directors of the Modern Woodmen society The total amount disbursed in payment of these claims was $444,100. Of the death claims allowed, there were 29 resulting from tuberculosis; 14 from typhoid fever; 67 from pneumonia; 20 from accident; 3 from suicide and one from murder. An analysis of the claim shows that 38 died in the first year of their membership; 34 in the second year; 29 in the third year; 25 the fourth year; 16 in the fifth year and then the number decreases until the eighteenth year shows but one death.

Concert and Entertainment.

There is to be a concert and entertainment in the dining room of the hotel Markham next Thursday which will give us a chance to hear some exceedingly good music and story telling. It is to be given by Miss Gertrude Gleason assisted by Mr. John Crawford both of Crookston. Miss Gleason is certainly one of the best musicians in the state being gifted with a wonderfully beautiful voice and is an accomplished pianist as well. Mr. Crawford comes well recommended as a reader and entertainer and is a favorite in Crookston. Altogether the affair promises to be an unusual treat.

—If you are looking for a good smoke, why call for the "J. B."

Graded List.

The visit made to the St. Hilaire school last Friday by A. W. Rankin, State Graded School Inspector, was for the purpose of placing the school on the graded list if conditions were found favorable.

After visiting the different departments Mr. Rankin expressed himself as highly pleased with the work and so perfectly were the classes organized that he did not deem it necessary to make any suggestions as to changes in grading. He informed the school board that an application would be sent them and after being properly filled out and returned, the school would be reorganized as being on the graded list, entitling the district to $400.00 state aid each year.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that all manure and rubbish must be cleaned up and hauled away from all lots within the village limits on or before the 1st day of May 1901, or the same will be removed at the expense of the lot owner.

Representative Rapp Home.

The many friends of Representative C. G. Rapp were much pleased Tuesday to again behold his familiar form in their midst.

Press reports of the past two months had Charley reported in various stages of health. At one time his condition was so serious that only the faintest hopes were entertained for his recovery but to use one of his own familiar expression he "fooled them" and is now on the road to recovery much to the gratification of his friends, relatives and constituents.

Arbor Day.

Governor Van Sant has designated Friday, April 26, as Arbor and Bird Day and in his proclamation appointing the day, recommends that appropriate exercises be held in all the schools of the state that the youth may be taught to appreciate the utility of trees and shrubs and the importance of preserving the harmless birds.

The practice which has been the custom in Minnesota for some years of devoting at least a portion of Arbor Day each year to the planting of trees and shrubs around the public and private institutions of the state is a good one and should grow in favor each year. There is nothing which benefits the land as do trees and shrubs. A home surrounded by a splendid row of trees is always more attractive than one which sets alone on the prairie. If the country trees are of great practical value to the farmer and many a farm house is now surrounded by a grove of trees which not only adds to the beauty of the home but acts as a windbreak in the winter, protecting the house from the cold winds which sweep across the prairies. The farmer who has not a grove about his buildings or at least on the north side of them, should make an effort on this Arbor Day to plant some trees which will in the future be both beautiful in the summer and a protection in the winter.

Few in Every Town.

There is a certain person in our village who is so fond of gossiping about other ladies that she is liable to take a fall one of these days and step on her tongue.—Erskine Echo.

—Julius Pleth, the land man wants to buy your farm. Do you want to sell? If so call at his office two doors south of Hotel Markham.

Rapp Killed It.

When the house bill to allow fishing with pound nets in Red Lake came up quite a protest went up from the surrounding country and many telegrams were sent in to have the bill killed. Although Representative Rapp was confined to his bed he succeeded in securing enough members to kill the bill to the satisfaction of his constituents in this district as shown by the following letter:

ST. PAUL, April 15th, 1901.

H. E. IVES,
St. Hilaire, Minn.

DEAR SIR:—Yours of the 9th to hand and contents noted. I presume your letter really does not require an answer since the bill has been killed, but it took some pretty hard work to do it.

Mr. Rapp, your representative, had the misfortune to be laid up, but to his credit be it said, he sent for the members to call and see him, and requested them to kill the bill, allowing netting in Red Lake, which, as you already know, was done.

Yours very truly,
SAM F. FULLERTON,
Executive Agent.

Reward to Farmers.

I will pay seventy-five ($75.00) dollars in gold for the best ten (10) ears of corn gathered in one field; fifty ($50.00) dollars for the second ten ears of corn and twenty-five (25.00) dollars for the third ten ears of corn, grown in three separate fields in Red Lake county next fall from seed corn I am now giving away and am willing to let three of the business men in St. Hilaire be the judges. I reserve the right to pick the corn in the field myself so there can be no chance for any fraud by people shipping it in.

JULIUS PLETH,
The St. Hilaire Land Man.

—If you are troubled with rheumatism take the Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure. It will positively cure all diseases arising from impure blood, and is sold under an absolute guarantee to benefit, or money refunded. Call for free sample at the New Drug Store.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

Smoking an Electric Pipe.

In theaters, real pipes and cigars are considered very objectionable. On this account an electric pipe has been invented which is run with a small storage battery. Pressing on the mouthpiece with the teeth completes the circuit and lights up a small incandescent red light, which glows and dies down in a realistic way. As a novelty this is all right but most smokers prefer the real thing. The real thing in the line of a satisfactory beverage is "Golden Grain Belt" beer—best because it is the purest, most healthful and delicious. It is refreshing and invigorating and will do you good. Have it in your home. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

—Farms wanted by Julius Pleth, the land man. Office located two doors south of the Hotel Markham, St. Hilaire, Minn.

—To cure a cough in one day take the Imperial cough syrup. A guarantee to cure [illegible] at the New Drug Store.

Laboring Men Not Needed.

Willis Moses recently received a lengthy letter from Frank Briggs of Everett, describing the rush of working men to that country and urging the importance of lodges and other societies in the East warning their members against being deceived by the advertisements and circulars of mill men and railroads claiming that there is a demand for labor on the coast at big wages. The lodges there, Frank writes, are taxed beyond their means to care for unfortunate brethern who have landed there without means and people are still coming by the train load. He says the mill and factory men, to lower wages, and the railroads to sell tickets, are responsible for this uncalled for influx of labor and that scores of people on their representations have left good positions in the east only to find want and idleness awaiting them when they reached their Mecca. The infamy of this business cannot be fitly characterized.—Hillsboro Independent.

New England Women

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MRS MABEL GOOKIN

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to succeed, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings.

Thus stands the Pinkham name in New England, and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England, its home. Merit, and merit alone, can gain this.

ORGANIC INFLAMMATION.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was troubled very badly with inflammation of the bladder, was sick in bed with it. I had two doctors, but they did me no good. A friend gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me. I have now taken three bottles of it, and I am entirely cured. It is a God-send to any woman, and I would recommend it to any one suffering as I was. I think, if most of the women would take more of your medicine instead of going to the doctors, they would be better off. The Compound has also cured my husband of kidney trouble."
MRS. MABEL GOOKIN,
Box 160. Mechanic Falls, Maine.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"For two years I suffered from nervous prostration, the result of female weakness. I had leucorrhoea very badly, and at time of menstruation would be obliged to go to bed. Also suffered with headaches, pain across back, and in lower part of abdomen. I was so discouraged. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and concluded to give it a trial. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, and received a very nice letter in return. I began at once the use of her Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now feeling splendid. I have no more pain at monthly periods, can do my own work, and have gained ten pounds. I would not be without your Vegetable Compound. It is a splendid medicine. I am very thankful for what it has done for me."—MRS. J. W. J., 76 Carolina Ave., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

PAINFUL PERIODS.

"I cannot help but feel that it is my duty to do something in regard to recommending your wonderful medicine. I must say it is the grandest medicine on earth, and have advised a great many suffering with female troubles to take it. I tell people I wish I could go on the platform and lecture on it.

"My trouble was painful menstruation. The suffering I endured pen cannot describe. I was treated by one of our most prominent physicians here for five months, and found myself getting worse instead of better. At the end of the fifth month he told me he had done all he could for me, and that I had better go to the hospital.

"My sister advised me to try your Vegetable Compound, as it cured her of backache. I did so, and took it faithfully, and am now cured of my trouble, and in perfect health, many thanks to your medicine. I cannot praise it enough, and would recommend it to all who suffer from any female weakness."—MRS. H. S. BALL, 461 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission.
LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE Co.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure these women—why not you—you cannot tell until you try it. If you are ill, and really want to get well, commence its use at once, and do not let any drug clerk persuade you that he has something of his own which is better, for that is absurd. Ask him to produce the evidence we do.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

News of the Northwest

UNIVERSITY EXHIBIT.

Wisconsin Will Make a Display at the Buffalo Exposition.

Madison, Wis., April 13.—The University of Wisconsin will have an educational exhibit to be held at Buffalo this coming summer. As a rule universities that do not charge any tuition do not care to advertise to any great extent. For this reason Wisconsin will not make a great effort. The exhibit that the university board had at Paris will be transferred to Buffalo and that will probably be the extent of the educational exhibit of this institution, except one will be sent by the dairy department.

FOOTBALL PROHIBITED.

Radical Action Taken by a Wisconsin School Board.

Marinette, Wis., April 13.—The school board decided to prohibit football in the public schools. Resolutions were passed prohibiting the game on any of the school grounds in the city and denying the high school boys the right to use the name of the high school in designating their team. The action was the result of popular prejudice against the game. The team has been one of the strongest in Wisconsin. A resolution prohibiting dancing in the high school was also adopted.

MURDER MYSTERY.

Charred Remains of Unidentified Man Found in Montana.

Helena, Mont., April 13.—The partially cremated body of a man was found yesterday in a gulch near Dillon. It had laid there three or four months. Fire had been built in a circle all around the body, showing that an effort had been made to consume it entirely. In the ashes some small silver coins and an old silver watch were found. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder, but the identity of the victim or his slayers is absolutely unknown.

RETURNS TO FIRST LOVE.

Much-Married Man Seeks First Wife After Thirty Years.

Jackson, Minn., April 13. — Thirty years ago P. W. Hill left his family here, a wife and two children, and returned East. He was divorced and remarried, and raised a family of six children. He lost his second wife by death and married the third time and was again divorced. He returned to this place last week, courted his first wife and married her.

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING.

Supposed Reason Why Hiram Cranson Committed Suicide.

Red Wing, Minn., April 13.—Penniless, sick and despondent, Hiram A. Cranson decided that life was not worth living and took carbolic acid at the Merchants hotel last evening and died. He leaves a sister at Goodhue and a sister and mother at Jackson, Mich. He will be buried here in the potters field.

Injured by Dogs.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 13.—The five-year-old son of G. W. McCormick of Hawarden, Iowa, was attacked by a bulldog and two greyhounds belonging to a neighbor. His mother heard his cries and ran to his assistance, but before she could beat off the dogs the boy was quite badly chewed and lacerated about the arms, limbs and neck. The wounds are not considered dangerous, although serious. A physician cauterized them in the hope of preventing poisoning.

Nebraska Cattle Losses.

Deadwood, S. D., April 23. — Albert Malterner has just returned from Lakeside, Neb., where he owns a large cattle ranch. He says that during the last blizzard the losses to cattlemen were very large. One man lost a drove of 100 cattle out of a herd of 400. Many cattle were driven against barb wire fences in the blinding storm and were trampled under foot. Most of the cattle perished for want of food.

The Oldest Native Born Iowan.

West Union, Iowa, April 13.—A man who died recently at Burlington was said to have been the first white person born in Iowa. He was born at Burlington in 1836. Mrs. T. C. Barclay, now living at Oelwein, was born in Iowa in 1835, and there is little doubt that she is the oldest native-born resident of the state.

Ten Years for Murder.

Helena, Mont., April 13.—The jury in the Patton murder case at Kalispell returned a verdict of murder in the second degree, and fixed the penalty at ten years' imprisonment. James Patton killed Patrick Carroll last October during a quarrel at the Tinkel electric plant on the Big Fork river. The sentence is regarded as very light.

Sent to Prison.

Vermillion, S. D., April 13.—Deputy Sheriff Whiteside has taken Clarence Kinney and Elijah Melrose to the state penitentiary for one and two years respectively. Melrose was sentenced on two charges, grand larceny and burglary, getting a year for each offense.

Two Men Fatally Stabbed.

Ottumwa, Iowa, April 13. — Peter Crips, proprietor of a livery stable, and Bert Houston, a cab driver, were probably fatally stabbed last night by gamblers who were celebrating heavy winnings. The assault was unprovoked.

Bridegroom Kills Himself.

Lake City, Iowa, April 13.—The dead body of Frank Desart was found hanging in a buggy shed in his father-in-law's homestead. He had been married but nine days. Despondency is assigned as the cause.

Gold Brick Man Arrested.

Albia, Iowa, April 13.—Word from Greensboro, N. C., says John Shearly has been arrested and is held for the Iowa officers. He buncoed a farmer out of $7,000 several months ago by a gold brick scheme.

Charged With Wife Beating.

Redwood Falls, Minn., April 13.—Morgan had a rather sensational case of wife beating on trial. Henry Kapischke of that town was placed under $3,000 bonds on a charge of assault and battery upon his wife, to whom he has been married only a few months. A suit for divorce will undoubtedly be one of the results.

Will Reopen Copper Shaft.

A STORY OF BLOOD.

North Dakota Farmer Shoots Two of His Neighbors.

Steele, N. D., April 13.—Rev. Mr. Hilsiren brings news of a tragedy at Braddock, twenty-six miles south, on Wednesday morning. A farmer named Revenger shot his neighbor, Nels Olson, in the neck, the bullet emerging at the mouth. The murderer escaped at the time, but was found dead on the prairie with his face shot away. He had fired his shotgun with his toe. Later it was learned that the would-be murderer met Pete Lavine while on his way to kill Olson and fired at Levine's head. Levine was saved by his leather cuff, the shot striking his wrist. That Revenger was a deliberate murderer and suicide is shown by a letter written the night before his crimes. He claimed the neighbors had neglected and slighted him for years and he had resolved to kill them. Dr. Snyder and a constable brought Revenger's body to Braddock. Revenger is thought to have been insane from long brooding over fancied grievances. Olson is seriously wounded, but has a fair chance of recovery.

WILL BE RATIFIED.

Canadian Parliament Will Pass Railway Legislation for Manitoba.

Winnipeg, April 13.—Despite all talk to the contrary your correspondent learns from one very close to the ministry at Ottawa that the railway deals will go through, much to the chagrin of the vast majority of Manitobans.

Dan Sprague, one of the MacKenzie & Mann chief supporters, is now hauling logs to Winnipeg from the limits of the Canadian Northern lines. Many Canadian lumbermen hope the exit of the Northern Pacific railroad will raise the price of lumber.

WILL SELL HIS BIG TREES.

Whiteside Has Another Offer for His Grove in California.

Duluth, Minn., April 13. — R. B. Whiteside, who owns the famous big tree grove in Calaveras county, Cal., is on his way to California to close a deal for its sale. He will be on the coast three weeks. The Californians want to pay him $125,000 for the grove, but it cost him nearly that and is worth far more, and he refused it. He considers the idea of buying worth something.

Prison Wardens Changed.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 13. — The state board of charities and corrections, as organized under the recent decision of the state supreme court with four Republicans and one fusion member, at a meeting here decapitated John A. Bowler, warden of the penitentiary, and appointed as his successor O. S. Swenson, chairman of the Republican committee of this county, to whom the wardenship had been conceded for some time. The board spent the afternoon at the deaf mute school.

Worked the Cashier.

Deadwood, S. D., April 13. — A few days ago a man named Charles Braun arrived from Perry, Iowa. He went to the First National bank and made a draft on the bank at Perry for $250. He asked the cashier of the bank to advance him $50 until his draft could be heard from, which the cashier did. A letter came from the bank at Perry saying that Braun was not known there. The city police were instructed to look after the man and he has been arrested.

Will Shoot on Memorial Day.

Winona, Minn., April 13.—The Winona Sportsman's club has completed arrangements for holding their annual tournament on Memorial day. Shooting will commence at 9 a. m., and there will be twelve events of fifteen birds each. Sixty dollars in purses will be offered in addition to the percentage purses. A number of shooters from out of the city are expected to participate.

Lineman Shocked to Death.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 13. — George Lunn, a lineman, fell dead on the principal business street of Grinnell last night in the presence of several hundred people from the effects of an electric shock. Lunn was fixing the arc light when he suddenly threw up his arms and dropped dead. Just how the accident occurred is not known, and no burns can be found on his body.

Big Tin Pail Contract.

La Crosse, Wis., April 13.—The La Crosse Packers' Package company has secured a contract for $150,000 worth of tin pails. The firm has just let a contract for $50,000 worth of tin plate and is erecting a warehouse to hold 100 cars of tin. The new factory is proving to be an unusually profitable investment.

Examination for Naval Cadet.

Deadwood, S. D., April 13.—A competitive examination will be held in Huron the first part of next month in charge of Congressmen Martin and Burke, for the purpose of selecting a cadet and an alternate for the appointment to the United States naval academy at Annapolis.

Log Drive Next Week.

Butternut, Wis., April 13.—Many of the lumbermen who have logs on the banks of the Flambeau river are preparing to go on the drive the first of next week. The river is partly open. The logs will be floated to various towns on the Flambeau, Chippewa and Wisconsin rivers.

Want No Second Disaster.

Winona, Minn., April 13.—The people of Fountain City have commenced the work of blasting away a number of large rocks which are located on the bluff and overhanging the city. The action is taken to avert the recurrence of the fatal catastrophe of a few days ago.

Progress of Seeding.

Marshall, Minn., April 13.—Most of the spring grain has been sown, and conditions are promising for its future.

Kasson, Minn., April 13.—Seeding on the higher ground has begun in this locality. The ground is in fair condition. A good rain would improve it.

Poisoned by Wild Parsnips.

Alden, Minn., April 13.—The nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. August Peterson of Mansfield died after two hours' terrible suffering from the effects of eating wild parsnips.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna Is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy—I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan A. Grosvenor.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna: "As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."

Miss Mattie L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"I doubt if Peruna has a rival in all the remedies recommended to-day for catarrh of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found it the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy my endorsement I gladly accord it."

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council, No. 168, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2535 Polk St., N. E.:

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms, Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Resume of the News.

Fresh Reliable Brief

Washington Notes.

An attempt will be made by the post-office department to rectify the second-class mail abuse.

The treasury department has taken steps to stop undesirable immigration across the Canadian border.

Secretary Wilson has decided to send out an expert to scour the rice-growing regions of the world, and thoroughly investigate important matters connected with that industry.

Baron Fava will be succeeded as American ambassador from Italy to this country by the Marquis Obizzo Malispina di Carbonara, now minister for Italy at Argentina.

Papers have been signed by which the French government acquires a large tract of land in the residential section of Washington, for the purpose of building a French embassy.

The navy department has decided to send the naval yacht Dorothea to the Great Lakes by way of the St. Lawrence river and the Canadian canals, where her first service will be to take on board the Illinois naval militia for their practice cruise.

Dr. Cobb, of the United States Marine hospital and sanitarium, at Fort Stanton, near Alomogordo, N. M., has been ordered by Surgeon General Wyman to proceed to San Francisco and make an exhaustive study and report on the bubonic plague situation.

A pension of $8 per month has been granted to Mrs. John C. Breckinridge, widow of Former Vice President Breckinridge. Mr. Breckinride was a major of the Third Kentucky volunteers in the Mexican war. The pension carries arrears amounting to $1,350. Mrs. Breckinride is seventy-six years old.

Casualities.

A heavy snow storm in Missouri and Southwestern Kansas caused a suspension of all kinds of traffic.

Rev. George B. Reeser, pastor of the Emanuel Reformed church at Hanover, Pa., yesterday fell from the scaffold of a new church which his congregation is building, and died in half an hour.

A party of four people, while crossing the tracks of the Lehigh Valley railway at South Wilkesbarre, Pa., were run down by the Buffalo express. Three of the party were killed and one injured. The dead are: Morris O'Connell, Mrs. Morris O'Connell, Mrs. Frank Cranmer. Injured: Frank Cranmer.

Hunt Brother's fruit canning plant at Haywards, Cal., was totally destroyed by fire. The boarding house and some eighty-five cottages, seventy-five of which were owned by the company, the plant, fruit warehouse and 2,000 cases of fruit were destroyed. Six fruit cars were also consumed. Many families were rendered homeless. The loss will exceed $125,000.

People Talked About.

Gen. Gras, inventor of the rifle which bears his name, died in France of apoplexy.

Prof. Henry A. Rowland, of the Johns Hopkins university, died suddenly at his home in Baltimore.

The proceeds of the benefit given for Mme. Janaushek at Wallack's theater, New York city, amounted to $5,000.

Phineas E. Blodgett, whose father was a member of Washington's army, died recently in Chicago. He was born in 1809 at Groton, N. Y. He had voted for eighteen presidents.

Count Wircenz von Rola Macielinski, once a well known musician, is dead in Kansas City. He was a Polish nobleman, and went to Kansas City ten years ago. He had a fine musical education in Vienna.

Maj. Joseph Smith Brice, the oldest graduate of West Point, died in New York City, aged ninety-three. He was born in Georgetown, D. C., Sept. 21, 1808, and was graduated at West Point with distinction in 1829.

Mrs. Irene G. Shear, the divorced wife of Byron E. Shear, the millionaire lumberman of Denver, has married Elwood Bonfield, a liver stable keeper of New York. Mrs. Bonfield was divorced from her first husband last October.

Finley Peter Dunne, "Mr. Dooley," arrived in London recently from Rome, after a two-months' stay in Italy for the benefit of his health. He states that he has fully recovered both his health and strength, and will sail for the United States, ready for work.

Daniel C. French, the designer of "Death and the Sculptor," a great work in bronze, shown at the world's fair, and of other monuments, will receive a commission from the Lawton Monument association to construct a memorial to the Indiana general who died in the Philippines.

Sins and Sinners.

A Connecticut girl has confessed to choking her child to death.

John Albert Skoog, alias Albeht Jensen, the alleged counterfeiter, who shot himself twice in the head in New York, is dead.

Martin Ritter, charged with killing Clara Cheek with a hammer, near Nashville, Ill., has been captured. He was placed in jail in an adjoining county, for fear of lynching.

The Christian church, four miles north of Ripley, Okla., was destroyed by dynamite. No arrests have been made. The church was a new structure.

STORM AND FLOOD

LEAVE ZONE OF RUIN TWO HUNDRED MILES IN DIAMETER.

Most Widespread and Destructive Storm in Many Years — Many Towns Are Tied Up by a Snowstorm, While Many Others Are in Just as Bad Straits From Rain—Damage Will Reach $3,000,000—Great Alarm Along the Ohio River on Account of the Flood.

Pittsburg, April 22.—The most widespread and destructive storm, from a material point of view, has passed. It has left a zone of ruin 200 miles in diameter. It was unusual in that it possessed so many different features. Cities seventy miles from Pittsburg were tied up by one of the worst snow storms ever known. While the snowfall was from eighteen inches to three feet deep, which is not extraordinary, the snow was so wet that it clung in weighty masses to shade and fruit trees and electric wires and poles, bearing them to the earth. It settled on steam and street railroads like wet sand, stopping all traffic and making pedestrianism a feat for only the most hardy. The fall was so heavy and spontaneous in some places that the residents declare it seemed like the bursting of a snow cloud. A few miles away from the unfortunate towns were municipalities in just as dire straits from rain, but with speedier prospect for relief, as the rain will run off faster than the snow can melt, yet here traffic was practically suspended. Water overflowed and washed out railroad tracks and hillsides came down and buried the rails. In addition,

Nearly Every Town

on the Ohio river between Pittsburg and Wheeling was in darkness last night. Electric light plants or their wires are damaged and the gas in the mains is generally turned off. A remarkable feature of the storm is that but few fatalities directly attributable to this cause have been reported. A railroader caught in a wreck caused by a landslide, and the death of an old woman from shock are the only ones known so far. There may be others, but as communication is cut off from many populous places it will be the end of the week before the total can be footed up. The money loss is just as difficult to foot up. It may reach $3,000,000. The railroads think they have lost $1,000,000. The loss of wages to the army of workers in manufacturing plants up and down the rivers will mount up to $500,000, and the repairs to the plants will be a large sum. The damage to stores, stocks, residences and furniture in Pittsburg, Allegheny and towns and cities down the Ohio will probably reach $500,000. The telegraph companies have suffered severely, but cannot yet compute their losses. In addition, there is the enormous indirect damage caused by the almost complete suspension of trade. What that amounts to no one can determine exactly, and estimates simply reflect the conservative or radical character of the computer.

People in Great Alarm.

Cincinnati, April 22.—There has been more alarm throughout the Ohio valley on account of floods than at any period since February, 1884, when the Ohio river reached its highest stage of seventy-one feet and nine inches at this city. Most of the inhabitants of the valley spent the night in anticipation of the worst flood ever known in the valley, as they will not know until today the water has begun falling at Pittsburg. Until this news reached the river men last night, it was feared that the record of 1884 might be broken, but now it is generally believed that the river will not exceed the floods of February, 1897, and of March, 1898, when it reached sixty-one feet at Cincinnati. The present flood is the worst that has ever been known so late in the spring. The flood will do much more damage now than it would have done one or two months ago. While the close observing river men are confident that the record of 1884 will not be broken unless another mountain flood reaches Pittsburg, yet it is now evident that

Much Damage Will Be Done

before the present rise is exhausted. While the water has begun to fall at Pittsburg, both rain and snow have been falling heavily all along the Ohio valley. The danger line has already been reached at points above Cincinnati, and it will be reached here this morning. The merchants and manufacturers in the lower part of the city were working all day yesterday and all last night preparing for the worst.

Early last evening the weather bureau here announced heavy snows and rains along the Ohio valley, especially in Southern Ohio. The uniform rise during the day was four-tenths of a foot per hour, but the average was higher last night. The weather bureau announced that the danger line had been reached at all upper substations last night, and that it would be reached in Cincinnati this noon. Owing to the general prostration of telegraph and telephone wires it is impossible to hear from many points. The trains are all late. It is generally conceded that the fruit crop throughout the Ohio valley is gone and the damage to crops is very great.

Tired of Life.

Albert Lea, Minn., April 22.—Early yesterday morning C. W. Scram was found in his room at the Metropolitan hotel suffering from a large dose of laudanum. Physicians were at once called, and although the stomach was emptied and washed out death ensued in a short time. He left a letter to a son saying he was tired of life.

Ryan Leaves the Ring.

Kansas City, April 22.—Tommy Ryan, who has been visiting here, announces his retirement from the ring. He says he is getting well on in years and considers it best to quit the business before some youngster puts him out of it.

Grain Elevator Burned Down.

South Bend, Ind., April 22.—The elevator owned by the Churchill-White Grain Company of Chicago, with all its contents, was burned at a loss of $120,000. It was the largest elevator in Indiana. Insurance, $79,600.

TERRORIZED PASSENGERS.

Steamer Oranje Nassau Has an Uncanny Experience.

New York, April 22.—Warned by a loud thunder clap, with the wind whistling through the rigging, the Oranjo Nassau, of the Royal Dutch West India Mail, which arrived here from a South American port yesterday, ran into an electrical storm on Saturday that struck terror into the passengers. With the lightning playing all about her the ship seemed to be charging a battery of artillery, when, with an unexpectedness equal to the breaking of the gale, the masts and rigging were illuminated in the fall of the gloom by great balls of light, vari-colored St. Elmos fire. Already benumbed with fear the steerage passengers cried aloud with terror in this new visitation, and many dropping on their knees, prayed for protection. The sailors, callous to the preceding demonstrations, were more concerned at the latter display, for St. Elmos fire is thought a harbinger of misfortune. It took the best efforts of the officers to restore order. The disturbance was not wholly unexpected for the day had become overcast and lowering, and a most severe electrical storm preceded the advent of the strange fire.

RACER LAUNCHED.

Shamrock II. Is Named Before an Enthusiastic Audience.

Dumbarton, April 22.—The Shamrock II., which will compete for the America's cup this year, was launched Saturday before an enthusiastic assemblage. The launch went off without a hitch. Above the platform on which a majority of the guests witnessed the launching was another small platform. On this Sir Thomas Lipton, the earl and countess of Dufferin, Mr. Watson, the Dennys and Charles Russell were gathered. The bottle of champagne hung from the bow on a festoon of white and green ribbons. At Mr. Watson's signal the blocks were knocked away. Lady Dufferin let go the bottle with the words, "Success to Shamrock II.," and the yacht took the water amid general cheering, the lifting of hats and cries of "Hope she will win." Reports pronounce the launch to have been satisfactory in every way.

UNREST IN RUSSIA.

University Students Continue Their Disturbances.

St. Petersburg, April 22.—Disturbances among the Russian university students have by no means ended. The theological schools of Riasan, Irkutsk and Kieff have been the scene of extraordinary demonstrations against Pobyedonostseff, the head of the synod which excommunicated Tolstoy. During a lecture on church history at Riasan, a student cried out, "Hurrah for Tolstoy," and the young priests jumped to their feet and cheered wildly. The professor tried to quell the disturbance. Next day the ringleaders were ordered off to the monasteries for six months' confinement as a penance. This ferment among the divinity students, of whom there are 40,000 in Russia, shows how deeply the existing dissatisfaction goes and how it has invaded circles hitherto noted for their extreme apathy.

INHUMAN WRETCHES.

Robbers Torture an Old Man and Then Rob Him of $6,000.

Kendallville, Ind., April 22—The home of John Andigo, an Amish farmer, was entered by three men who secured $6,000 after burning the old man's ears, nose and fingers with lighted matches. A nineteen-year-old daughter of Andigo was insulted, and when the father refused to give up his money as readily as demanded, she was dragged down to the floor by her hair by one of the robbers. The mother, who had seen her husband's torture and the indignities heaped upon her daughter, told the robbers that if they would desist she would give up the money. She led the way to the cellar, where, in an old cupboard, the savings of years, $6,000, was handed over to the robbers, who escaped.

INNOCENT MEN SUFFER.

Four Men Fatally Wounded as a Result of a Shooting Affray.

Kansas City, April 22.—Four innocent white men were shot, one perhaps fatally, a negro shot and another badly cut as the result of a drunken fight started by a crowd of negroes in Rosedale, Kan., a suburb of Kansas City, yesterday. William Blanchard received the contents of a shotgun in the face and breast and was taken to the hospital, where his wounds are considered fatal. One of Blanchard's eyes was blown out, his face badly disfigured, and a big hole was torn in his breast. J. W. Davis, deputy marshal, was shot in the hand; two other white men were shot, one wounded slightly; Ben Cable, colored, was cut seriously and Tom Smith, colored, was shot and wounded slightly.

Damage in Connecticut.

New Haven, Conn., April 22.—Reports from around the state show that the damage done by the floods resulting from the rain of the last thirty-six hours, has been very serious. The worst situation is at Winsted, where Highland lake threatened to overflow at almost any hour. If such occurs it is feared a terrible loss of life and property will ensue. A score of washouts have occurred on the Central New England railroad between Winsted and Hartford.

Legged It to Liberty.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 22.—William Perkins, who was sentenced to eighteen months in the penitentiary for burglary, walked out of the corridor of the county jail and is still at large. He had been given the freedom of the corridor by the jailer.

GUILTY BANKERS DIE

FEARING DISGRACE THEY TAKE THEIR OWN LIVES.

President and Cashier of the First National Bank of Vancouver Use the Same Weapon Upon Themselves—Bank Examiner Found a Shortage of $81,000, and Both Men Admitted Their Guilt—Their Bodies Found Together in a Clump of Trees — Speculation in Stocks at the Bottom of It.

Vancouver, Wash., April 22.—Charles Brown and E. L. Canby, president and cashier respectively of the First National Bank of Vancouver, which was closed Saturday by the controller of the currency, committed suicide Saturday night two miles from this city by shooting themselves with a revolver. Their bodies were found yesterday morning lying together in a small clump of bushes about one-half mile north of the Columbia school, which is situated on the outskirth of the town. They both used the same weapon, and Canby evidently died first as the revolver was found in Brown's hand. It is evident that Canby put the muzzle of the revolver in his mouth and the top of his head was blown off. Brown there took it and shot himself exactly the same way, falling over Canby's body.

The fact that Brown's bicycle and an umbrella belonging to Canby were found a short distance out of town Saturday night led to the belief that the two bank officials had taken their lives. Early yesterday morning a searching party started out and after severel hours' hunt the bodies were found in the clump of bushes.

Friday evening Canby, upon being told by Bank Examiner J. W. Maxwell that the bank would not be permitted to open Saturday, went out in the yard behind the bank and attempted to shoot himself. His revolver failed to explode, although all five chambers were loaded. After failing to shoot himself Canby came back into the bank and he and President Brown left together later, taking his revolver. When Examiner Maxwell confronted the bank officials with the shortage of $81,000 which he had discovered, both men admitted their guilt. It is said that both Brown and Canby had been speculating in stocks. Beside Brown's body there was found a package containing $25 and a note saying that the money belonged to his daughter. Upon Canby's body the following brief note was found:

"My Dear Wife: I feel what I am about to do is for the best. Forgive me if you can and try to live for our dear children. God bless you all. Good-bye. —Ned, April 19."

BEATS RECORD.

J. J. Hill's Special Train Goes 1,823 Miles in 45 Hours and 50 Minutes.

St. Paul, April 22.—President Hill and party arrived in St. Paul Saturday at 12:54 o'clock p. m., after a record-breaking run from Seattle. The distance of 1,823 miles was made in 45 hours and 50 minutes, which, it is claimed, is the fastest time ever made anywhere in the world, for that distance. This run, including stops and necessary delays, makes a speed of 39 7-9 miles per hour for the whole distance. By bursts of speed the train also made a record, covering a large run in Montana at the rate of 84 miles per hour. The round trip from St. Paul to Seattle was made in five days. The party consisted of A. N. French, New York; James Tuck, Paris; James J. Hill and Gairus Mailler. President Hill refused to be interviewed by reporters, but it is understood that he will speed at once to New York, where there are some important matters to be taken up which was the cause of the great speed with which the train was sent over the rails.

THREE PERISH IN THE FLAMES.

Sad Fate of a Widow and Her Two Children.

Galesburg, N. D., April 22.—Two miles west of here the home of Mrs. Hannah Kjoren, widow, was burned. The only inhabitants of the house—herself and two boys, aged six and ten, were burned to death. The woman's body was found with its flesh nearly all burned off, clasping the young boy in her arms. The body of the oldest boy was almost incinerated.

Charged With Murder.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 22.—Henry Steffen and William Beaver are in jail at Le Mars, Iowa, charged with murder, and Peter Peterson is also under arrest, charged with being accessory to the crime. John Jensen was shot and killed at Steffen's farm, about eight miles from Le Mars. The men under arrest claim self-defense. Jessen and his wife kept house for Steffen, and Beaver is a hired man. Jessen came home drunk and abused his wife. The other men interfered, and two shotguns were used in the melee. Steffen admith that he fired the fatal shot.

Stolen or Lost in Transit.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 22.—During the past few weeks considerable grain shipped from Flandrau has been stolen or lost in transit. One firm lost 10,000 pounds of wheat from one car, while another firm lost 11,000 pounds of barley from two cars. It is believed that thieves raid the cars while temporarily in railroad yards after leaving Flandrau. Litigation will probably result to determine whether the shippers or the commission firms to which the grain was consigned shall bear the loss.

Jailbreaker Captured.

Little Falls, Minn., April 22.—Sheriff Tanner of Morrison county captured Roller, the St. Cloud jailbreaker, near Burtrum. This is the last of the six who escaped a week ago, the others being captured inside of two days.

Paper Mills Burned.

Sparta, Wis., April 22.—The O. J. Newton's Sons company's paper mills were destroyed by fire. Fire started in the dynamo room and before the fire apparatus arrived the plant was entirely destroyed. [illegible]

CAPT. RIPLEY ACQUITTED.

Jury in Kentucky Finds Him Not Guilty of Conspiracy to Kill William Goebel.

Frankfort, Ky., April 22.—The jury in the case of Capt. Garnett Ripley, charged with being in a conspiracy which resulted in the assassination of William Goebel, returned a verdict of not guilty after being out only a short time. The jury was composed exclusively of Democrats. The matter of a requisition for the return of ex-Gov. W. S. Taylor from Indiana for trial is again a theme of popular speculation, but Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin refuses to discuss it, and up to the present writing no application for extradition papers has been filed.

KING VICTOR AS AN AUTHOR.

Italy's Ruler Completes First Volume of His History of His Country's Coinage.

Rome, April 22.—King Victor Emmanuel has just completed the first volume of his history of Italian coins and medals, upon which he has been engaged for a long time. The book contains no fewer than 12,000 illustrations, and it is estimated it will cost $100,000. It will be published about the end of September.

MAD MULLAH OUT WITH ARMY.

Is Said to Be at Lassidar, Down the Hugdayr River, With Forty Thousand Men and Arms.

Aden, April 22.—The Mad Mullah is now at Lassidar, four days' march down the Tugdayr river. It is understood he has 40,000 followers, including 8,000 horsemen and quantities of ammunition obtained from an unknown source. A British force will shortly be concentrated at Burao, preparatory to a general advance in conjugation with the Abyssinians.

NEW RAILROAD RUMOR.

Hill May Extend His Interests to Southern California.

Salt Lake, Utah, April 22.—The Tribune says that the present activity in railroad building in Southwestern Utah and Southeastern Nevada by interests representing Senator William A. Clark of Montana and the pushing of the Burlington surveyors toward Salt Lake involve the practical co-operation of Senator Clark and President Hill of the Great Northern system in a scheme to extend President Hill's great interests to the Pacific coast in Southern California, thus introducing a formidable rival to the Harriman interests in that region.

TELEPHONE COMBINE.

All the Companies in the Country Said to Be in It.

San Francisco, April 22.—News has been received here of a big combination of all the telephone interests of the United States, with John I. Sabin, president and manager of Pacific States Telephone company, with headquarters in this city, as president at a salary of $35,000 a year. The presidency and management of the Pacific States Telephone company will be retained by Sabin, who will reside in the East for a period, until he has placed the systems there upon a basis comparable to that of San Francisco.

NEW BRITISH LOAN.

Half the Amount Has Already Been Subscribed.

New York, April 22.—The prospectus of the £60,000,000 British loan was issued Saturday from the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., who announce that their firm, Baring, McGoun & Co. of this city, Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia and Kidder, Peabody & Co. of Boston are authorized to forward applications for allotments of the loan to the Bank of England. The bank announces that £30,000,000 has already been subscribed for.

Attempted Poisoning.

Denver, April 22.—An attempt was made to poison Joseph Haennelt, a prisoner in the county jail, charged with having assisted in robbing Mrs. Flora Betts of $7,000 worth of diamonds in August last while driving with her. An apple pie and some cheese were left at the jail for Haennelt by an old man who is unknown. After nibbling at the cheese the prisoner became sick. An emetic was administered which saved his life. An examination disclosed that the pie and cheese contained a great quantity of arsenic and other poisons.

Killed by an Explosion.

Pittsburg, April 22.—As a result of the explosion of a water heater in the Hotel Anderson yesterday John Brown, the engineer, was killed, and Abner Moore, a machinist, was so badly scalded that he will probably die in a few hours. No cause is known unless it is that the sewers in the vicinity were so clogged by the flood that the pipe through which the surplus from the heater should have flowed into the sewer prevented the usual operation and the extreme pressure caused the accident.

Heavy Damage by Fire.

Reno, Nev., April 22.—The hotel and bath house at the historic Steamboat Springs, which in the palmy days of the Comstock mines was a watering place where more money was squandered in a night than at most any other resort on the coast, have been destroyed by fire. The loss is heavy, and it is said no insurance was carried.

To Bury the Past.

Vienna, April 22.—The Official Remdenblatt says the friendly approachment between Austria and Mexico in consequence of the erection of the expiatory chapel at Iquere Tare, where Emperor Maxmilian was executed, will result in an early resumption of diplomatic relations, interrupted since 1867, the year the emperor was shot.

Child Burns to Death.

Red Wing, Minn., April 22.—Mabel Christensen, aged two years, while playing near a bonfire, had her clothing catch on fire and was burned to death. Her father had both hands badly burned trying to save the child.

Car Thieves at Jackson, Minn.

Jackson, Minn., April 22.—A freight car was broken into here and cases containing seventy-two pairs of shoes consigned to a Fulda firm taken. The sheriff is after the thieves, who seem to be driving east.

WHEN TO PASS THE HAT.

Mark Twain Gives Advice to Those Wishing to Procure Charity.

Mark Twain had wisdom on occasion, as well as wit. He declares that when a man makes an appeal for charity it is a great mistake to get everybody ready to give money and then not pass the hat. "Some years ago, in Hartford," he said the other day, "we all went to church on a hot, sweltering night, to hear the annual report of Mr. Hawley, a city missionary, who went around finding the people who needed help and didn't want to ask for it. He told of the life in the cellars, where poverty resided; he gave instances of heroism and devotion to the poor. The poor are always good to each other. When a man with millions gives we make much of noise. It's noise in the wrong place. For it's the widow's mite that counts. Well, Mr. Hawley worked me up to a great state. I couldn't wait for him to get through. I had $400 in my pocket. I wanted to give him that and borrow more to give. You could see greenbacks in every eye. But he didn't pass the plate, and it grew hotter and we grew sleepier. My enthusiasm went down—$100 at a time—until finally, when the plate came round I stole 10 cents out of it. So you see, a neglect like this may lead to crime."—Chicago Times-Herald.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

A Veteran of the Civil War Tells an Interesting Story.

Effingham, Ill., April 22.—(Special.)—Uriah S. Andrick is now 67 years of age. Mr. Andrick served through the whole of the Civil War. He was wounded three times by ball, and twice by bayonet.

When he entered the service of his country, in 1861, he was hale and hearty, and weighed 198 pounds. Since the close of the war, however, Mr. Andrick has had very bad health.

For fifteen years he never lay down in bed for over an hour at a time. He had acute Kidney Trouble, which grew into Bright's Disease. His heart, also, trouble [illegible] much.

"For the last sixteen years my wife has been in misery with bearing-down pains, pains in the lower part of the abdomen and other serious ailments. When she saw what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for me she commenced to use them. She now feels like another woman, her pains have all disappeared and her general health is better than it has been for years.

"She is so taken up with Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they have done for us that she has gone to Mr. Cornwall's drug store and bought them for some of her friends for fear that if they went themselves they might make a mistake and get something else."

There is something very convincing in the honest, simple story of this old veteran and his wife.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy. They never fail.

An Advertising Scheme.

Several old acquaintances of the late D. H. McAlpin, the tobacco manufacturer, were discussing his business success in an up town club, and one of them told the following story as illustrating the farreaching effect of comparatively insignificant things sometimes.

"It was after Mr. McAlpin was well started in the tobacco business," he said, "that an enterprising rival began to cut into his business by advertising that he placed a dime in every tenth package of tobacco put up in his factory. One day a foreman of the packing room went to Mr. McAlpin and said:

"'I have a suggestion to make that promises to knock out this dime in every tenth package scheme of your rival. Will you hear it?'

"'Yes; go ahead.'

"'Well, then, just put a dime in every package of tobacco put up in our shop and don't advertise it. It will advertise itself quickly enough.'

"Mr. McAlpin saw that the suggestion was good, and he accepted it. It cost him a good deal of money, but its success warranted it. Within a few weeks farmers were buying McAlpin tobacco, knowing that they would find money in each package, and if they had found diamonds it would not have surprised them."—New York Sun.

All on Account of the Boots.

As a sergeant was bawling out his orders in a barracks in Dublin and watching the line of feet as the raw recruits endeavored to obey the word of command he found, to his astonishment, that one pair of feet, more noticeable on account of their extra large size, never turned.

Without taking his eyes off those feet the sergeant bawled out a second order:

"About face!"

He could see that all the feet except those he watched turned in obedience.

Rushing up to the owner, a little fellow, he seized him by the shoulder, shouting:

"Why don't you turn with the rest?"

"I did!" replied the trembling recruit.

"You did, eh? Well, I watched your feet, and they never moved."

"It's the boots they gave me, sir," said the poor fellow. "They're so large that when I turn my feet turns inside of them."—London Answers.

The Disadvantage of Delicacy.

The editor sent her little story back, with a polite note praising its delicacy, but saying it was unsuitable to his magazine. Again she sent it forth. Once more it was returned with kind words for its delicate touches and regrets that it was unavailable. When a third time the little story had been praised for its delicacy, but rejected, the authoress was in despair.

"It looks to me," she said, "as if my story was so delicate that it had gone into a decline."—New York Mail and Express.

They Raised Pairs.

While Bishop Potter of the Episcopal church was traveling through Louisiana some years ago he addressed inquiries to his fellow passengers with a view of obtaining knowledge regarding the orchards and fruit interests of the state.

"Do you raise pears in Louisiana?" inquired the bishop.

"We do," responded the Louisianian. "If we have threes or better."—San Francisco Call.

Following the Same Rule.

"See here, sir," exclaimed the successful manufacturer to Mr. Adam Upp, his dilatory bookkeeper, "you are not so attentive to business as you might be. It has been my rule through life to be at my desk early and late, and"—

"Me, too," replied Mr. Upp. "Sometimes I get there early and sometimes late."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Libel once meant any little book, but as many small tracts in the early days of printing were personal and offensive in character the word acquired its present significance.

Auditor's Notice of Pendency of Petition.

STATE OF MINNESOTA, } ss.
COUNTY OF RED LAKE. }

Whereas, the viewers appointed by the board of county commissioners of said county of Red Lake at their session held on the 15th day of November, 1900 upon the petition of John Marleau and others, bearing date the 20th day of September, 1900 and on file in my office, praying for the establishment of a public drainage ditch along the route proposed therein, have made their report and filed the same in my office.

Now, Therefore, Notice is hereby given of the pendency of said petition, and that the same will be heard and determined before the said board of county commissioners, at their special session to be held at the court house in the city of Red Lake Falls in said county, on the 13th day of May, 1901, at 10 o'clock a. m.

The place of commencement of said main drainage ditch at its source is as follows: Beginning at a point 100 feet east of the quarter section corner between sections 1 and 6 of township 151 of range 43 and 44 w.; thence west along the quarter section line in sections 1, 2, 3 and 4 to a point 2053 feet west of the quarter section corner between sections 3 and 4 in township 151 north of range 44 w.; thence north 60 degrees, west a distance of 500 feet, to an outlet in small coulie in section 4 aforesaid; and branch ditch as follows: Beginning at a point 320 feet south of the quarter section corner between sections 9 and 10, township 151, range 44; thence running north, parallel to the section line and 22 feet distant easterly therefrom, to quarter section corner between sections 3 and 4, township 151 north of range 44 w.; having for an outlet the aforesaid main ditch.

The names of the persons through whose lands the proposed maid and branch drainage ditches pass are as follows: John Joachim Busse, Anna Hartje, Joseph Bole, Frank Gangnow, Geo L. and Mary E. Cheodle, Gideon Poirier, John Marleau, Napoleon Constant, Henry Schickling, Margaretta Walter, William Marleau, Mary Massolt, Michael Kees, Hubert Lennertz, Morris Healy, Lena Schreiter, N. J. Pinault, Daniel Linnehan, Prosper Wilmes, Blondina Detling, Claus Henricks, D. S. B. Johnston Land Mortgage Co., and Great Northern Ry. Co.

The names of the owners of the lands that will be effected thereby as shown by the latest tax duplicates of said county are:

Breaking Up the Mess.

Lasting friendships are formed in the officers' mess aboard ship in our navy, but no effort is made to keep track of a mate when he is transferred. This strikes the landsman as a queer freak of nature, but the sailors accept it as a matter of course never to be questioned. Men get into pretty close communion with each other when they breakfast, dine and sup together for three years. As a rule, they learn each other's history to the minutest detail, unless a man chooses to be disagreeable and distant. Close attachments grow up, yet when the inexorable order arrives from Washington, sending the mess to the four winds of heaven, breaking up, as it were, the family, a warm hand shake ends it all. Each officer goes into a new mess, and the old is forgotten.

It was my good fortune to be introduced to as fine a mess as ever broke bread together on a man-of-war. The devotion of the officers to one another was an inspiration. Finally the separation came. One went to some navy yard, another to the Philippines, another to China, another to Washington, etc. They were scattered all over the world. One day, meeting the lieutenant commander, who had gone up for promotion, I inquired when he had heard from Lieutenant So-and-so. "Why, not in several months," he replied. "In fact, not since he was ordered to his new station. You know we fellows don't follow each other's movements after a mess is broken up. We form new associations, new friends, and the old drop out of sight. We never think of writing to each other. It is more than likely we shall never see each other again as long as we live, and we haven't the time or inclination to worry over each other's fate."—New York Press.

Warning Against Forest and Prairie Fires

Office of State Forest Commissioner.
ST. PAUL, MINN., March 21, 1901.

Chapter 196 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for 1895 (Act of April 18th) constitutes Supervisors of towns, Mayors of cities and presidents of village councils Fire Wardens, and it is made their duty to take precaution to prevent forest and prairie fires, and if they occur, to go and extinguish or control them; and in emergencies to call upon any able-bodied male person, over eighteen years of age, to assist. Reports of such fires with particulars tending to fix responsibility therefor shall be made within reasonable time—usually within a week. The Forest Commissioner is required to provide and sign an abstract (as herein) of the penalties under said law, and it is made the duty of the County Commissioners of each county to cause said abstract to be published in at least three issues of the official paper in their respective counties each year between the 15th of April and 1st of November, and they are hereby instructed to publish this notice entire. Under said law.

The following are liable to a penalty not exceeding $500 or imprisonment in the state prison not over ten years or both:

Any person who maliciously sets or causes to be set on fire any woods, prairie or other combustible material whereby the property of another is destroyed and life is sacrificed.

The following are liable to a penalty not exceeding $100 or imprisonment not exceeding three months.

Any person refusing, without cause, to assist fire wardens in extinguishing forest or prairie fires.

Any fire warden who neglects to perform his duties.

Any person who wilfully, negligently or carelessly sets on fire, or causes to be set on fire, any woods, prairies or other combustible material thereby causing injury to another.

Any person who shall kindle a fire on or dangerously near to forest or prairie land and leave in unquenched, or who shall be a party thereto.

Any person who shall use other than incombustible fire wads for firearms or carry a naked torch, firebrand or other exposed light in or dangerously near to forest land.

Any person who shall wilfully or heedlessly deface, destroy or remove this or any other warning placard posted under the requirements of the above mentioned Act.

Any railroad company wilfully neglecting to provide efficient spark arresters on its engines; or to keep its right of way to the width of 100 feet cleared of combustible material; or which shall fail to comply with other provisions of Section 12 of the above mentioned Act.

The following are liable to a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $50:

Any railroad employe who wilfully violates the provisions of Section 12 of the above mentioned Act.

Any owner of threshing or other portable steam engine who neglects to have efficient spark arresters, or who shall deposit live coals or hot ashes without extinguishing the same.

R. C. DUNN (State Auditor,)
Forest Commissioner.

C. C. ANDREWS,
Chief Fire Warden.

W. A. Case, the deputy M. W. A. organizer arrived home Monday after several weeks absence.

It looks as though St. Hilaire will have two state banks—both propose to do business in brick blocks.

Tommy Lund returned home Monday from Minneapolis where he had been the past year and a half.

The suckers have commenced to run and a good many have been scooped up with dip nets the past few days.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Gustafson of Fertile were visitors here with Mr. and Mrs. Duntly from Friday until Monday.

The Ladies Aid will meet with Mrs. Jones Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. All the ladies are invited to attend.

K. O. Gigstad of the firm of Gigstad & Burkee returned home Monday after a few days business trip at Crookston.

—Do you want to sell your farm? Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

N. P. Rassmusson of Valley City, N. D., was here a day or two last week looking after some business interests here.

The Mission Friend sewing society will meet with Mrs. A. Hall Thursday afternoon May 2nd. All the ladies are invited.

Peter Mosleth has bought out the Joe Juneau sample room at Thief River Falls and will make that city his his future home.

E. M. Hoff received a car load of potatoes from Minneapolis last Thursday and claims its the first shipment of the kind in the history of St. Hilaire.

The many friends of Representative C. G. Rapp will be pleased to learn that he is gaining in health and was able to be up and out for a walk yesterday afternoon.

T. H. Shevlin, of Minneapolis, president of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company came up Monday to look after his large interests here. He found everything going to his satisfaction.

Druggist Nelson of the Imperial drug store went to Thief River Falls Monday to compound precriptions during the absence of their local druggist who is spending a few days in the twin cities.

Mrs. M. A. Hall and her three children who have been spending the past six months with relatives at Valley City, North Dakota returned last Friday and will for a time occupy rooms in the Sandmoen building.

—It is better than ready money because it cures rheumatism, constipation sick headache, indigestion. Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure.

General Manager Shute of the Crookston Lumber Company, accompanied by the well known pine cruiser, Mr. Mathews of the same Company were here the first of the week on business matters.

Mrs. A. C. Adams, who it will be remembered received injuries from a tipover at Thief River Falls about a year ago, left Monday for Warren, Illinois to see a doctor, who it is claimed cured a similar case a few years ago.

St. Hilaire is a little slow—in this case—we will admit—but like our neighboring towns in the northwestern part of the state, we finally got there and now have one patient in the pest house with a mild case of small pox.

Julius Pleth is not only a hustling land man but a diversivied genius as many will testify after seeing his work of road making Monday forenoon. Farmers in this country would do well to call on him and after getting a pointer follow instructions, and the result will be good roads.

Joe Roleau, formerly in the fruit and confectionery business here, and known by the children of St. Hilaire as "Candy Joe" left last Friday for Thief River Falls having purchased of S. Johnson the confectionery store known as the "Blue Front." He invites St. Hilaire people to call on him when in his town.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

With this issue of the SPECTATOR we send out, in supplement form, the laws passed at the recent session of the Minnesota legislature. Every one over the age of fifteen should read them through carefully and then preserve the copy for future use. You know "Ignorance of the law excuses no one."

A. W. Lind one of the prosperous farmers living in the town of Sanders was in the village Monday and found time to make the SPECTATOR a call. He has about forty acres of grain seeded and intends to plant twenty acres of corn as from last years experience he claims as good corn can be raised here as in Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Mitchell of Milaca arrived last Saturday and will spend a week or two visiting with their eldest son, Bert Mitchell, night sawyer at the mill, and wife. This is Mr. Mitchell's first visit to our town and he is so well pleased that he may possibly make this his future home. He is a saw mill man of years experience and says our mill is a little bit the finest he has ever seen.

The streets were thronged with farmers Saturday and the most of them came in—after reading the SPECTATOR—to see Julius Pleth, the land man about the seed corn that he is giving away free of charge. They look upon our popular land man as a new Moses and all say they are out for the first prize that he is offering for the best ten ears of corn. If corn growing is a success in this country, Julius Pleth is the man should have the credit.

The Primary Law.

The Fergus Falls Journal boils down the primary election law to the following comprehensive summary:

The passage of this law does away with the ward heeler and political grafter except for state officers.

The heelers can control these officers as they do now. For any office, however, any man can aspire, and the entire party can express its wish to whom it desires for its candidate. Under the new law any man who desires to become a candidate for congress, the bench, the state legislature or a county office can go to the Auditor's office pay a nominal fee and his name will be printed on the ballot for the primary election. He hasn't got to ask permission of a political boss in order to get a nomination. The Auditor prints and distributes ballots just as a regular election. The primary election on the Tuesday seven weeks before election. There is a ballot for each political party and the voter asks the judge for a ballot of the party which he intends to support. He then votes for the man whom he desires to have the party nominate. The votes are canvassed and he who receives the highest vote becomes his party nominee for the office. After the man has submitted his name at the primary election and been defeated he cannot run at the election. Very often conventions have nominated men against the wishes the majority of the party. This cannot be done again. Neither can a few manipulators in two parties bargain and trade in nominations. The law makes it possible for the people to do away with a bad man if they desire to do so. This law means the emancipation of the people to boss rule.

Farmers.

I have just received 50 bushels of fine dent seed corn "Pride of the North" which I believe if planted in the right kind of soil and properly cultivated, not less than four times, will get ripe in 90 days. I am not selling it, but giving it away as I am anxious to see how this kind of corn will do in this country, so while it lasts, farmers come in and get what you need free of charge.

Unless your back yards and alleys are cleaned up by May 1st the village will do it at your expense—and may possibly cost you more in this way than you could do the same work yourself.

Owners of dogs will be interested in the new law. Read chapter 187, page nine of the law supplement, and when the assessor comes around you will know just what to do. Then again comes the village dog tax—well, when the marshal gets through with you, why you are simply relieved $2 or $5 as the case may be.

The remains of Peter Larson of Crookston arrived Monday from Blaine Washington and were received by a committee of the local lodge of A. O. U. W. of which he was a member in good standing. The death of Mr. Larson was accidental, his neck being broken as the result of a fall from a saw mill which he was erecting. Mr. Larson is well known here having supervision of the construction of the saw mill here four years ago. He leaves a wife and several children—his eldest son, Andy, is at present living here and is head millwright for the St. Hilaire Lumber Company. The bereaved family have the sympathy of this community.

Bismarck on Farming.

Bismarck once said: "It always seems to me to be as worthy a calling to grow corn as to write administrative orders." His idea was that the production of the food of the world was one of the noblest ways to benefit mankind. Pure food is a godsend to a country; impure food a curse. America undoubtedly produces the most wholesome food and drink of any country in the world. Our best is "Golden Grain Belt" beer for it is nourishing and delicious. Order of you dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

An ignorant man cares nothing for a newspaper and he does not see that it is his duty to supply his wife and children with his local paper. But every intelligent and mentally well balanced citizen takes some local paper. You can visit about in the county and pick out the intelligent people by that they read their home paper. If ignorant or careless people read at all they generally select the publication furtherest from home and which is the least value to them.—Tyler Courier.

"Now Dont Get the Blues."

When a cheerful, brave and light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way:

She has been feeling out of sorts for some time, experiencing severe headache and backache; sleeps very poorly and is exceedingly nervous.

Sometimes she is nearly overcome by faintness, dizziness, and palpitation of the heart; then that bearing-down feeling is dreadfully wearing.

Her husband says, "Now, don't get the blues! You will be all right after you have taken the doctor's medicine."

But she does not get all right. She grows worse day by day, until all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She loses faith; hope vanishes; then comes the morbid, melancholy, everlasting blues. She should have been told just what the trouble was, but probably she withheld some information from the doctor, who, therefore, is unable to accurately locate her particular illness.

Mrs. Pinkham has relieved thousands of women from just this kind of trouble, and now retains their grateful letters in her library as proof of the great assistance she has rendered them. This same assistance awaits every sick woman in the land.

MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER

Mrs. Winifred Allender's Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have received from your wonderful remedies. Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I was a misery to myself and every one around me. I suffered terrible pain in my back, head, and right side, was very nervous, would cry for hours. Menses would appear sometimes in two weeks, then again not for three or four months. I was so tired and weak, could not sleep nights, sharp pains would dart through my heart that would almost cause me to fall.

"My mother coaxed me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had no faith in it, but to please her I did so. The first bottle helped me so much that I continued its use. I am now well and weigh more than I ever did in my life."—MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER, Farmington, Ill.

ENGLISH SPARROWS SPREAD.

Present Distribution of This Nimble Bird in the United States.

The agricultural department has recently printed a map showing the extent of country now occupied by the English sparrow. It has been multiplying with marvelous rapidity and is now found in most parts of the country. Only three states (Montana, Nevada and Wyoming) and three territories (Alaska, Arizona and New Mexico) are free from the sparrow. It is found in California both north and south of San Francisco, in the valleys of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, and along the coast. It is scattered among the settlements on the Columbia river and Puget sound. It has spread all over the eastern half of the country from North Dakota to the Mississippi delta. It has, however, avoided the sandy region of Florida and is not found to any extent in our most densely wooded areas. As might be expected, it has given our vast semi-arid region a wide berth, though a large colony has settled in the fertile agricultural region around Salt Lake City. It is only fifty-one years since the English sparrow was first introduced into this country by a gentleman of Brooklyn who sought a remedy for the worms that were destroying the trees of that town. The sparrow has a keen appetite for worms. In the course of time the injury done to the trees by worms was largely abated through this little bird. So it became quite a fad to import sparrows from Europe and turn them loose in our towns. A thousand birds were sent to Philadelphia in a single lot. Many birds also were distributed far and wide from the colonies already started. Thus everything was done to help the sparrow to increase and replenish this part of the world. Undoubtedly the sparrow has destroyed a great many tons of worms. But the remedy has proved worse than the disease. Perhaps the worms have been held in check to some extent; but we have a great many more sparrows than we have use for. They destroy fruit and grain, disfigure buildings in cities and towns, drive away other birds, and in fact are nuisances. The dear little sparrow has come to be regarded as the worst of the feathered pests. Efforts to exterminate it are now making in this country, but it is too late. The sparrow has been naturalized and he is here to stay. Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Utah in the past few years have paid out many thousands of dollars in the bounties offered for its destruction, but no one has yet observed any diminution in the number of birds.—New York Sun.

HOUSES KEPT TOO WARM.

A Great Singer Talks About Preserving Her Health.

I never wrap anything around my neck, even in the coldest or dampest weather, says Madame Schumann-Heink in Harper's Bazar. I do not confine my throat in any way. I do not wear linen collars, tight ribbons or any kindred abominations. I wear no flannels at any season of the year. Let me hasten to observe, however, that I do not advise this mode of dress for everyone. Some systems require more heat than others, and undoubtedly would suffer if protected only by the cambric underwear which I find sufficient. I am accustomed to it, and should be burdened by any heavier garments. I think that the tendency of the times is to surround us with a greater degree of artificial heat than is necessary to our well-being, especially in American houses, which are much warmer than those abroad. I sleep with my window wide open at all seasons. In fact, I cannot sleep well unless the room is filled with pure, outside air. It is wise, of course, to place the bed so that the wind does not blow directly upon the sleeper. If the room is so small that it is impossible to avoid the draught, then arrange a screen so that the bed is protected. The best way to open a window for ventilating purposes is to lower it a little from the top and raise it a few inches from the bottom. When there is an open fireplace in the room it acts as a fine ventilator in connection with the open window. Should the weather be cold, use more covers on the bed. You can breathe fresh air all night, and yet be as warm as toast. It is not well, of course, to allow yourself to become chilled. Moderation and judgment are needed here as elsewhere.

A Shrewd Entertainer.

Among the unpublished traditions in army circles of many years ago there is one that is worth handing down to coming generations. A certain major had been appointed to the command of an army post on a small island not a great way from San Francisco. Soon after his arrival there a French fleet dropped anchor in the harbor. The commander invited him aboard the flag-ship, and entertained him royally. The idea struck the worthy major the next day that he was in honor bound to return the compliment and invite the officers of the fleet to come ashore and share his hospitality, but he was staggered by the consideration of the expense involved. To give a banquet befitting his dignity as a United States officer entertaining distinguished representatives of a foreign nation would mean bankruptcy, as the government had not authorized him to draw on its treasury for such a purpose, and the cost of the affair would have to come out of his own pocket. A bright thought struck him. He invited the naval visitors to be his guests the third day thereafter at an "American picnic." Then he sent invitations to the best people of the neighborhood to join him in a "basket picnic" at a certain grove near at hand on the same day, "to meet our French naval friends now on our shores." The people came with great baskets and hampers of provisions. A royal feast was spread in the grove, and the picnic is remembered even yet as one of the most notable social successes of its time. But the French visitors never learned of the ruse by which the major established a reputation as a prince of entertainers.—Youths' Companion.

OF HIS HOME AT GENEVA.

George Graham Tells of the Difference Between Life in America and Europe.

George Graham, in speaking, recently, at the Hotel Victoria, of the difference between living in this country and Europe, said:

"I had a friend who had to put in some time in Switzerland, and so he took a house in Geneva. The house, he was assured, had all modern comforts, but he found by experience that the assurance had to be qualified by the phrase, 'as modern comfort is known in Geneva.' The house was only just completed when he moved in, and he straighway received congratulations from the merest acquaintances because of the fact that his domicile possessed a bath room. The bath was installed after he took possession, at a cost, so he asserted, of the full cost of the bath room being added yearly to the rent. However, its possession made him a marked and important person in the community, so he did not much mind the extra cost. The warm water was supplied from a detachable gas furnace, which finally blew up, and after that they bathed cold. The apartment was lighted by electricity, but there were no fixtures, so he had to purchase them. He said afterward that any man who had a modern apartment to rent, Geneva style, in New York, would be likely to starve to death."—New York Tribune.

BISHOP HANDY

SAYS

"I Cheerfully Recommend Peruna to All Who Want a Good Tonic and a Safe Cure for Catarrh."

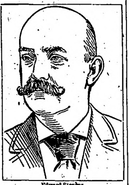
Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the following one from Bishop James A. Handy, D. D., of Baltimore:

"I take great pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good Tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."—James A. Handy.

OTHER NOTABLE CURES.

A Husband Escaped the Pangs of Catarrh of the Lungs.

Most Cases of Incipient Consumption Are Catarrh.



Edward Stevens.

Mrs. Edward Stevens of Carthage, N. Y., writes as follows:

"I now take pleasure in notifying you that my husband has entirely recovered from catarrh. He is a well man today, thanks to you and Peruna. He took six bottles of your medicine as directed, and it proved to be just the thing for him. His appetite is good and every thing he eats seems to agree with him. His cough has left him and he is gaining in flesh, and seems to be well every way. I hope others will try your medicine and receive the benefits that we have."—Mrs. Edward Stevens.

When the catarrh reaches the throat it is called tonsilitis, or larnygitis. Catarrh of the bronchial tubes is called bronchitis; catarrh of the lungs, consumption. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of catarrhal diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate; it cures.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, President of the South Side Ladies' Aid Society of Chicago, Ill., writes the following words of praise for Peruna from 973 Cuyler ave., Chicago, Ill.:

Mrs. Fred Williams.

"My home is never without Peruna, for I have found during the past six years that there is no remedy that will at once alleviate suffering and actually cure, as Peruna does. Four bottles completely cured me of catarrh of the head of several years' standing, and if my husband feels badly, or either of us catch cold, we at once take Peruna, and in a day or two it has thrown the sickness out of the system."—Mrs. Frederick Williams.

Mrs. W. A. Allison, of 759 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, Ill., is the Assistant Matron of the People's Hospital. She has the following to say about Peruna:

Mrs. W. A. Allison.

"I have had frequent opportunities to observe the wonderful curative effects of Peruna especially on persons suffering with a congested condition of the head, lungs, and stomach, generally called catarrh. It alleviates pain and soreness, increases the appetite and so tones up the entire system that the patient quickly regains strength and health."—Mrs. W. A. Allison.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Can't Sleep?

Did you ever have that feeling of oppression, like a weight on your chest, or a load of cobblestones in your stomach, keeping you awake nights with a horrible sensation of anxiety, or tossing restlessly in terrible dreams, that make the cold perspiration break out all over you? That's insomnia, or sleeplessness, and some unfortunates suffer with it night after night, until their reason is in danger and they are on the edge of going mad. The cause of this fearful ailment is in the stomach and bowels, and a Cascaret taken at night will soon bring relief and give the sufferer sweet, refreshing sleep. Always insist on getting CASCARETS!

HOT AFTER CAILLES

BLOODTHIRSTY FILIPINO GENERAL PURSUED BY TROOPS.

Americans Surprise His Camp, Capture His Adjutant General and All His Papers, but the General Manages to Escape—Has a Reputation for Vindictiveness and Cruelty — Offered $10 Apiece for Heads of Americans Brought to Him—Can't Claim Immunity if Caught.

Manila, April 29—Capt. Wilson Chase, with a detachment of the Twenty-first infantry, on April 26 surprised the camp of the insurgent general Cailles at Dugot-Dugot, situated nine miles northeast of Cavinti, in the province of Laguna. Cailles was at his camp at the time of the American attack, but managed to escape. Capt. Chase's force captured his adjutant general, five other of his staff officers, fourteen men, twenty rifles, a large amount of ammunition and stores and all the papers and personal effects of the Filipino general. The insurgent major Velo was killed during the engagement, as were Corporal McGill and Private Tripp, both belonging to Company A, Twenty-first. Several columns of the American troops continue vigorously to pursue Gen. Cailles. Gen. Cailles recently offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Capt. Edward N. Jones, Jr., of the Eighth infantry. For more than a year past Cailles has commanded the insurgent forces operating to the south of Bay Lake, not far from Manila. He is said to be a French half-caste. He has a reutation for vindictiveness and cruelty and is one of two of the Filipino leaders still in the field who have clearly violated the observances of honorable warfare. The Society of Mondo-Ducats, whose practice it was to assassinate and bury alive those of their countrymen who accepted American sovereignty whenever the latter fell into their hands, operated with the cognizance, if not the support of Gen. Cailles. If Cailles were captured, it is doubtful if he could claim immunity for past actions under the terms of the amnesty. In January of this year Cailles offered a reward of $10 apiece for the heads of all Americans brought to him.

STUDENT KILLED.

Is Shot by Companion While They Are Acting in a Play.

Burnsville, N. C., April 29. — During the closing exercises of the Stanley-McCormick high school at Burnsville R. N. McInturf, one of the students, was shot and killed by Baccus Bailey, another student, both representing characters in a play which was being enacted. When it became necessary for Bailey, in his role, to defend himself with a revolver against a drawn knife in the hands of McInturf, he used by mistake a loaded pistol, and in the presence of several hundred persons McInturf was shot dead on the stage. The boys were roommates and special friends.

JOLT FOR JEFFRIES.

Champion Pugilist Hit With a Beer Glass by a Congressman.

Kansas City, April 29. — James J. Jeffries, the champion pugilist, quarreled with Congressman Jim Butler of St. Louis in a down town saloon, and the big pugilist was hit with a beer glass before the quarrel ended. Butler and Jeffries were in an ugly mood, and for a time it was feared that serious trouble would result. Congressman Butler was game and did not flinch when Jeffries threatened to extend his terrible right. The St. Louis congressman picked up a beer glass and let it fly at the champion. Friends interfered and the belligerents shook hands.

TRAGEDY AT BREAKFAST TABLE.

A Man Kills His Sister Without Warning.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., April 29. — Max Heck, who runs his father's farm near McGregor, Iowa, yesterday shot and almost instantly killed his sister, Mrs. Ellsworth, at her home in McGregor while at the breakfast table. The family had sat down to breakfast when Heck drew a revolver and fired directly at his sister. The ball entered just below the heart. It is thought that Heck was temporarily insane. He was arrested.

MIDWAY MUST CLOSE SUNDAYS.

Compromise Made on the Buffalo Sunday Closing Issue.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 29.—The question of whether the gates of the Pan-American grounds are to be open on Sunday was finally settled by the board of directors. Their decision is a compromise. The gates are to be open from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m., but the midway and all amusement features will be closed during the twenty-four hours from Saturday night until Monday morning.

Pickpocket Killed.

Chicago, April 29. — While trying to escape arrest for snatching a woman's purse Richard Donahue, a notorious pickpocket was shot and instantly killed last night by Policeman Gardiner. Donahue was accompanied by three companions, but the latter managed to escape. The four thieves had been working in a crowd of several hundred people who were watching a fire.

Dropped Dead.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 29. — Harry Berlet, aged thirty-eight, a well known sporting man, late of Chicago, dropped dead here.

Destroyed by Fire.

Saranac Lake, N. Y., April 29.—Fire destroyed the Branch & Callahan mill in the center of this village, four storehouses and 500,000 feet of lumber. Several dwellings were damaged. Loss, $150,000; partly insured.

Chicago Elevator Burned.

Chicago, April 29.—The grain elevator owned by John Badenoch at Rockwell and West Madison streets was completely destroyed by fire. The loss on building and contents will approximate $200,000.

CALLAHAN NOT GUILTY.

So Says the Jury and the Judge Expresses His Disgust in Emphatic Terms.

Omaha, April 29.—After considering over night the guilt or innocence of James Callahan, the jury announced yesterday morning that he had no part in the kidnapping of Edward Cudahy, Jr. The verdict was an evident surprise to the court, and Judge Baker expressed his disgust in emphatic terms. Callahan was arrested on two other counts which the state is not now prepared to say will be made use of as no new evidence is at hand and the expense of going over the ground again is considerable. Judge Baker, addressing the jury, rebuked them in the most vigorous terms. "If Callahan had made his own choice of a jury," the court said, "he could not have selected twelve men who would have served him more faithfully. If the state for its part had made the selection, I know of no men it could have named who could have been less careful of its interests. The jury is discharged without the compliments of the court, and the prisoner is likewise turned loose as to this trial, I presume to continue the criminal practices in which you have failed to check him. I do not know what motive actuated you in reaching this decision, but I hope none of you will ever appear again in this jury box."

The jury was evidently ill at ease during this arraignment, but did not make any response and filed rapidly from the box as soon as it was at liberty. In the hallway Callahan mumbled his thanks and shook the jurymen's hands. This proceeding was one of embarrassment under the contemptuous eyes of the court officers. Chief of Police Donohue says he will urge Mr. Cudahy to at once withdraw the proffered reward of $5,000 for the apprehenson of Pat Crowe. "Crowe might easily make an appearance and claim the reward himself," said Chief Donohue, "as the evidence against him is no more direct than that against Callahan. In my eighteen years of experience with criminals I have never heard more absolutely convincing evidence presented than that presented against Callahan."

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY A PONY.

Girl's Foot is Caught in a Stirrup When the Animal Runs Away.

Red Oak, Iowa, April 29. — Pluma Nordquist, the twelve-year-old daughter of S. C. Nordquist, a prominent Red Oak merchant, was dragged half a mile by a runaway pony, with her foot fast in the stirrup. She was dead when found.

Attempt to Blow Up a Mine.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 29.—An attempt was made during the night to blow up the Midland Plaster company's mine near here. A fuse leading to 500 pounds of dynamite, so placed that its explosion would wreck the mine, was discovered by an employe, who destroyed it. Forty men employed in the mine getting out stuff for the Pan-American exposition, struck the previous day. The mine is now guarded by a force of deputies.

Three Brothers Shot.

Gilman, Ill., April 29.—At a country dance three miles south of Gilman the three Morris brothers, Walter, James and Philip, of this city, were shot. Walter died; the other two will recover, though James was seriously wounded. The shooting followed a fight between the brothers and three or four other guests at the dance. George Morrison did the shooting. He gave himself up to the sheriff and claims he fired in self-defense.

Libraries for Iowa Towns.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 29.—The second bulletin of the state library commission, which has just been received here, shows that six Iowa towns have voted tax levies this spring for the establishment of public libraries. They are Pleasant, Hawkeye, Stuart, Jefferson, Hawarden and Colfax. Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Mount Vernon and Upper Iowa university at Fayette, all have received a gift of $25,000 from ex-Gov. Drake and have voted a tax for the establishment of a free public library.

Dennis Must Be Tried in Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 29.—The Monona county grand jury failed to find an indictment against Frank Dennis for the alleged murder of John P. Worrell last February. The crime occurred on a sandbar in the Missouri river, and the evidence showed that the crime was out of the jurisdiction of the Iowa courts. The surveyor who investigated the matter testified before the grand jury. It is said the Burt county, Neb., authorities will take up the matter of prosecuting Dennis.

Sheriff in Possession.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 29.—The sheriff of Ida county has taken possession of the hardware and implement business of F. J. Thompson of Holstein on a writ of attachment. Thompson left home suddenly last Monday and numerous claims are being filed by creditors. Thompson's wife claims a $5,000 interest in the business.

Called Back.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 29.—William Parkins, the young man who escaped from the county jail here a few days ago while painting in the corridor, was arrested at Worthing, S. D., and brought back by Sheriff Jackson. Parkins was waiting to be taken to the state's prison to serve an eighteen months' term when he escaped.

Big Loss by Fire.

Fond du Lac, Wis., April 29. — Fire completely destroyed the plant of the Gurney Refrigerator Manufacturing company. The loss is $100,000; fully insured.

Forest Fires Raging.

Houghton, Mich., April 29. — Forest fires are raging at a number of upper peninsula points, and unless there is a drenching rain soon great damage will be done and many hamlets and villages endangered.

Prisoners Sentenced.

Redwood Falls, Minn., April 29. — Judge Webber sentenced George Raymond to two years at Stillwater for burglary, and Martin Callahan to two months in the county jail for petit larceny.

SUFFER HEAVY LOSS

CHINESE PUNISHED BY THE GERMAN TROOPS.

Four Engagements Fought at the Great Wall Between German and Chinese Troops—Warriors of the Celestial Empire Make a Stubborn Resistance, but Were Finally Routed — All Chinese Troops Driven Out of Chili Province — French Troops Were Not Engaged.

Pekin, April 29. — It is stated here that the Germans sustained over thirty casualties in the recent engagement with the Chinese on the borders of Shansi province. One lieutenant was wounded. The pass where the engagement was fought will be held by foreign troops. All the Chinese troops have now been driven into Shansi province from Chili. None of them have surrendered; however, and they are still defiant.

The main body of Germans and French who participated in the engagement is returning. The Germans now hold the passes into Shansi and three highways, making it easy to carry out a forward movement should it be necessary.

Gen. Kettler's report shows that the Chinese troops did not leave the province until they were forced to do so. The entire brigade commanded by Gen. Kettler met the enemy April 23 and inflicted immense loss upon them. The report does not give this loss. The Chinese were forced to leave the province and were fully demoralized.

Fought Four Engagements.

Berlin, April 29.—The German war office has received the following advices from Count von Waldersee:

"Three engagements occurred April 23 and a fourth April 24, at the great wall, between four columns under Gen. Kettler and the Chinese troops under Gen. Liu. The Chinese were everywhere defeated, and after a stubborn resistance were forced back over the wall, being pursued as far as Kun-Kuan. Our casualties were four officers wounded and three men killed and thirty-two wounded. The French troops were not engaged."

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH.

Negro Arrested Charged With Starting the Fire.

Houston, Tex., April 29. — In a fire which destroyed a livery stable and three residences yesterday morning five persons were burned to death and several others were injured. The dead are Job Copping, a florist, his wife and three children. A negro has been arrested on the charge of having started the fire to get revenge on his employer for having discharged him. In the ruins were found the bodies of the victims, among them being an infant which had been born to Mrs. Copping during the progress of the fire. The fire started in a livery stable over which several families lived. The building, a mere shell, was a mass of flames when the firemen arrived. A crippled widow, Mrs. Thompson, escaped from the building and says she saw the Copping family run back into their room from the hallway, and that was the last seen of them alive. Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hopper were cut off from escape by the stairs and jumped, Mr. Hopper's leg being fractured and Mrs. Hopper receiving internal injuries.

WORKMEN CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Buried Under Tons of Earth in a Baltimore & Ohio Tunnel.

Frederick, Md., April 29.—While attempting to sink a forty-foot shaft in the west end of the Mount Airy tunnel, which is to be one and a half miles long, for the new improvements on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Ridgeville, twenty miles from here, about 3,000 tons of earth fell upon the workmen in the tunnel, entombing a number of the seventy-five men who were there. The bodies of Arthur Frazier, colored; Douglass Hicks, colored, and Michael Coyne, foreman, of Fayette county, Pa., have been recovered. Michael Kearns, another foreman, is known to be under the debris, and it is thought that there are a number of others.

TAKES PHOTOGRAPHS IN COLORS.

Swiss Amateur Claims to Have Discovered the Secret.

Berne, April 29.—The Bund, the leading paper printed in German in Switzerland, has a long article on the discovery of the secret of color photography by a Berne amateur, Adolph Gartner. He has been working on the invention for several years, but, by a happy accident, a few days ago he discovered the secret, and it is simple. Gartner shows magnificent specimens on paper, porcelain and glass, in colors of blue, red, brown and dark yellow.

DECORATES THE CZAR'S HEIR.

M. Delcasse Presents Grand Cordon of Legion of Honor to Grand Duke Michael.

St. Petersburg, April 29.—M. Delcasse, French minister of foreign affairs, went to the imperial palace at Gatchina, where he was received by the dowager empress and Grand Duke Michael, the heir presumptive. To the latter he presented the grand cordon of the Legion of Honor.

REBEL NATIVES ARE KILLED.

Sixteen Insurgents Slain During Suppression of Disturbances.

Algiers, April 29.—Later advices from Marguerite report that sixteen rebellious natives were killed during the suppression of the disturbances there.

Killed and Eaten by Natives.

Sydney, N. S. W., April 29. — Herr Mercke, a German millionaire who was cruising in his yacht, and Herr Caro, his private secretary, were recently murdered by natives off New Britain. Caro's body was eaten.

Unbalanced by Business Reverses.

Lincoln, Neb., April 29. — Norris Humphrey, for twenty-five years a leading business man of Lincoln, committed suicide last night by shooting himself. Business reverses, it is said, unbalanced his mind.

GRAIN INSPECTORS UNDER FIRE.

E. W. Knatvold and George H. Tunnell of Minneapolis Must Face Charges.

St. Paul, April 29. — Charges have been filed with the railroad and warehouse commission involving the standing of two members of the grain inspection force at Minneapolis, E. W. Knatvold, chief deputy inspector, and George H. Tunnell, his first assistant. They have been summoned to appear before the commission. The charges are made by B. F. Benson, a deputy inspector, who alleges that Knatvold and Tunnell tried to influence him to change his report on certain wheat. He graded the wheat "rejected," and in spite of repeated solicitation from Knatvold and Tunnell, as he claims, he refused to raise the grade to "No. 3." It is said that the amount of wheat involved aggregates 800,000 bushels.

SERIOUS FOR DUNTON.

Canvasser May Be Tried on the Charge of Forgery.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 29.—W. V. Dunton, who was arrested here Friday by Chief of Police Martin on instructions from the Minneapolis Times for alleged fraudulent collecting in Spokane, Wash., and at points in Montana in the name of that paper, appears to be a much wanted man. In addition to the charges preferred by the Times, Seth I. Zemer, a Minneapolis publisher, wants him held to answer to the charge of forgery. Zemer had employed Dunton to canvass for books published by him. Dunton's practice while making the rounds of Sioux Falls as a book agent, it is charged, was to send in orders whether the parties approached had ordered them or not. Therefore, Zemer wants to prosecute Dunton for forgery in signing the names of parties to orders for books. If tried for forgery Dunton will be held here. But it is likely that he will be turned over to the Spokane officials if they come after him. Dunton is in jail.

DESTRUCTIVE WIND.

Seeded Land Blown Away to Depth of Several Inches.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 29.—Saturday's dust storm was followed by a severe wind and rain storms in the evening which did considerable damage to farm buildings in the country northwest of here. Several large barns in the vicinity of Leola are reported torn in pieces by the wind, and many smaller buildings wrecked. Farmers report extensive damage to seeded grain from wind storms of the past three days, many fields being practically ruined. In light soil the ground has all blown away to a depth of several inches.

BIG FOREST FIRE.

A Million Feet of Logs Burned Near Mellen, Wis.

Duluth, Minn., April 29. — Advices from Ashland, Wis., report the first serious forest fire of the season, Friday afternoon, when 1,000,000 feet of hemlock logs were burned near Mellen, and the Wisconsin Central passenger train got by the fire with difficulty. Fires are scattered all along the south shore of Lake Superior, and near Iron River and Muskeg are said to be particularly active.

Fire in Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., April 29. — Fire last night totally destroyed the building and stock of the Zenith Paper company, causing a loss of about $55,000, of which $35,000 is on stock and balance on building. The stock was insured for $30,000 and the building for about $15,000, and the latter was owned by C. E. Dickerman of St. Paul. Buildings adjoining were damaged by heat and water to about $10,000 additional, of which the Duluth Paper company, which had $7,000 stock in warehouse next to the Zenith company, was the principal sufferer. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Did the Tramp Fire It?

Hudson, Wis., April 29. — George A. Grant, a pioneer truck farmer residing three miles east of the city, lost by fire a large barn, four horses and three head of cattle. The loss was $1,000; insurance, $100. Sheriff Bell was summoned from the city and arrested a tramp who came out of the burning building. He gave his name as Clarence Baker. He was araigned before Judge Disney on a charge of vagrancy.

Cheap Lands Going Fast.

Wahpeton, N. D., April 29. — The Western Surety and Adjustment company of this city has just completed the purchase of 12,420 acres, being all of the remaining Northern Pacific holdings in this county. This deal places about all the cheap lands in Richland county in the hands of resident owners, and is the biggest real estate deal made in this county in wild lands for some time.

Lumber Company Preparing to Ship.

Bemidji, Minn., April 29.—The Bacus-Brooks Lumber company is erecting a large hoisting works on the east shore of Lake Bemidji along the new Minnesota & International railroad tracks. This company has 21,000,000 feet of logs in the lake at present, and all of it will be shipped by rail to Minneapolis. The same company also has 11,000,000 feet in Leech lake to be shipped by rail.

Fargo to Make Lighting Contract.

Fargo, N. D., April 29.—As a result of the supreme court decision declaring the city's electric light contract void, the council held a special meeting and adopted a resolution calling for bids for lighting the city under a new contract. The mayor was given power to act in making a temporary contract.

Manitoba Pioneer Dead.

Winnipeg, April 29. — Capt. Hackland, a veteran officer of the Hudson's Bay company, died here yesterday, aged seventy-two.

Killed by Paris Green.

Northfield, Minn., April 29. — Rosa Markoe, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Markoe, died from eating Paris green which she found while at play. Medical aid was not summoned until too late.

Smallpox at Mantorville.

Kasson, Minn., April 29. — Another case of smallpox has been found in Mantorville, three miles north of here. It broke out in the family of Mr. Ellison. All necessary steps to prevent its spread are being taken.

WHY GIRLS CANNOT THROW.

There Is a Scientific Reason, Consisting of Difference in Their Structure and That of Boys.

In this, the season of outdoor sports, the boy at school is prone to poke fun at his sister, because she prefers to skip the rope, and deride her because she cannot perforce throw a top at all, while he can make his spin every time. And he generally consoles himself for lack of her company by saying that "girls can't throw, nohow."

In this he is far nearer right than he thinks, perhaps. Girls cannot throw, at least, not like men can. And they never can. They are not "built that way."

When a boy throws a stone he crooks his elbow and reaches back with his forearm, and uses every joint from shoulder to wrist. The boy's arm is relaxed: a girl throws with a rigid arm. This is because her collar bone is longer and set lower than is a boy's. This interferes with the free motion of her arm, required in throwing accurately.

The Sea-Trip Cure.

FROM DEATH'S DOOR.

Hillsdale, Ill., April 29th.—Much interest has been aroused here over the case of William Marks, who has been in a dying condition for several months with an apparently incurable Kidney Disease.

The leading physicians of this place had pronounced his case a hopeless one, and others from Port Byron, Geneseo, and Davenport, Iowa, had attended him, and in a consultation decided that he could not live.

In desperation, his nephew inquired of Mr. L. F. Giles, a local druggist, as to a last resort. Mr. Giles suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which had just been introduced here.

The results were marvelous. Mr. Marks immediately began to improve, and within a few weeks was able to be up and about, completely cured.

His cure is the talk of the neighborhood, and is considered nothing short of a miracle.

There appears to be no doubt that this new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills, will cure any case of Kidney Disease, for the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and Dropsy, yield readily to its remarkable influence. These forms of Chronic Kidney Disease have hitherto been considered incurable, and have baffled all medical skill, and yet, this new remedy has cured every single case in which it has been used in this neighborhood. The doctors themselves are amazed at the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are accomplishing in Rock Island Couny.

It isn't the man who works the hardest who complains most about what a strain his job is on him.

Methodical Punctuation.

Speaking of W. H. ("Coin") Harvey, a Chicago man said:

"An amusing incident took place while Harvey was editor of Coin, a paper which he published in Chicago. Harvey, in talking to one of his partners, took exception to the want of punctuation in the paper. 'There isn't enough punctuation,' he complained, 'and Coin doesn't look right without it. There ought to be a comma once in so often, then so often a colon, and all the rest. Don't you think so?' he wound up appealingly.

"'I do, indeed,' heartily replied the partner, who was not wholly devoid of humor. 'That's a great idea of yours, Harvey. If I were you,' he suggested, 'I'd draw up a rule to that effect.'

"Harvey thought it over, and the thought commended itself. The next day, therefore, a rule reading somewhat as follows was posted in the office of Coin: 'Hereafter it is the rule of this office that articles appearing in the columns of this paper must be punctuated as follows: Every 12 words shall carry a comma; every three lines a semicolon; every four lines a colon; every five lines a period; exclamation and question marks may be used as heretofore. The employees of this paper will please observe this order.'"—New York Tribune.

A Failure In Coopering.

A certain man who was once a prominent Kentucky politician was more a demagogue than a statesman. He was, according to Short Stories, in the habit of boasting that his father was a cooper in an obscure town in the state—that he was "one of the people" and didn't belong to the "kid gloved aristocracy."

The "general's" great failing being his fondness for liquor, it will surprise no one to be told that the more he drank the more loudly he declaimed his political sentiments and the prouder of being the son of a cooper he became. During a political campaign, where his opponent was the southern orator, Tom Marshall, he had been unusually noisy and offensive in his boasting regarding his obscure origin. In replying, Marshall said, looking hard at the general:

"Fellow citizens, my opponent's father may have been a very good cooper. I don't deny that: but I do say, gentlemen, that he put a mighty poor head into that whisky barrel."

Real Nice Bathing.

It may be doubted if a tub bath in Jamaica is a luxury. The bathhouses make a brave show in a row of low brick buildings in the rear of the hotels, each little house with a big stone tank for a bathtub.

I went out to see the baths on my first day in Kingston and was surprised to see a sign nailed against the wall bearing the words:

"Gentlemen Are Requested Not to Use Soap In the Baths."

"Why are gentlemen requested not to use soap in the baths?" I asked the hotel clerk, a dignified young woman of dark complexion.

"Because it soils the water and makes it unpleasant for the next bather," she said.

"But do your guests all bathe in the same water?" I asked.

"Oh, yes," she replied. "You see, the tanks are so large and the pipes are small. It takes all night to fill the tanks, and the water has to last all day."

Not Fatal.

Counterfeit China.

Other things besides money are counterfeited, and purchasers of old china have to be continually on their guard or they will be paying many dollars for what is worth only a few cents.

"The market is full of imitation china," said a lower Fourth avenue dealer in antiques who was asked about the matter. "Persons who rely on marks are sure to be deceived, for marks are easily imitated, and there is not one that has escaped forgery.

"Both French and English manufacturers forge all of the most sought after marks and find sale for their products. In looking for old china I find that every mark of importance has been forged, from Dresden to Worcester and Crown Derby, not excepting old Sevres. Every day would be purchasers come here and visit other New York shops, looking for china, and have no mortal idea at all correct of what they are buying. Yet they will talk after a most learned fashion and will take offense at the very suggestion that they may be deceived.

"If you are going to judge of china by its marks or evidence of its age and use from discoloration, cracks and chipping, you are more than likely to be cheated, for all of these things are easy for an expert and dishonest dealer to imitate. If you are not a judge of china [illegible] honest expert [illegible] purchase [illegible]—New York [illegible]

Took It Seriously.

The late Professor Hinsdale was singularly devoid of all sense of humor, and as for slang—well, he knew far more about the deadest of dead languages than he did concerning these saucy innovations on his native tongue.

There was a certain piece of legislation which was of considerable interest to the local school officials. It had been introduced into the legislature and was there hanging fire.

One day Professor Hinsdale, then school superintendent, said to Mr. Tom Whitehead, secretary of the board of education: "Mr. Secretary, what is the outlook for that special school bill now in the hands of the state legislators? Do you believe it will be adopted soon?"

The secretary shook his head in a manner that was meant to be thoroughly discouraging and said, with a strong emphasis:

"It will be a cold day when that bill is passed."

The superintendent nodded and passed on.

A day or two later somebody came into his office and asked him about the prospects of the same bill.

"Well," he replied in his heavy way. "I have no personal means of knowing the status of the measure, but I have been assured emphatically by Secretary Whitehead, who may be considered an expert in securing knowledge of this character, that the bill will not pass until next winter."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Public Gallows a Century Ago.

Even if the bicycle had been invented a hundred years ago touring could hardly have become very popular—at all events, for solitary cyclists. The old guidebooks were by no means cheerful reading. A run from London to East Grinstead, a distance of five or six and twenty miles, would have taken the wheelman past three gibbets, and it was just as likely as not that from one or the other of them a body would be swinging in the wind.

Up till the beginning of the nineteenth century the gallows was almost as frequent a landmark as finger posts or public houses have become now. The traveler approaching York is directed by the guidebooks to "turn round by the gallows and three windmills," and the road out of Durham is "between the gallows and Crokehill." Going out of Wells you "cross the brook and pass by the gallows."

Any number of such directions can be gleaned from the old books for the guidance of travelers a hundred years ago, and as these interesting objects were put up and the dead bodies of malefactors left upon them for the special edification of footpads and highwaymen there was a suggestiveness about them that must have given a special piquancy to cycle touring if it had been in vogue at that time.—London News.

Question of Ethics.

"Be truthful," said the teacher.

"Always?" asked the boy.

"Always," answered the teacher.

"Never tell a lie?"

"Never."

"Not even a white lie?"

"Not even a white lie."

"Huh!" ejaculated the lad scornfully. "It's a mighty good thing for you you ain't a boy with my dad for a father."

"Why?" asked the teacher.

"Because," replied the boy, "if you was my dad's little boy an you'd heard what he said about Aunt Eliza comin to visit us with her children an Aunt Eliza had asked you if you weren't all glad to see her an you'd told the truth, like I did, you'd think there was a place where your trousers was mighty thin after dad got through with you."

He went back to his desk, and as he sat down with great care there was an expression on his face that showed the great lesson of truth had been, at least in a measure, lost on him. And in his indignation and innocence he did not appreciate the humor associated with the fact that his teacher did not belong to that division of the human race that wears trousers.—Chicago Post.

Curious Picture Frames.

In many churches of Provence and Italy, especially those near the sea, ex voto paintings placed on the walls in accordance with vows made by pilgrims in moments of danger are often remarkable for their frames. Among the curiosities may be enumerated laths formed of splinters from ships that have been wrecked; also frames made of pieces of heavy cables, occasionally painted bright hues, but sometimes left in their primitive gray color and splashed with tar. Nailed to the laths surrounding a painting representing sailors fighting with fierce savages may be seen African or Polynesian spears and darts or swords made of hard wood, evidently mementos of terrific struggles. Sailors or landsmen who have made vows during times of peril at sea and who have no trophies to display will surround their paintings with broad bands of wood heavily incrusted with shells and seaweed, not infrequently of rare and extremely beautiful kinds.—London People's Friend.

A Reasonable Inquiry.

"Have you heard from 'Old Boomerang' since she went home?" asked Mr. Tucker, putting his feet on the table.

"I want you to stop calling mamma 'Old Boomerang,'" said Mrs. Tucker. "What makes you call her that?"

"Why, I was just wondering when she was coming back, that's all," answered Mr. Tucker. "You needn't get sore about it."—Indianapolis Sun.

Class Against Class.

"You," remarked the fire fiend, "are not the consumer I am."

"No," said the cyclone; "I am one of the greatest distributers in the business, though."—Indianapolis Press.

The Squire and the Summing Up.

At a lawyers' dinner in Buffalo one of the best stories told was of Squire Murray, who weighed 300 pounds and who was born in Ireland, was in the whisky business here and held his court on the Terrace. The courtroom was like a courtroom in Ireland. The bench was five feet from the floor, with a chair whose back reached to the ceiling. The trimmings of the room were all green. Mr. Lockwood and Judge Beckwith were trying out a case before the squire. There was no jury. At the close the squire paused.

"Do you wish to sum up?" he asked.

"I leave it all with your honor," said Mr. Lockwood, who advises young lawyers with a ticklish cause and friendly face on the bench to do likewise.

"I'll sum up," said Judge Beckwith.

"Very well," replied Squire Murray. "While you're at it I'll slip down in Murray Bros.' and have a drink with Lockwood. But I'll be back before you finish."

The squire and Mr. Lockwood went out. The squire was in search of the spirit of the law at the root of the law. Mr. Lockwood thinks they had a drink. On the stairs, half way back to the courtroom, with the echo of Beckwith's voice sounding in their ears, the squire stopped.

"Lockwood," said he, "you've won your case."

Then they went in and heard Beckwith finish summing up.

Willing men to the extent of a score or more turned out Sunday and tore down the large barn on the McAndress farm—or what was left to be torn down after the cyclone got through with it Friday evening. M. McAndress estimates his loss at about $1,000.

Læfevre Smiley, brother of Editor Smiley of the Thief River Falls Press has just completed a census of the Indians on the reservation west of Beltrami county and finds there are just 87 Indians—big and little—holding down eleven townships of valuable land that rightly belongs to Red Lake county.

—It is better than ready money, because it cures rheumatism, constipation, sick headache, indigestion. Imperial Blood and Rheumatism cure.

Wind, Rain, Hail.

A heavy rain storm accompanied by a high wind and some hail was the closing part of the weather program Friday evening. Considerable damage was done to buildings along the path where the wind did its best. A large barn on the farm of M. McAndress north of town was partly blown down, so much so that it will have to be taken down and rebuilt. The windmill at the Hotel Markham was too weak to stand the test and was forced to the ground. The south end of the Catholic church happened to be in the path of the hurricane and was moved about a foot off the foundation and the building in general, badly warped. Other damages of minor importance is reported in this neighborhood. It is estimated about three inches of rain fell during the night.

Cashier Ellington of the Scandia Bank, Crookston was here on business yesterday.

Mrs. C. Gerbig, formerly of this place but now residing at Akeley, Minn., arrived last Thursday on a visit to friends.

Everyone interested in the advancement of the church and society are earnestly invited to be present. Let us unite our efforts in this good cause.

Julius Pleth, formerly of this place and who is now doing a wholesale land business at St. Hilaire, placed a full page adv. in the Spectator published at that village and in consequence sold a dozen or more farms within a week. He is now giving away corn to farmers for seed and offers $75 in cash prizes for the best ears of corn brought in from farms in Red Lake county.—Ada Herald.

A great many people once belonged to churches and lodges that they have left because they couldn't run them, and got mad about it.

New Bank Incorporates.

The First State Bank of St. Hilaire has prepared for it articles of incorporation which will be filed immediately. The incorporators are Lewis Ellington, Crookston; C. H. March, Litchfield; and J. K. Hannay, N. B. Hannay, Martin McAndress, Julius Pleth, Wm. A. Sorsdreil, P. G. Paradis and K. O. Gigstad of St. Hilaire. A new brick structure will be erected with fire proof vault on the site of the present bank building which will be moved to the rear and occupied until the new building is finished.

Down in Arkansas a man who desires to drink alcoholic beverages will hereafter have to take out a license granting him that privilege. When he steps up to the bar for his morning eye opener, he will have to show his badge which every licensed drinker must constantly wear—to the bartender before that individual will supply his wants. The licenses cost $5 per year, and the state expects to derive a goodly annual revenue from their sale.

Just as a girl begins to think she is grown, she discovers that hardly anybody pronounces the simplest words correctly.

One of the laws enacted by the late legislature, provides for a stay of ten days on bills allowed by cities, villages and towns before the money can be drawn. The bill further provides that any five taxpayers, who take exception to the allowance of a bill by the municipal authorities, on the grounds of irregularity, excessive charge, etc., may within ten days file a petition for an appeal on such bill, and the court will then pass upon its merits.

The hog is the mortgage lifter, the sheep the farm fertilizer, the cow the barn builder, and the hen the grocery bill payer. This quartet with a man and woman not afraid of the work of caring for them will insure prosperity on any farm. So says an old and experienced agriculturist and we know he has told the truth in a small space. If the sheep and the hen were more common in this country, our farmers would pile up large bank accounts. For the care bestowed, they pay as well as hogs.

A shrewd swindler, who recently struck a locality in North Dakota will keep away from there in future. Representing himself to be a doctor, he obtained a note for $100 from a farmer and in return signed an agreement to cure his wife of an ailment. The farmer got to thinking it over, and concluded he was a sucker. Driving to town he entered the bank and heard the swindler offer the note for sale, saying he had procured it in payment of a bill for groceries he had sold. When the dust cleared away the note had been torn to bits, and the doctor was still running.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

The Tribune, of April 11th, published at Wakarusa, Indiana, has a few nice words to say about our local pastor as will be seen by the following few lines: "Rev. Hammond preached his farewell sermon at the M. E. church Sunday morning and was greeted by a large audience. Rev. Hammond has been with us two years and has done much to build up the church. He has been an excellent citizen and he and his worthy wife will be greatly missed. He has decided to enter a western conference. The audience were greatly affected as they bade their pastor and wife an affectionate farewell."

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

—To cure a cough in one day, take the Imperial cough syrup. Guaranteed to cure. For sale at the new Drug Store.

Good Entertainment.

The concert at the Hotel Markham Thursday evening proved to be a genuine treat. Miss Gleason is a singer who could command applause in any city in the land and certainly nothing of the kind has been heard here before. Her management of the piano is unexcelled and her two instrumental numbers were received with very well deserved applause and encored in both cases. The Japanese character song by the Misses Fleckenstein of Crookston and Scotish dance by the same young ladies were executed in a manner which would do credit to professional dancers. The club swinging by Misses Cromb and Nettie Gleason was a pretty and graceful exhibition and was greatly enjoyed, as was also the rendered of some of Ben King's story verses by the latter young lady. It is to be hoped that the affair may not be the last of the kind to be heard here this summer.

The Moth.

A knowledge of how to prevent the depredations of the moth is desired by all housekeepers, who find the inroads from these persistent little pests very trying. Turpentine, camphor, pepper, tobacco, sulphur and other simple remedies were used by our grandmothers but for some cause modern housekeepers do not always find these satisfactory. Perhaps, after all, the surest preventive is to destroy the moth eggs early in the season and pack all woolen garments away before the approach of warm spring weather.

The number and variety of moth is quite extensive each having its individual preference, all being the decided enemies of the housekeeper; the fur moth, wool moth, carpet moth, wood moth, grain and meal moth all different varieties of the species. Woolen garments, blankets and wool comforts should receive attention as soon as they can be spared. They should be brushed, shaken and aired. Boxes or trunks should be prepared to put them in. They should be lined with newspaper and then sprinkled with powdered borax. Each article should be folded and wrapped in paper or old sheets and laid in the trunk; when full, cover with more papers and scatter borax over the top. Close securely and set in a dark room. Woolen articles, thus packed away will escape all damage from moth and keep in good condition until fall.—Journal of Agriculture.

—Julius Pleth, the land man wants to buy your farm. Do you want to sell? If so call at his office two doors south of Hotel Markham.

No one will fail to find pleasant, profitable diversion in the May Ladies' Home Journal. Its thirty and more contributors cover a wide range of interesting subjects. "When John C. Calhoun went a-wooing," the delightful romance of the great statesman is no less engrossing than "The Brilliant Social Reign of Harriet Lane" in the White House, or than Clara Morris's "Frank-Sen," the love tale of a little Japanese girl acrobat. There is a weird fascination in the narration of "Some Remarkable Cases of Double Personality," and several thrilling stories are told of "When the animals escape from the Zoo." In "summers of our discontent" Edward Bok gives sound advice on summer vacations—notably good in telling what to avoid. "Preserving a husband in summer" and "keeping summer boarders with success" solve both problems. There are three architectural and the usual contributions concerning work in and about the home fashions, etc. The half dozen or more notable pictorial features include "In the Fold" the best photograph of the twenty-seven thousand submitted in the Journal's contest; a page reproduction of W. L. Taylor's painting, "President Lincoln's call for Volunteers," and "A Glimpse of Picturesque Canada." By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a copy.

—If you want, to buy a house and lot, or rent a house call on Gigstad & Burkee.

The Dictator of Nome.

There is a little man up at Nome whose word is law. His legal standing is not as high as an ordinary constable, but by common consent he rules the camp. Easterners first heard of him when he made his great dash over the frozen snows to the relief of the winter whalers of Point Barrow. Even Arctic explorers marveled at this accomplishment, but those who knew the nerve of the man simply said, "That's like Jarvis."

If you would have such nerves and such endurance, drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer, for it is brewed from the purest barley malt and hops. It will keep your body warm and strong and your nerves quiet. Have a case in your home. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

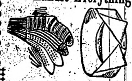
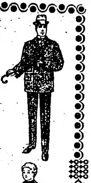
A Colorado paper says—As we have had several requests to print the market reports of this locality, we give you this weeks report, which probably would apply the world over. Young men, unsteady; girls, lively in demand, coffee, considerably mixed; fresh fish, active and slippery; wheat, a grain better than barley; eggs, will probably open in a few days; whisky, steadily going down; onions, strong and rising; breadstuffs, heavy. Boots and shoes, those on the market are steadily going up and down. Hats and caps, not as high as last fall, except foolscaps, which is stationary. Tobacco, very slow, and has a downward tendency; money, close but not close enough to get hold of. Feathers light and going up. Iron firm. Butter stronger. Opium a drug on the market. Advice good but no demand.





We Handle Everything.

Start the Day Right

And everything will go smoothly. The proper way to start the day is by coming around to our store and ordering a supply of groceries for the day, such things as you may need. It will take you but a few minutes, and we feel sure you will not regret it.

Our Groceries

Are always fresh, and then the prices are as near right as we know how to make them. If you have not been in the habit of trading with us, drop in and see us anyway; you might get into the habit.

Hardware

We carry everything in the hardware line from cooking stoves down to tacks—all you have to do is to ask for what you want. If you want anything in the tin or copper line done drop into our tin shop and your wants will be attended to.

Yours very truly,

"Dont Speak to me."

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought.

The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occurrences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Lewis Says: "I Feel Like a New Person, Physically and Mentally."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For years I had ovarian trouble and suffered everything from nervousness, severe headache, and pain in back and abdomen. I had consulted different physicians, but decided to try your medicine, and I soon found it was giving me much relief. I continued its use and now am feeling like a new person, physically and mentally, and am glad to add one more testimonial to the value of your remedy."—MRS. M. H. LEWIS, 2108 Valentine Ave., Tremont, New York, N. Y.

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham is the quickest and surest way to get the right advice about all female troubles. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She advises women free. Following is an instance:

Mrs. Haven's First Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I would like your advice in regard to my troubles. I suffer every month at time of menstruation, and flow so much and for so long that I become very weak, also get very dizzy. I am troubled with a discharge before and after menses, have pains in ovaries so bad sometimes that I can hardly get around have sore feeling in lower part of bowels, pain in back, bearing-down feeling, a desire to pass urine frequently, with pains in passing it; have leucorrhœa, headache, fainting spells, and sometimes have hysteria. My blood is not in good condition. Hoping to hear from you, I am," MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (June 8, 1899.)

Mrs. Haven's Second Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered for four years with womb trouble. Every month I flowed very badly. I got so bad that I could hardly do my work. Was obliged to sit or lie down the most of the time. I doctored for a long time, but obtained no relief I began using your remedies—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier, Sanative Wash and Liver Pills—and now feel like a new woman."—MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (Feb. 1, 1900.)

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have, from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who will show that the above testimonials are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writers' special permission.—LYDIA E. England's Army and Navy.

It was recently stated that England's army and navy is inadequate to properly defend herself from a sudden onslaught. England is, in this instance, like the individual who allows disease to creep into his system through a stomach too weak to properly digest the food taken into it. To strengthen the stomach there is nothing better than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It cures dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, liver and kidney trouble, and as a tonic, is incomparable.

CHANCE FOR THOUSANDS

IF YOU GUESS CANADA'S POPULATION.

Pick It Out and You Will Receive Five Thousand Dollars—Smaller Sums for Approximate Guesses.

There is a certain figure, probably somewhere between 4,833,239 and 6,041,543, which, written down and sent to the Pioneer Press in connection with a three months' cash subscription for the Daily and Sunday paper, may have the property, a few weeks hence, of endowing the writer with $5,000.

He who writes down the number next to that one will receive $2,000, and so on through a list of 1,000 names, the last 460 of whom will receive $1 each—$10,000 to be divided among the best "guessers." As guesses come into the Pioneer Press they are recorded, a certificate is sent to the guesser and a duplicate to the Press Publishing association, a corporation which awards the prizes. This corporation awarded thousands of dollars in a similar guessing contest on the population of the United States. Every precaution has been taken to insure the most perfect fairness in the competition. No one within the wide field of the Pioneer Press can really afford to be without the paper, and by sending in his subscription before the contest closes he may, in addition to the benefits derived from its daily visits, become the possessor of a handsome sum of money. Every one who sends $1.20 for the Daily and Sunday Pioneer Press for three months will be entitled to one guess free. You may send subscription for as many months as you choose and you will be entitled to one guess for every three months' subscription paid in advance on the Daily and Sunday, or one guess free with each year's subscription paid in advance to the Weekly Pioneer Press.

THIS OFFER IS LIMITED.
DO NOT DELAY.

Guesses must be sent to the Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn., before June 1, 1901.

BIGGEST SALVAGE RECORDED.

Saving $1,250,000 in Gold from Steamship St. Paul.

When the big American line steamship St. Paul ran aground in a dense fog on the Jersey beach, near the lower end of Long Branch, before daylight on January 25, 1896, in the cargo was $1,250,000 in gold, consigned to a firm in New York. It was essential that this should be landed. Arrangements were made with the Merritt-Chapman Wrecking company to have the stranded liner hauled off. She and her cargo, including the gold, were heavily insured. After it was found that it was going to be very difficult to float the big ship the consignees of the gold, who needed it in their business, appealed to Captain Clark as Llyod's New York agent to have it landed. It remained aboard the vessel three days; the fact of it being there rendered the underwriters liable for a heavier tax in the event of the vessel being floated. Naturally the American line did not make any strenuous efforts to have the bullion discharged, and just as naturally Lloyds were anxious to get it off as quickly as possible, for in the event of a storm arising and causing the destruction of the ship the gold would have added so much more to the loss of the underwriters. Captain Clark chartered a steamer and offered to take charge of the gold and land it. Thereupon the captain obtained a promise that the gold would be landed immediately. Thus the underwriters were relieved of the further risk and expense of floating the stranded ship. The gold was transferred to the lighter Haggerty down a sagging chute-suggestive stretch of canvas in bags, kegs and boxes. Twelve men armed with revolvers guarded the treasure as it was transferred from a pier to a truck and taken to a vault in Wall street. The award of $166,000 for salvage service in the case of the St. Paul was the largest ever obtained in an admiralty court. The St. Paul was aground ten days. It was said that she had not a plate bent or a rivet started.—Ainslee's Magazine.

JAMES MADISON IN YOUTH.

Scotch Schoolmaster Named Donaldson Gave Him His Start.

James Madison, fourth president of the United States, was born at Port Conway, Va., March 16, 1751. His father was a planter in moderate circumstances, and James was the eldest of a family of twelve. The boy's first education was received at a school kept by a worthy Scotchman, named Donaldson. His progress was remarkable and encouraged his father to give his son a college education. Young Madison entered Princeton college and was graduated in 1772, remaining a year after to make a study of Hebrew. On his return home he devoted himself to teaching his brothers and sisters, all the time pushing his own studies. In history and constitutional law he was especially well versed, and these acquirements served him well in his public career. Early in 1776 he was appointed a delegate to the state convention which met in May, at Williamsburg. This convention's duty was to instruct the Virginia delegation to the continental congress in regard to the declaration of independence. Three years later young Madison was a delegate to congress, and from that time he held many important public offices. In 1809 he was elected president of the United States. He served during one of the most critical periods in the history of the country—while the second war with Great Britain was in progress. At the close of his second term as chief executive Madison retired to his estate at Montpelier, Va., where he peacefully passed the last twenty years of his life with his beloved books and friends. He died there June 28, 1836.

RIVERS UNDER THE OCEAN.

Streams of Fresh Water Said to Course Under the Sea.

A few months ago H. Benest, an English geographer, published an interesting study of streams of fresh water flowing beneath the surface of the sea. Disasters to ocean telegraph cables first called attention to this subject. On several occasions, about 1895, a new and well-made cable between Cape Verde and Brazil broke. Soundings were made to discover whether these breakings were due to the state of the sea bottom, and it was found that the place in question was near the submarine mouth of a subterranean river; the alluvial material transported by this fresh water stream encountered the cable and finally succeeded in breaking it. The fact is that a river that flows into the lagoons of Yof, on the coast of Senegal, is finally lost in the sand. It undoubtedly has taken its invisible course to the sea, and it is this river that has been discovered in the deep hollow of more than 1,300 meters (4,270 feet) that is transversed by the Brazilian cable. Also while the cable was being repaired at a point 24 kilometers (15 miles) from the shore the repair ship was surrounded one day by orange skins, calabashes, and bits of cloth, which could not have come from the mouth of the Senegal river, 140 kilometers (90 miles distant.—Chicago Journal.

Government Sending Out Seeds.

Senators and members of the house have left at the agricultural department in Washington thousands and tens of thousands of addresses of persons to whom packets of vegetable and flower seeds are to be sent. One day last week not less than 1,200 mail sacks, each containing 200 packages of seeds, were dispatched from the Washington post-office. It is estimated that the total number of seed packages this year will amount to 11,000,000, or 2,000,000 more than last year. Each year the volume swells like a rolling snowball.

SPRING CATARRH MAKES PEOPLE WEAK AND NERVOUS

MISS ANNA BRYAN OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Anna Bryan, a favorite cousin of William Jennings Bryan, is well known socially in Washington, D. C., where she has a host of friends. Miss Bryan recently studied music at Fairmount Seminary, of Washington, D. C. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

1459 Florida Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"At the solicitation of a friend I began some weeks ago to take your Peruna and I now feel like a new person. I take pleasure in recommending it to all who want a good tonic and a permanent cure for catarrh."—Anna Bryan.

MRS. BERTHA KOCKLER, 177 Guinett street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna and Manalin have done me very great service, and I recommend them with pleasure to all who suffer with nervous catarrh of the stomach as I did. Should such a disease ever attack me again I shall immediately take Peruna. I now feel very well and have a good appetite all the time. I have gained in weight. I recommended Peruna to an acquaintance of ours and he is making remarkable progress. I looked so badly for a time before I began your medicine, that now when I meet some of my friends they say: 'I was very much worried about you, but now you are looking so well.' I shall always keep Peruna and Manalin in the house as family medicines."—Mrs. Bertha Kockler.

Thousands of Fair Women Are Never Without Peruna, The National Catarrh Remedy.

Miss Marie Coats, President of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, writes the following concerning Peruna:

Appleton, Wis.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Miss Marie Coates.

Gentlemen—"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week. I have now used it for three seasons and find it very reliable and efficacious."—Marie Coats.

Mrs. Al. Wetzel, 21 South 17th street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes:

"Peruna is the greatest medicine on earth. I feel well and that tired feeling is all gone. When I began to take your medicine I could not smell nor hear a church bell ring. Now I can smell and hear. When I began your treatment my head was terrible, all sorts of buzzing, chirping and loud noises. Three months ago I dragged around like a snail; now I can walk as briskly as ever. I am going to go and see the doctor that said I was not long for this world, and tell him that Peruna cured me."—Mrs. Al. Wetzel.

If all the tired women and all the nervous women, and all the women that needed a tonic would read and heed the words of these three fair ladies who have spoken right to the point, how many invalids would be prevented and how many wretched lives be made happy.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

If it is the stomach that is out of order, and the digestion impaired, Peruna quickly makes things right by restoring the mucous membrane of the stomach.

If the nerves tingle, if the brain is tired, if the strength is flagging and the circulation of blood weakened by flabby mucous membranes of the digestive organs, Peruna reaches the spot at once by giving to these membranes the vitality and activity which belongs to them.

The pelvic organs are also lined with mucous membrane which in the female sex is especially liable to derangements. Peruna is an absolute specific in these cases. The women everywhere are praising it. No other remedy has ever received such unqualified praise from such a multitude of women.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

MAM-M-MA!!
DON'T YOU HEAR BABY CRY?

Do you forget that summer's coming with all its dangers to the little ones—all troubles bred in the bowels.

The summer's heat kills babies and little children because their little insides are not in good, clean, strong condition.

Winter has filled the system with bile. Belching, vomiting up of sour food, rash, flushed skin, colic, restlessness, diarrhoea or constipation, all testify that the bowels are out of order.

If you want the little ones to face the coming dangers without anxious fear for their lives, see that the baby's bowels are gently, soothingly, but positively cleaned out in the spring time, and made strong and healthy before hot weather sets in.

The only safe laxative for children, pleasant to take (they ask for more) is CASCARETS. Nursing mothers make their milk mildly purgative for the baby by eating a CASCARET now and then. Mama eats a CASCARET, baby gets the benefit. Try it! Send for a 10c box of CASCARETS to-day and you will find that, as we guarantee, all irregularities of the little and big childrens insides are

AWFUL HOLOCAUST

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., ALMOST WIPED OUT BY FIRE.

Conflagration Extended a Distance of Two and a Half Miles by Half a Mile Wide — Loss Will Reach Ten or Fifteen Million Dollars—Fourteen Solid Blocks of Residences Consumed — Block After Block of Business Houses Go Up Before the Flames Were Conquered—Six Lives Said to Be Lost.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 5.—The most disastrous fire in the history of this city began yesterday shortly after noon in a small factory from a defective wire, according to the best belief, and burned for nearly ten hours. In that time a property damage estimated at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 was caused. According to the city map 130 blocks were burned, many of them in the heart of the business and residence section. The estimate of houses to the block is ten, hence 1,300 of them went up in smoke. Many of the finest public and private buildings were destroyed, including hotels, theaters, churches and residences. The casualties cannot be accurately estimated. That there were several seems to be well authenticated. Among them was that of the fire chief, who sustained a bad fall.

The mayor ordered all of the saloons closed and has impressed help to clear the wreckage. When the fire reached Julia street it was a roaring furnace without any prospect of being put under control. The local military companies were called out to keep back the crowds and the fire department Began to Use Dynamite to blow up the houses a block from the fire and thus prevent the fire from spreading. So fierce was the blaze, however, and so strong had become the wind that millions of sparks and flying burning shingles spread over five or six blocks, setting the roofs of the houses on fire in advance of the department. Soon Senator Taliaferro's residence, then the adjoining houses of that block were ablaze, and in spite of all efforts to save the Windsor and the St. James hotel, both hostelries were quickly enveloped in flames. For about an hour the guests in the Windsor had been busy packing their trunks and went away loaded with trunks and grips, some unfortunately to the United States hotel, but most of them to the Riverside.

Leaping madly across the street from the Windsor, the flames attacked the Seills house and then the Methodist parsonage, and in a few moments the Trinity Methodist church was a mass of flames. The opera house block followed and the Richards and Livingstone boarding houses came next. A desperate effort was made to save the Baldwin mansion, which was recently purchased by the Elks for $18,000. No earthly power could save this building and the entire block and the one west was quickly a mass of flames. Once the fire got started on Main street the closely adjoining buildings Went One After the Other.

Paint shops with barrels of oil were plentiful in this district, and as they caught fire one after another, the blaze rising hundreds of feet high, quickly set fire to the buildings across the street. Then the Hubbard hardware store caught and the people scattered when they saw what had happened. Hundreds of pounds of powder and a great deal of dynamite were stored in this building. In ten minutes there was a roar and the building collapsed like an eggshell. The dynamite and powder had exploded. Here again there was much danger for the firemen. Cartridges began to explode and bullets began to fly around and the effort to fight the flames at this point had for a time to be abandoned. This was only the start of the most intense part of the fire. The new Furchgott building was soon ablaze and then quickly the Gardiner building was also a mass of flames. Down the street the Fire Spread With Rapidity and the entire section of Day street from Market to Main street and extending for five blocks back, was burning all at once. The city building went, the fire department building, the armory, the county court house, the city jail and the graded schools and the Catholic church and orphanage, St. John's Episcopal church and the convent. All this destruction was wrought in less than four hours. At 8:30 the fire was checked at the intersection of Laura and Bay streets, where the Commercial bank is located, which went up in the flames, the Western Union Telegraph office being just across the street and not damaged. Among the prominent hotels burned were the St. James, the United States, the Placide and the Windsor. It is impossible at this hour to ascertain the losses, but it is estimated by insurance agents that it will be between eight and nine million dollars. Six lives are reported lost.

Thousands Are Homeless.

At 1 a. m. this morning the situation was one approaching desolation in a large section of the city. The burned district reaches from Burbridge street on the north to St. John's river on the south, a distance of not quite two miles. The width of the desolated area is thirteen blocks. Within this space practically everything is blackened ruins. On Bay street, the principal mart of trade, the Western Union Telegraph company's building is the first building standing, going west. Everything west of Laura and Bay is gone. At 10:15 o'clock the fire was under control, having practically burned itself out.

Meetings of the city council, the commercial bodies and the charitable institutions will be called Saturday morning to devise ways and means for meeting the situation. Mayor Bowden at 1 o'clock this morning says the property loss will exceed fifteen millions. Ten to fifteen thousand people are homeless.

TWO BLOCKS BURNED.

Gridley, Ill., Visited by a Destructive Fire.

Gridley, Ill., May 5. — Two entire business blocks, facing Center street, were burned yesterday afternoon, causing a loss estimated at $80,000. Mrs. H. Cohn, wife of a clothing merchant, started to burn a pile of rubbish. She lighted it and then left it. In a few minutes it had spread to the butcher shop owned by William Setla. A brisk south wind carried it across the street to the new Commercial hotel, and from there it jumped to the new Gridley State bank. By this time, it was seen that the whole town was in danger and a call for aid was sent to Peoria. A steamer and a hose cart were sent, but before their arrival the fire had destroyed two blocks of buildings and had practically burned itself out. There were no casualties.

ALL TEXAS TURNS OUT.

Reception to the Presidential Party a Brilliant Affair.

Austin, Tex., May 5.—Out of Dixie the presidential party yesterday traveled into the heart of the great Southwest. The president's reception in the Lone Star State was a continuation of the ovation he has received throughout the South. Every honor was shown him and his party and there was much enthusiasm. Gov. Sayers and other prominent state officials met the president at Houston, the first stopping place inside the state, and accompanied him as far as Austin, the capital. There were some interesting features at the reception at Houston, and a very picturesque scene at Prairieview, where the president addressed the colored students of the state normal school. At every station along the route there were cheering crowds. The feature of the day was the reception accorded the party at Austin, which, like New Orleans, had never before had the honor of entertaining a chief magistrate of the nation. The city was profusely decorated and in the evening there was a brilliant illumination of congress avenue. Austin never before held such crowds of people. They came from every direction, some hundreds of miles, and literally swamped the hotel accommodations of the city. It was estimated that over 20,000 visitors were here. As the population of Austin is only 23,000, the tax upon its facilities can be imagined.

TO BE SOLD FOR JUNK.

This Will Be the Ending of the Famous Frigate Minesota.

Boston, May 4—Poor old frigate Minnesota will be stove up and sold for junk after all. A strenuous effort has been made to save the famous old craft for sentimental reasons, and the movement had apparently met with success about a week ago when she was ordered to Virginia to act as a receiving ship, but yesterday this action was reversed by Secretary Long and her fate was sealed. She will fly the flag no more.

Dunton Sentenced to Prison.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 5. — W. V. Dunton, the book agent, newspaper collector and swindler who was arrested here a few days ago on instructions from the authorities at Spokane, Wash., and from a publishing house and newspaper in Minneapolis, who pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree for attaching the names of individuals to alleged orders for books, was yesterday sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

Old Man Nearly Killed.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 5.—John Jackson, sixty years old, came near being killed yesterday while at work in the blacksmith shop of Ole Gullickstad. He was working at an emery wheel when the belt slipped off the pulley. He attempted to replace it while the machine was in motion. He fell across the drive bar and next to the fly-wheel. He was picked up badly injured but will recover. How he escaped death is a mystery.

Ingersoll Temple.

Chicago, May 5. — The building in Chicago of a $100,000 temple to the memory of Robert G. Ingersoll, in which the teachings of the orator and atheist shall be perpetuated, is the purpose of the Ingersoll Memorial association, incorporated at Springfield. The projectors are Edward C. Reichwald, secretary of the American Secular Union and Free Thought Federation; Frederick Dahlstrom and Samuel Roberts.

Turkey to Pay.

Constantinople, May 5.—It has been arranged that the Imperial Ottoman bank shall pay the Cramps £100,000 sterling as a first installment, and pay an amount not specified to the Krupps, from a 6 per cent sur tax on the general taxation of the empire. Simultaneously with this announcement the Turkish officials have revived the old story that the Cramps' payment includes the United States Armenian claims.

Examined for Cadetship.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, May 5. — John Lund, a student at the state normal school, passed the examination for a cadetship at West Point and stood at the head of the list of seventeen applicants. B. M. Gibson of Independence was a close second and was recommended as an alternate in case Mr. Lund fails to pass the final test at Fort Snelling.

Trans-Siberian Road.

Moscow, May 5. — Vityovsky, chief engineer of the Trans-Siberian railway, says that since the railway was begun in 1892 3,600 miles of track have been laid and that 2,000 more must be constructed before the great work is complete. He expects that the road will be finished in 1903. Already thirty miles of bridges have been built.

Cherokee treaty Rejected.

Washington, May 5.—Acting Chairman Bixby, of the Dawes Five Civilized Tribes commission, yesterday wired the rejection of the treaty negotiated for allotment of the Cherokee lands as follows: "Canvass of the vote concluded last evening. Cherokee agreement defeated by majority of 1,232 votes."

Killed by a Policeman.

Schuyler, Neb., May 5.—Because he refused to submit to arrest while disturbing the peace, a stranger, supposed to be R. W. Moss, was shot and killed by a policeman. At the inquest the officer was exonerated.

Held to Grand Jury.

Cando, N. D., May 5.—James Pike, a young farmer, was bound over in $500 before Justice Elsberry on the charge of having shot two of his neighbors' colts.

MANY LIVES LOST

CASUALTIES ADD TO THE HORROR OF THE JACKSONVILLE FIRE.

A Number of People, Hemmed in by the Fire, Jumped Into the St. Johns River and Nearly All of Them Lost Their Lives—Number of the Victims Is Not Known—Work of Clearing Up the Debris Proceeding Rapidly — Relief Trains Bring Supplies for the Homeless and Hungry.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 6.—Just how many persons perished in the great fire of Friday cannot be ascertained at this time. It is known, however, that Martha Hagan, a colored woman, perished in the flames, for her partially burned body was found in front of the door of her house. A number of people whose names cannot be learned were drowned in the river while attempting to escape from the flames. They were the occupants of the Meyer & Muller and the Mohawk blocks, which ran back to the river from Bay street. These people were hemmed in by the fire and took refuge on the docks. The latter were soon in flames, and one person after another Jumped Into the St. Johns.

Several of them crowded into a boat, which was capsized and nearly all were drowned. A steam launch picked up several men who were struggling in the water, but did not report their names, and so it is not known who the rescued were. The citizens have taken breath from the direful calamity visited upon them, and to-day building operations will begin. The streets have already been cleared of rubbish as much as possible, and an army of linemen are at work clearing away the miles of tangled telephone wires. Firemen are still playing on the smoking ruins, and where possible men are digging safes out of the mass of bricks that cover them. The hunger of 10,000 homeless people was satisfied yesterday upon the arrival of relief trains and boats Bringing Provisions from neighboring towns. Early yesterday morning a commissary was established in the center of the city and thousands were fed during the day. The relief fund is growing hourly and every mail brings offers of assistance. An order was promulgated under martial law requiring all merchants whose stores were spared by the conflagration to open their doors and sell to all who asked. The streets have been crowded all day with shoppers who lost all in the fire, and many stores remain open all night. It is estimated that 3,000 persons have left the city and every outgoing train is Crowded With Refugees.

Five car loads of tents have been received, the property of the state, which are to be used by the homeless temporarily. Another shipment of tents is expected from the government today. The Times-Union and Citizen estimates the total property loss at $11,000,000. These figures are based upon an itemized statement furnished by a volunteer committee of citizens. Martial law is being rigidly enforced and the town is quiet, although much anxiety prevails because of the threats said to have been made by the negroes that they would obtain provisions by force at their first opportunity.

MAYOR TAGGART A HERO.

Prevents a Serious Accident at the Risk of His Life.

Chicago, May 6.—Mayor Taggart of Indianapolis, who is here on a visit to friends yesterday prevented a pleasure party from meeting with serious accident, if not death, in a runaway. Mr. Taggart acted promptly, though he did it at the risk of his own life. He was riding behind the party in an automobile when the horses, taking fright, ran away. Putting his machine to its full speed Mr. Taggart passed the runaways, brought his auto to a stop and jumped to the ground, not a second too soon, grabbed one of the horses by the bridle. The speed of the team carried him off his feet, but though he was dragged more than a block, he kept tight hold of the bridle and finally brought the horses to a stand-still. Beyond a few slight bruises Mr. Taggart was unhurt.

LOCK-OUT AT DAYTON, OHIO.

National Cash Register Company Shuts Down Its Works.

Dayton, Ohio, May 6.—Twenty-three hundred men have been locked out by the National Cash Register company. The trouble arose about the discharge of four union men in the molding department. J. H. Patterson, president, and Robert H. Patterson, manager, say they will shut up the factory indefinitely. The shop committee asked the company to take the men back. This was refused. The molders walked out and the metal polishers struck in sympathy with the molders. Other unions were preparing to strike when the company closed the doors and dismissed all of the men. The office force has been suspended.

GOING INTO THE TRUST.

Great Western Cereal Company May Have but a Brief Existence.

Akron, Ohio, May 6.—It was learned here on the return of the men who were present at the birth of the Great Western Cereal company in Chicago this week, that negotiations have already been started for the consolidation of the new company with the American Cereal company. It has been predicted since the inception of the Great Western company that the result would be such a combination, but it was not expected steps in that direction would be taken so soon.

Cannot Receive Mr. Kruger.

London, May 6.—The Geneva correspondent of the Daily Mail asserts that President McKinley has informed Mr. Kruger that he cannot receive him either officially or unofficially.

Murder and Suicide.

Hebronville, Tex., May 6. — Manuel Mesa, a constable, killed his wife and then committed suicide by blowing his brains out. Jealousy is the supposed cause.

SEVEN BURNED TO DEATH.

Cut Off From Escape in a Burning Apartment Building.

Chicago, May 6.—Seven persons were burned to death, three fatally injured and several others slightly burned and otherwise injured in a fire that destroyed a three-story apartment building at 9316 Marquette avenue, South Chicago, early yesterday. While the occupants of the burning building were struggling with the smoke and flames in hope of forcing their way to safety, the firemen, who were responding to the alarm, were vainly waiting for a freight train which was blocking the way of the fire engines to move away from the crossing and give an open road to the fire. Marshall Driscoll, in charge of the firemen, called to the conductor and brakemen to move the train but they refused to comply with his request. The police were sent for, and the crew was arrested. Then under orders of the fire marshal the train was backed from the crossing, but by the time the firemen reached the burning building the structure had been destroyed. Scattered among the embers were found the charred remains of the victims. The bodies were burned beyond recognition and were identified in various ways. The train crew, who live at Elkhart, Ind., are being held without bail awaiting the verdict of the coroner's inquest. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building was an old one, built of wood and burned so rapidly that all avenues of escape by stairways were cut off before the occupants were aware of the fire.

UNCLE SAM TURNED DOWN.

England's Reply to the Complaint About the Seizure of a Wrecker.

Washington, May 6.—The answer of the British government to the inquiry of the state department respecting the seizure at Union bay of the wrecking vessel Ajax, which was engaged in saving the American steamer Willamette, has been received, and, as was expected, it takes the ground that the Willamette was not wrecked in waters "contiguous to the United States boundary line," a condition which the treaty makes necessary to wrecking operations like this. It appears that Union bay, the scene of the wreck, is more than 100 miles distant from the boundary line, and in the light of the treaty and of subsequent decisions of the authorities, it could not be regarded as forming part of the contiguous waters, so that the seizure was justified and cannot be made the subject of official remonstrance.

KING LUDWIG IS WORSE.

Mad Ruler of Bavaria Presents a Pathetic Spectacle.

Berlin, May 6.—Mad King Ludwig of Bavaria has just celebrated his fifty-third birthday anniversary. His condition grows worse and he now presents a painfully pathetic spectacle. His eyes have lost all expression and his voice is growing feeble. The hair on his head and his beard are white and ragged, as the appearance of a barber provokes a violent paroxysm. His face is the color of parchment. The only sign of recognition he ever gives is a feeble smile. He smokes cigarettes perpetually and alternates between semi-starvation and wild voracity. His doctors say he may live five years unless an internal hemorrhage occurs.

MANY PEOPLE INJURED.

Collision of Two Traction Cars at Akron, Ohio.

Akron, Ohio, May 6.—Two Northern Ohio traction cars collided at the foot of a steep hill on North Howard street yesterday afternoon and about a dozen people were injured. The two cars were loaded with passengers and were traveling close together. For some reason the brakes on the second car failed to work and it dashed down the hill at a terrific speed, striking the forward car which had stopped to take on more passengers. Strange to say no one on the second car was injured except the motorman, Scott, who sustained serious internal injuries. The rear platform of the forward car was crowded and all on the platform were more or less injured.

BERTHA USED A WHIP.

Indiana Girl Publicly Chastises a Newspaper Publisher.

La Porte, Ind., May 6.—Miss Bertha Mack, aged twenty years, yesterday publicly horsewhipped William Hunt, a newspaper publisher, for giving publicity to statements reflecting on her character. Miss Mack then took up her position in front of Hunt's office, and while she confined him as a prisoner by threatening further vengeance if he ventured forth, addressed a crowd of upward of a thousand people, reciting her wrongs and claiming justification for her deed. Hunt has made no defense.

Canada Concurs.

Ottawa, Ont., May 6.—The dominion authorities have concurred in the United States regulations, recently adopted, regarding the carding and sealing of packages passing between the United States ports via Canada. Cars must be sealed by United States custom officers, the seals to remain until the goods arrive again in the United States. Railroad iron and other merchandise in bulk, which is incapable of being put in locked cars may be transported on platform cars, duly corded and sealed.

Wholesale Arrests in Russia.

St. Petersburg, May 6.—During the past four days there have been wholesale arrests and seizures in connection with the alleged revolutionary movement. It is reported that persons of high standing and position are involved. Several hundred persons have been arrested during the last forty-eight hours, including a number of prominent people.

Killed by Lightning.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 6. — During a heavy thunder storm Judge J. J. Healy was struck by lightning and instantly killed at his ranch west of this city. Judge Healy was an intimate friend and associate of Senator Kyle.

Suspected of Selling Stolen Goods.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 6.—A gang of six tough looking characters are under arrest here on suspicion of selling stolen property. They were peddling pantaloons and spectacles thought to have been planted in this vicinity.

ARE LEAVING PEKIN

AMERICAN TROOPS COMMENCE EVACUATION OF CHINA.

Artillery and Cavalry Leave Chinese Capital and Will March to Tien-tsin—Infantry Will Leave by Rail as Soon as the Transports Arrive —Imposing Farewell Ceremonies Attend the Departure of the Troops — Evacuation by Foreign Troops May Result in General Disorder.

Pekin, May 6.—The American cavalry and artillery, which has been ordered to leave China, has just left here for Tien-tsin. The men will march to that place, carrying ten days' concentrated rations. They marched yesterday to Tong Ku. These cavalrymen were extremely popular here, and the cleanliness and order of their camp arrangements were much praised. Imposing farewell ceremonies attended their departure. Sir Alfred Gaselee and other British generals with their staffs were present and the British commander sent a detachment of Baluchis, who escorted the Americans outside the city walls. Gen. Chaffee publicly thanked the cavalry and artillery for their services in the international relief expedition and for their behavior since, which has been, he said, a credit to themselves and their nation. The infantry and headquarters staff will leave by rail as soon as the transports arrive at Taku.

General Disorder Feared.

Reports have been received that the districts along the line of march of the German troops returning from the west have been largely deserted by their inhabitants. There has been much commandering by them. They required supplies and transportation from one mandarin, who, fearing that compliance with the demands made upon him were impossible, committed suicide. Other districts are reported to be greatly disturbed by disbanded soldiers and banditti. One district requested aid from the French soldiers, who, upon arriving there, had a fight with the outlaws and sustained some loss. Two of their officers were killed. These reports of disturbance are held to show that there will be disorders in every direction should the evacuation of foreign troops begin without arranging for the return of a sufficient Chinese force to maintain order.

To Open Up Manchuria.

London, May 6.—"I am informed by a high native official," says a Shanghai correspondent of the Times, "that China has approached the powers suggesting a complete reopening of Manchuria to the enterprise of all countries, and that replies have been received from Japan, the United States and Great Britain. Japan cordially approves the suggestion. The United States government generally assents, but suggests an application of the principle to the whole empire. Great Britain approves. It is feared, however, that Russia will object. The chamber of commerce and the British and American associations are vigorously protesting against the proposed increase of the customs tariff to 10 per cent."

BRUSH WITH BOERS.

Eight Britons Are Captured, but They Are Later Rescued.

Cape Town, May 6.—Twelve men belonging to the Diamond Field Horse, under Lieut. Matthews, encountered a large number of Boers under Commandant Malan near Cradock. The British fought until all their horses had been shot. Lieut. Matthews and seven of his men were captured, but Col. Scobell subsequently effected their release.

-o-

Johannesburg, May 6.—Gen. Delarey, the Boer commander, has now four or five thousand men in the hills around Hartbeestefontein. Gen. Babington, in command of the British forces in the district, is without a sufficient force to attack, and is observing the Boers while Generals Methuen and Rawlinson are converging hither. A battle appears imminent.

NATIVES IN REVOLT.

Situation in the Ivory Coast Colony Critical for the French.

Paris, May 6.—The Eclair says that the situation in the Ivory Coast colony, West Africa, is reported more critical. Various engagements are reported to have taken place in the Baule regions between the insurgents and the French troops. The latter, it is said, encountered desperate resistance and were hard pressed. Some officers of the French force are said to have been wounded. Gen. Combes, it is stated, is on his way to the Ivory Coast colony from Senegal to direct the operations of the French troops.

DRAPER WILL LIVE IN ITALY.

Former Ambassador to Rome Gives Up His American Residence.

London, May 6.—Mr. Draper, formerly the American ambassador at Rome, recently passed through London on his way to Italy, where he intends to make his permanent abode. He is now in Venice and has bought a number of pictures at the exposition there.

PLAGUE RIOTS IN INDIA.

Twenty Villages in Revolt and Several Persons Killed.

Calcutta, May 6. — Three hundred troops have been dispatched to the Sialkat district to suppress plague riots. Twenty-five villages are in revolt in the district, and several hospital assistants have been killed or wounded.

Launching of the Defender.

Bristol, R. I., May 6.—All arrangements have been made at the Herreshoff yards for the launching of the Constitution to-night. Work ceased Saturday night and no doubt the yacht is ready for her plunge.

Fire in Chicago Stock Yards.

Chicago, May 6.—Fire destroyed the plant of the A. H. Friedman company, makers of butterine, situated in the heart of the stock yards. The company's loss will aggregate $150,000, [illegible]

IS IT A MIRACLE.

Doctors Examine the Spots on the Famous "Bleeding Picture" at Menominee, Mich.

Marinette, Wis., May 6.—At the request of the Reverends Cleary and Papon of Menominee, Catholic pastors of the Irish and Polish Catholic churches, respectively, the physicians made a microscopic examination of the spots on the bleeding picture. The doctors were unable to decide by the microscope whether or not it was blood. They say that a chemical analysis is necessary. Both of the priests mentioned above are inclined to think that the manifestation is a miraculous one. The candles are still kept burning about the picture, and many people are praying before it. The fact that two of the priests believe that it may prove to be a miracle is causing many to take the matter more seriously.

WILL ACCEPT.

Minister Conger Says He Will Not Refuse Iowa's Gubernatorial Nomination.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 6.—Minister Conger has authorized the publication of the following card:

"In reply to hundreds of letters from all over Iowa, which I cannot answer personally, urging me to accept the nomination for governor by the Republican party, I repeat the statement first made, that I cannot be a candidate, but will accept nomination if it is tendered to me. —E. H. Conger."

Minister Conger has gone to Washington to report to the state department and consult with the authorities with regard to the situation in China.

POSSIBLY A MURDER.

An Unknown Man Found Dead Near East Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 6. — The dead body of an unknown man was found in the woods near the river in East Grand Forks yesterday morning. Several pools of blood were found in the vicinity and the coroner was notified. An identification card found on the deceased bore the name of Charles M. Heck and requested that information be sent to John Heck, Ripley, Ohio, in case of accident. The man came in from the west two days ago. An autopsy has been performed and a bad contusion was found behind one ear.

Huron to Have State Fair.

Huron, S. D., May 6.—A number of Huron citizens have filed articles of incorporation for a charter for an organization to be known as "Central South Dakota Fair association." The plan is to lease for a term of years a tract of land in close proximity to the city and fit it up for fair purposes; an annual stock carnival will be the chief attraction, the first to be held early in October. A large amount of stock has been taken in the enterprise and its success is assured.

Now Opposed to Hazing.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 6. — The students of Morningside college here have taken an official stand against the practice of hazing after an unfortunate affair of a few days ago. A new student was hauled from his bed in the night and his clothes torn off him, and he was given a severe fright. His friends came to his rescue and there came near being a riot. The faculty has just ascertained who some of the leaders of the affair were and has suspended them.

A Million Dollar Mortgage.

Omaha, May 6.—One million dollars is the amount of a mortgage filed in the office of the Douglass county register of deeds. It is the first lien mortgage and deed of trust from the Union Pacific Railroad company to the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, given to secure the payment of an item of $1,000,000 of 4 per cent gold bonds, dated April 15, 1901, and due May 1, 1911.

For North Dakota's Fair.

Mandan, N. D., May 6.—The state fair management has had the track put in shape for the coming fair. Considerable work has been placed on it, and it is now pronounced the best and fastest track in the state. About $2,000 purse money has already been raised. The different committees have been appointed, and the work for the coming exposition is well under way.

His Job a Fatal One.

Brainerd, Minn., May 6. — James Schwartz, a laborer, was drowned in the river here. Schwartz has recently been employed on the new bridge, but had taken a job on the drive. In company with two other men he went to the river to proctice and fell off a log when about twenty-five feet from shore. His home is near Mankato. He leaves a wife and child.

Will Be Taken Back.

Pierre, S. D., May 6.—Agent Hatch, of the Cheyenne agency, refusing to take charge of the smallpox-infected Indians who came in here Friday evening from Forest City, they were sent back to that place, under guard. The agent takes the position that their homes are on Bad river, and they should be sent there.

Celestial Rounded Up.

Fargo, N. D., May 6. — Fung Yung Gee, a former resident of the Flowery Kingdom, was arrested at Pembina, where he had walked across the international boundary line. He is now in the local jail with three other Celestials who were arrested in Portal, and whose trial has been adjourned to May 18.

Hudson Merchant Dead.

Hudson, Wis., May 6. — Thomas Beard, a well known merchant, died Saturday night of apoplexy, aged seventy-three years. He had been a resident of Hudson since 1845.

Hotel Burned.

Black River Falls, Wis., May 6.—The Hotel at Irving, nine miles from here, was burned yesterday morning, catching from a defective chimney. Loss $2,500, with $750 insurance. The hotel will be rebuilt.

Big Fire Loss at Henning.

Henning, Minn., May 6. — Johnson Bros. & Saunders' big general store at Parker's Prairie with contents burned to the ground. Loss on stock, $12,000; building, $2,000. There was very little insurance.

DIAZ TO M'KINLEY

TWO PRESIDENTS EXCHANGE CORDIAL GREETINGS.

President Diaz Unable to Meet President McKinley at El Paso Sends a Personal Message and Also Delegates Gen. Hernandez to Personally Present His Good Wishes—President McKinley Replies in the Same Cordial Terms—It Being Sunday the Official Exercises Were Postponed.

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—The presidential party reached El Paso, the gateway to Mexico, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and will remain until noon to-day. President Diaz of Mexico had hoped to meet the president here and shake hands with him across the border, but as the Mexican congress is in session he could not leave the capital. He sent a personal message to the president, however, and also dispatched Gen. Juan Hernandez, the commander of the Second military zone of the State of Chihuahua, to personally present his good wishes to the chief magistrate of the United States. Gov. Miguel Ahumada of Chihuahua, the most northerly state of Mexico, also traveled to El Paso to pay his respects; and these distinguished Mexican officials, accompanied by Gen. Hernandez's staff in full uniform, were received by the president in his car at the station. After exchanging felicitations the president requested Gen. Hernandez to convey to President Diaz his personal good wishes for the health and happiness of President Diaz and for a continuation of the cordial relations at present existing between the two countries. President Diaz's message was as follows:

"City of Mexico, May 5.—To the President of the United States of America, El Paso: When you arrive this day at the frontier of Mexico I wish I might shake hands with you, but I send you as cordial a salute as corresponds with the Cordial Relations Which Exist between the two republics of North America. I also send Gen. Hernandez to express to you the same feeling.
—"Porfirio Diaz."

To this the president sent the following response:

"El Paso, Tex., May 5.—To His Excellency, Gen. Porfirio Diaz, President of the Republic of Mexico, City of Mexico: It gives me great pleasure to reciprocate the courteous greeting of your excellency and to express my most cordial good wishes for your health and happiness and for the continued prosperity of the Mexican republic, to which we are bound by so many ties of mutual interest and friendship. —William McKinley."

It being Sunday, the president had requested the local committee not to arrange any program for the day. His wishes were respected and the military parade and official exercises were postponed until to-day. The president and Mrs. McKinley and the members of the cabinet attended the Station Street Methodist church in the morning and in the afternoon some of the party went out for a drive. After dark last night the Mexican band, which had been brought from the City of Mexico by Gen. Hernandez, serenaded the president and Mrs. McKinley at the train. To-day Gov. Murphy of Arizona and his staff will participate in the formal greetings. One of the features of the program is to be a Mexican breakfast with the typical Spanish dishes for the ladies of the party.

MAD MULLAH PLANS A RAID.

Spies Say He Is Marching With a Big Force on Berbera.

Aden, May 6.—Spies who have come in report that the Mad Mullah is marching with a considerable force from Lassidar, four days' march down the Tug-Dehr river, northward, with the object of raiding Berbera as soon as the British force leaves Burao. A general British advance was expected May 1, but the Mullah's rapid marches caused a constant change of plans.

CHIEF SULTAN TO PAY FINE.

Death of British Vice Consul Is Recalled.

Mombasa, May 6.—The Jubaland expedition has occupied Ofudo. The chief sultan has agreed to pay a fine for the murder of A. C. W. Jenner, the British subject-commissioner and vice consul, who was killed in November last during a night attack on his camp by professedly friendly natives while he was on a tour inland with a small force.

Crazy Man Stabs Four Women.

Grenna, Sweden, May 6. — While Baroness Augusta von Dusen was introducing a patient named Nehrmann into a hospital for nervous diseases here, Nehrmann became violent, seized a knife and stabbed the baroness and her three daughters. The patient then escaped into the street, clad only in underclothing, tried to force an entrance into several houses and attacked and wounded five persons before being overpowered. One of the daughters of the baroness has succumbed to her wounds.

Actress Commits Suicide.

New York, May 6. — Miss Frances Raymond, an actress, committed suicide by inhaling gas yesterday in her home here. From clipping found in the apartment, letters, manuscripts, etc., it was learned that she once played with one of the Frohman traveling companies in the part of Lucy Hawkesworth in "The Girl I Left Behind Me." For two weeks she had acted in an erratic manner. Miss Raymond's real name was Mrs. Schaffer. Her husband died ten years ago.

Report a Shortage of $30,000.

Colorado Springs, May 6.—The financial committee of the city council, which has been making an examination of the books of City Treasurer Hale, report a shortage approximating $30,000. Hale admits it is over $20,000.

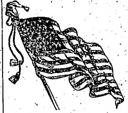
WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1901.



New England Youngsters.

One of Detroit's lawyers, who has had such professional success as enables him to spend a portion of each summer in a quaint New England section, brings back some very interesting facts.

"I take my outing in one of those parts," he says, "where the farms are so run down that you can't hope for a good crop of anything unless it be beans or goats. One of the consequences is that the young men have to find some other part of the country in which to make a living, and I'll wager that there is not another community in the Union where the average age is higher.

"Knowing me to be a lawyer, some of the residents called me into a conference about the township treasurer who had been guilty of advancing a teacher $2 on her salary without the consent of the trustees. There was not a man there except myself who was not past 82, and two were over 90.

"While I was making a talk in favor of the treasurer and trying to minimize his transgressions without offending the selectmen, as they called them, a man of at least 65 slouched through the door and took a seat.

"'Just a minute,' said one of the oldest veterans as he interrupted and glowered at the intruder. 'How often have I quoted that there quotation to you 'bout old men for council and young men for war? This is a council. Now you just run out till we get through, Willie. If there's any a'rest to be made, we'll call on you.' And Willie went without turning a word."—Detroit Free Press.

Finding Days of the Week.

The prematurely aged young man whose duty it is to get up The Record's "Answers to Correspondents" column says that queries of the same nature always come in bunches. They seem to be epidemic. Just at present a great many people seem eager to know what day of the week they were born on, and it keeps him busy figuring the dates out. He has a system which he uses, and for the benefit of others who may be in search of like information it is herewith given:

For instance, take Jan. 15, 1868. A man born on that date writes to know what day of the week it fell on. In order to ascertain this divide the figures representing the year by 4, rejecting the remainder, if any. To this dividend and quotient add the number of days in the year to the given date, inclusive, always reckoning 28 days in February. Divide the sum by 7, and the remainder will be the number of the day of the week, 0 signifying Saturday. Here is the illustration, taking Jan. 15, 1868:

4)1868
467
Number of days to Jan. 15.......... 15
7)2350
335—5

Thus, by this calculation, which is infallible, it will be seen that Jan. 15, 1868, fell on the fifth day of the week, which is Thursday.—Philadelphia Record.

Thrifty.

A Canadian minister had just married a couple. The registers were signed, and nothing remained but the giving and taking of the fee. The bridegroom, a strapping young fellow, asked:

"How much is it?"

The parson glanced at the smiling bride and slyly answered:

"Whatever you think it is worth."

Now, it should have been worth a great deal, for the girl was young and pretty.

"I reckon it's worth about 5 shillings," said the swain, holding out two half crowns.

The clergyman looked blankly at the coins, then turned to the fair one.

"I'll leave it to you, madam," he said. "What do you think it's worth?"

What did this young and blushing bride do? She reached out, took the coins, handed one half crown to the minister and put the other into her pocket!

"A thrifty wife," said the minister, with a sigh, "is her husband's crown."

Perhaps he ought to have said half crown.—London Tit-Bits.

A Woman's No.

"Learn to say 'no,' my daughter," advised the wise mamma.

"But why?" inquired the coy debutante.

"Because it is more fun to keep the men guessing for awhile."

Thus we see that woman's "no" means "guess" in stead of "yes," as the proverb would have us believe.—Baltimore American.

Of His Abundance.

"Your neighbor has just given me an old coat," said the tramp. "Can you give something?"

"Yes," replied the clergyman. "I will go through the collection box and find some buttons to match the coat."

A Wild Ride.

"When I was younger than I will ever be again," said the professor with a three story head and eyeglasses of the telescopic order, "I was the victim of such intense mental abstraction that I removed myself entirely from the world of practical affairs. I was in the boundless realms of thought and paid but fleeting attention to the active field of human action. It was necessary to notify me when I should attend my classes, eat my meals and even when I should retire.

"I was at one time requested to lecture in a New England village and agreed to do so. The theme was one that had received my best thoughts, and the mere prospect of delivering it was a physical pleasure. When I arrived at the depot my thoughts were concentrated upon the prepared address. I realized that my train was an hour late and that I must hurry, but beyond the mere fact of hurrying I did not grasp a detail.

"'Drive fast!' I shouted to the driver of a dingy looking vehicle as I sprang in and handed him a $5 bill. 'Spare neither horse nor whip.'

"Away we went with a plunge. The carriage rolled like a ship in the trough of the sea. Street lights seemed a torchlight procession moving rapidly by the other way. Constables shouted, dogs barked, small boys chased us and business ceased that people might stand on the sidewalks and gaze. Up one street and down another we dashed madly. We took corners on two wheels, grazed telegraph poles and knocked over such movables as ash barrels and dry goods boxes.

"After half an hour of this bewildering experience I stuck my head out of the window and shouted, 'Are we nearly there?'

"'Where did yez want to go, sir?' came the edifying answer."—Washington Star.

The Dude and the Artist.

Paris is laughing over how an artist got even with a dude who, having sat for his picture, was so dissatisfied with the result that he refused to pay for it. The Count de X. recently had a crayon picture of himself made, which he afterward pretended to find fault with.

"It does not bear the slightest resemblance to me," he said, "and I will not take it." The artist protested, but all to no avail. "All right, monsieur," he remarked finally, "if it is not at all like you, of course I can't reasonably expect to get paid for it." After the count had gone the painter added to the portrait a magnificent pair of ass' ears and exhibited it to the gaze of the curious public. It had not been long so exposed when the count broke into the artist's studio in a towering rage and, finding that threats availed him nothing, at last offered to buy it at a considerable advance upon the original price.

"It was not strange that you failed to recognize your resemblance to the picture at first," said the painter, determined to be revenged for the slight put upon his work. "But I knew you would notice the likeness as soon as I added those ears."

He Was Superstitious.

He was a big, hearty workingman, and when a spare, thin little man entered the tram car, stumbled and sat upon him he said in reply to the little man's apologies:

"Don't trouble, sir; it's all right. There's no 'arm done."

When we saw the big man a week later, we were shocked at the change in him. He seemed to have shrunk to half his former bulk.

"Why, whatever's the matter?" we exclaimed.

"You remember that little man wot sat on me in the train last week, sir?"

"Yes."

"Well, it's all through 'im I'm wastin away like this!"

"Preserve us!" we cried. "How? Why?"

The shrunken giant wrung his hands in despair.

"I found out next day," he groaned, "that 'e was the coroner. An' 'e sat on me! I'm shuperstishus, an it's lookin ahead I am. Oh, Lor'!"—London Mail.

How She Settled the Question.

The question of precedence at dinner and at social functions at Washington is a weighty one in official circles, but once upon a time there was a western senator whose wife thought very lightly on this subject. She was in Washington for a good time, and she resolved to have it without bothering about precedence.

This fearless little woman gave a dinner on one occasion, and when it was time to get her guests from the drawing room into the dining room she said:

"There is some precedence about all this, but I don't know what it is. Just shoo out to dinner, every one of you, and sit down anywhere you please."

This stroke of western diplomacy worked perfectly.—Exchange.

A Good Runner.

"Hello, hello! Is this the gas company's office?"

"Yes; what is it?"

"When do the entries for the next race open?"

"We don't know anything about the races. This is the gas office."

"Correct; but I thought you could tell me."

"Why, what do you want to know for?"

"Oh, nothing particular. I have a gas meter I would like to enter, that's all."—Tit-Bits.

Triumph of Thrift.

"The old man seems mighty pleased with himself," said Mr. Grindner's coachman.

"Sure," said the cook. "He's been saving all his burned matches for six months, and this morning he found he had enough for me to start the kitchen fire with."—Indianapolis Press.

We Want Correspondents

We desire a correspondent in every school district in the county, one who will give the local news of his or her locality in a fair and impartial manner. To any one who will undertake the matter the SPECTATOR will furnish the necessary stationery and postage and will send the paper free during the time the person acts in that capacity. Only one correspondent desired in each district. It is an advantage to any community to be represented in the columns of the local paper.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum six hundred and two dollars ninety cents ($602.90), which is claimed due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Gilbert Anfinson and Sarah Anfinson, his wife, mortgagors, to Samuel M. Dalnard mortgagee, bearing date the 4th day of January 1894 and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 8th day of January 1891 at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 66 of mortgages on page 237 and was recorded in Red Lake county in book B. page 533.

Which said mortgage, together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Samuel M. Dalnard to the Scandia American Bank of Crookston Minnesota by written assignment dated the 5th day of March 1894 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 9th day of August 1895 at 4 o'clock p. m. in book 75 of mortgages on page 329, recorded Red Lake county, Book F. page 360.

Now, therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The southeast quarter (se¼) of section thirty-one (31) in township one hundred fifty three (153) north of range forty-two (42) west containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof in Red Lake county and state of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county at the front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls in said county and state on Friday the 14th day of June 1901 at 10 o'clock a. m of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of six hundred and two dollars and ninety cents ($602.90) and interests, and the taxes if any, on said premises and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

The largest tree in the state of New Jersey is a white oak, situated three miles north of Mickelton, Gloucester county. Its dimensions are: Height, 95 feet; diameter of trunk, three feet above the ground, 7 feet 10 inches, and spread of branches, 118 feet. This tree antedates the settlement of the colony.

Since the supply of brains is not equal to the demand, the price of brains has gone up. The president of the new steel corporation is reported to receive a million-dollar salary. Twenty years ago he began work for Mr. Carnegie at thirty dollars a month. Today, at the age of 39, he has outstripped every other wage-worker in the world.

Material from the excavations at Copan, in Honduras, is steadily accumulating at the Peabody museum, Cambridge, Mass. The museum has been able to complete in this prehistoric city its investigations of the great hieroglyphic stairway on the face of the pyramid. Molds have been made of all of the steps, with their carvings and inscriptions.

The German papers state that during the last year the exports from the United States to the Argetine Republic have increased 39 per cent, as compared with the figures of the preceding year. This gives America second place among the countries which do export business into Argentine, while the German Empire has passed down to the fourth place. England stands first.

Cremation is becoming increasingly popular in Paris, and the crematorium erected at the cemetery of Pere La Chaise has already been found to be too small. Additions are being made, and a third furnace, a large hall, and a columbarium will soon be ready for use. The last-named will contain 10,000 receptacles for ashes. These niches are closed with slabs of marble, on which inscriptions may be cut.

It is said that a telephone system, using common barbwire fences as a conductor of the voice of its patrons, has been placed in use in Pullman, Wash., conversation being held over this as easily as any long-distance telephone line. The line runs from a hotel in Pullman to a farm nine miles south of the town and it was placed in operation by several farmers for their private use. The entire line, nine miles in length, with four telephones, cost less than $100.

The forestry division of the agricultural department is engaged in drafting a working plan looking to the conservation of the timber on a tract of 300,000 acres in the neighborhood of Millinocket, Me., belonging to a private paper corporation. It is a part of a general policy to be inaugurated by the department for the conservation of timber land throughout the United States to secure a perpetual crop of timber in the various areas under consideration. The private concern will pay all expenses of the work save the salaries of the government experts, who are directed by Prof. Gifford Pinchot, chief of the division.

An incident which reflects great credit on the labor organization of the country occurred at the late convention of the American Federation of Labor in Louisville, Ky. The National Liquor Dealers' association came before the convention with a formal proposal that the two bodies form an offensive and defensive alliance. The liquor dealers were ready to agree, in the event of this coalition, to employ only union bartenders and waiters, and to sell union-made beer. For a time it looked as if they might persuade the labor men, but a delegate from Illinois arose, and in a stirring speech recalled the influence of Miss Frances E. Willard on behalf of organized labor, and urged the convention in her name to reject the proposition. When the vote was taken its was almost unanimously against the alliance. The Knights of Labor have also taken the same ground—a course which will add more strength to the organization than would be a million dollars in its treasury.

To abate the advertising nuisance—advertisements which are in themselves obnoxious or which are displayed in unsuitable places—legislation is not always necessary. Such action as that recently taken by the Bill-Posters' association of England is quite as effective. A theatrical manager perpetrated a sensational and vulgar poster. The bill-posters refused to put it up. Here is foundation for the hope that one day all public-spirited citizens will decline to use paint-pot and brush to disfigure the beauties of nature.

A German army surgeon has been calculating the cost of an artificial man—so far as he can be artificial and live. He has under his care an old artilleryman, who retains little of his original body but a trunk and half a face. For £35 one may get a pair of arms and hands, while legs would run to about £22. A false nose is rather expensive, costing from £18 to £20. In short, one could replace all of himself for about £120, including a good—though not serviceable—pair of artificial eyes.

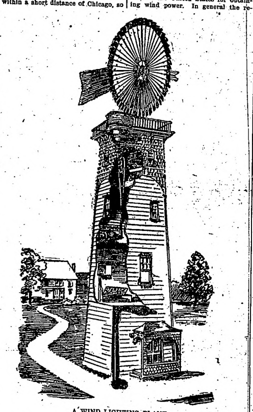
USE OF WIND WHEELS

A Handy Power That Costs But Little.

Wind wheels have been in use for a thousand years. The ponderous and unwieldy old-world wind wheel has given place to the compact snug wheel of Yankee manufacture, just as the old-time water wheel has been displaced by the turbine. The old-fashioned wind wheel, like its contemporary paddle or bucket water wheel, had to be built where it was to be used; while the new wind wheels, like the turbines, can be readily transported to any desired location. It is undoubtedly the handiness of the American wind wheel which has so strongly recommended the machine to the agricultural class, for it is that class which at present is its chief user.

It will not be far out of the way to estimate the number of wheels in the United States at upward of 600,000. These wheels are, however, in the main so small and unobtrusive, and we have become so accustomed to seeing them that they are hardly noticed unless displayed in unusually conspicuous places.

There have been about one hundred firms engaged in the manufacture of wind wheels in the United States, and two-thirds of these have been located within a short distance of Chicago, so that that city must be looked upon as the center of the wind wheel trade. (Perhaps this fact has in some measure contributed toward the establishment on a permanent basis of the appellation "Windy City" as applied to Chicago.)



A WIND LIGHTING PLANT.

The use of the wind machine as a motor is, however, still in its infancy. There can be little doubt that the wind will become the prime motive power of the future, not only for all kinds of work to be done in rural districts, but also in the cities for such work as requires but a moderate expenditure of power.

Work which does not require any definite time for its accomplishment, such as wood-sawing, pumping water, grinding grain and cutting feed, is now accomplished by the wind wheel, and it only needs the invention of some convenient means of storing up the energy of the wind, so that the power derived from it may be available at any time, to make it a universal labor-saver. It is most probable that the conserving of wind power will take place through the use of storage batteries, and its transmission will occur electrically. The use of wind power in compressing air and storing the latter for future use also offers great possibilities. The simplest way to secure this power will be to mount small wind wheels above the roofs of houses, each house with a wheel of a size sufficient to meet its needs. It would indeed at first be a strange sight to see thousands of whirligig wheels on the roofs of a city, but after the novelty has worn away we should not mind them any more than we do the rows of chimneys which exist at the present time.

There is no reason to doubt that in the course of time there will be erected great machines which shall collect the wind power in such quantities as will allow its transmission from central power houses, as at present accomplished by other sources of energy. Or wheels may be set up at regular intervals and each be expected to contribute power enough to operate a plant within a certain precinct.

We can very readily calculate just what wind power is available over any chosen area and within the limits of any designated height. The difficulties to be encountered and overcome in making use of this energy are purely mechanical ones. Two problems come up for solution:

First—To construct a machine which will transmit the energy of the moving air with least loss of power. The ingenuity of the American inventor has been fully exercised in the addition of such improvements to wind wheels as shall reduce to the minimum the loss of power in their operation. Notwithstanding these efforts, there is still much room for improvement, for it is conceded that even with the best wheels, a large percentage of the available power is lost.

Second—To construct the machine of such dimensions and place it in such a position that it will produce the desired power. In order to do this it is necessary to know how much wind actually exists in different localities, and also how much power is developed by winds of different velocities.

There are two ways of stating the strength of the wind. We can either say the wind preses on a surface with a force of so many pounds per square foot of surface; or we can say that the wind blows a certain number of miles per hour; that is, the air is moving so many miles an hour. The wind force or wind pressure varies with this wind velocity.

The inland winds are much stronger on the great plains than in any other section. In Kansas and Nebraska the winds are nearly twice as strong as in the Ohio River valley. These velocities refer to the winds as experienced on the tops of houses in a city, or twenty-five feet above the ground in unsheltered positions in open fields.

All countries are not as well situated as the United States for obtaining wind power. In general the regions between the latitudes 30 deg. and 55 deg. present the most desirable wind power.—Boston Herald.

INVENTED THE GOLF BALL.

When Gutta Percha Was Substituted for Incased Feathers.

We have received the folowing interesting communication, says the Pall Mall Gazette, from W. Dalrymple, Fernlea, Leven, Fife: There is a slight error in a little paragraph in your issue of the 14th which you may or may not consider worth correction because it is really of interest to golfers almost entirely. You mention that a retired Musselburgh watchmaker, aged 87, claims to have been one of the inventors of the "gutta" ball and to have made and played with one over Musselburgh links in 1847. This claim to invention is believed to be ill-founded. Among Scottish golfers, at all events, it has, seemingly, been agreed to admit that the invention was shrouded in mystery, but that publication to the golfing world was made by either Campbell of Saddell or Tom Peter in 1848. It was not, in fact, till November of last year that the true inventor was known—Rev. Principal Paterson, of the Binghamton Ladies' College, New York state. It was while a schoolboy at St. Andrew's, Scotland, in 1845, that he first rolled a lot of gutta-percha clippings, which were used in his father's business, into a ball, painted it and used it on the links. The ball invariably lost color and cracked and was subsequently improved by his brother in Edinburgh, who sent several dozens over to St. Andrew's stamped "Patterson's Composite Golf Ball." Some of these lay for sale in the local booksellers' windows till dusted out, when they were brought to the notice of Stewart, custodian of the "Union Parlor"—subsequently developed into what is now known as the Royal and Ancient Golf Club—and in Allan's employment as a stuffer of feather balls. Recent correspondence between the principal and old Tom tells that the die was cast then and there and the old "feather" doomed. It was, as a matter of fact, over the new ball that Allan and old Tom severed business ties; though, as old Tom prettily puts it, "we never quarreled, but were aye the best o' friends to the very last." This was on the eve of young Paterson's departure for the states and he never heard much about his venture till the golf craze "struck" America forty years later. It would seem that priority properly falls to the St. Andrew's man.

How the Spring Came to Pierrot

By Bliss Carman

Look, love, how the woods are all misty
With purple and gray!
And the soft mellow wind has a touch
Of enchantment today.

There is rain in the air, and a magic Unloosing of bonds—
A glad putting forth of new life,
An unfolding of fronds.

Whence come these old exquisite ardors
In crimson and green,
That walk through the valley and quicken
The life that has been?

Whence come these old exquisite fervors
In yellow and blue,
That touch the frail flowers, and waken
Their beauty anew?

Whence come these old passionate raptures
In whistle and trill,
That open the gates of the morning
By meadow and hill?

Whence come to the house of the spirit
Love, daring, desire,
To knock at the door—bid the inmate
Awake and aspire?

My heart never questions a moment
What April may bring,
But only cries, after long patience,
"Pierrot, it is Spring!"

Etiquette of the Sick Room.

In the sick room try to keep the conversation as much as possible on other subjects besides the illness of the patient. Avoid speaking of the illness of anyone. What you say to the sick one should be something cheerful, and how much better and brighter the patient seems. Never tell anyone that they look "so ill," no matter what you think, for such remarks have a depressing effect on the patient and surely does nobody any good. A bright, cheerful, jovial, happy, hopeful person entering a sick room is like the rays of the morning sun shining on a drooping plant. The effect is electrical and the patient is at least temporarily lifted a step forward to a quick recovery.

Railway to Mecca Proposed.

The Mohammedans want a better way to Mecca. They desire to go there by railway, and for that purpose have given the sultan $108,000 to be used in constructing a railroad.

A Captured Whale.

Some ten or twelve years ago a whale floundered into Oyster bay, just north of the Columbia river mouth, and in the state of Washington. The bay is shallow and there is a sand bar at the entrance to it; but the whale must have ridden in on a big wave. At any rate, the next morning perhaps the maddest whale in the world was charging up and down the bay, running its nose into the sand and furiously spouting water and mud like a geyser and evidently determined to get back to the Pacific ocean at any cost. For weeks the gigantic creature raced up and down the bay like a big fish in a small tub of water. The railroads ran excursions to the scene, and the captive animal drew a larger crowd than a whole circus. At last a great storm came, and when it departed the whale went with it. So the railroads declared an extra dividend, and the people [illegible]

FARM AND GARDEN

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Fruit Trees for Profit.

From Farmers' Review: It is out of very great importance that we buy the right kind of trees if we would secure profit to the planter. Some ten years ago we bought 50 pear trees. Half of them have died since that time and nearly all have blighted badly. One, a Duchess de Angelyn, planted near the south door of the kitchen, has never blighted, and is the only one of several Duchesses that has done any good. Last year it was heavily loaded with large luscious pears. Two years after it was planted we concluded to put a porch over the door and to the west of it. Not wishing to dig it up we left one board short in the floor so that it would not be disturbed. The top leaned to the south and away from the porch. Some predicted that it would do no good there; but it has never been affected with blight or sun scald. The tree leaned enough to the south so that the leaves protected the body from the sun. Each spring it is laden with heavy clusters of blossoms as beautiful as white roses, and its glossy green leaves during summer make a fine shade.

The Keiffer pear trees have also blighted badly and some have died; but more are living than of any other kind. They have also borne more fruit than all the other kinds put together. This, however, amounts to only about four bushels all told. But they are only now old enough to bear good crops. We hope that people now living will yet get something from them. It has been said that the Lincolns never blight, and ours did not for several years. But last year they blighted badly—fully as badly as any other pear trees. We have taken pains to cut off the blighted portions two or three times during the summer. They blighted worse during May and June when the young twigs are tender. The winter Bartletts and Idahos all blighted and died out in two years or so.

Apple Trees—Many of our apple trees turn out to be inferior fruit, some good for nothing. Other trees bear fall fruit, when we ordered winter fruit trees. This makes our orchard almost a failure. Ours is not the only orchard that turns out so. Almost every one that has put out an orchard will tell of their failure to get the kind of trees they had ordered. Possibly one reason for the failure is that apples that are winter apples in one locality are fall apples in another so that anyone, contemplating putting out trees should inquire of neighbors who have bearing orchards what kinds are giving satisfaction. If possible buy only from nurseries direct. What is better is to go to the nurseries and get the varieties you want. There is no use paying high prices to agents for trees that they claim are superior to the trees of other agents. We have bought trees from such men paying fancy prices for them, and found that they were in no way superior to the trees we might have purchased at a lower price.

Peach Trees—There are so many kinds of peach trees that it is very difficult to know what to buy. At first we bought 35 different kinds, but later discarded many of them. Possibly the ones that proved worthless with us would do well in other states or even in other parts of this state. The early and late Crawfords, Susquehanna, Washington Cling, Levy Late, or Henrietta Foster and some others bear no fruit worth the name, though we had many hundred trees. But Crosby and Champion always bear when any peach trees have fruit on them. Crosby overbears and needs much thinning. Champions have generally just enough or need some thinning. Elberta is a fine looking tree, but bears little fruit for us, and that little rots more than does the fruit of some of the other trees. We have discarded them, yet others tell us that they do well in some other parts of the country. For profit neither too early nor very late peaches pay so well as those ripening in August and September, except a few trees for table use. By getting a few of the very earliest and very latest we prolong the peach season to four and a half months. Peaches are exceedingly healthful fruit, after one gets use to eating them.

In buying peach trees it is very difficult to get them true to name. It is very provoking, when one has cared for, trimmed and cultivated trees for years, to find them Crawfords instead of some better fruit. Some of them even do not bear any peaches. And the trees are about as worthless that bear big crops of early peaches that rot as soon as they are off the trees. We find that the best way to avoid this condition of affairs is to bud them ourselves from bearing trees. Then we know we get the kind we want. The next best thing is to get them from nurseries known to be reliable. There are men engaged in the nursery business that will sell only fruit trees that are true to name. Character is worth something in a nurseryman as well as elsewhere.—Mrs. L. C. Axtell, Warren County, Illinois.

Peat Bog Pasture and Meadow.

From Farmers' Review: The utility and great value of a peat bog in a large pasture for cattle are not generally understood. I have noticed numerous such bogs in my travels by rail and wagon. Often they are surface ditched until a fall of 5 feet to the mile is obtained. Cattle will tramp the ditch bottom in hot weather to cool their feet and muddy their tails to switch flies. They will so tramp its bottom that the next strong shower will carry off the loosened soil until hard-pan or hard rock is reached. Retramping will make pits in the stream, which soon become little waterfalls and later large ones, until the recoil of falling water undermines the water course. Bog pasture has much alluvial deposit among its peat, producing a fodder that is astringent and that will counteract any acrid plants that may grow in the pasture. [illegible] barn use where bran is fed plentifully cannot be equaled for fibrous growth, especially for growing animals. To be profitable such hay must be cut before it is done growing. It will then be eaten clean. If allowed to reach full maturity its value is lessened. If it be cut in its most vigorous growth, the roots will still be active and will soon cover the soil again with sweet new grass, which will catch the moisture that comes up from below, keep the sun from scorching the roots and make an aftermath big enough to mow.

When a young man on my father's farm, I was employed with a team to draw clay from a large cowyard which contained much latent clover seed, and spread it thinly over a peat field, to make what we called a "cow hospital." Here were kept such cows of a nervous temperament as were troubled with dysentery. When they were considered cured of their trouble and their usual flow of milk was restored, they were returned to the herd, clean, lively and with hair glossy curled by cow licks. Farming now in Iowa we get the same results from similar sources. We have enlarged our pastures with the above results in hay and grass. In times of drouth they are extra good, the bog sponge supplying moisture all the summer, if never allowed to be "bare bottom" or cut late to let the sunshine dry the grass roots.—Richard Baker, Jr.

Crop Conditions.

Government crop reports state that there have been heavy precipitations of either rain or snow which have furnished an abundance of moisture in all parts of the United States save central and western Texas, where rain is much needed. These precipitations coupled with cold weather have considerably delayed spring work.

But little progress with corn planting has been made since the first of the month, except in the extreme southern districts, where it is nearing completion in some sections. Slow germination and poor stands are generally reported from the southern states.

A general improvement in the condition of winter wheat is reported, except in portions of Ohio, Illinois, Oklahoma, and Texas, where damage by insects is more or less apparent, the last named state reporting unfavorable effects of drought. On the Pacific coast the outlook for winter wheat continues promising, but the crop needs rain over a large part of California. Some spring wheat has been sown in portions of Iowa, Nebraska and southern Minnesota, but none has yet been sown in the Red River valley.

Oats seeding is well advanced as far north as the Ohio valley, and some seeding has been done in Nebraska. In the east gulf and south Atlantic districts the outlook is promising, but the crop is being injured by drought and insects in Texas.

Reports of fruit prospects are favorable, except from California, where severe frosts have injured grapes and other fruits in the northern and central portions of the state.

Glass Test of Paris Green.

A very simple test, which will enable one to distinguish a good proportion of adulterated samples at once, including many of those not detectable with ammonia, is to take a very small portion of Paris green—what one could easily pick up on the point of a penknife—place this upon a piece of glass at an angle; jarring the lower edge will cause the little pile of green to move down the inclined surface, leaving behind it a bright green track, if the sample is pure; but in the case of many adulterated or impure samples, the track would be white or pale green * * * The glass test is particularly useful in comparing a number of samples, and after one has acquired some experience it becomes quite reliable. It does not enable one to detect the recent forms of arsenic adulterations, and, like the ammonia test, should never be considered as conclusive evidence of purity.

Ammonia Test of Paris Green.

Paris green dissolves freely and wholly in ammonia, becoming a beautiful blue liquid; while a majority of the substances formerly used in adulterating Paris green are insoluble. This, therefore, is a very ready means of recognizing most of the crude forms of adulteration. If upon treatment with ammonia any of the material fails to dissolve, the same is adulterated. This test, however, is not conclusive, since white arsenic and a number of other substances used in adulterating Paris green, especially in these later years, are soluble in ammonia and would escape detection if this method alone were depended on. Ammonia then affords valid grounds for rejecting a sample if any portion of it is insoluble; but other means must be used to be sure of its purity, even if apparently pure by this test.

The co-operative creamery has this advantage over the individual creamery, that it scatters the profits among many homes. It has this disadvantage, that it is many-headed and frequently collapses on account of friction among its many owners. Co-operation is something of an art and frequently has to be learned by severe lessons.

Care of the Feet.

It is quite easy to tell if your feet are the proper size. Every person, unless deformed, has a bone of the exact normal length of the foot, and by comparison the largeness or smallness of the foot can be seen. The foot in length should be the length of ulna, a bone in the forearm which extends from a lump in the outer portion of the wrist to the elbow. Of course, the ulna is longer in tall people, and so to be graceful the foot should be the same. Most people would be surprised to hear that the foot should be as long as the forearm, and would be inclined to dispute the fact unless proved by experience. Large women pinch their feet in tight shoes because they are ashamed to have them in proportion to their bodies. Thus in time they deform them until they are out of all proportion to the body, and sometimes in the direction they do not [illegible]

OUR GIANT FATHERS.

HOW TALL WERE MEN OF ANCIENT TIMES?

One Authority Figures Out That Adam Was a Man 123 Feet in Height, Eve 118 Feet—Proof of Man's Decline in Stature.

At various times within the last century assertions have been made that Adam and the antediluvian people were of extraordinary height, but the assertions have always been laughed down by scoffers who never think for themselves. In 1718 Henrion, a member of the French Academy of Sciences, published a pamphlet in which he asserted that these personages of the Bible were of the following height: Adam, 123 feet 9 inches; Eve, 118 feet 9 inches; Noah, 27 feet, Abram, 20 feet, and Moses, 13 feet. I, too, said a scientific student of the Bible, in speaking of this matter recently, am confirmed in the belief that the prehistoric races were gigantic, but figure out their statures, by a process of reasoning different from that promulgated by Henrion. According to the Old Testament "there were giants on earth in those days whose daughters were married to the sons of God, and whose sons became mighty men. Also, the sons of Anak, in whose sight men were said to be but grasshoppers. (Grasshoppers of that period were as large as the twentieth century dog.) The Emmins and Zamzumnains were giant nations. Og, the king of Bashan, remained of the remnant of giants; Goliath, of Gath, was a giant." According to Genesis, Noah lived 950 years and then died. The average life of man today is about 70 years. It is a well defined rule in nature that animals, bipeds and quadrupeds live about three and one-half times the number of years required for individual maturity. Thus man in this century matures in twenty years and dies at the age of 70 years. Dividing the age of Noah by three and one-half we find that he matured in about 270 years. The average man of today at maturity measures about 5 feet and weighs 125 pounds. Five feet in twenty years is equivalent to 3 inches in one year. Applying the same rule to Noah's maturing years, we find that at his maturity he was 67 feet tall and weighed 1,375 pounds. It stands to reason that if Noah was so great in body, Adam must have been equally as large. The mere fact that Adam was never born evidences that he was a gigantic man. Everything created during the formation ages was according to a very large standard. The trees were sky-scrapers, the animals immense and all other things in proportion. Why should Adam have been a freak in this array of colossal nature? Civilization and multiplication of the races diminish the lives of individuals as well as the statures. Why? Possibly because our civilization is an unnatural perversion of the life contemplated by our Creator for us, and as free agents we are gradually destroying the race as a penalty for our wrong interpretation of our mission. The power to multiply having been given us, death is a natural consequence, but death by natural decay, instead of death by disease, crime, war, pestilence, results of civilization, was contemplated. Hence our civilization and all other civilizations are more or less responsible for the inevitable extinction of the race. A curious mathematical coincidence lay in the above proof of man's decline in stature and age. Thus the stature of man in a few more than 6,000 years, according to Hale's chronology being the age of the human race, and according to my deductions, has decreased from 65 to 5 feet, at which rate of decrease the world will be depopulated in 461 years, or the year 2362. The age of man has likewise decreased from 900 to 70 years in the same time, at which rate the race will become extinct in about 461 years, or the year 2362. As you observe, both deductions reach the same conclusion. There may be an element of truth in this theory, at least it is worth probing. The great trouble with us today is that we are too easily satisfied; we lack the ability and energy to "figure out" or "search for evidences of truth," and instead, accept all kinds of theories and dogmas as they are presented to us, surrounded mostly by a halo of fanaticism, impossible and absurd.

Unreasoning Instinct.

A writer, F. A. Coward, in the Zoologist gives the following experience as evidence of unreasoning instinct in the hare: He and a friend observed a number of variable hares (Lepus timidus, Linn.) on the moors in Longdendale, Cheshire. The weather was mild and there was but a single patch of snow. The hares were still in their white winter pelage. They were squatting at the entrance to holes among the stones or under the shelter of overhanging rocks, and upon Mr. Coward's approach remained perfectly still, evidently instructively trusting to their protective coloration, which, however, in the absence of snow made them very conspicuous objects. Mr. Coward says: "If it were possible for the hares to reason, it must be evident that they would be conscious that their color was not in harmony with their surroundings, but it seems perfectly plain that they had been taught by heredity that their safety depended upon their remaining perfectly still, and they had no idea of any change of conditions."

A Curious Trade.

The custom abroad of placing feminine boots and shoes outside the bedroom for the porter's tender ministration, so severely criticised by Americans, who are accustomed to seeing much smaller sizes on their women folks, has led to a curious trade in Paris, by which woman's vanity is quaintly illustrated. It appears that ladies with large feet, when staying at hotels nowadays, carry with them a couple of pairs of tiny shoes, which, instead of the ones they wear, they place outside their doors for the servants to take away and clean. All the big boot and shoe shops in Paris now make a specialty of these tiny footwear.

A Mountain Maid

AND THE MOONSHINE WHISKY WHICH SHE SOLD.

When Ellen Hignite, a mountain girl from Clay county, Ky., was put on trial in Louisville before the United States District court recently on the charge of selling illicit whisky, she was not left alone in her trouble, says the Chicago Tribune. By the side of the shrinking little mountain maid sat Miss Alice Castleman, one of the proudest beauties of Kentucky, the belle of the New York horse show two years ago, and one of the handsomest women in the south. Miss Castleman and her mother had heard of the mountain girl's sad story and they went to her help because they believed that she was the victim of spite and persecution, and that while she had disobeyed the revenue laws and sold illicit whisky as charged, still, she had done it only to save her mother and baby sister from starving. So when the case of the "People vs. Hignite" was called the court room held a notable crowd. Around the mountain girl sat Miss Castleman and her mother, Mrs. Samuel A. Miller, Mrs. Basil Duke, and other society leaders of Louisville. Gen. John B. Castleman and Gen. Basil Duke, two of the most renowned soldiers of Kentucky, who during the long years of the rebellion wore with distinguished honor the uniforms of gray and who a quarter of a century later wore with no less honor the old army blue of the Union in the war of a reunited country against a foreign foe, had come into the court to testify in the little prisoner's behalf. The story began with the breaking out of a feud between the Hignite family and the moonshiners of Letcher county. The Hignites refused to make illicit whisky themselves or deal in it. Their neighbors declared that some of the Hignite boys were spies of the government. One night Gob Hignite was killed while going home to his cabin. Old man Hignite and his other two boys went out to avenge the murder and all were killed. The night after they were buried the little log cabin of the Hignites was burned to the ground and Mrs. Hignite and her baby and her 17-year-old daughter, Ellen, fled to the woods for refuge. The next morning when they returned to the ruins of their smoking cabin they found a notice tacked on a tree. The notice read:

"Ef you 'uns go an' don' mek no mo' fuss we 'uns won't do no mo' to yo' all."

The terrified mother took her children and fled through the mountains towards Clay county, where her people lived. For three weeks they wandered through the mountains. Then they sank down in the ruins of an old hut. They could go no further. All through the night the baby moaned for food. It was easy to see that its little life could not last much longer. In the morning Ellen staggered out of the hut door.

"Ellen," called her mother, "come back! We're a-starvin', but we're Hignites to th' end, and we ain't a-goin' to ask favors of anyone."

"I hain't a-goin' ter ask favors," said Ellen, "but I'm goin' to get you all suthin' to eat."

The girl went blindly down a trail that she recognized. It led her straight to Jim Clark's moonshine still. Then for weeks Ellen Hignite peddled moonshine whisky for Jim Clark. The story spread all around in the mountains and the people came for miles to buy whisky from old Bob Hignite's girl, the "prettiest gal in Kaintucky." Jim Clark's still couldn't keep up with the demand and Jim Clark fairly coined money and grew fat laughing at the bargain he'd made. A few days later a federal marshal started from Louisville for Clay county, and in his pocket was a warrant for the arrest of Ellen Hignite on the charge of selling liquor without a government license. The girl heard the marshal was coming, but she did not run away. "I sold licker," she said. "I sold it to save ma and the baby from a-starvin'. But I'm a Hignite, and I run from nobody." The next day she was arrested. Jim Clark got away.

Rapid Postal Service in Berlin.

That the postal service of Berlin has long been the model (as yet unattainable) for the rest of Europe is well known. But it is not equally matter of common knowledge that the excellence of the Berlin postal arrangements of yesterday no longer satisfies the postal authorities of today. The latest innovation has been a still more frequent clearing of the letter boxes and a more rapid delivery than ever. The letter boxes in the principal thoroughfares are now cleared every fifteen minutes during the busy hours of the day. The rapidity of delivery of letters recently resulted in the saving of a human life. A girl determined to commit suicide, wrote to her parents of her intention and posted the letter, which was delivered within an hour of being posted. This enabled the father to hurry off in a cab to the spot in the Thiergarten which his daughter had mentioned as that where her body would be found, to catch her alive, box her ears and take her home.—Harper's Magazine.

RUNNING DOWN WHALES

Collision Between Them and Ships of Frequent Occurrence.

Between the islands paralleling the coast of southern California and the mainland there extends a deep channel where several kinds of whales may be found feeding on the vast schools of jelly fishes which are nearly always present. The whale most common is the California gray, which goes every year to the shallows of the Gulf of California to give birth to its young, then moving north along the California coast in what is virtually a great procession. At this time the channel is the sporting ground for the huge animals, and nearly every steamer that crosses sights a school, the scenes forming one of the attractions of the trip, as the whales, far from being wild or timid, sometimes evince a playful mood, or, incited by curiosity, come near the steamer, affording the passengers a near view of the largest of living animals.

This social disposition has resulted in several encounters between the whales and vessels, in which the former have always come off second best. Some years ago a steamer on the trip from San Pedro to San Francisco struck some body, supposed at first to be a log. Several of the men were thrown to the deck; the wheel turned so violently that the helmsman was also thrown down, and steamer for a moment came to a standstill. All hands were called, the pumps sounded, and as the mate ran aft he saw a large whale lashing the water astern. The vessel had struck it directly back of the right paddle and evidently crushed it down, rising over it. This whale drifted into San Catalina some days later, and was towed into one of the little bays of the coast, where it was cut up by the fishermen.

During the summer of 1900 the steamer Hermosa killed a whale off San Pedro, which was at least 80 feet in length. The steamer was plowing along at a rate of 12 miles an hour when suddenly a large whale rose to spout directly in front of her, placing itself inadvertently across the bows, so that the blow was struck fairly. The shock created a sensation on board, and the blow was so violent that several people were thrown from their feet. It was supposed that the vessel had struck a rock; she stopped for a few seconds, trembled, then rose about three feet, heeling slightly, then resumed her course, passing through a mass of blood which colored the water, showing that she had plunged into some large animal. A dead whale was sighted two or three days later, and for several days, on account of its size, it drifted up and down the coast with the tide, defying the efforts of speculative fishermen to secure it. Finally a heavy sea tossed it on the coast at the resort of Redondo, where it was hauled in at high tide and when the latter went out it left a remarkable spectacle in the remains of one of the largest of living animals. A long wound told the story of its contact with the steamer.

Doubtless if the records of shipping disasters were examined many instances would be found where vessels has crashed into whales with results fatal to the animals and more or less injurious to the vessels.

Why He Lost Faith in Wall Street.

Col. Edward C. James, the distinguished New York lawyer, who died recently, once had an experience with the firm of Grant & Ward which accounted for his occasional cynical remarks about Wall street methods as he had found them. After 14 years of successful law practice in the northern part of this state, right after the war, Col. James collected all his funds, amounting to about $200,000, and turned them over to the firm of Grant & Ward, then at the height of its popularity. When he decided to draw out his money Ferdinand Ward drew a check for $400,000, payable to his order, with the remark that the additional $200,000 represented Col. James' profits. This was evidently too good an investment to break up, so the colonel said that he would gladly leave his money to pile up more profits at the same rate. Two days later the firm failed with a crash that shook the country and Col. James found that he had lost his money, and that the offer of the $400,000 check was simply a cool bluff to stave off his claim. Fortunately he had his law practice to fall back on.

Milwaukee Dog Uses Decoy.

A man over in Juneau avenue, Milwaukee, near the German market, has a dog which he is anxious to give away, notwithstanding it is a "pet" among the "small fry" of his household. This canine is of the Scotch-terrier breed, and has a predilection for fighting. He resorts to strategem to get up a row. His latest plan is to obtain a juicy bone, from one of the butcher stalls over in the market. Then he takes his place upon the pavement, and watches. When he sees a country dog following a farmer's wagon, he sizes him up, and if the symptoms are favorable he picks up his bone, carries it into the street, places it in the line of travel, goes back to the sidewalk, places his head between his front paws, and waits developments. If the strange dog tackles the bone, as it certainly will, the city dog springs out, grabs him by the back of the neck and nearly shakes the life out of him. Then when the farmer and the stallkeepers have succeeded in separating the combatants, the Scotch terrier awaits until the excitement has passed away, and then sets his bone in position to catch the next unsuspecting canine that intrudes upon his preserves. And yet they say that dogs do not think!—Chicago Journal.

Even Smoking is Barred.

Concord, Neb., has elected a mayor and council pledged to run the city as Carrie Nation would advise. Drinking and smoking on the streets are to be punished as misdemeanors, and all theatrical performances are to be forbidden.

Cremation's Phases

WAYS IN WHICH PEOPLE DISPOSE OF DEAD.

People who take to cremation seem to have a fondness for having their ashes scattered to the winds. There was the first man who was cremated in this country. That is to say, the first in recent times. Toward the end of the eighteenth century a southerner by the name of Lawrence left a request to be cremated. His sons built a furnace especially, and the first cremation—not Indian—took place on American soil. But in 1876 Baron von Palm was cremated in Dr. Lemoyne's private crematory at Washington, Pa., and his ashes were scattered upon the Hudson river. Then there was Ernest Rosin, who, in 1897, stood on the Eads bridge over the Mississippi and poured his father's ashes into the stream below. In both cases the dead men had asked to be thus thrown adrift. It is said that Joaquin Miller has made a similar request. Another case of the same kind was that of William Petersen Appleby, an officer in the Mexican and the civil wars. His body was cremated at Fresh Pond, in 1898, and the widow took the ashes to her home in Hempstead. Her husband had asked her to scatter them abroad on the first windy day after his cremation. She waited until a gale was blowing, and then, in the presence of some of her husband's friends, held the ashes out by handfuls and let the wind whirl them away. At Bromberg, Germany, in 1897, the ashes of one Robert Arons were sold at public auction for $3.75. The purchaser was not a member of the dead man's family. The records stop short there, and one is left guessing who wanted the ashes badly enough to pay $3.75 for them. It would seem, too, that there must have been more than one bidder, for $3.75 would hardly have been offered as a starter. The remains of Abbie Sage Richardson, the writer, who died in Italy, were brought to this country to be cremated. They were incinerated at Fresh Pond. Her brother died from the shock and was cremated on the following day. Kate Field's body was also brought home to be burned. She died in the Sandwich islands and was buried there. It was a long time before her friends got the money together to bring the remains to this country, but it was finally done. They were cremated at San Francisco. Mrs. Whitney, to whose efforts the carrying out of Miss Field's wishes was due, brought the ashes from San Francisco to Boston in a handbag filled with flowers. The ashes were finally buried at Mt. Auburn, beside the grave of Miss Field's mother. Emma Abbott, the singer, was cremated at the Washington crematory. An interesting item about this case is the costliness of the gown in which the body was burned. It was an imported gown of silver and gold brocade, and the papers of that date placed its cost at $5,000. That may have been a trifle high, but the gown was certainly worth a great deal. A peculiar case was that of J. Z. Davis and his wife. Davis was a California millionaire. The wife died first. She was cremated and the husband put her ashes in a box twice the usual size, because he intended to have his own mingled with his wife's when he should die in his turn. When he did die it was in Philadelphia, and the undertaker's first orders were to embalm the body. He had no sooner embalmed it than he received orders by telegraph to cremate it. So he cremated it. Then he was instructed to send on the ashes, but this he declined to do until his bill for embalming and cremating had been settled. In the meantime trouble over the dead man's will had broken out in California and nobody was paying bills just then. So a peculiar state of affairs came to pass. The urn with the wife's ashes—which rattled lonesomely around in their ample receptacle—was produced as evidence in court, while the husband's ashes were held in Philadelphia as security for an undertaker's bill. Apropos of California cremations, there was that of Durant, the young murderer. The crematories in San Francisco were so squeamish that they refused to burn the body, and the father had to take it to Pasadena. The medical men of the state had been keenly interested in the young man and were anxious to have the brain for examination. The family was determined that they should not get it. So the father did not let the coffin out of his sight until he saw it placed in the retort of the Pasadena crematory.—New York Sun.

BATTLE TO THE DEATH

Doctor and Monster St. Bernard Dog Have a Thrilling Fight.

A fight to the death with a maddened St. Bernard dog weighing 200 pounds, was the experience of Dr. Robert J. Kingston, of Newburg, N. Y., the other day. In the morning while the doctor was lying in bed, the dog, which had been playing with the children down stairs, was suddenly seized with convulsions and dashed upstairs to the physician and the struggle for life began. Dr. Kingston realized that the animal was wholly uncontrollable, and that there was grave danger for other members of the family if it should escape and get down stairs again. Under this thought he lost sight of his own peril and devoted himself to preventing the beast from so doing. He succeeded in driving the frenzied animal into the bath room adjoining his apartment and closed the door. But in the act Dr. Kingston was forced to lock himself in as well, for the brute fought fiercely every step of the way.

Once the door was locked, Dr. Kingston began the battle for his own safety, fighting with grim desperation, for he knew that only by winning a complete victory would he be spared a fearful death. The physician is wiry, but not apparently a man of great strength, and for a time the struggle was an unequal one.

Time after time the dog buried his teeth in the fleshy part of the lower arm which the doctor used as a guard for his neck and face. Finally the animal was forced into a position whence he could not escape. With both hands clutching his windpipe, Dr. Kingston choked the breath out of the animal's body. The struggle had aroused the neighbors and several of them went to the doctor's assistance, but when they arrived the battle had been fought and won.

How to Shave Themselves

A School to Teach the Art Would be Welcomed by Many Men.

One idea with a mustard seed of merit in it will buy wealth for its owner. Here is one that may as well be tossed out in the street to be scrambled for by those who can make use of it, says a western writer. It is the founding of a school to teach men how to shave themselves. This accomplishment, like piety, is much admired in the abstract. All men, secretly or openly, take liberties with the razor in hand, with their own faces, but who is to show them how to strop that sensitive and easily disabled edge? And how are we, unskilled, to come triumphantly forth from an encounter with our steel, without mark or blemish that requires court plaster if not absorbent cotton? It is pleasing to sweep boldly over the level plain from the upper cheekbone to the maxillo mandibular region, but when we try to round Cape Horn, look out for squalls. Then there are men who pride themselves in their chin that would better have been in some pretty girl's cheek. Even the "safety" can exhibit no superiority over its old-fashioned predecessor when it comes to such holes; but a professor in the tonsile art could teach every man to be his own barber, if every man were so disposed. Indolence and lack of opportunity are responsible for masculine helplessness in this respect, two things also to blame for man's inability to swim. A school to teach the art of shaving to private individuals would be welcomed by a multitude of prospective patrons.

THE CHINESE SOIREE.

How to Drink Tea in the Land of the Pagoda.

When you call on a Chinaman who is able to have a servant, the first thing that the servant does is to bring in two cups of tea. He puts one in front of the master and one in front of the visitor. Then the master indicates that you shall drink from the cup before you. If you want to incur his everlasting enmity go ahead and drink. He merely asks you to drink it for politeness' sake. He does not want you to do it and expects you to refuse it for politeness' sake. Letting the tea stand in front of you, you proceed with your interview, and you are at liberty to continue it, or you do not feel that you are welcome until the host picks up his cup and takes a sip. That is the polite way he has of telling you that the interview is ended. The polite thing for you to do then is to take one sip of your tea and depart. The right to drink the first sip of tea, however, goes with rank. If the visitor outranks the host, [illegible] York [illegible]

The Steam Locomotive Doomed.

It is claimed that within a few years the electric motor will completely supplant the steam locomotive, and trains will then rush along at a speed of 100 miles an hour. To travelers this will prove a great blessing, but no more so than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, has proved a blessing to those who wish to regain their health quickly. The Bitters cure dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever and ague, also improves the appetite and purifies the blood.

END OF A CIRCUS CLOWN.

Death Came in a Slum Saloon as He Hummed "Garrowen"—Had Just Found Employment.

When the reporters went to investigate the death of one "John Costello," whom the police described as a "laborer," because he was poorly dressed, they found that the man had died in a saloon connected with Taylor's hotel, No. 2 Roosevelt street, and that he was an old-time circus man, since fallen on misfortune and bad habits. According to one of his cronies, his circus name was Dan Costello, and he was for many years one of the most popular clowns in Barnum's shows and in the shows that combined with Barnum's later on. Costello was sixty-five years old. He is said to have made a good deal of money in the circus business, but he lost it all. When he retired he went to New London, where he married a widow and opened a saloon. His friends say of him that he was too much of a "sport" himself and too good a "spender" to succeed in the saloon business, and it was not long before he had sunk all his money. He then came to New York, and for some years worked at odd jobs along the shore. Last night he went to F. O. Miller, of Forepaugh & Sell's circus, at Madison Square Garden, and told his story. Mr. Miller engaged him. Happy, Costello went to Taylor's hotel and took a seat in the bar room. Some of the people in the room heard him humming "Garryowen." One of them told of his death thus: "I heard him singing, but suddenly the tune died out, and I walked over to see what was the matter. Costello was sitting very still. I put my ear to his heart, and found that the machinery had stopped."—New York Post.

Sacred Lily's Alias.

Deception has even reached the disciples of Flora. There has lately been introduced into the market a bulb called "the sacred lily of the Nile." The name is sufficiently catchy to captivate lovers of flowers, and a friend of mine added the new flower to his conservatory. Time passed, and up came the plant, but when the "sacred lily of the Nile" appeared he found only an old, but still agreeable friend in the homely narcissus.—East Anglian Times.

DOUGLAS FACTORY

To Be Enlarged Before the First of July. Will Make 6,000 Pairs Daily.

Advertising pays.

W. L. Douglas is going to increase the capacity of his factory to 6,000 pairs of shoes per day. The addition will add 16,000 square feet of space for manufacturing purposes. At the same time a new 400 horse-power engine and an additional 150 horse-power boiler will be installed, which will afford adequate power for the present and another addition to the factory, which will no doubt be necessary later on.

When the factory starts up the first of July it will be on an output of 500 dozen or 6,000 pairs of shoes per day, and the weekly pay roll, exclusive of office help, superintendent, foremen, etc., will be $22,000 per week. The Douglas salesmen on the road are selling 25 per cent more goods than last season. The increased sales is the direct result of good shoemaking and extensive advertising. The advertising expenditure of Mr. Douglas is now larger than at any period of his business, and this is to be still further increased. Beginning this week half-page advertisements of the Douglas shoe will appear in all the principal newspapers of the large cities, as well as such papers as the Youth's Companion.—Brockton, Mass., Times.

WHERE LIFE IS PRIMITIVE.

Bride and Groom Had Never Seen a Steam Car.

There are plenty of places where life is very primitive. The Washington Star tells this story: "I witnessed a marriage the other day in which the bride and groom both live within fifty miles of Washington, yet neither has ever seen a steam or electric car," said a drummer to a Star reporter. "You will no doubt be surprised when I tell you there are hundredds of people living over in Virginia who have never been to town.' But to the marriage. During a recent trip one of the friends of the groom met me in a country store and cordially extended an invitation to take a drive across country to witness the 'hitchin'.' I very gladly availed myself of the opportunity, and we arrived at our destination in good time. The neighborhood was well represented, the male contingent being congregated in the barn, where a barrel of hard cider was on tap. We were soon notified that the ceremony was about to take place, and we all filed into the 'best' room. I shall never forget the appearance of the contracting parties. The groom was an undersized though powerfully built young fellow. He was dressed in a pair of jean overalls, a stiff shirt, no collar, a fancy, old-time vest, but no coat. The bride, who was at least six feet in height, was dressed in a calico wrapper, a piece of pink ribbon around her neck, a little old-fashioned bonnet on her head, but barefooted. After the ceremony the happy couple received the congratulations of the assembled company, every man and woman present kissing the bride. Pretty soon one of the guests brought out a violin and dancing was indulged in the rest of the evening. When I expressed my surprise that the bride should be barefooted I was told that there were lots of women in that section that had never known what it was to wear shoes."

DEVICE TO SCARE WOLVES.

Automatic Gun That Will Protect Sheep from Natural Enemies.

Examiners in the patent office have learned by experience that it is a mistake to jump at conclusions regarding the usefulness of inventions. A contrivance at which they were inclined to poke a good deal of fun, designed to frighten wolves on western prairies, was patented less than three months ago and already it has come into considerable use in the sheep-growing districts in that part of the country. The device is an automatic gun, which goes off at regular intervals, scaring the wolves away from the flocks. It consists of a sort of box which contains a clockwork attachment, with a small steel barrel projecting from one end. A magazine, also with the box, is loaded with blank cartridges, which are fired by the clockwork once in ten minutes or so. By the help of a simple mechanical attachment the intervals between the discharges are made as long or as short as may be desired. Wolves do not attack sheep in the daytime and the gun needs to be in operation only from sunset to sunrise. It is the period of lambing that the flocks are in danger, the fierce wolves raiding them and carrying off the lambkins, and hence the apparatus described is intended to be employed exclusively during that season. It may be that the wolf, which is a decidedly intelligent animal, may learn the deception after awhile and realize that the automatic gun has not a man behind it. In Russia it has been found that wolves are afraid of the humming of telegraph wires.—Presbyterian Banner.

FRESH-WATER SAILORS.

Their Lives on the Great Lakes Are Full of Danger.

"If any man thinks the American sailor is a thing of the past he should spend a while on the great lakes," said C. F. Bailey of Duluth, Minn. "The American fresh-water sailor is every bit as picturesque a personage as was the 'salt' of early days, who carried our merchant flag into every port of the world. His life is just as full of hardship and just as full of dangers," quotes the Washington Post. "There is a large fleet of three and four masted schooners on the lakes, and stories of the wrecking of them come with every big storm. A nastier body of water than Lake Erie when it comes on to blow can be found nowhere and some of the experiences of the life-saving crews along its shores are the most thrilling in the history of the service. The men who take the big steamers, of course, have not much of romance in their lives, but there are enough of the old sailing vessels left to keep a considerable army of men employed. Any skipper who can navigate a schooner from Duluth to Buffalo is a good enough sailor to sail around the world and he will do as well as the next man to take care of his vessel in the roughest sea the Atlantic ever was able to blow up."

Salt Water Fish.

The number of species of fishes living habitually in the salt waters of the world can only be approximately estimated, probably about ten thousand species. Those classed as "shore fishes" live, as a rule, close to the surface and near the land, and are well known to the salt water fishermen, such as the weakfish, striped bass, kingfish, etc. Of the shore fishes there are about four thousand species. The "pelagic fishes," or those which inhabit the upper waters of the seas, are relatively few in number. The "deep-sea fishes," which live in depths varying from two hundred fathoms to twenty-five hundred fathoms, cannot be even approximately estimated, as new species are being constantly discovered.—Field and Stream.

FLIES ON THE ADMIRAL'S HEAD.

Result of an Irishman's Attempt to Imitate a Negro in Catching Flies.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, in "A Sailor's Log," published by the Appletons, tells the following story:

"When the Rhode Island was his flag ship, Capt. Trenchard, who commanded, had a very accomplished steward, a colored man, who became so expert in catching flies off the captain's bald head that he never seemed annoyed by them. Admiral Lardner had for his steward a fine, large, heavy-handed Irishman, who watched the colored man with great envy, while his master, undisturbed, enjoyed his meals. Pat's master thrashed at the flies, and swore roundly as they lighted on his close-cropped hair. The colored man went on catching flies with quick, dextrous movements of his right hand, until Pat could stand it no longer. Drawing back, he made a vicious swing at a fly, but instead of catching it, he caught his master an awful blow on the back of the head. The captain, thinking there was a mutiny, grabbed the carving knife and made after Patrick, who retreated to the spar deck, and there was a hurdle race fore and aft—the officer of the deck and the orderly trying to catch the admiral, who was doing his best to put the carving knife in the back of Pat, who finally escaped, but never bothered any more about flies on the admiral's head."

A DOCTOR THIS TIME.

Portland, May 6th.—Dr. E. A. Rose, a practicing physician, formerly of Yates Center, Kans., was on what everyone supposed to be his death bed. He had Diabetes, and six of his brother doctors were in attendance and consultation at his bedside. They had done everything that medical skill could suggest to save his life, but they were at last reluctantly forced to tell him that he must prepare for death.

His aunt had been summoned to his dying bedside. After the doctors had given her nephew up, she insisted that, as a last resort, he be given a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

From the very first dose the tide turned in his favor. His life was saved, and he is hale and hearty to-day.

This case and its cure has amazed the physicians, and is the sensation of the hour. It is interesting to note that, while many others are being cured by this great discovery in medicine, the physicians themselves are among the first to benefit, and that while the simpler and more prevalent forms, such as Rheumatism, Sciatica, Bladder and Urinary Trouble and Female Weakness disappear before it, the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes and Dropsy, which have always been regarded as incurable, are yielding just as easily.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are fast superceding all other treatment for Kidney Disease, and as nearly all human sickness and suffering has its origin in the Kidneys, the use of this wonderful medicine is becoming almost universal.

Mr. Hammond preached a very able and instructive sermon, explaining the benefits to be derived from Odd Fellowship and the many benevolent acts resulting from the work of the order, which was fully appreciated by all the members of the fraternity.

Dr. Morley, Crookston's eye, ear and nose specialist is again in his office after two months of study in New York City.

My! but aint meat gettin' awful high? Why the butchers tell me they are payin' seven cents a pound for front and hind quarters of beef right through, and the same price for mutton, and ten and a half cents for pork. And here our farmers are with almost nothin' in these lines to sell. I tell you Mr. Journal editor, you want to preach diversified farmin' to these folks just as hard as you can. Here the farmers are payin' sixty cents a bushel for potatoes too. I'm pretty sure that these Iowa fellows that are comin' in here so thick, won't be caught buyin' meat and potatoes and lard and butter very long.—Uncle Joe, in Crookston Journal.

The postmaster sends them to the editor, says an exchange. The postmaster is not to blame. For instance there was a man by the name of—well, say Tom Short who sent us three notics to stop his paper—he did not want it any longer. We wondered what was the matter. Upon investigation we found Tom short $10. He had never paid a cent, yet he stopped his paper as a matter of economy to us. He didn't want us to lose any more by him. A few days afterwards Short was at church and his melodious tenor rang out clear in that old, soul stirring song, "Jesus Paid It All." He might have been mistaken, but his earnestness impressed us, so the next day we sent him a receipt in full, begging his pardon for not knowing that he had made an assignment of his liabilities to the Lord.

Penno Letter.

True to his promise, Mr. J. H. Penno writes a letter to the SPECTATOR about his trip to the coast and his new home, which will be of interest to his many friends here.

BLAINE, WASH., April 30, 1901

ED. SPECTATOR

DEAR SIR:—In the first place must say there is some wonderful scenery between St. Hilaire and here and think the money is well spent on a trip of this kind. Looking the country over some I decided to cast my lot in Blaine a town of 1,500 population located in Whatcom county and am doing fairly well to start with and expect to do better in a short time when the fishing and canning industries start up. This is a great place for fishing, being located on the sound. I have heard men say that they catch as high as twenty-five thousand salmon at one time with one trap. There are five canneries here and they employ quite a number of men about one-third being Chinamen who do work the white men refuse to do about the place. There are also several shingle mills here and they are building a large saw mill—the one that Peter Larson (formerly of St. Hilaire) lost his life on. He fell from the top of the mill and struck his head on a piece of timber about fifteen feet below and from there to the ground. I don't think he knew what struck him as he never moved after striking the ground. Charley Cushing whom you all know was the first man to the scene after the fall.

Now then, I cant say that I like this country as well as Minnesota yet, and I cannot expect to for the people I meet are all strangers to me, but I find them to be very free and social, but I think a man that works at common labor is just as well off there as he is here for I notice a lot of men looking for work. The climate seems to agree with me alright, the only kick I have coming is that I feel like sleeping 20 hours out of the 24, what I mean by that is it is always cold here at night, of course I am in the coldest part of Washington—am about ten minutes walk from the Canadian line—British Columbia and just 20 miles from Vancouver. The country around here is chiefly timber land, but most of the timber around the town has been destroyed by fire. I was two miles in the woods the other day and I came across what I thought was a pretty long log, not so very large, but I walked sixty paces on the log and Lord knows how much had been burned off the other end—I dont. I should think it had been down twenty years or more.

Mr. Penno winds up the letter with best respects to all his friends.

A. A. Odegaard has returned from Crookston where he spent several days of treatment and operation upon the nose by Dr. Morley.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

Dressmakers are about as much abused as newspaper men.

As unpopular as deadbeats are, we wonder that there are any.

A very vain man trying to appear modest is a funny sight.

You can't calculate the game a hunter gets by the cost of his hunting suit.

Some men seem to be good for nothing else but to raise long heavy beards.

Without the frizzes, it is shocking to think what some women would look like.

Nearly every morning some one asks in the postoffice when the mail will be open.

We do not see how some folks can manage to keep in such good spirits all the time.

You can't tell anything about the size of a lodge by the size of the badges the members wear.

We think there is a great deal more unnecessary talking done than there is talk that is necessary.

It must be tough to be bald headed, because then a man cannot go to court to loaf without being laughed at.

Men are just as apt to complain of their ailments as women are, and we often think a good deal more so.

Bankers say when money is scarce, everybody wants to borrow, and when it is plentiful, nobody wants any.

It is the general opinion that if you do a man a good turn he will stab you in the back the first chance he gets.

It sounds funny to hear a grown up man call his mother's brother Uncle John, but a girl is expected to say it.

A man's wife lay on her deathbed. It was not supposed by the grief-stricken watchers that she could live through the night. Her husband, an old skinflint who would hang a flea on the backyard fence and skin it for its pelt, went to bed and slept like a stone all night. In the morning when he got up and came to her room he yawned and said in a tone of surprise and perhaps some disappointment: "Well, mother, I see you are still here." And yet the good Lord allows some men to live and grow old.

—Do you want to sell your farm? Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Relating to the Reporting of Contagious Diseases to Local Boards of Health.

The Minnesota State Board of Health at a meeting held Jan. 15, 1901, adopted the following:

Whereas, A large majority of the cases of smallpox that have occurred throughout this and other states during the past year, were, at the time of discovery, unattended by a physician and unreported by the family (the same being secreted as far as possible,) thereby contributing to the spread of the disease and rendering it difficult, if not impossible, to suppress the same, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the State Board of Health, in the interests of the public, requests all local boards of health to see to it that Sec. 22, Chapter 132, of the Laws of 1883, is enforced.

It further requests that whenever any eruptive disease showing papules, vesicles, pustules, etc., or any condition resembling measles, scarlet fever, chickenpox or smallpox, which shall appear upon any person (member of the family boarder, roomer or visitor,) the head of the family, the keeper of the house, or some member thereof, shall, within twenty-four (24) hours after the discovery of such eruption, report each and every case to the local board of health, unless said case or cases are attended by a physician, as provided for in sections 22 and 23 of the aforesaid law.

Any person violating any of the provisions of said regulation should be prosecuted as directed by the law relating to the infectious and eruptive diseases, Chapter 132 (1883.)

H. M. BRACKEN,
Secretary and Executive Officer.

Sections 22 and 23 referred to above read as follows:

SEC. 22. That every keeper of any private house, boarding-house or lodging-house, and every inn keeper and hotel keeper shall, within twenty-four (24) hours report in writing to the Local Board of Health the same particulars required of any physician in the preceding section concerning any person being at any of the aforesaid houses and hotels, and attacked with any contagious disease dangerous to the public health.

SEC. 23. That it shall be the duty of every person knowing of any person sick of any contagious disease dangerous to the public health, and the duty of every physician hearing of any such sick person, who he shall have reason to think requires the attention of the Local Board, to at once report the fact to the Board in regard to the disease, condition and dwelling place or position of such sick person.

—Julius Pleth, the land man wants to buy your farm. Do you want to sell? If so call at his office two doors south of Hotel Markham.

A Fox Named "De Wet."

In Kew Gardens London, a fox which has been playing havoc with the fowls, and, though often seen, always manages to escape, has been named "De Wet." The incident throws a pleasing light upon the opinion the British hold of the crafty Boer general. With them his name stands for heroism, craftiness and unlimited energy, and although a terrible foe to the English, they cannot help admire him. Such energy and endurance can be cultivated by drinking "Golden Grain Belt" beer, a pure nourishing beverage brewed in Minneapolis. It strengthens the nerves and aids digestion. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

What Cows Will Do.

Owing to the uncertainity of a small grain crop in this particular vicinity farmers will do well to heed the following advice of "what cows will do." A dozen good cows well fed will make $500 or more a year besides their calves. They will furnish milk and butter and beef, which go a long way toward a good living. They will turn waste straw and cornstalks into money and make good use of beet tops and cabbage leaves. They will trim your hedge fence and thrive at it, and besides all this they will improve the farm they are kept upon. While a farm where only grain is raised to sell must of necessity become poorer and poorer unto the end of the chapter. Cows will pay the taxes when the wheat fails and the flax gets frost bitten. And they will pay you every month or every week for that matter for their food and your labor. You don't have to trust them six months and then not get anything as you sometimes do with a wheat crop.

We Handle Everything.

Start the Day Right

And everything will go smoothly. The proper way to start the day is by coming around to our store and ordering a supply of groceries for the day, such things as you may need. It will take you but a few minutes, and we feel sure you will not regret it.

Our Groceries

Are always fresh, and then the prices are as near right as we know how to make them. If you have not been in the habit of trading with us, drop in and see us anyway; you might get into the habit.

Hardware

We carry everything in the hardware line from cooking stoves down to tacks—all you have to do is to ask for what you want. If you want anything in the tin or copper line done drop into our tin shop and your wants will be attended to.

Yours very truly,

PERIODS OF PAIN.

How Three Women Found Relief.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to have been the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It relieves the condition which produces so much discomfort and robs menstruation of its terrors.

The three letters here published should encourage every woman who suffers:

Aug. 6, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered since the age of sixteen with painful menstruation. I have been treated for months, and was told that the womb had fallen a little. The doctor says that is now in place again, but I still have the same pain. Please tell me what to do."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Jan. 19, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—After receiving your reply to my letter of Aug. 6 I followed your kind advice, and am glad to tell you that I have been cured of the severe pain at time of menstruation through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it, felt better after the first bottle, and after a while had no more pain or womb trouble.

"I had doctored from the age of sixteen to twenty-six, and had lost all hope, but your medicine has made me well.

"I would like to have you use my testimonial, so that others may see, and be inspired with hope, and take your medicine."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N. Y.

Feb. 20, 1900.

"I saw your medicine so highly recommended I thought I would write to you for advice.

"My menstruation occurs every two weeks, lasts a week, and is painful. I have been troubled in this way for some time. I suffer from sick headache and backache all the time, appetite poor, sick at stomach every morning, everything I eat hurts me, am very weak, thin, and sallow.

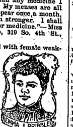
MAGGIE POLLARD

"I have tried a doctor, but he did not seem to do me any good."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

April 23, 1900.

"Since receiving your answer to my letter I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. My menses are all right now, and appear once a month, and I feel so much stronger. I shall always praise your medicine."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

"I was troubled with female weakness, irregular and painful menstruation, and leucorrhoea. The doctor's medicine did me no good. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and thanks to your medicine, my pains are gone. I advise all women suffering as I have to use your Vegetable Compound."—EMMA J. PRIBBLE, Indianola, Ill.



If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission.

RIIS' GREAT WORK.

Reporter's Influence in Helping to Cleanse New York.

It is not too much to say that Jacob A. Riis is one of the most potent factors for good in the whole city of New York, yet he is only a police reporter for the Sun. He has held the post for many years, and never aspires to anything more lucrative. Last month the King's Daughters' settlement opened a house on the East Side, at No. 50 Henry street, and, in honor of the modest police reporter, have named it "The Jacob A. Riis House."

E S. Martin writes of Mr. Riis in Harper's Weekly, as follows:

"He is not a police reporter for lack of opportunities to do other things, but because that is the work which is most congenial to him and fits in best with his chief interest in life, which is the promotion of the health, comfort and improvement of the poor of New York. He is a Dane.

"The king of Denmark conferred an honor upon him last summer, and if the American system of civilization included orders, he would have pecks of them in his cellar. Col. Roosevelt mentions him in a current magazine as the most formidable opponent that the evils of the New York slums and tenement houses have ever encountered, and quotes 'a man well qualified to pass judgment,' as naming him 'the most useful citizen of New York.' This is affluent measure of praise, but it can't hurt Mr. Riis, who is not working for praise, but, apparently, out of respect for the requirements of an imperative altruism, which keeps him loving his neighbor and working to help him, in the face of the fact that other jobs yield so much more money.

"Nobody ever says of Mr. Riis that he means well, or that he is a kind man, but impractical. He has done wonderful things already for the East Side in the way of promoting the system of small parks, and the destruction of some of the more hellish habitations. If he lives long enough, and has the right sort of a city government to help him, he will be a notable power in the accomplishment of things more wonderful still. When the man comes along with the $100,000,000, which Mr. Hewitt says ought to be spent in improving the East Side, Mr. Riis will be the man who will be asked to submit plans for spending the money."

SELMA LAGERLOF.

Kind Words for the Popular Swedish Writer.

A well known critic, referring to Selma Lagerlof's recent work, "From a Swedish Homestead," translated by Jessie Broctiner, says:

"It has come to be pretty generally recognized, both in her own country and abroad, that Selma Lagerlof is the most promising of the young generation of Swedish writers. In this country, at least, she needs no special encomium, for her writings have all of them won a quick recognition for their simplicity of style and their unique, saga-like quality of thought. Her best work, however, lies in the direction of the short story, rather than in a long and sustained effort, and even her 'Gosta Berling,' which first brought her into notice, has the effect of a collection of old-time sagas rather than of a single story. This new volume is a collection of sixteen stories, legends and the like, many of which have appeared in the Idun and other Swedish periodicals during the past two years."

Swensson's Great Festival.

The annual Messiah festival at Lindsborg, Kan., this year was a greater success than ever before, which is saying a great deal. Noted soloists from the East took part, and the festival continued five days. Dr. Carl A. Swenson, president of Bethany college, originated these festivals, and their magnificent success is due to his great ability as an executive.

Forest Culture in Norway.

The importance of protecting the forests is highly appreciated in Norway, as in all the countries of Northern Europe, for that matter. The Norwegian Storthing recently voted 10,000 kroner, and the press complains that it was not enough, for this very important public matter. It is recognized that no investment will yield such sure and rich benefits as money spent in forest culture.

Danish Political Parties.

The voting strength of the political parties in Denmark, as shown by the recent folkething elections, is as follows: Left reform party, 102,720; Social Democrats, 41,662; moderates, 29,-81; miscellaneous votes, 4,822. The leftist figures hold their own with those of a year ago; the social Democrats show a high percentage of increase, but the others a decrease.

A Famous Sword.

Admiral Peter Willemoe's sword, which he wore during the famous sea fight at Copenhagen, April 2, 1801, has been presented by Norway to Denmark. The sword has been in the care of the naval academy at Horten for many years, before that having had an honored place in the naval school at Fredericksvaern, to which it was presented by Capt. Ferri. All in all, the weapon has been in Norwegian possession since 1801, having been presented to Capt. Ferri in that year.

In General.

Valdemar Christensen, a representative of Norden, a Scandinavian paper in Buenos Ayres, and probably the only paper of its kind in South America, is working his way around the world. When last heard from he was in Japan, and is expected in the United States very soon. Christensen is a Dane by birth.

There are eighteen Dane societies in California, and they held a convention at Hayward this month. H. Ahrensberg was elected president and H. Wilson secretary. The societies have a total membership of 1,500.

Woman as a Parliamentarian.

"Yes, sir, I did my best to train my daughter up as an accomplished parliamentarian. I took her to meetings to give her a chance to listen to the rulings of able chairmen, and I had her learn the text-books on the subject by heart. I thought I had her perfect in the business, but I was mistaken. She attended a convention not long ago, and pretty soon she had a chance to appeal from a decidedly unjust ruling of the chair, and how do you suppose she did it?"

"Well?"

"She was excited, you know, and this is what she said: 'You are a mean old fright, and I just hate you! So there!' And then she burst into tears and sat down. No, sir; woman's nature will have to change before she will ever become a parliamentarian."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Sudanese natives eagerly buy clothes, cotton goods, sugar, perfumes, tea, nails, chains, wire, leather, false jewelry and iron trinkets of Geneva. A single caravan started off recently with 20,000 francs' worth of German scents for the natives.

In the Enemy's Country.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

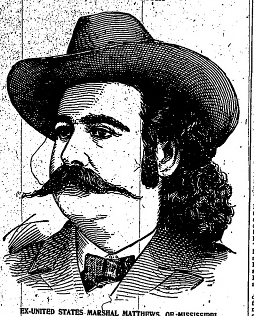
A UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Thanks Peruna For His Rapid Recovery From Catarrh.



EX-UNITED STATES MARSHAL MATTHEWS, OF MISSISSIPPI.

Hon. S. S. Matthews, ex-United States Marshal of Mississippi, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company of Columbus, Ohio, written from Hazelhurst, Miss., says:

"I am happy to say that I am cured of catarrh and need no more attention from you. It is a great satisfaction that I am able to write you that Peruna has in my case done all that you claim, and that I will need no more medicine."

The great multitude take this remedy without any other advice than the directions to be found upon the bottle and in the pamphlets. There are those who prefer, however, to correspond with Dr. Hartman during their sickness. To all such he will make prompt and careful answer without charge.

Hon. J. F. Crooker of Buffalo, N. Y., who was for years Superintendent of Schools at Buffalo, in a letter dated October 16, writes:

"I have been a sufferer from catarrh six or seven years, and after trying many remedies was induced by a friend to take Peruna. The results have been highly satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending Peruna to any one suffering with catarrh, as my case is complete."

Hon. J. F. Crooker, Supt. Buffalo, N. Y. Public Schools.

Hon. B. B. Doviner, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., says the following of their catarrh remedy, Peruna:

"I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. The Peruna stopped my catarrh of the head so that it did not become chronic, and I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and beneficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane, thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure it in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

Inquiry in Washington confirms the report that the United States is working, and finds support in its effort toward the opening of all China, including the provinces, to the trade of the world.

The extensive work of the isthmian canal commission is nearing completion. Admiral Walker, chairman of the commission, says that the final report will be ready for submission to the president in about six weeks.

Col. William P. Hall, adjutant general of the department of the lakes, U. S. A., has been ordered by the war department to succeed Gen. Thomas H. Barry as adjutant general of the department of the Philippines.

The state department has been informed of the death of Richard A. Gadd, United States consular agent at Port Limon, from malarial fever. He was a native of New York, but had spent a large part of his life in the tropics.

The Indian bureau has received word that the official count of the votes of the Cherokee nation on the Cherokee agreement with the Dawes commission shows a majority of 1,000 of the votes for rejection, instead of 1,235 as first announced.

The surgeon general of the marine hospital service was advised of a death from bubonic plague at Honolulu, which occurred March 23. The case was that of a Japanese woman. It is believed to be sporadic, and the city is reported to be in good sanitary condition.

The military authorities at Manila have prepared a schedule and forwarded the same to Washington covering the sailing dates of the ten regiments of volunteers still in the Philippines. Unless unforeseen delays arise, the last of these regiments will leave for home before June 30.

The state department has paid to the Mexican government, through the Mexican ambassador here, $2,000, as full indemnity to the heirs of Florentino Suaste, a Mexican citizen, who was lynched in La Salle county, Texas, in 1895. The payment was provided by congress, out of humane consideration, and without reference to the question of federal liability.

Accidental Happenings.

A trainman was killed and thirty passengers injured in a wreck in Iowa.

In a fire in Chicago, seven people were burned to death and several others injured, three fatally.

Fire in Augusta, Ga., destroyed Whitney & Co.'s and Phynizy & Co.'s warehouses, causing a loss of about $175,000.

A six-story brick warehouse occupied by Charles Webb & Co., at Philadelphia, importers of wool, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Two women were burned to death and a number of persons were injured in a fire which started in the five-story apartment house at Lexington avenue and Sixteenth street, New York.

The mill of the Ashland Manufacturing Company of Ashland, Me., the most modern and one of the largest sawmills in Maine, was burned and a large quantity of lumber also was destroyed. The loss is estimated at over $200,000.

In the ruins of her home at Jacksonville, Fla., the body of Mrs. Solon Robinson was found, where she had been buried in the fire last Friday. She was the widow of Solon Robinson, for many years agricultural editor of the New York Tribune.

Sins and Sinners.

Emily Weeks of Albany, N. Y., out of love for a man, it is charged, threw carbolic acid in her mother's face, to cover up the crime of having forged her name to checks. She is now in prison, and has confessed, so the police say, to the forgeries.

Jesse R. King of Milheim, Pa., shot and fatally wounded his bride of two months, and when an officer attempted to arrest him, King shot himself through the heart, dying almost instantly. King and his wife quarreled over family affairs.

Two of the county judges of St. Clair county, Mo., Thomas D. Nevitt and S. C. Peden, were arrested by deputy United States marshals on a charge of contempt, for not levying a tax to pay interest on bonds of the issue of 1870. The third judge, Walker, escaped and rode to his home.

Mrs. Mollie Randall, wife of Freeman Randall, a farmer living twelve miles south of Edwardsville, Ill., in a fit of temporary insanity, shot and killed her two-year-old daughter and mortally wounded herself with the same weapon. The Randalls are among the most prominent people in the neighborhood.

MRS. M'KINLEY ILL

CAUSES UNEXPECTED CHANGE IN PRESIDENT'S ITINERARY.

Arrives in San Francisco Several Hours Ahead of Schedule Time—Mrs. McKinley Taken to the Scott Residence Where She Can Have Complete Rest for a Few Days—President's Physician Says Mrs. McKinley's Condition Is Not Serious—Impression of Those Who Saw Her Is That She Is Very Ill.

San Francisco, May 13.—The sudden illness of Mrs. McKinley has caused an unexpected change in the itinerary of President McKinley. He arrived in this city quietly yesterday afternoon, several hours ahead of the time scheduled. The state of Mrs. McKinley's health was such yesterday morning that the president decided to leave Del Monte and bring his wife to this city immediately, to the home of Henry T. Scott, where she could have complete rest for a few days, and where a specialist could be consulted if necessary. A special of two cars and a locomotive was made up from the president's special and at 12:30 the president, Mrs. McKinley, Miss Barber, the president's niece, Secretary Cortelyou and wife, Dr. Rixey and Mr. H. T. Scott and wife, left Del Monte for San Francisco, leaving the remainder of the presidential party at Del Monte. Only a few hundred people greeted the president upon his arrival in this city. His coming was not generally known and only those who chanced to see the bulletins posted by the newspapers announcing that the president would reach the city at 4 p. m. awaited his train. The president, in order to avoid the crowd that was expected to assemble at the Southern Pacific depot at Third and Townsend streets, left the train with his little party at Valencia street, a station in the southern part of the city. When the train, consisting of a baggage car and the president's special coach, stopped at Valencia street Mrs. McKinley was carried in a steamer chair by two colored porters from the private car to a closed carriage in waiting. She was heavily veiled and the president and Dr. Rixey followed close behind. Mrs. McKinley was gently placed in the carriage and the president and Dr. Rixey took seats in the same vehicle. The president was Quite Pale and Looked Serious.

The rest of the party followed in carriages. Mr. and Mrs. Scott had arrived at their residence ahead of the president and were waiting to receive their distinguished guests. Mrs. McKinley was again lifted out of the carriage and placed in an invalid chair and carried into the house.

Secretary Cortelyou, when questioned concerning Mrs. McKinley's condition, stated that there was nothing alarming in her present indisposition and that perfect quiet and rest for a few days would restore her to her usual health. It was the impression, however of those who saw Mrs. McKinley that she is very ill and that her present state may result in an entire change of the president's program. Should his wife's health improve, the president will carry out his intention to attend the celebration at San Jose to-day. If, however, her condition is no better, the president will not leave his wife's bedside, but will allow the cabinet officers and others of his party to represent him at San Jose. At 6 o'clock last night Dr. Rixey made the following statement:

"Mrs. McKinley stood the trip from Del Monte much better than I expected. Her condition is not serious. She will stay here at least a week and have perfect rest. I think by that time she will be able to continue the journey. She has been gaining strength all afternoon."

TROLLEY CAR RUNS AWAY.

Over One Hundred Passengers Receive Injuries.

New York, May 13.—An open trolley car in which were packed about 115 persons got away from the motorman near Fort Lee, N. J., and dashed down Leonia Hill. Every person on the car was bruised, three are seriously hurt, but only one is likely to die. Frank Sunstruck, the conductor, it is feared may lose his life on account of possible internal injuries, and J. E. Robinson and his wife of this city are the two others who were seriously hurt. The heavily loaded car had started down an incline a quarter of a mile in length when the motorman lost control. It was going so fast no one dared to jump. The road is a winding one. At the foot of the hill it curved sharply. When the front trucks hit the curve they started around it and made it. The rear ones followed part of the way. The wrench upon the car, however, as it swung around, was so great that the body was lifted and torn from the trucks and rolled over on the ground. The passengers were caught in under the car and piled up in a heap.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED.

Doctor Is Said to Have Wanted to Kill His Wife.

Philadelphia, May 13.—Dr. Thomas Eldridge was arrested, charged with conspiracy to kill his wife. Several days ago the police were notified by Paul Schroeder, a private detective, that he had been employed by Dr. Eldridge to procure two letters from Eldridge's wife, who had left him. Schroeder asserted that the doctor wanted him to inject morphine into Mrs. Eldridge, and if he was unable to secure the letters by that means Eldridge said he would furnish the detective with a stick of dynamite to blow up the house in which Mrs. Eldridge resided.

EASTMAN IS NOT GUILTY.

Harvard Professor Acquitted on Charge of Murdering His Brother-in-law, Grogan.

Cambridge, Mass., May 13.—After a long and dramatic trial Charles R. Eastman, the Harvard instructor, was acquitted on the charge of murdering his brother-in-law, Richard H. Grogan, Jr., while at target practice on July 4, last. The jury, after listening for nearly three weeks to a mass of testimony, followed by two days of argument, debated five and a half hours before reaching a verdict. When the verdict was announced there was a demonstration among the 150 spectators which the court officers were entirely unable to suppress for some minutes. The young man's father, who had stood loyally by his side through the long strain, and who had spared no expense in lawyers and experts to clear his son of the charge, was the first to press his hand as he stepped from the prisoner's cage. Before the jury left their seats Eastman went over and shook hands with each one, and then passed out into an anteroom where he was greeted by his relatives and friends.

MURDERED HIS WIFE.

Fiendish and Brutal Deed of a Wealthy Farmer.

Bloomington, Ill., May 13.—On a farm near this city yesterday Merritt Chism killed his wife. As she was starting to church in a buggy with the two little daughters of Chism, her step-daughters, a quarrel arose. Chism jumped into the buggy and with a knife cut his wife's face and neck. He then threw her into the road, jumped upon her and stabbed her repeatedly. Her son, Harvey Freeland, aged twelve, struck at Chism with a ball bat. Chism wrested the bat from the lad and struck his wife three times with it, smashing her skull and dashing out her brains. Then he tried again to stab the woman. Harvey caught the hand in which was the knife. Chism drew the knife through Harvey's hand, almost severing the fingers and stabbed Harvey in the arm. Chism then fled across the fields and tried to drown himself in a stock well. The water was not deep enough and he climbed out and went to the house of a son, where he tried to kill himself with a revolver. The son prevented this and took Chism to Bloomington, where he gave himself up to the sheriff. Chism is one of the wealthiest farmers in the county. He is a man of quick temper, but had never before been guilty of crime. He is forty-nine years old.

COLORED MAN'S HEROISM.

Loses His Life by Giving His Friend First Chance at Escape.

Indianapolis, May 13.—William Phelps of Richmond, Ky., and James Stansbury of this city were cleaning the inside of an eight-foot upright boiler at the cerealine mills yesterday afternoon when an employe turned on the steam, thinking the cock was tight. It leaked and the scalding steam poured in on the two men. The only exit was up a ladder to a manhole in the top. Both jumped for the ladder. Phelps reached it first, took one step and stopped. He jumped aside and shouted "You go first Jim, you are married." Stansbury sprang up the ladder and escaped with slight burns about the face and legs. Though Phelps followed at his heels his act of heroism cost him his life. Both men were being cooked when Phelps jumped aside. By the time he had followed Stansbury up the ladder the flesh was dropping from his limbs. He was cooked alive and with supreme effort dragged his scalded body from the manhole. He lived for two hours in terrible agony but did not let a groan escape him. "It was Jim's right to go first," he said, quietly. "He is married." Phelps has been boarding at Stansbury's house. Both men are colored.

FREE SPEECH IS ALLOWED.

Point for Which Detroit Crowds Rioted Has Been Gained.

Detroit, May 13.—Mayor William C. Maybury and Director of Police Frank C. Andrews held a conference which resulted in a peaceful solution of the matters which have been disturbing the city since Mr. Andrews became the head of the police department. Mr. Andrews agreed that he would take no action relative to the suppression of free speech on the campus martius by single tax orators or others without first consulting the mayor. The mayor announced that he would make a speech on the campus. As a result about 7,000 people gathered there to hear him. There were no police present and there was no disorder. Mr. Maybury addressed the crowd from Tom Bowden's single tax wagon, and urged the people to make no demonstration such as was witnessed Friday night, saying it was not the intention of the authorities to restrict free speech. The crowd gave the mayor several hearty cheers and gradually dispersed before the tax orator had time to return to his argument.

KILL WRONG MAN.

Revengeful Mob Slays an Innocent Negro.

Birmingham, Ala., May 13.—An unknown negro, supposed to be James Brown, who was charged with assaulting a woman at Springville, was shot and killed by a crowd of white men near Leeds, twelve miles from here. The coroner expressed the opinion that the wrong man was killed.

SWEPT BY FLAMES

$800,000 WORTH OF PROPERTY DESTROYED NEAR DETROIT.

West Bank of the Rouge River in Delray Swept for a Distance of Three-quarters of a Mile—Western Union Telegraph Company Loses $600,000 Worth of Cedar Poles—Firemen Were Powerless to Check the Flames and Devoted Their Attention to Preventing It Spreading—Glare of the Fire Illuminates the Sky for Miles.

Detroit, Mich., May 13.—Fanned by a thirty-five-mile-an-hour wind, fire yesterday afternoon swept the west bank of the Rouge river in Delray, a suburb to the south of Detroit, for three-quarters of a mile, and destroyed over $800,000 worth of property. Following are the losses:

Salliotte & Ferguson, lumber mill, $50,000, covered by insurance; Brownlee & Co.'s sawmill, salt block and part of their stock of lumber, $45,000, insurance $15,000; the Western Union Telegraph company, loss on cedar poles stored in a yard which was swept by flames, about $600,000, insurance unknown; Carkin, Stickney & Cram, loss on dredge which was tied up at the dock, $70,000, insurance unknown; Maltby Lumber company, cedar poles and sawmill, $50,000, insurance $25,000.

The fire originated shortly after 1 o'clock in the roof of the Salliotte & Ferguson mill. The mill had not been running for several months and the roof was as dry as tinder. The building was soon in ashes and the fire swept across a dock to where dredge No. 5, of the Carkin, Stickney & Cram fleet of dredges, was tied up. Despite efforts to save her this craft was burned to the water's edge. Great embers were picked up by the wind and dropped on the roof of Brownlee & Co.'s mill and salt block and both these buildings were destroyed. Delray has a very small fire department and a call for help was sent to the Detroit department which responded with three engines and the fire boat Battle. Even the great streams from the fire boat the flames which were rolling down the river bank for hundreds of feet. From the Brownlee property the fire jumped over into the large yard which the Western Union Telegraph company used as a storage point for its cedar telegraph poles. The yard is the distributing point for ten states and over 100,000 poles were stored there. The fire swept through the great yard, which comprises about eight acres, in less than two hours, but the poles blazed until far into the night. The streams from the fire boat Battle were centered on this yard but they had no effect in staying the flames. The four-inch streams were turned into steam almost before they reached the burning piles of poles.

Were Powerless to Check

The plant of the Maltby Lumber company was the last one on the river bank, and it was soon destroyed, together with a large stock of cedar poles which was stored in the yard.

When darkness fell the glare from the burning poles illuminated the sky for miles. The firemen worked on the fire almost all night but it was only to keep it from spreading to other property, for they realized that it would simply have to burn itself out in the Western Union storage yards.

While this fire was burning the lumber yard of G. A. Raupp & Co. in Ecorse, about a mile from Delray, was set on fire by sparks from a passing engine and 500,000 feet of lumber was destroyed. The loss is about $75,000, covered by insurance.

FIGHT DUEL TO DEATH.

California Sheriff and Constable Locate Two Escaped Prisoners and Have a Fight.

Adin, Cal., May 13.—Sheriff Behrens, Reding, Cal., arrived here Saturday morning on the track of Dorland and Illingsworth, two prisoners who escaped from the Shasta county jail on April 9. The constable of Alturas, H. S. Walker, met Sheriff Behrens at Adin and they located the prisoners about three miles north of Adin. A hand-to-hand combat ensued. Dorland was killed, probably by a bullet from his companion, as he was between the sheriff and Illingsworth. Dorland did not shoot as the sheriff had him covered, but Illingsworth shot fifteen or twenty times, three bullets piercing the sheriff's clothing. Constable Walker was shot through the top of the left hip, probably fatally. Illingsworth escaped. Dorland's remains were taken to Adin.

PROVE THERE IS NO QUARREL.

Duke and Duchess of Marlborough Active and Conspicuous in London Society.

London, May 13.—The duke and duchess of Marlborough have taken an active and conspicuous part in the Primrose league meetings this week, always appearing together, as if to emphasize that there was no truth in the recent stories of a serious misunderstanding between them. At the reception which Mrs. Bischoffsheim gave to the league Thursday evening, among the prominent people grouped about the hostess were the duke and duchess of Marlborough.

Town Narrowly Escapes Destruction.

Parker City, Ind., May 13.—Fire yesterday threatened to wipe this town out of existence. A large furniture factory, livery barn and several residences were destroyed. The estimated loss is $100,000.

BIG STRIKE THREATENED.

150,000 Machinists Directly and 500,000 Metal Workers Indirectly Involved.

Washington, May 13.—A general strike involving directly 150,000 machinists and indirectly 500,000 men in metal working trades is expected to take place on May 20 unless some arrangement is effected in the meantime. This is the statement made by President James O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists, who has his headquarters in this city. The demands of the men, the refusal of which threatens to precipitate the strike, Mr. O'Connell said, are for a working day of nine hours and an increase of 12 1-2 per cent in wages or in other words ten hours' pay for nine hours' work.

SULTAN DEFIES THE POWERS.

Turkish Ruler Practically Charges the Envoys With Smuggling.

Constantinople, May 13.—A third note, evidently emanating direct from the sultan, was delivered to the ambassadors, demanding in peremptory language the immediate suppression of the foreign postoffices and reiterating the charges of smuggling against foreign officials. The ambassadors immediately returned the note to the porte, thus creating a partial cessation of relations between the embassies and the Turkish government.

KILLED BY A COLLISION.

Two Young People Dead and Five Seriously Injured.

New York, May 13.—Of twenty-six young people who started from College Point, L. I., Saturday night on what is locally known as a "starlight" ride, two were carried home yesterday morning dead, five are in the hospital, four were allowed to leave the hospital after having their wounds dressed and every one of the remainder was more or less bruised. A collision with a trolley car caused the accident.

FILIPINOS LEARNING ENGLISH.

Natives Evince a Desire to Adjust Themselves to New Conditions.

Manila, May 13.—Gov. Goldman states that municipal governments have been established throughout the Province of Bataan, with the exception of a few towns in the western part. Schools have been established everywhere and the english language is being eagerly studied. The natives display great aptness in adjusting themselves to the new conditions.

MORE OUTRAGES IN MACEDONIA.

Turkish Authorities Continue the Policy of Shooting Revolutionists.

Vienna, May 13.—A dispatch to the Abendblatt from Constantinople announces the wholesale shooting of revolutionary Macedonians, including women. Twenty-four persons were executed at Monastir, fourteen at Berla, eighteen at Iating, eighteen at Seres, and twenty-nine at Uskub.

Assaulted a Comrade.

Orville, Ohio, May 13.—Louis Deman, a member of Company D, Second United States infantry, surrendered himself to Marshal Drushall here yesterday. Deman said he had assaulted a comrade, Dennis Ferris, with a bayonet while the latter was asleep in the barracks at Columbus, Ohio, last Friday, and he feared he had killed Ferris. He said he started to run away but concluded it would be best to return and take the consequences. He was held awaiting the orders of the commandant of the post at Columbus.

Aborigine Musical Artists.

Fargo, N. D., May 13.—Fargo will not have a band of Indians as one of the attractions at the fire festival. It had been decided to bring a number here from Standing Rock. There were many protests on the ground that the red men were no novelty in this section. The committee is relieved of all embarrassment, however, by a hitch in securing government consent, and the money will be spent for some other attractions.

To Kill the Weeds.

Fargo, N. D., May 13.—A circular on the methods of destroying mustard and kindred weeds in young wheat and oats has been issued by Prof. H. L. Bolley of the North Dakota agricultural college. After a number of years experimenting he advises the use of copper sulphate in solutions of one pound to four gallons of water. The spraying is to be done by the machine methods.

May Join the Combine.

Moline, May 13.—The Moline Plow company, owning the second largest plow factory in the world, has given an option to New York capitalists which, if closed within the limit of sixty days, will bring this concern into the $50,000,000 plow combination and make sure its success. The company employs 1,000 men, and the option is for upward of $5,000,000.

Admitted by Esterhazy.

Brussels, May 13.—The Independence Belge publishes affidavits signed by Count Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy before the French consul in London admitting the authorship of the Dreyfus bordereau and declaring that the bordereau was written with the connivance of Col. Sandher, ex-chief of the secret intelligence bureau.

Dewet Resumes Operations.

London, May 13.—Gen. Dewet, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pretoria, has resumed operations and is reported to have crossed into the Transvaal with 2,000 men.

Rejects a Klondike Railroad Bill.

Ottawa, May 13.—The Alaska & Northern railway bill providing for a railroad from Pyramid Harbor to Dawson has been rejected by the senate railway committee.

Will Estimate Timber.

Grantsburg, Wis., May 13.—Isaac L. Burch has received notice of his appointment as government timber estimator. He leaves to-day for Muskogee, Ind. T., to enter on his duties. A reception was tendered him here.

Young People's Luther League.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 13.—The fourth annual convention of the South Dakota Luther league, an association of the young people of the Norwegian Lutheran church, is now in session here. About 300 are present.

THE SASKATOON DISTRICT.

ONE OF THE NEW WESTERN CANADA DISTRICTS.

The Great Advantages of Settlement Where the Soil Is of Unexampled Fertility.

During the past year or two a large number of American settlers (those going from the United States to Canada) have made homes in the Saskatoon district in Western Canada. They have found the climate all that could be desired and their prospects are of the brightest. In writing of it a correspondent says:

The lands for sale are choice selections from a large area, and every farm is within easy distance of a railway station. Experience has shown that this district enjoys immunity from summer frost, from cyclones and blizzards. The South Saskatchewan, flowing through the tract, is one of the finest rivers in the country, being navigable and having an average width of stream of 1,000 feet.

The agents of the Canadian government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in your paper and who will be pleased to furnish full information, tell me that within the limits of the tract there are two distinct varieties of soil. One is a rich black loam, and the other is a somewhat lighter loam, containing a small admixture of sand. There appears to be no appreciable difference between the fertility of these two kinds of soil. Both are alluvial in their characteristics, both are marvelously productive, and both rest upon a subsoil of clay. The advantage of this formation is that it retains the heat of the day during the night, and is favorable to the early maturity of crops. Every kind of crop will here attain the highest perfection of quality. The land is admirably adapted for stock-raising and dairy farming, as well as growing grain. Some idea of the richness of the natural grasses of the prairie may be formed from the fact that more than 200 tons of hay were gathered within a short distance of Saskatoon and stored up for use during the winter. A growth so luxuriant demonstrates beyond all possible question the suitability of the land for pasturing cattle, and no doubt this important industry will be largely carried on.

Nature has been lavish in her gifts to this territory. Not only is the soil of unexampled fertility, but the climate is delightful and healthy. Such is the testimony of every settler, and this testimony is confirmed by enthusiastic opinions from every traveler, explorer, missionary or newspaper correspondent who has ever visited this famed Saskatchewan Valley. In former years vast herds of buffalo came here to winter from the elevated storm-swept regions south of the United States boundary line, proving thereby the adaptation of these rolling prairies to the purpose of raising stock. The land is dry, with sufficient but not excessive rainfall, capable of early cultivation in the spring, and free from summer frosts. The configuration of the country renders artificial drainage unnecessary, and prevents the accumulation of stagnant pools; mists and fogs are seldom seen. The days of summer are full of sunshine, under the genial influence of which crops rapidly ripen. Autumn is characterized by an almost unbroken succession of fine weather, during which the crops are safely garnered. In winter it is cold, but extremely exhilarating and pleasant, owing to the wonderful dryness and bracing qualities of the air. The winter is a source of profit as well as enjoyment to the people, being far healthier than a humid climate.

Water and fuel—these two prime necessaries of life are plentiful throughout the district.

COOKING BY ELECTRICITY.

It Is Getting to Be No Trick at All to Prepare a Meal.

In the modern house the practice of the art of cooking is not confined to the kitchen alone. There dishes only seen in their perfection within arm's length of the fire that cooked them. With an electrically-heated steel griddle at the hostess' elbow, griddle cakes are prepared on the breakfast table, which attain the highest degree of excellence, as they are flipped, crisp and hot, from the griddle to the plate.

Five o'clock tea has its attractions enhanced when the tea table is heated by electricity, obviating the dangers and inconvenience which attend the use of alcohol. And the chafing dish, what a subtle charm lurks within its mysteries! For even the masculine mind has succumbed to its allurements, and with what results? We are told it makes heroes out of cooks and cooks out of heroes.

There is no simpler method of entertaining than by a chafing-dish supper. The few necessary supplies can be had in any market. How often has it happened that when everything else is made ready, and while the guests are waiting for the host to exhibit his skill, it is discovered that there is no alcohol in the house. No fear of this in the electrically-equipped house; only touch the switch and the feast goes on. There is no troublesome alcohol, no flame and no danger; and surely the "Welsh rarebit" or "lobster a la Newburg" reaches the highest degree of perfection when prepared in the electric chafing dish. Indeed, the guests may assent that electricity has added a new flavor to their favorite dish, especially if they have as good an imagination as had the immortal Franklin, who, describing a dinner given in honor of electricity in 1749, says of the turkeys killed by electricity: "We conceited ourselves that the birds killed in this manner ate uncommon tender."—Harper's Bazar.

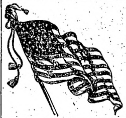
WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1901.



Be a Man First of All.

Quite beneath all discussion of electives and vocations, as whether I will be an engineer or a clergyman, is the certainty, for every youth who would be truly successful, that he must be a man; that he ought to be a "full grown man," as the old version read squarely and none too strongly; to be a "perfect man."—Success.

Ransoming the Dead.

In mediæval times not only were living prisoners ransomed by their friends, but a ransom was demanded even for the bodies of those slain in action.

Marshall's Absentmindedness.

One day Judge Marshall, engrossed in his reflections, was driving over the wretched roads of North Carolina on his way to Raleigh in a stick gig. His horse turned out of the road, and the sulky ran over a sapling and was tilted so as to arouse the judge. When he found that he could move neither to right nor left, an old negro, who had come along, solved the difficulty.

"My old marster," he asked, "what fer you don't back your horse?"

"That's true," said the judge, and he acted as advised. Thanking his deliverer heartily, he felt in his pocket for some change, but he did not have any.

"Never mind, old man," he said. "I shall stop at the tavern and leave some money for you with the landlord."

The old negro was not impressed with the stranger, but he called at the tavern and asked the keeper if an old gentleman had left anything there for him.

"Oh, yes," said the landlord, "he left a silver dollar for you. What do you think of that old gentleman?"

The negro gazed at the dollar and said:

"He was a gem'man, for sho', but"—patting his forehead—"he didn't have much in here."—World's Work.

Tough Old English Statesmen.

In Macaulay's day English statesmen were of a hardier and more robust type than the present race of politicians. They seem to have had cast iron nerves and appetites and digestions to match. They dined off a huge beefsteak and a bottle of port, while their grandsons are content with cutlet and a lemon squash. And yet they lived to a good old age. We hear of Lord Brougham at the age of 70 "drinking two bottles of port at dinner, going to bed upon half a bottle of peat reek (whisky) and turning out at daylight to shoot teal;" and Lord Lyndhurst at the age of 90 "supping off hot boiled lobster and champagne."

Mr. Kinnear, an old parliamentary hand, tells us that he remembers seeing "Mr. Disraeli drinking, as the prelude to a big speech, a pint of port wine at the buffet in the commons lobby, dressed in a green coat, a buff waistcoat and snuff colored trousers." This seems a modest potation under the circumstances, but Mr. Kinnear adds that Disraeli came back and had another pint later on.—Blackwood's.

The Wrong Laddie.

A gentleman on a walk from one of the suburbs of Glasgow happened to call at a farmhouse, where he was readily supplied with a glass of milk. He offered the woman sixpence, but she declined all payment. "I couldn' tak' money for 't," she said in her own proud way.

The gentleman expressed his acknowledgment and went on his way, but at the garden gate he detected a small boy playing. Surely, he thought, this is the lady's son. So he put his hand in his pocket to give him the sixpence, when he heard a shrill voice. "That's na ma laddie, sir." Then there was a pause, and the voice afterward resounded, this time directed toward a small boy at the side door, "Gang oot, Wullie, an speak till the nice gentleman at the gate!"—Liverpool Post.

She Couldn't Eat the Coupe.

He had dining with him in the restaurant of the most elegant and fashionable hotel in town his good old maiden aunt from the rural districts. They had a sumptuous feast, which as it progressed was a series of delightful surprises for the old lady. When they were drinking coffee, the host looked out of the window and noticed it was raining. Turning to the waiter, he said, "I wish you would order me a coupe." Whereupon the maiden aunt raised both her hands in protest, exclaiming: "Don't, Charles, please don't! I couldn't eat another thing. 'Pon my word, I'm up to my neck now."—Exchange.

The Eternal Man.

"So you're going to marry the policeman, Bridget?"

"Yes, mum."

"I suppose you'll have the same trouble with him I've had with my husband."

"Shure, what's that, mum?"

"Oh, he won't give up his club."—Yonkers Statesman.

SIDEWALK NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the village council of the village of St. Hilaire in the county of Red Lake and State of Minnesota have ordered the construction of a new sidewalk on the east side of Water street from fourth street to fifth street and the north side of fifth street between said Water street and Riverside avenue and the west side of Riverside avenue and the east side of Water street from fifth street to sixth street in the village of St. Hilaire of said county and state to be six feet in width constructed of dressed and sized two inch pine planks four inches wide placed flatwise and firmly spiked upon four sleepers or stringers or Norway pine two inches thick and six inches wide, placed edgewise at equal distance from one and another and those next to the edges of the walk to be four inches from their respective edges and all to be placed upon a firm foundation and the material in said sidewalk to be of a quality acceptable to the street commissioner of said village and the work upon the same to be done to his satisfaction. The side of the walk towards the center of the street to be six feet from the front lines of the lots upon the side of the street upon which it may be built and said sidewalk to be constructed to a grade line established by said village council that for the purpose of constructing said sidewalk the said village council have levied and assessed a tax of 35 cents per front foot upon all the lands hereinafter described and the owners thereof and delivered to the undersigned a warrant for the collection of said tax. That the description of the lands in said village fronting upon said sidewalk and the names of the owners thereof which are known as well as the lands whose owners are not known are as follows:

The London Bus.

A bus weighs 3,200 pounds and costs £145. It is made of ash and oak except the paneling, which is mahogany, and the windows are of plate glass. Before a bus is allowed to earn its £2 10s. a day it has to be licensed, or, as they say, "you have to get a number plate for it." This number plate is the white plate with black figures surmounted by a crown seen at the tail of the bus. It is provided by the police and costs £2. Then there is a wheel duty of 15s. per annum to be paid to the inland revenue.

After making these payments any one can run a bus in London wherever he likes, subject of course to the general rules and regulations bearing upon all vehicular traffic. Attached to each bus is a stud of 12 horses, of which only ten, or five pairs, are worked in any one day, thus securing a complete day's rest for each pair every sixth day. As a bus runs 64 miles a day and five pairs of horses are used it follows that a bus horse's day's work is 13 miles, which he does in less, considerably less, than three hours, the rate at which he travels being between five and six miles an hour.

This does not seem a great deal to exact from a horse, still the work is hard, often involving a prolonged dead pull at the trot, and the crowded condition of the London streets makes it harder by necessitating continual deviations out of the way of obstacles and abrupt stoppages to avoid collisions.—Cassell's Magazine.

Fooled His Doctor.

The late Rev. H. R. Haweis, who was equally notable as preacher, journalist, lecturer and musician, suffered from a dangerous hip disease when a boy of 9. The celebrated Sir Benjamin Brodie, who was asked if a change of scene would benefit the afflicted youth, answered, "Take him anywhere—it does not matter."

Haweis lived to laugh at his doctor, and half a century later, after a life of exceptional industry, he was in vigorous health.—New York World.

The Two Pinnacles.

"The performance reaches the highest pinnacle of dramatic wit," wrote the press agent.

"Isn't that rather a strong statement?" asked the dramatic editor.

"Oh, no! We are getting $5 for general admission."

Alas, it is sometimes true that we mistake the pinnacle of price for the pinnacle of art!—Baltimore American.

LOCAL NEWS.

A little snow Saturday.

The County Commissioners are in session.

Shall we celebrate the 4th of July at home this year?

Crookston will celebrate the 3rd, 4th and 5th of July.

Fred Knutson is erecting a residence on north Water street.

H. E. Ives made a business trip to the county seat yesterday.

O. F. Post made a business trip to Thief River Falls Monday.

Fresh greens and strawberries at the fruit store of W. McAndress.

The newly organized fire department will get out for practice this evening.

All dry goods, until sold out, will be sold at cost at the store of M. A. Hall's.

DIED:—The infant child of C. H. Peterson of this place Sunday May 12.

J. Q. Adams, the Red Lake Falls optician was a visitor in town yesterday.

Some of the trees in town show the effects of the heavy frost Saturday morning.

A large acreage of oats and barley will be sown this season, especially in this county.

Marcus Johnson of St. Paul was here last Thursday looking after his business interests.

I. Dahleen has lumber on the grounds and will erect a bowling alley and shooting gallery.

Hicks predicted weather prevailed Friday, Saturday and Sunday. It was cold and disagreeable.

Andrew P. Hanson of Crookston has been appointed administrator for the estate of Mrs. M. A. Hall.

Mike Kelley starts out to-day with a crew of men to take down a six million drive of logs to Crookston.

John Hannay spent the fore part of the week visiting with his old friend, Dr. Francis at Thief River.

Six million feet of logs were sluiced through here the past week for the Crookston Lumber Company.

State Farmers' Institute will be held in St. Hilaire Wednesday June 12th. Remember the date and take it in.

Julius Pleth, the land man, put up a mammoth sign near the depot Monday. Paint was no object as it was put on by the gallon. You can't help but see it.

In Oregon, the dairymen with 40 acres of improved land, if situated near a cheese factory and has 20 cows, realizes more than his neighbor who has 160 acres of wheat.

Messrs. Shevlin and Hixon of Minneapolis and La Crosse respectively, president and vice president of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company were here on business the first of the week.

DIED:—At the residence of Anton Peterson of Wyandotte, May 10th, his mother-in-law age 64 years. The funeral took place from the Swedish Luth. church of this place Monday at 2 p. m.

Rev. and Mrs. J. Olson were very pleasantly surprised by a crowd of the ladies of St. Hilaire Monday evening May 13th. They left a handsome present. A very pleasant evening was spent by all.

A number of men at the mill have been layed off since last Thursday night owing to a breakdown of a large pulley and shaft of the gang saws. The management expect to have the repairs needed here in a few days.

Anyone finding a Lanphere hat in the river below here needent look for the man as he was rescued at this point yesterday afternoon. It was a close call considering the river being six feet deep and the man five foot eight.

Joseph Gothier of Terrebonne ruptured a blood vessel and died last week while in the act of chasing a calf over the farm. The deceased was married less than a year ago and leaves a young widow to mourn his untimely death.

Julius Pleth, the land man has given away free of charge 75 bushels of seed corn and found it necessary to order 15 bushels more Monday to supply the farmers in this county. They are all out after the reward Mr. Pleth offers.

St. Hilaire has all kinds of nimrods, and most of them have high priced guns, but for lack of interest no gun club has been organized — to date. Whats the matter—waiting for the young prairie chicks to hatch and practice on them?

The many friends of Harry Swenson, formerly of this place, will be pleased to learn that he now holds down the responsible position of depot agent at Georgetown, this state. He remits to the SPECTATOR; says he is getting along fine, and sends best regards to all the boys.

County Commissioner Johnson was in the village Monday while enroute to the county seat to attend a meeting of the board. He carried with him a petition which signified the ditching of twelve miles in the townships of Wyandotte and River Falls which he will present.

A fire department was organized last Friday night with A. R. Jones as chief; Andy McNabb assistant chief; C. A. Hughes secretary and B. E. Burkee treasurer. The charter list remains open until next Sunday for members to join at which time they expect to complete arrangements for the new organization.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

Do you want one of those new lots on Riverside avenue? They are the best in town and only seven are left. They will double in value in two years. A new sidewalk will be built this year. Look them over and you will be convinced that they are the best in town. Terms easy and prices right. Call on H. E. Ives.

It isn't best to be too sensitive in this rough-and-tumble world. Don't allow yourselves to worry over what people say about you. No matter what you say or do, it will appear different to different eyes. One will pronounce it just the right thing, while others will denounce it wholly bad. At best you can please only a certain few while a great majority don't know what you are doing and don't care. Do what you think is best under the circumstances and let the result be what it may.—Exchange.

We know a man in this town who is very good now, and that is commendable. Such conduct is always to be encouraged and smiled upon. But the men who were boys when he was, say that the reason he got good was because he was a "piker," which means that he would help drink and eat where he had not paid, so they kicked him out. After that he went right straight and became a good man. While he is to be congratulated, they laugh at him. Therefore it is a pretty good plan not to begin being tough.

A man who chewed 20 cents worth of tobacco each week, concluded to try the tobacco cure. In two weeks he ate up $1.20 of cure and for the next two weeks he used 10 cents worth of candy, 5 cents worth of cough drops, 5 cents worth of peanuts and 5 cents worth of chewing gum. During these two weeks he also consumed two large rubber erasures and ate the rubber tips from 14 lead pencils, chewed up a dozen pen holders and browsed off his mustache as high as he could reach. He now chews tobacco for the sake of economy.

To cure a cough in one day, take the Imperial cough syrup. Guaranteed to cure. For sale at the new Drug Store.

Mrs. P. S. Hall Dead.

Last Wednesday May 8th at the residence of Mrs. Sandmoen occured the death of Mrs. Peter S. Hall. The deceased had been in failing health for some time past and the end was not unexpected. The death of Mrs. Hall augmented by the sad affliction the family has had the past year. She being the third member who has died in that length of time. The funeral was held from the M. E. church Friday, interment in the Swedish Luthern cemetry.

Need Watching.

It is reported that steel range peddlers and lightning rod agents are working the surrounding country selling a cheap quality of stoves and lightning rods at exorbitant prices. When a farmer is unable to pay cash they are always willing to accept his note for the amount and it is usually in this way that these smooth-tongued fakirs do the most of their crooked work, as this note generally turns up later at a near by collection agency for a considerably larger sum than its giver thought he singed for. It would be best for all to have no dealings with any of these wily schemers, as they are usually the worst sinners on this side of hades. A farmer struck by a steel range peddler or lightning rod agent is often worse off than if struck by lightning.

Dr. Morley, Crookston's eye, ear and nose specialist is again in his office after two months of study in New York City.

Three soldiers went at our land's behest to fight for the girls that their hearts loved best; and over the heart as a regular fixture, each fellow carried his dear girl's picture. "I would stake my soul," said one man at night, "my love is as true as the angels bright." "And mine," said the second "has sworn by all she'll die a nun if I chance to fall." "And mine," cried a third, as he took a part, "now stays at home with a broken heart." Then all three swore they were pearls of pearls, and brought out the pictures of these true girls. What made them swear as they turned away, what made them think 'twas a cold, cold day? Alack and alas! 'twas a burning shame, the dear girl's pictures were all the same.—Ex.

Take Notice.

Parties having cows in Village herd must deliver same to the corral by 7:30 a. m., those not there at that time will have to take them to the herd on the prairie wherever they may be. The herd will return to corral on or about six o'clock each evening where the cows must be taken out by owners as I will not be held responsible. Cattle herded at the rate of $1.00 per month, payable the 25th of every month.

Climate and Crop Bulletin.

For the week ending May 13th, 1901.

The week was cool except on the 9th with frosts on the morning of the 11th. The temperatures on the morning of the 12th were below the freezing point, and on the 13th they were about the freezing point. Frosts so early in May very rarely cause injury. Except for snow flurries in Polk county on the 12th the Red River valley was practically without precipition during the week; elsewhere there was considerable cloudy weather, with rains on the 6th, 7th and 9th, which were heavy enough in some southwestern counties to delay corn planting, and very light in small parts of the southeast. The rains were of very great benefit to late sown grains, insuring an even stand and good growth. The cool weather has started the wheat oats and barley to stooling, a process which was suspended during the warm weather of the previous week. In the Red River valley the dry weather has allowed the low places to dry out, so that weath seeding is finished on lands that could not be reached heretofore, and oat and barley seeding has also gone on rapidly. All the early sown grains are growing well, with good stands and healthy appearance, and the late sown are coming up well. The preparation of the soil for corn and potato planting is going on, and large areas of these crops are already planted, and in a few places the early planted are up; the same applies to flax. Some sugar beet seed has been sown in McLeod and Le Sueur counties. The prospects for the clover and timothy crops are good.

L. D. Marshall, well knows here has been appointed to the position of chief grain inspector for the state with a salary of $3,500 per year. The appointment is a good one.

—Julius Pleth, the land man wants to buy your farm. Do you want to sell? If so call at his office two doors south of Hotel Markham.

A News Service Without Parallel.

There is ample justifications for the claim made by The Chicago Record-Herald that its readers enjoy every day in the week, Sundays included, a news service that is without parallel in range and completeness. The reason is obvious—the combination of the varied and extensive facilities of the two great dailies, The Chicago Record and The Chicago Times-Herald. In addition to the independent news facilities of both papers The Record Herald receives the complete news service of The New York Herald, The New York Tribune, and The Associated Press; and when it is considered that its news columns are supplemented by all the special features so popular in The Chicago Record and the Chicago Times-Herald, it will be seen that The Record-Herald holds a unique place among the great newspapers of the United States.

Telephones in France.

One of the most frequent uses to which the telephone is put by French country subscribers is that of an alarm to wake them in the morning. Just before going to bed they notify central at what time they wish to be called and central rings them up at that time. It is amusing to notice the different things people devise to arouse them from their slumbers. The trouble is that they don't sleep well during the night, but fall into a sound slumber near morning. If you want to sleep well, so that you will wake up refreshed and invigorated, drink "Golden Grain Belt" beer. It is pure and nourishing because it is brewed from the purest barley malt and hops. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex Thompson, Crookston.

To Odd Fellows.

The Pan-American Exposition will be held in the City of Buffalo, N. Y., U. S. A., from May 1st to Nov. 1st 1901.

The Oddfellows of Buffalo, desiring to exemplify the teaching of our grand order—that of extending an honorable reception, fraternal greeting and generous hospitality to our brethern from "strange cities and distant States"—have opened an Oddfellows' Headquarters at 213 Ellicott Square, Buffalo where books of registry will be kept, and competent parties constantly in charge to give (free of cost) reliable information to the visiting Oddfellows, his family and friends, sojourning in our city, and where one may be directed to clean and respectable hotels, boarding or private houses.

Visitors are at liberty to have telegrams and mail addressed to them in care of said headquarters.

A reliable guide, with maps of the City and Exposition Grounds, will be on sale for the convenience of visiting brethren.

Your members visiting Buffalo during the Exposition are cordially invited to call at I. O. O. F. Headquarters that we may have the pleasure of meeting and greeting you, and aiding you as much as we are able, along the lines indicated.

It will be an advantage for each brother and sister to present an "official receipt" or other means of identification.

Hoping we may have the pleasure of meeting many of the members of your Lodge during the comming summer, we remain, [illegible]

Yours in F. L. and T.

"It Seems as Though my Back Would Break."

Is it not true? Women suffer, feel the very life crushed out of them, grow old before their time. Each morning wake up determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet—

Before the morning is very old the dreadful BACKACHE attacks them, the brave spirit sinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them and they fall upon the couch crying:

"Why should I suffer so? What can I do?"

The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.

Backache is only a symptom of more fatal trouble—heed its warning in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will stop your torture and restore your courage. Your pains come from unnatural menstruation or some derangement of the womb. Let those who are suffering read Mrs. Morton's letter and be guided by her experience.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN.

MRS E.F MORTON

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been so delighted with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would write and thank you. My system was entirely run down. I suffered with terrible backache in the small of my back and could hardly stand upright; was more tired in the morning than on retiring at night. I had no appetite. Since taking your Compound I have gained fifteen pounds, and am gaining every week. My appetite has improved, have no backache, and I look better than I ever looked before.

"I shall recommend it to all my friends, as it certainly is a wonderful medicine."—MRS. E. F. MORTON, 826 York St., Cincinnati, O.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free.

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who can show that the above testimonial is not genuine, or was published before obtaining the writer's special permission.—LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

Brooklyn Lad in a Big Trust.

One Brooklyn lad of fifteen years is happy because he is a part of the great billion-dollar steel trust. Nearly a year ago Secretary William H. Baldwin wrote to the principal of a grammar school, asking that two of the brightest members of the graduating class be sent to him as candidates for the position of office boy. "Tom," a handsome, manly-looking boy, and another lad were sent, and "Tom's" good looks and neat appearance won the day. He was installed in the position at $2.50 per week, and in a short time so thoroughly mastered his duties that his salary was doubled. He won the regard of many of the millionaire steel magnates, many of them having told him of their own beginnings in business as humble as his own. When the organization of the big trust was completed "Tom's" salary was raised to $7 per week, so that he might have something to mark the the commencement of his connection with the biggest aggregation of capital in the world. He thinks trusts are a good thing.—New York World.

Policeman's Novel Report.

Policeman William Reed of the New Brunswick police force, made the following entry upon the report book this morning:

"Last night, as I was patrolling my beat, and was at the corner of Albany and Peace streets, a large dog came trotting over the Albany street bridge, with a bundle in his mouth. I called to him to stop, to ask what was in the bundle, and where he secured it; but he would not tell me, and, dropping the bundle, ran away. I opened the bundle, and found a large quantity of striped bed-ticking.

—"William Reed."

The bundle was filed with the report. The police do not know whether it was an honest messenger dog or a wicked highway dog.

Chic French Purse.

A novelty French purse is attracting many buyers by its originality and humor. It is a small hand purse, with a roundwhite metal clasp, and has a chamois bag attached. This metal disc is pressed into the features of a jolly, big, smiling-mouthed wag or buffoon. By pressing two small springs on each side of his mouth it opens for the change to pass through, and then closes again. Any silver, from a 50-cent piece, may be dropped into it. When taking money out, the purse may be opened in the usual way—by pressing on the top of the head.

Without Food for Four Weeks.

A remarkable case of a young man living without food or drink for four weeks is that of Corporal Andre Desarts, who, while walking along a road near Brest, fell into a pit 100 feet deep, which had been dug as a part of mining work. He could not get out, and passers-by were so infrequent that for twenty-eight days he was imprisoned in the bottom of the excavation. At last some men on their way to work passed near the pit and heard faint cries for help coming from it. They investigated and found the soldier. He was exceedingly weak, and his body had been gnawed frightfully by vermin. Though his condition was extremely serious, doctors who were called said they thought they could save his life.—New York Press.

A Miracle Explained.

Bryant, Mo., May 13th.—The sensational cure of Mrs. M. A. Goss of this place has sent a ripple of excitement all over Douglas county, and Dodd's Kidney Pills, the remedy in question, are receiving the greatest advertisement any medicine has ever had in this state.

To satisfy the many inquiries which she finds it impossible to answer by letter, Mrs. Goss has sent the following statement of her case to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

"I did not think I could live a day and suffer as I have lived and suffered for months, with Sciatica and Rheumatism. I used baths and liniments of all kinds. Two physicians treated me, one of them for two months. Nothing helped me in the least. I never slept more than ten or fifteen minutes at a time. I was bed-fast, and had to lie on one side all the time. I used to wish for death to deliver me from such torture.

"A friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after I had used them a week I began to improve, and in about four weeks I could sit up in bed. A few days later I walked a quarter of a mile and back. I now do all my own cooking and housework. The pain has entirely left me, and I am a well woman. I have taken altogether sixteen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life.

—"Mrs. M. A. Goss."

People come for miles to see Mrs. Goss and hear her wonderful story. Dodd's Kidney Pills are working marvelous cures in Missouri.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Cream Separators on the Farm.

On invitation of Secretary F. D. Coburn, of the Kansas State Board of Agriculture, an address was delivered at the Board's recent annual meeting by Mr. Geo. Morgan, a long-time, observant dairy and creamery man, on the subject of using cream separators on the farm. Mr. Morgan is entirely convinced of the desirability of the milk-producer having his separating done at home rather than at the factory or station, and some of his observations are as follows:

The value of the farm separator to the private dairyman has already passed the experimental stage. The evidence of our experimental stations and the testimony of all who have made a careful, intelligent comparison between the gravity system and the modern cream separator is practically a unit in favor of the latter for the private dairyman. The question as to its advantages in localities where creameries are established is one confronting creameries at this time in their operating expenses. This applies alike both to creamery and patron, whether under co-operative or proprietary management, it makes but little difference. All are vitally interested in the expense account. If the eastern creamery enjoys a patronage of from 10,000 to 30,000 pounds of milk per day, while many of our creameries are running along at from 3,000 to 5,000 pounds, then we have lost much of the advantages we possess on account of our cheaper dairy foods in the increased cost of operating. Evidently, as long as present conditions exist, some system of centralization is inevitable.

The farm separator, we think, will assist greatly in solving this problem. It means a minimum of labor with a maximum of profit. The product is carried in condensed form from the patron to the creamery. In our state, dairying is incidental to beef and pork production. The conditions at times are peculiar and perplexing. The farmer has a way of putting the creamery on half rations of milk. When times and crops are good, it is no uncommon thing to find him at milking time quietly sitting on the fence with a complacent smile upon his countenance, as he watches the calf do the milking, but when reverses come, the cow and the creamery are counted amongst his best friends and assets. Where large investments are made in skimming stations and these spells strike the patrons, it often proves very disastrous to the management, as they feel compelled to keep running though the patronage has gone below any chance of profit. We feel safe in saying that fully one-third of the skimming stations in this state from October to May do not pay running expenses. It is in these localities where the farm separator will prove of the greatest benefit. If the patronage is light then the expense is correspondingly light. We place the average cost of a skimming station at $1,000 and the average cost of operating at $600 per annum.

At points where the patronage is liberal, any radical change would not be advisable. It will to a great extent work its own way. But at these weaker, non-paying stations much good can be accomplished by the use of the farm separator, especially in territory where the distance is too great to haul milk. True, to carry out this plan the farmer must make an investment for which he is amply compensated in the increased value of the skim milk and the convenience of having it on the farm morning and evening to be fed while warm, sweet and fresh and in the best possible condition to be fed to the young animal. The milk patron often suffers a severe loss on account of his Sunday's milk during the heated term. He also loses again by feeding new milk to the calf for six or eight weeks on account of the danger incurred in feeding the creamery milk. Where milk is fed from the farm separator by careful management and the use of Kafir-corn-meal, the calf can be put upon the skimmed milk at 15 days old. It has been our experience that the patrons, with from 10 to 15 cows save enough in one year to pay for a $100 machine.

Poultry Briefs.

It will do no harm to give the poultry some powdered charcoal, which is a thing very easy to obtain on farms where wood is burned almost exclusively.

• • •

Diseased stock should be got rid of as it seldom pays to keep birds that have been sick. As layers they are of little value, and as breeders they are worse than nothing. Keep only healthy fowls, and be sure that only such are used for breeding purposes.

• • •

It is a pity that so much of the waste material at butcher shops is permitted to be lost. All the bones and scraps should be made into poultry feed, and the local poultry raisers should appreciate it enough to ensure the disposal in that way of all the by-products mentioned.

• • •

The attempt to export eggs in large numbers has been about given up. A year ago considerable quantities were being sent across the Atlantic in the hope of a large profit from English buyers. But the consignments failed to draw the prices anticipated, and the exporters are said to have lost money, comparing prices received in England to the prices that might have been obtained in the United States for the same eggs. It is the same with the egg trade as it is with the trade in butter—the home market eclipses the foreign market, and as long as this is the case the results of exportations will be always the same. This spring few eggs have been exported.

• • •

Some poultrymen that have a fancy trade, consisting of well-to-do private customers, get into the habit of buying eggs from other producers to keep the supply equal to the demand. The ultimate outcome of this is the loss of the fancy trade through the deterioration of stock sold, the bad eggs of neighbors getting into the lots labelled "strictly fresh."

• • •

The American consul at Berlin says that the Germans are a nation of geese eaters and that the goose is the standard luxury of that people. They appear on the tables during nine months of the year. These birds are extensively bred, but yet it is difficult to meet the demand. To meet this surplus demand immense quantities of geese are imported from Russia, and at one station on the frontier about 15,000 geese arrived daily. A special goose train comes from Russia daily and has in it 15 cars of geese. On Mondays this train consists of 30 or more cars.

• • •

Reports from England say that the growth of the poultry industry there is hampered by the government protection of foxes. A report issued by the secretary of the National Poultry organization says: "A question which has pressed itself forward the past year is that of fox hunting, so far as it affects poultry keeping. That the preservation of foxes is repressive is acknowledged. Too long this question has been ignored, and, as a result, the growth of this industry is checked in certain districts. Loud complaints are made by the farmers as to their losses, and by hunters as to unfair claims on the hunt funds. But the difficulty is capable of solution, provided that to the houses out in the open, small runs are attached, in which the birds can be fed at night and enclosed, without the labor entailed by a second visit to close them up. The cost is small, and were this system universally adopted, the loss of birds would be reduced to a minimum, whilst the hunts could reasonably be asked to pay a fair value for such birds as are killed by foxes." This is a most astonishing condition of affairs, nearly as bad as in some of our own states where worthless curs are kept in numbers sufficient to make sheep raising impossible.

Horses for Farm Work.

Some of the articles we see in the papers regarding this subject are truly remarkable considering the experience which this country has gone through in the past twenty years in seeking to improve its horse stock. The experience has been a sad one in many respects in that in many districts it has led to the creation of a new breed of misfits and mongrels having few if any of the virtues of the original stock of the country and as few of those of the imported breeds used to effect a change in the blood. Despite the results of ill-advised crosses and mixtures of blood in horse breeding alleged teachers are still busy spreading false doctrine as to methods of obtaining suitable stock. The latest conglomeration of utter bosh which we have seen is found in an essay on "the ideal horse for the western farmer" which has been awarded the first prize by the Indian Head Agricultural Society (Canadian Northwest) and asserts that the Cleveland Bay best fills the bill for the purpose stated. This assertion we are not going to criticize for the breed mentioned is a good one, but what we object to is the argument which is made in connection with the matter of the essay. The writer after describing the breed and dilating upon its characteristics says under the head of breeding: "A Cleveland Bay mare may be to advantage put to a three-fourth bred or a Hackney stallion. It is most important to remember that 'like produces like,' therefore this fact should be taken into consideration with regard to the selection of the parents." What rot this is to be sure! If Cleveland mares are selected as the molds from which to produce farm horses "like" will only produce "like" when the breed is kept pure. The law of heredity teaches that only the fixed characteristics of a given breed are hereditary and transmitted to the progeny. Why then cross the pure bred mare with a three-quarter bred stallion or cross with a stallion of another pure breed? It was by making mistakes of this sort that the country became flooded with nondescript horses which could not be used for breeding purposes and were of little profit or utility being without any special qualifications for anything. Only where one breed of horses has been chosen and stuck to has real progress been made in filling a district with uniform stock of good qualifications for the special breed purpose of the breed adopted or bred up to by continued grading in the same direction by continuous use of pure bred sires of the same blood. Nothing was ever accomplished by the use of a three-quarter bred stallion, bull, or boar in breeding towards a desired ideal or type and nothing will ever be accomplished by such foolishness in breeding. Little has been accomplished by the crossing of one pure breed of horse with another pure breed outside of the product of the first cross and that cross cannot be successfully used for breeding purposes. The three-quarter bred horse and the cross-bred horse possess no fixed breed characteristics, hence they have no prepotence from heredity to reproduce their own good qualities upon their progeny. For this reason the three-quarter bred stallion should not be used for breeding purposes and this is equally true of the cross bred progeny of two pure breeds. The male progeny should be retained for breeding purposes but should always be bred to the same breed of pure blooded males which gave them origin. Five top crosses of pure blood of the same sort upon females graded up in this way from native or improved stock will result in a practically pure bred animal and even that animal should not be used as a sire; the blood should be further improved by continued use of pure sires upon the female high grades. For farm use we want a suitable animal for the given work to be done but no matter what breed is considered best improvement will never be attained by occasional changes of blood by crossing or admixture with other breeds.

POOR LITTLE JOHNNY!
AND HIS "TUMMY"!
Small boys, and many times large ones, and occasionally girls, too, big and little, suffer terribly from convulsive pains or "cramps" in the bowels and stomach—pain so violent that it "doubles up" the ones attacked, and makes it impossible for them to stand up.

Some people call it colic, but most honest, plain-spoken people call it "belly-ache" and very properly, for the seat of the trouble is in the bowels, and caused by the violent efforts of the bowels to rid themselves of something which doesn't belong there. The small boy usually gets it from over-eating or from eating forbidden fruit, and suffers mostly in the summer time.

It's spring now, and "in times of peace, prepare for war." Let the boys and girls and the big folks, too, for that matter, clean out the clogged channels filled with winter bile and putrid undigested food, strengthen the 30-feet of bowel canal, liven up the liver, and "summer belly-aches" will have no terrors, because they won't happen. The way to make the body ache-proof is to use CASCARETS, gentle, sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, the perfect system cleaners and bowel strengtheners. For fear that anybody in the family should ever be attacked by belly-ache, keep a box of CASCARETS in the house always, and remember that all pains and troubles in your insides are

ARE LEAVING CHINA

GEN. CHAFFEE ISSUES HIS FAREWELL ORDER.

Ends the American Relief Expedition in China—Troops Will Board the Transports at Taku Wednesday—Will Go Direct to Manila—Ministers Are Hampered in Their Work by Having to Wait for Instructions by Their Home Governments — Von Waldersee Threatens Chinese.

Pekin, May 20.—At midnight Saturday night Gen. Chaffee issued his farewell order ending the American relief expedition in China. The American troops will board the transports next Wednesday at Taku and Thursday will leave direct for Manila. M. Pichon, the French minister, left here for home yesterday morning.

A meeting of the foreign ministers will be held to-day, but it is not likely much will be accomplished as some ministers have not yet received instructions from their governments. The ministers, commenting upon the blame attached to them by the people for their slowness, say that as a matter of fact they are powerless to act without orders from home. One of the foreign ministers said yesterday that he had been instructed to co-operate heartily with the other ministers. He found upon consultation with his colleagues that their instructions were absolutely different from his. He said co-operation was practically impossible.

Field Marshal Count von Waldersee has been in communication with Li Hung Chang regarding the condition of affairs in the Ohenting-fu district. A force of Chinese regulars were recently defeated by Boxers in that district and Count von Waldersee threatens to send a German force to restore order, in which case the regulars will probably themselves suffer severely. Great unrest is reported in this district. Business is stagnant and large numbers of the inhabitants are crossing into the province of Honan. Carts are in great demand for assisting them in their flight.

SURRENDER ON GUNBOATS.

Filipinos Received on Warships and Are Now in Arsenal.

Washington, May 20.—The navy department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Kempff, at Cavite:

"Ensign Owen advises that the Urdaneta and Gardouqui received on board May 17 Gen. Mascardo, 20 officers, 184 men, 226 rifles at Binong Bay and Morang. They are now in arsenal, bound for Marcisco, where many desire to surrender to army. Others surrendered to Draper, marine officer at Olangjo. This is the last insurgent force in Zambeles province. Gunboats resumed survey work."

Naval officers assume that the portion of the cablegram reading: "Are now in arsenal bound for Marciso," signifies that the insurgents were received aboard the gunboats in token of a technical surrender, and then sent ashore and detained in the arsenal.

ROUTED ALL COMMANDOES.

Gen. Blood Concludes a Successful Campaign.

Cape Town, May 20. — Gen. Bindon Blood has just concluded a successful concerted movement against the Boers in the Northern Transvaal. The British columns engaged in the operations covered a wide area of territory, routing all the commandoes that opposed them and capturing 1,000 Boers and great quantities of supplies, stock and wagons in various districts. They also compelled the so-called Transvaal government to move again. Gen. Blood conducted the operations in the center, with Col. Plumer on his left flank and Gen. Kitchener on his right. The Boer commander, Gen. Ben Viljoen, abandoned everything and succeeded in making his escape with a few mounted men. The Boers did not make a stand at any point.

KRUGER STILL CONFIDENT.

He Believes That the Boers Will Yet Win.

London, May 20.—A man who recently succeeded in interviewing Mr. Kruger reports that he is fanatically confident that the Boers will win in the end. He is not bitter against England, as he considers that the country has been misled. He was pathetically anxious to know if the war in South Africa had hastened the death of Queen Victoria. He also declared that he did not believe that God would desert his chosen people—the Boers.

ROBBERS ESCAPE FROM POSSE.

Bank Burglars and Citizens of Hurland, Mo., Have a Pistol Fight.

Quincy, Ill., May 20.—Five men who attempted to rob the Farmers' Bank at Hurland, Mo., fifty miles west of Quincy, secured no booty, but they escaped after a running fight with citizens. The robbers got into the building and were drilling holes in the safe when they were discovered by the town marshal. He gave the alarm, and a posse of citizens soon assembled, armed with revolvers and shotguns. The robbers fled and a battle ensued in which many shots were exchanged, but no one was wounded. The robbers succeeded in making their escape to the woods and have not yet been captured. Large posses are searching the country for them, but no trace of the men has been found

Two Men Drowned.

Muskegon, Mich., May 20.—Andrew Russia and Stephen Balog were drowned in Mona lake by the overturning of their boat while fishing. When Russia's wife was informed she jumped into the lake with suicidal intent.

James Carruthers Drowns Himself.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 20. — James Carruthers, a former well known hotel man of this city, committed suicide by jumping into the river. Despondency is said to have been the cause. He was forty-six years old.

KILLED HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW.

Family Quarrel Ends in a Tragedy —Murderer Escapes.

St. Paul, May 20. — Henry Mingers went to the home of his sister, 605 South Smith avenue, at 9 o'clock last night and killed her husband, Frank Greipel, by firing three shots from a 38-caliber revolver into his body. Mingers made his escape. One of the shots entered the breast above the heart, a second passed through the center of the breast, and a third bullet struck the left temple. There are two bullet wounds on the left forearm, but these it is thought were caused by the victim raising his arm for protection. The body was removed to the morgue and Coroner Miller will hold and inquest and post mortem examination today. The tragedy was the climax of a series of quarrels between the two men it is stated.

THREE NOW REPORTED DEAD.

Lake Bemidji Disaster Grows Worse as the Final Count Is Made.

Bemidji, Minn., May 20. — The Norwegian celebration disaster was more horrible than reported. Joe Marchaud, twenty-six years old, of Shevlin; Fred Driven, ten years old, and Richard Zacharias, eleven years old, both of Bemidji, lie in the bottom of the lake, and Fred McCauley, twelve years old, and Adolph Zacharias, ten years old, lie at the point of death from burns all over their bodies. The other injured are recovering. Dozens of boats were out all day dragging the lake without success. G. A. Smith of Solway and Albert Snecta of Rosby are in the hospital covered with burns, but will recover.

School Scheme Works Well.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 20.—The centralized school system has proven very successful wherever put in operation, and already has many strong advocates in this section of the state. It is the intention to establish and carry out the centralization idea in Bath township, east of this city. It is estimated that a saving of $1,146 can be saved by the new system and at the same time give better service to the scholars in attendance.

Militia Will Participate.

Fargo, N. D., May 20. — Replies are being received from the members of the different militia organizations in answer to the invitation to be present during the Fargo fire festival. All are of an encouraging nature and the majority are expected to be present. The soldier feature will also be in the nature of a reunion, as so many of the members of the militia are also veterans of the Philippine service.

Homestake Tunnel on Fire.

Lead, S. D., May 20.—One of the old tunnels in the Homestake mine has been discovered to be on fire. It has been burning for sometime and has gained considerable headway. There is no danger of its spreading to other portions of the mine. The fire is in a portion of the mine that has been abandoned for several years. It will be a difficult matter to get the fire under control.

Promising Berry Crop.

Sparta, Wis., May 20.—Prospects for berries and other small fruit in this section have never been as favorable as at present. The spring has been early and exceedingly warm, with sufficient showers to keep the ground moist. Growers think we are now safe from frosts and say unless something unforeseen happens the crop will be immense. All other crops look splendid.

New State Bank.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 20.—Arlington is to have a new state bank, to be established by J. B. Sullivan and John McKenzie of Lake Benton, Minn., and A. P. Bertelsen of Elkton, S. D. Mr. Sullivan will have the active management of the institution, which will be opened for business as soon as incorporation is perfected and a building can be completed.

Found in a Cave.

Helena, Mont., May 20.—C. R. Engle, a Beaverhead county ranchman who has been missing two weeks, has been found. A searching party found him in a cave in the mountains. He was in an irrational condition from exposure and lack of food. He soon rallied and will probably recover. His actions are beyond explanation.

Sweet Girl Graduates.

Winona, Minn., May 20.—The list of graduates has been announced at the young ladies' seminary in this city and is as follows: Literary, Miss Mae Madden of Rochester, Miss Mae Erwin of Fisher and Miss Ada Talbot of Winona; piano, Miss Anna Malick of Sleepy Eye and Miss Maud Schneider of Winona.

Foundrymen Strike.

Kenosha, Wis., May 20.—Five hundred men are out of employment here on account of the strike in the foundry of the Simmons Manufacturing company, and if no settlement of the strike is reached within a few days the entire factory will be closed down, adding 600 more men to the ranks of the idlers.

Steamer Goes Ashore.

Milwaukee, May 20. — The steamer Nyack of the Crosby line, went ashore at North Point, this city, during a fog. All the passengers were taken aboard a tug and conveyed to this city. Her damage is not thought to be serious.

Iron Near Anoka.

Anoka, Minn., May 20.—Patrick Manley of Coon Creek, about ten miles north of Minneapolis, thinks he has an iron mine. He has sent samples to Duluth and they assayed 60 per cent iron.

Killed by a Train.

Hastings, Minn., May 20. — Adam Weller, a prominent business man of Hampton, was killed by a passenger train while crossing the Great Western track at this place. He leaves a wife and two children.

Construction Resumed.

Faribault, Minn., May 20.—Work has been resumed on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern, and Second street is closed temporarily. The cut for the deflection of the river has been begun at this point.

MEMORIAL DAY
1901

The Remembered Grave.

By Mary E. Wilkens.

"I guess there won't be a great show of flowers on Sylvester's grave this year," said Sarah Cook. Her voice had a certain triumph in it, but it ended in a decorous sigh.

"I guess there won't, either," returned her sister Mrs. Kemp. "I guess Phebe Ann is too sick to think much about it." Her voice sounded like Sarah's.

Lucy Kemp dropped her sewing for a minute and turned her face toward the window. "It seems 'most too bad, don't it?" she said, meditatively. "When she's done so much every year, and thought so much about it."

"I don't know as I think it's too bad," said Mrs. Kemp. "Of course I'm sorry Phebe Ann is sick, but when it comes to these flowers she's always covered Sylvester's grave with, Decoration day, I guess there was a great deal of it for show. It would have seemed different if he had been in the war, but I've thought a good many times, when I've seen Sylvester's grave with more flowers on it than any of the soldier's, that Phebe Ann had a little eye to what folks would say, for all she felt so bad."

"There's the band!" cried Lucy.

It was a very warm day for the season—almost as warm as midsummer. The windows were wide open. The two women and the girl leaned their heads out and listened. They could hear far-away music. Two little girls with their hands full of flowers ran past.

"They're just forming down at the town hall," said Lucy. "Annie Dole and Lottie are just going."

"They came over here for flowers this morning," said her mother, "and I told 'em I hadn't any to give. All I had was lilacs, besides that little early rose bush, and they'd got all the lilacs they wanted of their own, and there was only just three roses on that bush, and I could not bear to cut 'em. The procession ain't coming—the music don't sound a mite nearer. It won't be here for an hour yet."

"I don't s'pose Phebe Ann's husband will lift his finger to help us, even if she should be taken away, and he left without a chick nor child in the world," said Mrs. Kemp.

Phebe Ann's husband was her own dead husband's brother, but she never spoke of him by his own name.

"I wonder how much Phebe Ann's husband has got?" said Sarah Cook.

"Well, I guess he's laid by a little something. They must have, with no family!"

"Mebbe he will do something if it ever happens that he ain't under anybody else's thumb."

"It won't make any difference now. He's laid under the thumb so long that he's all flattened out of the shape he was made in. He used to bow kind of sideways behind Phebe Ann's back when I met him, but he don't do that now. I met him face to face the other day, and he never looked at me. I don't know what poor Thomas would say if he was alive. I wonder what Lucy is picking lilacs for. Lucy!"

"What say?" Lucy's sweet, thin voice called back. Her smooth, fair head was half hidden in a great clump of lilac bushes by the gate. She was bending the branches over and breaking off full purple clusters.

"What you picking those lilacs for?"

"I just thought I'd pick a few."

"What for? I ain't going to have any in the house! They're too sweet—they're sickish!"

"I ain't going to bring them into the house," said Lucy. She let a branch fly back and went across the yard with a great bunch of lilacs in her hands.

"I wonder what she's up to?" said her mother.

Lucy returned just before the procession passed. The cemetery was a little way beyond the house. Her mother and aunt, and a neighbor who had come in stood at the windows listening eagerly to the approaching music. Lucy joined them. The procesison filed slowly past. The Grand Army men, the village band, the ministers and local dignitaries, and the rear-guard of children with flowers. An accompanying crowd thronged the sidewalks.

"I've just been saying to Sarah that Phebe Ann won't have Sylvester's grave decked out much this year," said Mrs. Kemp. Her voice was pleasanter and more guarded than before.

"I heard Phebe Ann was pretty low," said the neighbor.

Phebe Ann's husband went softly behind the nurse to the bedroom. Phebe Ann looked up at him and beckoned imperatively. He went close and bent over her. "What is it, Phebe Ann?" said he.

"Is it—Decoration day?" she whispered with difficulty, for she was growing very weak.

"Yes, 'tis, Phebe Ann," said her husband.

"Have you got—any flowers for—Sylvester's grave?"

"No, I ain't. I ain't thought of it, Phebe Ann, with your being so sick, and all."

"Go—get some!" she panted. Her motioning hand and her eager eyes spoke louder than her tongue.

"Yes, I will, I will, Phebe Ann! Don't you fret another mite about it."

The nurse followed him out of the room.

"I can't go to the green-house!" he whispered agitatedly. "It's five miles away!"

"Land, get any kind of flowers!" said the nurse. "Get dandelions and buttercups, if you can't find anything else."

The old man took his hat down with a bewildered air and went slowly out of the yard. At the gate he paused and looked around. There were no flowers in the yard; there were several bushes, rose and phlox, but it was too early for them to blossom. Over at the left stretched a field, and that was waving with green and gold. Phebe Ann's husband went over into the field and began pulling the buttercups in great handfulls, and the grass with them. He had all he could carry when he left the field and went solemnly down the road.

Sylvester's grave was at the farther side of the cemetery. The old man, with his load of buttercups and grass, made his way to it. The soldiers' graves were decorated with flags and flowers, but the people had gone. The cemetery was very still. When John Kemp reached Sylvester's grave, he started and stared. There was a great bunch of lilacs on the grave and three charming, delicate pink roses in a vase.

"I wonder who put those flowers there!" he muttered. He laid the buttercups and grass down on the grave; then he stood still. It was over twenty years since the boy Sylvester had been laid there—a little soldier who had fought only his own pain. "I wonder who put those flowers there!" John Kemp muttered again.

He went out of the cemetery, but instead of turning down the road toward his own home, walked hesitatingly the other way toward the house of his sister-in-law—Thomas' wife, as he always spoke of her.

Lucy's face was at one open window, her Aunt Sarah Cook's at the other.

"Lucy!" called the old man, standing at the gate.

Lucy came out to him tremblingly. Sarah Cook ran to tell her sister; she thought Phebe Ann must be dead.

"Do you know who put those flowers there?" asked the old man in a husky voice.

"I did," said Lucy. Her face flushed. "I thought there wouldn't be anybody to see to it, now Aunt Phebe Ann is sick," she explained timidly.

Her uncle looked wistfully at her, his eyes full of tears. "Sylvester was a dreadful sufferer," he said.

Lucy did not know what to say. She looked up at him, and her soft face seemed to take on distressed lines like his.

The old man turned abruptly and went away. "Phebe Ann is sinking," he said, indistinctly as he went.

Lucy's mother and her aunt rushed to the door to meet her. "Is Phebe Ann dead?" Sarah Cook called out. "No, she ain't dead," [illegible]

"What did he want to see you for?" asked Mrs. Kemp.

Lucy hesitated; a shamefaced look came over her face. "What did he want?" her mother asked, imperatively.

"He wanted to know who put some flowers on—Sylvester's grave."

"Did you?"

"Yes'm."

"What did you put on?"

"Some lilacs and—roses."

"You didn't pick those roses?"

"O, mother, the lilacs didn't seem quite enough! Aunt Phebe Ann has always done so much!" Lucy said.

Her mother and her aunt looked at each other. "I shouldn't have thought you'd have picked those roses without saying anything about it," said her mother, but her voice was embarrassed rather than harsh. She went back to the kitchen and proceeded with her work of making biscuits for supper. The sewing was all finished. Lucy set the table. After supper they went out in the cemetery and strolled about looking at the flowers, in the soft, low light. "Who brought all that mess of buttercups and grass, I wonder?" said Sarah Cook, as they stood over Sylvester's grave.

"I guess it must have been Phebe Ann's husband—it looks just like a man," Mrs. Kemp replied. Lucy got down on her knees and straightened the buttercups into a bouquet.

"I wonder if she'll live the night out," said Sarah Cook, soberly.

"I've listened to hear the bell toll every morning this week," said Mrs. Kemp. "I don't believe she can live much longer. I'd go up there tonight if I thought she wanted me to."

The next morning Mrs. Kemp, listening with her head thrust out of the window in the early sunlight, heard indeed the bell tolling for Phebe Ann. "She's gone," she told Sarah Cook and Lucy; and Lucy cried.

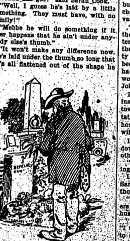
They all went to Phebe Ann's funeral and followed her to the grave. Mrs. Kemp's and Sarah Cook's eyes were red when they came home. "There were a great many good things about Phebe Ann, after all," Mrs. Kemp said.

"I always said there was," Sarah returned defiantly.

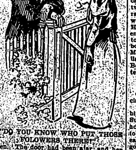
The morning after the funeral John Kemp came to the door. Lucy answered his knock. He looked old and dejected, but he tried to smile. "I want to see you a minute," said he. "No, I can't come in—not this morning. I'm coming before long. I hope things will be different from what they have been. It was her wish. I went home that day and told Phebe Ann how you'd put the flowers there, and she beckoned to me to come and lean over. Then she made out to tell me. She wanted you to have Sylvester's money that we put in the bank for him when he was born. It's been growing. We haven't spent any, excepting for the flowers, and its near five hundred dollars. She wanted me to give it to you right away, and you're going to have it just as soon as I can get it out of the bank. Phebe Ann said you could have some more schooling and not have to work so hard. And I guess you'll have more than that, too, some day, if you outlive me. Phebe Ann, she thought mebbe I could make some arrangements with your mother and aunt to come to our house and live, and take care of it. She said she didn't want any other women in there. She knew they were good housekeepers and would keep things the way she did. You tell your mother I'm coming in to see her some time before long."

John Kemp went feebly down the walk, and Lucy returned to the kitchen. The door had been ajar, and her mother and Sarah Cook had heard every word. They were both crying. "Coming just now when we didn't know which way to turn!" sobbed Sarah Cook. "Poor Phebe Ann!"

"Well, there's one thing about it," said Mrs. Kemp, brokenly, "there shan't one Decoration day go by as long as I live without Sylvester's grave being trimmed as handsome as if his mother was alive!—Youth's Companion.



"I WONDER WHO PUT THOSE FLOWERS THERE!"



"DO YOU KNOW WHO PUT THOSE FOLOWERS THERE?"

She Forgot Her English.

A young Russian woman, who has only been for a few months in this country, is an intrepid speaker of English, and is constantly telling her friends that she has mastered the language in this short space of time without any difficulty whatever. The other afternoon, when she called on a Baltimore girl, she was shown at once to the boudoir of her hostess, and found that young woman in charming neglige costume.

"I hope you will pardon my deshabille," the American girl said. "I have just come in."

"No, indeed, certainly not," the Russian maid replied, vivaciously, in her pretty accent, "I would not do so, no, no."

Then there was an embarrassed pause, and the American girl had just commenced, in a constrained voice, to talk of the weather and the Easter frocks, when there were signs of wild excitement from the Russian.

"The answer was 'yes,'" she exclaimed. "I have it all wrong. I have my English forgotten. The answer was most certainly 'yes.'"

And then the conversation ran on smoother lines.—Baltimore News.

A FAMOUS OLD HOUSE.

The house of Walter Baker & Co., whose manufactures of cocoa and chocolate have become familiar in the mouth as household words, was established one hundred and twenty-one years ago (1780) on the Neponset river in the old town of Dorsetshire, a suburb of Boston. From the little wooden mill, "by the rude bridge that arched the flood," where the enterprise was first started, there has grown up the largest industrial establishment of the kind in the world. It might be said that, while other manufacturers come and go, Walter Baker & Co. go on forever.

What is the secret of their great success? It is a very simple one. They have won and held the confidence of the great and constantly increasing body of consumers by always maintaining the highest standard in the quality of their cocoa and chocolate preparations, and selling them at the lowest price for which unadulterated articles of good quality can be put upon the market. They welcome honest competition; but they feel justified in denouncing in the strongest terms the fraudulent methods by which inferior preparations are palmed off on customers who ask for and suppose they are getting the genuine articles. The best grocers refuse to handle such goods, not alone for the reason that, in the long run, it doesn't pay to do it, but because their sense of fair dealing will not permit them to aid in the sale of goods that defraud their customers and injure honest manufacturers.

Every package of the goods made by the Walter Baker Company bears the well-known trade mark "La Belle Chocolatiere," and their place of manufacture, "Dorchester, Mass." Housekeepers are advised to examine their purchases, and make sure that other goods have not been substituted.

An attractive little book of "Choice Recipes" will be mailed free to any housekeeper who sends her name and address to Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., 153 State Street, Boston, Mass.

Different Kinds of Violets.

This is the month of violets, and whether blue, yellow or white, they are beautiful. Some have blossomed in April, and others will continue to blossom in June, but the height of the season for these lovely flowers comes in May. Of the blues, there are several common species, such as the arrow-leaved, the ovate-leaved, the bird's-foot and the abundant meadow violet. The birds'-foot violet is one of the commonest, but is one of the easiest species to distinguish, as its leaves are cut into sections. Then, there are several species of the yellow and white violets—each one beautiful and full of interest. Like the polygalas, violets have closed blossoms, which, though hidden away, are yet the surest seed-producers.—Woman's Home Companion.

Marksman Was After Prizes.

From Aiken county comes a story of Center Hitchcock and George Pollock, who is one of the crack pigeon shots of this country. At a recent shoot a spent shot from Mr. Pollock's gun found a lodging against Mr. Hitchcock's leg. It did not break the skin, but he limped painfully over to Mr. Pollock and upbraided him as follows:

"George, did you know that you had shot me?"

"No, I didn't know it."

"Well, I just thought you'd like to know it."

"Why should I want to know it? It doesn't interest me at all. Why, if I had killed you I wouldn't have won the prize."—New ork Worly.

"Ben Hur's" Close Squeak.

Success with a book is something like having lightning strike you. Up in Mackinac last summer Gen. Wallace told me how narrowly "Ben Hur" escaped publication. It was examined by two of Harper's readers, who reported rather adversely on it, thinking it would not be a good seller. Finally Mrs. Harper, a lady of strong religious tendencies, read it, and advised her husband to risk the expense of printing the book. Then there was "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," which ran a somewhat similar gantlet and was almost rejected.—Booth Tarkington, in Washington Interview.

Remedy That Worked.

Of course the other Ostrich knew precisely what would knock that cold.

"It's all caused by indigestion, old bird," said he. "I know just how it is! Suffered everything myself until I ran across Pepsicated Tabloids, and went to taking them regularly! Now I can eat a horseshoe Newburg just before going to roost, and get up in the morning bright as a button. Fact!"—Detroit Journal.

Reformation.

"What's become of that friend of yours who used to write poetry?"

"Do you mean Giddings?"

"Yes."

"O, he's reformed."

"How so?"

"He has stopped writing poetry, and now is general manager of a peanut stand."—Detroit Free Press.

END OF THE STRIKE

ALBANY STREET CAR DIFFICULTIES ARE SETTLED.

Both Sides Satisfied and Each Claims a Victory—National Guard Is Promptly Removed—Whole City of Albany Celebrates the Event—Funeral of One of the Strike Victims Almost Ends in a Riot—Crowd Catches Sight of a Soldier and Promptly Gives Chase—Cool Heads Prevent a Riot.

Albany, N. Y., May 20. — The great street railroad strike, lasting twelve days, requiring the presence of 3,000 members of the national guard in the city, costing the lives of two prominent merchants and entailing an expense to the county of Albany of over $39,000, is settled, and if the agreements are kept there will be no trouble for three years at least. The whole city of Albany united in celebrating the event. As usual, both sides to the controversy claim the credit. The withdrawal of the guards was as expeditious as was their bringing here.

The incidents of Sunday, the first day of active operation of all the allied lines since the strike, were very quiet. There were two features. The first was the two men shot by national guardsmen were buried in the afternoon, but the pouring rain kept away the thousands of sightseers that otherwise would have marked the occasion with their presence. The departure of the Twenty-third regiment early in the morning was the second feature of the day, and sermons from many city pulpits aided in closing the incident. The funeral of Leroy Smith was devoid of incident except that it was attended by city officials and directors of the street railway company. At the funeral of William Walsh there was nearly a riot. While the services were proceeding in the church the crowd that had been unable to gain admission saw a uniformed soldier coming down the street. Instantly the people were in a state of ferment. A rush was made for the unlucky soldier, but a few wise heads held the crowd back for a minute, while several others advised the man to run. Arguing that discretion was the better part of valor, he did run and avaided trouble. The starting out of the first car of the Intercity line shortly after noon was the cause of a demonstration. Pistols were fired, flags waved, torpedoes placed on the track and exploded, the motormen and conductors wore flags on their coats, and fully 200 men and women fought for the privilige of the first ride. When the conductor got the car started and rang up the fares he found he had 73 passengers, where usually 50 is a crowd. Within an hour so many cars were running that the monotony kept people from riding for novelty sake.

WEST POINT FEUD UNDECIDED.

Differences Between Cadets and Superintendent Are Before War Department.

West Point, N. Y., May 20. — The statement that eighty cadets are under arrest, growing out of the indignities directed against Col. Mills, superintendent of military academy, is believed here to be false. The story of the disrespect to Col. Mills was published nearly a month ago. An investigation followed and the findings of the court of inquiry were forwarded to the war department at Washington a few days ago and no recommendations have yet been made by the latter tribunal so far as known here. It is true, however, that two cadets are under arrest, the result of a court-martial for a breach of discipline which occurred a couple of weeks ago. Both Col. Mills and his adjutant, Capt. Rivers, are away from the post on leave.

Alger Sells His Timber.

Tacoma, Wash., May 20.—Gen. Russell A. Alger, ex-secretary of war, and ex-Senator Hawley have sold their large timber holdings in Skagit and Whatcom counties in the northwestern portion of the state to the Bellingham Bay & Eastern Railway company. The purchase includes nine miles of railroad running from Blanchard, on lower Bellingham bay, eastward to Alger station on the Great Northern, together with the equipment of the road. There is upward of 300,000,000 feet of timber on the lands. The sale was brought about through Peter Larson of Helena, Mont., who is president of the Bellingham Bay road.

Combine May Go Bump.

Tacoma, Wash., May 20. — The big combine of canneries of the Northwest which it was announced would be perfected May 1, and for which options were later extended to June 1, will not take form even at the last mentioned date. A further extension of thirty days will be asked when the present options have expired. The general opinion among fishermen is that the new combine will not be brought about this year, or until this season's pack has been put up.

Shot by a Boy.

Metropolis, Ill., May 20. — Dennis Reed, an eighteen-year-old boy, shot and seriously wounded George Williams. Reed had called on Williams' daughter against the latter's orders. Williams stepped into the room, objected to the young man's presence in his house and the shooting followed.

Prismatic Colors.

Mrs. Opie, the widow of the great portrait painter, whom some one has called the "inspired peasant," never, even in her old age, lost her love of bright colors. A little girl, Emma Martin, afterward known in literature as Emma Marshall, visited her one day and experienced a rare pleasure. She says:

On a screen in her drawing room were hung a number of prisms, which were suspended from chandeliers before the bell shaped globes came into fashion. I sat on a stool at my mother's feet, wondering what those long bits of glass could mean. Presently the brilliant rays of the western sunshine filled the room.

"Now," said Mrs. Opie, "thou mayst run over to that screen and give it a shake."

I did as I was bidden. "Be gentle," said my mother in a warning voice, but I gave the screen a vigorous shake.

Emerald, ruby and violet rays danced on the walls and ceiling and delighted me so intensely that I kept repeating the process; then my mother, afraid of mischief resulting, came and drew me back to her side. Mrs. Opie looked at me and said:

"If thou lovest bright colors, thee will never see anything more beautiful than the rainbow God sets in the sky."

Could Not Report Golf.

When the amateur golf championship was played at Wheaton in 1897 there was but one Chicago newspaper man who had the remotest conception of what the game was. Accordingly, the newspapers, with the exception of the Chicago Tribune, agreed to syndicate the work and put it all in this one man's hands. The Tribune refused to enter the combination and depended upon the exertions of a member of its own staff. But the Tribune reporter speedily realized his helplessness and appealed to his brother of the syndicate for aid. The latter obligingly handed over his copy, and the Tribune man set to work to make a few minor changes so that its kinship to the original should not be too apparent. Later in the evening he met his generous benefactor and told him of the changes he had made.

"In particular, the account of the play at the sixth hole between Forgan and Douglas. You said that 'Forgan rimmed the cup for a half.' 'Well, you know, old chap, that Forgan is a banker down town and a big man, while Douglas is just one of those Scotchmen. It seemed to me rather cheap to have Forgan doing that sort of thing for a half, so I just made it read that 'Forgan rimmed the cup with Douglas for a hundred.'"—Washington Capital.

Ants That Fight Spiders.

Few more wonderful adaptations are seen in the whole round of nature than the webs spiders spin to entrap the wary ant. They are not high hung, lacy affairs, caressing every breeze, but low set, silken tubes stretched in the grass, the crevices of rock or about tree roots. Ants of every size creep heedlessly into them. The spiders eat them with relish, but occasionally a very little spider and a very big ant engage in a duel to the death. If the spider can bite, the ant can sting, and does it with a right good will. The spider does not try to get rid of such an ant as he does of a wasp or bee too strong to be safely attacked. Such an insect, which threatens destruction to the web, is often cut out of it by the web builders. The entangling cables are not loosed, but the web rays neatly snipped in two, first those underneath and at the very last the highest filament. Often the letting go of such a captive means destruction to half the nest. But some spiders are wiser than some people. They know not merely when they have enough, but when they have too much.

Johnny Suspects His Pa.

"Pa," said Johnny, looking up from his book, "what is the meaning of 'metempsychosis'?"

A look of confusion suddenly overspread pa's countenance, but it was only for a moment.

"'Metempsychosis,' Johnny, means—it means—but if I should tell you you would very soon forget the meaning. Look in the dictionary for it yourself, and then you will be more likely to remember. Information that comes without effort seldom lingers in the memory."

Half an hour or so later Johnny sought the dictionary in the library. When he got there he found pa with the dictionary open at "Met." Doubtless it was merely a coincidence, but Johnny could not help thinking that his pa was something of a fraud.—Boston Transcript.

Now, therefore the owners of the aforesaid lands are hereby notified and required to pay the said taxes in labor material or money on or before the 10th day of June 1901 and the labor and material offered in payment of such taxes are to be such as may be required by the street commissioner of said village and done and furnished to his satisfaction.

Dated this 14th day of May, 1901.

Street Commissioner.

The Echo at Work.

When we had climbed to the top of the mountain, we observed an old man sitting on a rock with a pair of field-glasses in his hands. Every now and then he would look earnestly through them and then whoop continuously for a time with a vigor astonishing, considering his age. For a time we observed him from a respectful distance till finally, being naturally curious, I went up to him. "Why," I asked, "do you rubber that way and then yell so loud?"

He turned and eyed me calmly, with a dignity which could have been born of nothing but a great responsibility.

"If you talk to me," he said gravely, "you'll take my attention, and I'll lose my job. I, sir, am the echo at the Mountain House down yonder."

At this point it became necessary for him to howl again, and I retired much impressed.—Princeton Tiger.

Poaching In London Parks.

Nearly all the London parks are well stocked with eatable birds, and it is the easiest thing in the world for the loafers to kill them, clean them and carry them off to the nearest hot plate for roasting. A story is told by Londoners of a couple of impecunious Scotch black and white artists who took a garret in Lincoln's Inn Fields and lived for a week on Law court pigeons, which are plump, lively, plentiful and tame and would, doubtless make a good meal. In addition to poaching in the parks, there is also good reason to believe that many of the rare birds sold to shady bird dealers are snared there.—Glasgow News.

Encouraging Her Cousin.

"Ah, yes!" sighed the lovelorn youth. "I'm passionately in love with Miss Van Fickel. I wonder if I will ever succeed in winning her affections?"

"Why not?" replied his Cousin Helen. "I know at least half a dozen other men who have."—Philadelphia Press.

Respecting the Sabbath.

One Sunday I called at a cottage in the south of Midlothian and requested a measure of milk, which was promptly handed to me. I offered the woman who attended to my wants a few coppers, but she curtly responded, "I canna tak siller on a Sawbath!"

I thanked her, and was turning away when she whispered: "Mon, ye can drap the bawbees in that tub wi' the graith (soap suds) in't. I'll get them oot the morn!"—London Chronicle.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum six hundred and two dollars ninety cents ($602.90) which is claimed due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Gilbert Anfinson and Sarah Anfinson, his wife, mortgagors to Samuel M. Dalnard mortgagee, bearing date the 4th day of January 1894 and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 6th day of January 1894 at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 88 of mortgages on page 237 and was recorded in Red Lake county in book B. page 553.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Samuel M. Dalnard to the Scandia American Bank of Crookston Minnesota by written assignment dated the 6th day of March 1894 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 9th day of August 1895 at 4 o'clock p. m. in book 75 of mortgages on page 329, recorded Red Lake county Book F, page 360.

Now, therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The southeast quarter (se¼) of section thirty-one (31) in township one hundred fifty three (153) north of range forty-two (42) west containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof in Red Lake county and state of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county at the front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls in said county and state on Friday the 14th day of June 1901 at 10 o'clock a. m of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of six hundred and two dollars and ninety cents ($602.90) and interests, and the taxes if any, on said premises and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

CONTEST NOTICE.

Doc. No. 1398.

Department of the Interior, United States land office, Crookston, Minnesota, May 1st 1901.

A sufficient contest affidavit having been filed in this office by Emil Johnson contestant, against Homestead entry No. 19230 made June 1st 1898, for se¼ sw¼ section 25, township 152 N., range 43 W. by John Anderson contestee, in which it is alleged that the said John Anderson has wholly abandoned said land from the date of said entry to the date hereof, that he has wholly failed to settle upon and improve the said land for over two years last past and next prior to the date herein, and that the said alleged absence from the said land was not due to his employment in the army, navy or marine corps of the United States as a private soldier, officer seaman or marine during the war with Spain or during any other war in which the United States may be engaged, said parties are hereby notified to appear, respond and offer evidence touching said allegation at 10 o'clock a. m. on June 26th 1901, before the Register and Receiver at the United States Land Office in Crookston, Minnesota.

The said contestant having, in a proper affidavit, filed May 1st 1901, set forth facts which show that after due diligence personal service of this notice can not be made, it is hereby ordered and directed that such notice be given by due and proper publication.

Representative Rapp is up and around walking the streets daily and at the present rate of gaining in health, in a two months, time he will be as healthy and robust as he was ten years ago.

The owners of horses who haven't been as prompt in paying the shoeing bill as the blacksmith would like, will not have as easy a time in the future as in the past. A bill has become a law giving the blacksmiths a lien on all horses and animals shod, for the work performed. This will be worth many dollars to every blacksmith shop in Minnesota.—Stillwater Gazette.

A card from Swan Anderson Saturday last locates him on an island fifteen miles from Tacoma on the Puget Sound. He says the family are all well and have a good appetite. They are living there temporarily but he expects to find a home in a few days from the date of writing card. On the 11th inst. he met H. D. Pinkerton and sister, formerly of this place, who were camping on Fox island.

An important change was made in the law permitting one half of the real estate tax to be paid June 1st. This law now only applies where the tax amounts to more than $2.00. Interested tax payers will do well to take notice. Another ruling by the Public Examiner makes it absolutely necessary for taxes to be paid not later than May 31 to escape the penalty. It is not optional with the county treasurer but compulsory.

One of the laws passed by the legislature this winter imposes a license of not less than $75 nor more than $100 upon transient merchants in a city or incorporated village, and not less than $50 nor more than $75 in a town. The license shall be paid to the city, village or town treasurer. Merchants who pay taxes in a place and help to enhance the value of the surrounding property will receive a just benefit from this law. It will do away with the grocery and dry goods peddlers.

Chapter 319 of the laws of Minnesota for 1901 provides for another forfeited tax sale which will occur on September 9, at which all lands which were sold to the state at the forfeited tax sale in 1900 will be sold to the highest bidder, but no bid for less than fifty per cent of the judgement can be received. When the sale occurred in 1900 there were some pieces which no one wanted and these were sold to the state. These have increased in value now and can be sold for the taxes. The law provides that any owner or party interested in the land can redeem the lands before the sale by paying fifty per cent of the judgement obtained in 1900 and the subsequent taxes. After the sale the owner cannot redeem except by paying the full amount of the judgment.

—For cuts and sores there is nothing better than the Imperial Carbolic salve.

RIVER FALLS.

Julius Pleth, the St. Hilaire land man was seen driving through the country last Sunday.

The farmers are about through with their spring work and owing to the lateness of spring considerable barley was sown.

The meadows look nice and green and with a shower of rain now and then we will have a bumper crop of hay.

Land is going up at a rapid rate. Last fall Ole Peterson was offered $2,000 for his farm and last week he refused an offer of $2,500.

The proposed county ditch running from Dan Johnson's farm to the river will benefit the surrounding country a thousand per cent. We are all unanimous in seeing the work of ditching pushed to completion during the year 1901.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

Notice.

I own hay land in the following townships, namely:

Climate and Crop Bulletin.

For the week ending May 20th 1901.

There were local showers early in the week in Hubbard, Becker, Clay, Norman and Polk counties, and in the extreme Southeast. Those showers extended over small areas, and they were generally light except in western Norman county, where they were locally very heavy. Early in the week the temperatures were low, being near the freezing point on the morning of the 14th in some exposed places. The low temperatures of the 11th, 12th, 13th and 14th do not seem to have caused injury except to a little barley, some garden vegetables and a few fruit blossoms which were somewhat frost bitten. In the Red River valley oats, barley, flax and millet are being sown as the land is being prepared for them. South of the Red River valley the planting of corn and potatoes has been going on during the week, and in many places it is finished; early planted corn and potatoes are up. Flax seeding is going on, and new breaking is being used largely for this crop. Winter rye is heading, but it is said to be thin. Wheat, oats and barley are growing splendidly, with good stands the recent cool weather having been very favorable for stooling. The surface soil is dry, and though there is sufficient moisture for the present at a depth, rain is much needed especially for the late sown grains, grass and pastures, the need being greatest in southeastern counties. Pastures are yielding abundantly and grass promises a good hay crop. Chinch bugs are appearing in large numbers in the southeast, and some pieces of barley and rye infested by them have been plowed under to be sown to other crops.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

People from small towns always chew gum at the opera house.

People who think they know it all surprise you by their meager knowledge.

Gamblers are like some church members in this particular, they all flock together.

Lots of people pretend to study human nature without expecting any benefit.

If people are rich, that ought to be enough without being smart or good looking.

A new house keeper can be told by the frequency with which she dusts her house.

Boys in a small town are considered "dressy" who are not even noticed in a bigger town.

A girl never comes home from visiting that she does not carry some slips of flowers along.

The stories about how lawyers refuse cases that they think ought not to be brought are usually lies.

Whenever two or three have the same imaginary grievance, they congregate to talk over their troubles.

Frequently men will mention a debt they owe you just to keep you from asking for it, still they do not pay you.

Nobody likes to hear folks say they do not care to go to a certain play because they have seen it played so much better in the city.

Probably nothing pleases a boy more than when his girl has a boy friends from another town visiting her, to go to the train with the visitor and see him off.

They Will be Here.

St. Hilaire at last has a full-fledged fire company. Ed. Morrissey, of this city, who returned from there Friday night informs the Journal that during his stay at St. Hilaire a firemen's organization was perfected with a membership of forty. The new company of fire fighters is composed of the best material of the town and Al. Jones, formerly of the Crookston fire department, was chosen as foreman. The boys have made application for admission to membership in the state firemen's association, and has also selected a full delegation to represent their department in the state firemen's convention in this city June 11, 12 and 13. Besides the regular delegation St. Hilaire will be fairly well represented by private citizens at the coming meeting here.—Crookston Journal.

Insure yourself against accident in the "Travelers" Accident Insurance Company. Cost is so small you can't afford to be without this protection.

—Do you want to sell your farm? Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy it and will pay cash.

Take Notice.

Parties having cows in Village herd must deliver same to the corral by 7:30 a. m., those not there at that time will have to take them to the herd on the prairie wherever they may be. The herd will return to corral on or about six o'clock each evening where the cows must be taken out by owners as I will not be held responsible. Cattle herded at the rate of $1.00 per month, payable the 25th of every month.

Farmers' Institute.

The State Farmers' Institute will be held in St. Hilaire Wednesday June 12th, commencing at 10 o'clock sharp, when and where farmers and others can get valuable "pointers" in agriculture, stock raising, dairying, etc. A day spent in attendance at a farmers institute may result in the adoption of methods, the value of which cannot be estimated. At the farmers institute you will meet those who have traveled the rough and rocky road of experience and they will try to aid you is avoiding some of the many difficulties they had to encounter. Thousands and thousands of dollars are annually lost in Minnesota to the masses, by not knowing the practical methods of the most successful farmers. The practical experience of the successful farmers make splendid "guide boards" to all others, when heeded. All methods that have proven failures should be set up as "danger singals," to prevent others from falling into the same errors. The practical experience of just one individual (when known) may be of inestimable value to the whole country; while the glowing theories of another (not practically demonstrated) may be the means of great damage. The state farmers' institute is our traveling school of agriculture, which brings to our very doors the experiences, means and methods for the best known practical results. It is all free, no collections and no charges. Tell all your neighbors. Bring your friends and get all the benefits. Remember the time, place and date. Be sure you are on time!

GIVEN AWAY!

At the close of the forenoon session, a very valuable book of over 350 pages (the institute annual), devoted to agriculture, stock raising, horticulture, dairying, sheep husbandry, swine husbandry, poultry raising, domestic economy, etc., etc., will be given free. This book is estimated by those who have carefully examined it, to be well worth from $5.00 to $25.00 to those interested in the subjects therein contained. No farmer should miss this free gift. Ladies and young people are specially invited.

A Minnesota Idea.

Several Minnesota towns have provided "rest rooms" for ladies who come in from the country to do shopping. A matron is in charge of the rooms, which are in the central portion of the town, and sells tea and coffee for 3 cents a cup. Rochester, Farmington, Winona, Faribault and a few others have already established these rooms and several more towns intend to follow their example.

The idea is a good one and has met with favorable comment by eastern papers, but when you are tired the thing to drink is "Golden Grain Belt" beer. It is so nourishing and refreshing that it makes you feel rested at once. When tired the system is in no condition to handle heavy food, and this beer is just what it needs. It has the strength of meat and bread, for it is brewed from purest barley malt and hops. Order of your dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

Prof. Lugger of the state experiment station, the bug man who has in the past devised remedies for the chinch bugs, grass hoppers, et al., is now going for the mosquitoes. He says a little kerosene oil, about an ounce to fifteen square feet of water, poured on the surface of stagnant pools and rain barrels, will reduce the mosquito crop to almost a failure. The female mosquito lays about 200 eggs at one time and the time is once in every three days. If these eggs are deposited in coal oil they do not hatch. If under the oil the young are smothered as they come to the surface of the water for air at once after they are hatched. While it would be a big undertaking to cover our numerous marshes with oil, the worst pools near houses and rain barrels could be covered inexpensively and a few less of the pests would be worth it.

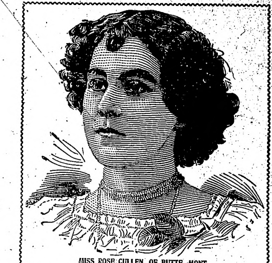
A GIFTED AND BEAUTIFUL GIRL

Threatened With Nervous Prostration,

PROMPTLY SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.



MISS ROSE CULLEN, OF BUTTE, MONT.

Miss Rose Cullen, President Young Woman's Club, of Butte, Mont., writes from 921 Galena street, as follows:

"Peruna has many friends in Butte. I cannot say too much in praise of it. While finishing school I became very nervous and exhausted from over-study. I was weak and sick, and could neither eat, sleep nor enjoy life. A couple of bottles of Peruna put new life in me. I find that having it in the house and taking a dose off and on keeps me in fine health.

"A large number of my friends place Peruna at the head of all medicines."---Miss Rose Cullen.

How Peruna Quickly Cures Backache, the Bane of Womankind.

MRS. G. W. HEARD, Hempstead, Texas, writes:

"We have moved recently, and I must have lifted something that was too heavy for me in straightening things up, for I had such a backache and could hardly stand on my feet at all. Beside, I was so tired all the time. My face was spotted and I was very thin. I took one bottle of Peruna and was soon real well. When I feel tired and all run down I take Peruna and feel all right before I finish one bottle. I know it is a wonderful medicine, and both myself and husband praise Peruna.

"There has been a great deal of sickness through this part of the country, but, thanks to Peruna, which we use freely, our own family has escaped with almost no sickness at all.

"Could you but see our baby Ruby, (to whom we gave Peruna for bowel trouble), you would see from her robust looks that you need no better advertisement in this little town. She is so fat and rosy, is nearly five years old now, and is a great believer in Peruna."—Mrs. G. W. Heard.

Given Up to Die—All Doctors Failed—It Proved to be Catarrh of Stomach and Was Cured by Peruna.

W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, of Martin, Ga., writes:

"I wrote you some time ago concerning my wife's case. She had tried all of the best doctors, and we got to where we thought all they did was against her. She weighed about 190 pounds when she was in good health. When she commenced with our family physician in April, 1898, she weighed about 130, but kept going down all the time. She went to Atlanta, Ga., and took treatment, but it did her no good. Then she went to Harmony Grove, Ga., and took treatment from the best physician there for three months. She kept going down under his treatment, although he was considered the best physician in the county. She went down from 130 pounds to 68, and we saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton. We consulted an old physician who told her to use Peruna. She gradually improved and got stronger. She has gained 38 pounds since she has taken Peruna, and is gaining every day, and does her own housework.

"She was well known when she was so low, and now everybody wants to know what cured her. She had indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. It is as good for children as for grown people. We haven't had to have a doctor for one of our children since 1898."—W. A. Mitchell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

WHAT WE HEAR FROM ASSINIBOIA, WESTERN CANADA,

"Don't Think of Coming, but Come."

To the Editor: The above is the emphatic manner in which a friend in Yorkton writes to a friend near St. Paul, Minnesota, and it is pretty nearly right, too, with the advantages that Western Canada offers to those seeking homes. The Assiniboia district is one of the best. The writer, from whose letter we quote goes on to say:

"John, if you miss this chance you are foolish, for you can get out cheaper when there are so many coming, and I would not tell you to come if I thought you could not do well, and if you don't come in the spring you will have to go away back, for you do not want to think that there is no one living out here but us. I saw nicer buildings out here than I ever saw before, and if the country was no good what would they want them for? John, if you sold everything you have and came out here you would be worth more than ever you were before, and if you can bring your team. You can get anything you want on tick, and when they do that with strangers they are not afraid they can't make enough to pay for it. I saw as nice wheat as I ever saw in my life, and if they could not grow grain what would the flour mill be for, and it cost $20,000."

Now this was what Mr. Thomas Fitzpatrick, of Yorkton, Assiniboia, Western Canada, wrote to a friend.

There will be opened up this summer new districts in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia at low prices, particulars of which can be had of any agent of the government of the Dominion of Canada, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper. Yours truly, An Old Reader.

A DIVIDED REPORT

CUBAN COMMITTEE ON RELATIONS NOT A UNIT.

Majority and Minority Reports to Be Submitted to the Convention—Majority Report Is Not a Complete Acceptance of the Platt Amendment, As It Distinguishes Intervention on Different Grounds—Minority Report Says Platt Amendment Does Not Express the Wishes of the People of the United States.

Havana, May 20.—The committee on relations of the Cuban constitutional convention will submit majority and minority reports to the convention today. The majority report quotes article 1 of the treaty of Paris, the joint resolution of the United States congress and the Platt amendment, and then proceeds as follows:

"Inasmuch as Secretary Root, being authorized by President McKinley, says the Platt law has for its object the guaranteeing of the independence of Cuba and does not mean interference with its government or the exercise of a protectorate or of sovereignty, and also that intervention will only take place when independence is endangered by outside powers or grave interior disturbances, creating anarchy; and, inasmuch as Secretary Root has said that the naval stations will not be used for vantage points of intervention, but only to protect Cuba against foreign powers, we report as follows:

"That in virtue of the fact that the Platt law, in its preamble, says it is a fulfilment of the joint resolution and has been adopted by congress with the principal object of establishing independence, we do propose to the convention to accept the following as an appendix to the constitution."

The first, second, fourth and fifth clauses are quoted in their entirety. The third clause has the following addition:

"It being understood that the United States have to prevent the action of a foreign power or disturbances causing a state of anarchy, and that the intervention shall always be the act of the United States and not of isolated agents. The intervention shall suppose neither sovereignty nor a protectorate and shall last only sufficiently long to establish normal conditions. Said intervention, it is also understood, shall not have the right to interfere in the government, but only the right to preserve independence."

Right to Intervene

An addition to the sixth clause says ownership of the Isle of Pines shall be settled by a future treaty. An addition to the seventh clause says:

"It shall be understood that the naval stations do not give the United States the right to interfere with the interior government, but are established for the sole purpose of protecting American waters from foreign invasion directed against Cuba or the United States. Cuba will sell or lease the necessary lands at points to be agreed upon later."

An addition to the eighth clause says that the government of Cuba suggests at the same time a treaty of commerce based upon reciprocity.

The minority report says:

"The explanations given to the commission in Washington show that the Platt law does not express the wishes of the United States. It was intended to protect the independence of Cuba, but the wording gives other interpretations.

Charges Inconsistency.

The United States are inconsistent in asking naval stations, when the amendment provides that no concessions shall be given to foreign powers. Such a demand raises the question whether the United States dies not consider Cuba a part of their possessions."

The report of the minority virtually accepts the first and second clauses. For the third clause the following is substituted:

"That the government of Cuba subscribes to the Monroe doctrine and will help the United States to enforce it against other nations trying to violate it."

For the fourth clause the following is substituted:

"Cuba does not recognize acts of intervention which are not in conformity with the Foraker resolution and the laws of the United States."

The seventh clause reads:

"Cuba will maintain naval stations, handing them over to the United States in time of war."

The minority report recommends a commercial treaty based upon reciprocity.

The report of the majority has caused considerable surprise. It was generally believed that the committee on relations would recommend an acceptance of the Platt amendment on the basis of the interpretation given by Secretary Root, but it was not expected that such additions would be made to various clauses as the majority recommend.

An "M. D.'s" Open Letter.

Benton, Ill., May 20.—R. H. Dunaway, M. D., of this place, in an open letter, makes the following startling statement.

"I had Diabetes with all its worst symptoms. I applied every remedy known to the profession, as well as every prescription suggested in our books. In spite of all, I was dying, and I knew it.

"As a last resort, and with scarcely any faith whatever, I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. In one week I saw a great improvement. After I had taken five boxes I was sound and well. This is ten months ago, and I have not taken any medicine of any kind since, and am convinced that my cure is a permanent one.

"As a practicing physician, with years of experience, I most positively assert that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine in the world to-day, for Diabetes or any other Kidney Disease. Since using them myself, I have used them in many cases in my practice, and they have never failed.

"I am making this statement as a professional man, after having made a most thorough test of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and because I feel it my duty to the public and to my professional brethren. The truth can never hurt any one, and what I have said is the absolute truth.

"R. H. DUNAWAY, M. D."

It is no wonder that the public are enthusiastic over this new medicine, when our leading physicians themselves are being won over to its use.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

Bad Breath

Undigested, decaying food remnants, in the mouth and stomach, giving off pestiferous gases, are the cause of that awful breath, so repulsive as to cause a halt in friendship, affection, love,—any form of intimacy. Nobody can stand its overpowering stench, and it is a cause of terrible misery to those afflicted and their dear ones. There is only one way to cure it—disinfect the digestive canal with CASCARETS! Clean it out, keep it clean, let CASCARETS stimulate the lining of mouth and stomach, and put it in shape to work naturally and properly. Nothing but CASCARETS will bring about the desired result. BE SURE YOU GET THEM!

"I have been using CASCARETS and as a mild and effective laxative they are simply wonderful. My daughter and I were bothered with sick stomach and our breath was very bad. After taking a few doses of Cascarets we have improved wonderfully. They are a great help in the family." WILHELMINA NAGEL, 1137 Rittenhouse St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Resume of the News.

Fresh Reliable Brief

Washington Notes.

Intemperance in the army increases as a result of the abolition of the canteen.

The meat inspection branch of the agricultural department is growing rapidly.

Col. Van Horne makes a vigorous protest against the abolition of the army canteen.

It is expected that the next congress will be more liberal with appropriations for public buildings.

Five West Point cadets were dismissed and others suspended as a result of the recent disturbances.

Charges that domestic manufactures are sold cheaper in foreign markets than at home creates interest in Washington.

The State department has received a payment of $20,000 on account of the award of the arbitration in the May case of the government of Guatemala.

It is reported that because of the discouraging advices coming from army posts Secretary Root will recommend a change in the law abolishing the post canteen.

The monthly statement of the collection of internal revenue shows the total receipts for April, 1901, to have been $26,941,579, an increase as compared with April, 1900, of $3,689,926.

The navy department has ordered the gunboat Concord, now on the Asiatic station, to proceed to this country for duty in Alaska. She will assist in the strict enforcement of the liquor laws in the gold country.

Casualties.

John. Wanamaker's country house was burned recently, causing a loss of $500,000.

The Tennessee floods caused great damage to life and property. Fourteen persons were reported drowned.

The Northern Pacific warehouse at Glendive, Mont., was burned recently, supposed to have been caused by sparks from a locomotive.

Hattie Muehlum, eight years old, who was bitten by a St. Bernard dog while playing in front of her home in Chicago on April 14, died last week of hydrophobia.

Capt. Otto Ellefsen, master of the Norwegian bark Nataut, was killed at Mobile, Ala., while supervising repairs to the rudder of the vessel. A rope parted and he was knocked overboard, his skull being fractured.

Fire partially destroyed the grain elevator in Kansas City, Kan., owned by the Armour Packing company and operated by the Merchants' Elevator company, entailing a loss estimated at $50,000.

Fire at Denver destroyed the factory and warehouse of the Eaton-Richell company, manufacturers of tinware, occupying nearly half a block. The estimated loss is $125,000; fully insured. Lieut. William Kuhn was severely burned by an explosion of paints, and several other firemen were slightly injured.

Personal Mention.

The Western Unitarian conference has elected Martin D. Hull of Chicago president.

Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis of Brooklyn has been elected president of the Congregational Home Missionary society.

Catherine Lucy Wilhelmina, duchess of Cleveland, the mother of Lord Rosebery, died at Wiesbaden. She was born in 1819.

John P. Loomis, president of Convention hall and a prominent business man of Kansas City, died after a brief illness. He was born in Neenah, Wis., in 1854.

Capt. James Evans, one of the three remaining members of the crew of the Confederate cruiser Alabama, died at Charleston, S. C. He was aboard the Alabama in the famous fight off Cherbourg.

Patrick J. Gleason, former mayor of Long Island City, and popularly known as "Battle Ax" Gleason, died at his home in that place, aged about seventy years.

Ex-Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney has made Yale one of the largest contributions it has received for the general bi-centennial building—$25,000.

Mme. Melba has arrived in Paris. Discussing her plans, she declared she would not go to Australia nor to America next season, but will remain in Europe.

Rev. Edward Ignatius Fitzpatrick, one of the oldest Catholic priests in St. Louis, well known throughout the Northwest, died from a paralytic stroke in that city. He was sixty-eight years old.

Rev. Dr. E. B. Webb died at his home in Wellesley, Mass., aged eighty-one years. Dr. Webb was for many years a member of the executive committee of the Congregational Home Missionary society.

Paul du Chaillu, the African explorer who discovered the pigmies and made gorillas popular, was in Chicago recently bidding farewell to his friends preparatory to embarking on a three years' study of Russia.

Stanford university's faculty has lost another member by the resignation of Prof. Ross under pressure. Prof. H. D. Lathrop tendered his resignation and stated he had accepted a chair in the University of Wisconsin.

Maj. Edward Evarts, U. S. A., retired, is dead at his residence in Alameda, Cal. He was a cousin of the late Senator William Evarts, and was well known in army circles on the coast and in other states farther east.

Mrs. Horatio N. May of Chicago has decided to accept the position of volunteer inspector of streets and alleys in her precinct. She will be one of the foremost in the regiment of volunteers provided for under the Goldzier ordinance. Mrs. Potter Palmer, while in sympathy with the movement, has found it impossible to accept.

Sins and Sinners.

Two negroes at Connellsville, Pa., brutally murdered a white man.

Charles Bain, arrested at Frankfort, Ind., for a robbery at Lafayette, answers the description of Pat Crowe to a marked degree.

Lieut. Richard P. Townley, a retired officer of the navy, will be court-martialed for alleged participation in the commissary frauds at Manila.

Herr von Minckewitz, a former chess champion who has been reduced to poverty, stepped in front of an electric car in Berlin and was cut to pieces.

Giovanna Buttacavollo was tried for having buried a baby, of which he is the reputed father, at Hastings, N. J. The jury found the prisoner guilty and he was sentenced to nine years and ten months in state prison.

J. Luther Pierson, a disciple of "Dr." Dowie of Chicago, and an old resident of Valhalla, N. Y., was convicted of violating the statutes in failing to call a doctor for his dying daughter. She died while he and several assistants were praying for her.

Judge Lent sentenced J. Luther Pierson, a prominent resident of Valhalla, N. Y., and a faith curist, who was convicted of violating the law by neglecting to call in a doctor for his two-year-old daughter, who was ill with pneumonia, to pay a fine of $500.

At Erie, Pa., Contractor John Kane shot and killed William Harrington. Kane says Harrington threatened him. There has been trouble on the Anchor line docks ever since the season opened, the 'longshoremen's union objecting to the contract system and the men refusing to go to work.

RACE ENDS IN DEATH

TERRIFIC COLLISION IN WHICH FIVE LIVES WERE LOST.

Over Forty Prominent People Injured, Some Fatally and Others Seriously—Electric Cars Race for a Switch While Running in Opposite Directions — Passengers Form a Struggling, Shrieking Pyramid, Mixed With Blood, Detached Portions of Human Bodies and the Wreckage of the Cars.

Albany, N. Y., May 27.—Electric cars racing for a switch while running in opposite directions at the rate of forty miles an hour, cost five lives yesterday afternoon by a terrific collision in which over forty prominent people were injured, some fatally and others seriously. The lobby of the local postoffice filled with dead and wounded, hysterical women and children looking for relatives and friends, surgeons administering temporary relief and ambulances racing through the city, taking the wounded to hospitals, were the early intimations of the accident.

The scene of the accident was a point about two miles out of Green Bush, on the line of the Albany & Hudson railway. The point where the cars met on the single track was at a sharp curve, and so fast were both running and so sudden was the collision that the motorman never had time to put on the brakes before south-bound car No. 22 had gone almost clean through north-bound car No. 17, and hung on the edge of a high bluff with its load of Shrieking, Maimed Humanity.

One motorman was pinioned up against the smashed front of the south-bound car with both legs severed and instantly killed, while the other one lived a few minutes. Fully 120 men, women and children formed a struggling, shrieking pyramid, mixed with blood, detached portions of human bodies and the wreckage of the cars.

Some of the more slightly injured of the men extricated themselves and began to pull people out of the rear ends of the two cars, and almost every one was taken out in this way and nearly all were badly injured. The few women and children who had escaped injury and death were hysterical and added their cries to the shrieks of the dying and mutilated. Men with broken arms and bones and dislocated joints and bloody heads and faces, tried to assist others who were more helpless. Help had been summoned from East Greenbush and vicinity and in a little time the bruised mass of humanity with the mutilated dead for a gruesome and silent company were loaded on extra cars and taken to Albany. There ambulances and physicians had been summoned and the postoffice turned into a morgue and hospital. As fast as the physicians could temporarily fix up the wounded they were taken to their homes or to the hospitals.

Motorman Took Chances.

With both motormen killed it was hard to get at the real cause of the accident, but it was pretty well determined that it was caused by an attempt of the south-bound car to reach a second switch instead of waiting for the north-bound car at the first siding. The cars weigh fifteen tons each and are the largest electric cars built, but so frightful was the crash that both cars were torn almost to splinters. Both cars were filled with Sunday pleasure seekers returning from the new recreation grounds that the railway had just opened. The cars on the line were running at switch headway—that is, as a car reached a siding switch it was supposed to wait until another going in the opposite direction passed. The motorman of the south-bound car reached one of the switches, but seeing no north-bound car, decided to take chances and go on to the next siding. It was at a curve between that the two cars met.

SAVES $600 AND GOES CRAZY.

Regular Army Man's Mind Gives Way Beneath Strain of Hoarding.

Allentown, Pa., May 27.—After saving $600 of his pay during a long service in the United States regular army, Charles W. Miller, still a young man, has become mentally deranged. The Lehigh county court appointed a committee to take charge of his person and estate.

FIRE DESTROYS MUCH PROPERTY.

Furniture Company Burned and One Man Killed.

Rushville, Ind., May 27. — Fire destroyed the main factory building of the Rushville Furniture company, a large four-story brick structure, entailing a loss of between $45,000 and $50,000. B. J. Kosse, foreman of the finishing-room, was fatally burned, and died of his injuries.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

Kansas Mob Hangs a Negro Murderer.

Wichita, Kan., May 27.—Bill Campbell, a negro, was lynched at Pond Creek, Okla., by a mob of 400 persons, who broke down the jail, took him to the scene of his crime and hanged him to a telegraph pole. He was hanged for the fatal shooting of Deputy Sheriff George Smith.

ADIEU TO VALKYRIE III.

Lord Dunraven's Cup Challenger Will Be Broken Up.

Glasgow, May 27.—The old America's cup challenger, Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie II., which has been lying in Gouock bay, has been sold to a Glasgow firm of iron brokers. She will be broken up.

Shot in His Pulpit.

Birmingham, Ala., May 27. — While preaching from his pulpit in the Harmony Street Baptist church at Avondale last night Rev. J. R. McEwen, a negro, was shot from a window of the church and killed. A negro named Fischer has been arrested.

Cutter Grant Is Floated.

Victoria, B. C., May 27.—The United States cutter Grant came off the rocks in Sanach inlet yesterday afternoon and is being brought here for temporary repairs.

RAILROAD MACHINISTS NEXT.

Question of Shorter Hours Will Come Up Before the Convention.

Washington, May [illegible].—President Jas. O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists announced yesterday afternoon that he would recommend to the next annual convention of machinists at Toronto beginning June 3, that a date be set for a nine-hour day without reduction in wages on all the railroads of the country. On railroads which fail to comply with this demand a strike will be ordered. This recommendation will be made in Mr. O'Connell's annual report. Mr. O'Connell says that such a strike would involve probably 100,000 men. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. O'Connell said the outlook of the strike was very gratifying.

DOWIE IS ARRESTED.

Gives $10,000 Bail for His Release.

Chicago, May 26. — John Alexander Dowie, "overseer of the Christian Catholic church," was arrested here yesterday pursuant to the action of the coroner's jury which has declared him "criminally responsible" for the death of Mrs. Emma Lucy Judd. H. Worthington Judd, a disciple of Dowie and husband of the alleged victim, also was arrested, having appeared at the criminal court building in company with Dowie. Both men were taken before Judge Tuley, who admitted them to bail in $10,000 each.

CREEDON KNOCKED OUT.

Hart Wins a Desperate and Bloody Contest.

Louisville, Ky., May 26. — Marvin Hart of Louisville last night knocked out Dan Creedon of Australia in the sixth round of a twenty-five-round bout before the Southern Athletic club. The contest was desperate and bloody from the start. Hart, the plumber pugilist, had won fifteen straight victories and Creedon, owing to his greatly improved condition of late, was conceded to be the most dangerous proposition of them all. Hart weighed in at 170 pounds and Creedon one pound less.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

One Man Dead and Two Others Severely Injured.

Lebanon, Ohio, May 26.—Dr. W. L. Witham of South Lebanon was struck and instantly killed by lightning yesterday afternoon near Hufford's Grove and Charles Weinhoff and Charles James were seriously injured by the same bolt. They were members of a party of pupils of the public schools who sought refuge from the storm in a Hufford farm barn. Scarcely had they entered it when it was struck by lightning. All were more or less shocked and the barn badly damaged.

FAITH IN CHINESE.

Imperial Troops Taking the Places of the Allies.

Pekin, May 26.—Field Marshal Count von Waldersee has made arrangements with the commanders of the French, Japanese, British and Italian troops by which the area controlled by foreigners will be lessened and the Chinese regular troops will be allowed to take their places. The latter will be held responsible for any disturbances that may occur in the districts which will be placed under their control. The conditions can hardly be worse than they are at present.

A SMALL RECEPTION.

Few People Greet Milner on His Arrival in London.

London, May 26. — Sir Alfred Milner arrived in London at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. He was met at the station by the premier, Marquis Salisbury, and Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, who drove with him to Marlborough house, where Milner was received by the king. Milner's reception in London was not so enthusiastic as in Southampton and paled into insignificance when compared with the greeting accorded other home-comers from South Africa.

Killed by a Clergyman's Son.

Kingston, N. Y., May 26. — Frank Heroy, son of a Methodist clergyman, shot and killed Charles Vanderlyn at Greenfield. Heroy was drunk and abusing his uncle, James Heroy, an aged cripple. His mother asked Vanderlyn to interfere. Heroy resented Vanderlyn's action, and, getting a shotgun, took deliberate aim and fired. Then he surrendered himself.

Anarchists Protest.

New York, May 26.—A cable dispatch of which this is a translation has been sent to Rome by the Central Group of Italian anarchists in New York: "Minister Zanardelli, Rome, Italy: Against the execrable assassination just committed by the modern inquisitors of Italy the anarchists of New York protest with all their power, and notify you that they hereby inaugurate a renewal of war. —Anarchists."

Won by Roeber.

New York, May 26.—Ernest Roeber was given the decision over Nouroulah, the Turkish wrestler, after a severe struggle lasting twenty-six minutes at the Academy of Music last night. The conditions were that Nouroulah should throw Roeber three times within an hour, Graeco-Roman style.

Wine and Brandy Burned.

New York, May 26.—Fire destroyed 2,500,000 gallons of cheap wine and brandy in the warehouse of the Sonoma Wine and Brandy company, Brooklyn. Loss, $200,000. The fumes of the burning liquor sweetened the air over a large quarter of Brooklyn.

Would-Be Murderer Suicides.

Philadelphia, May 26.—A sensational attempt at murder and suicide took place at a hotel here last night when John A. Jenkins of Brooklyn, N. Y., attempted to kill a young woman, and then shot himself while in custody.

TWELVE LIVES LOST

STEAMER FOUNDERS IN A STORM ON LAKE HURON.

Only Two Members of a Crew of Fourteen Are Saved and One of Them Goes Crazy From His Experience—Buffeted by a Furious Sea for Several Hours Before Rescued—Steamer Goes to Pieces Shortly After She Struck—Crazy Sailor Tries to Drown Himself and Companion.

East Tawas, Mich., May 28. — The wooden steamer Baltimore foundered in Lake Huron near Au Sable, yesterday morning and twelve of her crew of fourteen were drowned. Two men were washed about in the lake for several hours, lashed to a piece of wreckage, and were finally picked up by the tug Columbia and brought here. George McGinnis, a deckhand, one of the rescued, went crazy from his experience. The other survivor, Thomas Murphy of Milwaukee, second engineer, was able to tell the story of the disaster. It was some time after the Columbia had brought the shipwrecked men into port before Murphy was revived sufficiently to tell his story. The Baltimore foundered about 6 o'clock in the morning and he was in the water until late in the afternoon, exposed to the buffeting of a furious northeast sea.

"We were bound from Lorain to Sault Ste. Marie," he said, "and had in tow a large steam drill and scow. When off Thunder bay Thursday night Capt. Place saw that the steamer was making bad weather, for the

Waves Had Smashed

in the engineer's quarters and the washrooms and the water was running into the hold. Capt. Place decided to turn about and run for Tawas for shelter. Everything went all right until we were off Au Sable, when the steamer struck heavily on the bottom. The seas broke over her at the same time and carried away the deck house, then the after cabin and finally the smokestack fell. Both rails forward broke in two just aft of the forward deckhouse, and we knew that it would be only a few minutes before the steamer would go to pieces. 'It is every man for himself now,' shouted Capt. Place. We took the captain's advice, and every man started to save himself as best he could. Some of the boys took to the rigging, but McGinnis and I lashed ourselves to a ringbolt in a piece of the after cabin, and we were washed overboard shortly afterward. The strain was too much for McGinnis and he went crazy before we had been in the water long. He tried to throw me off the wreckage, but I talked to him and encouraged him to hold on. Twice he got loose and

Tried to Drown Us Both,

but each time I succeeded in quieting him. I told him a boat was coming to take us off, and then I would get him tied fast again. The Columbia finally came along and picked us up just as I was about to give up hope. I am afraid all the rest of the crew were drowned, including Mrs. Place. I only wonder how it was we lived through it all. Our wreckage was big enough to make a raft, but it was small, and the seas swept it constantly."

The tug Columbia lost a drill scow with six men on board just before she picked up the men from the Baltimore. The Columbia went out again in the afternoon and found the drill making good weather. The men were taken off it and they were badly frightened as the scow had neither boat nor life preservers. Capt. Meno of the steamer City of Holland claims that the gale was one of the worst in fifteen years.

DUCKED THE EDITORS.

Sensational Incident at the Vincennes University.

Vincennes, Ind., May 26.—A sensational incident occurred in the students' chapel at Vincennes university yesterday. The hall was crowded with professors, students and visitors, when H. B. Holman, a member of the senior class, as chairman of a "roasting" committee, arose to read a parody on certain Scripture verses, aimed to ridicule A. W. Burger and W. W. Willis, seniors, who are editors of the Blue and Gold, the college publication. Burger and Prof. Bacon, instructor in science, rushed into the hall and upon the platform and destroyed the speaker's manuscript. Before the faculty could interfere twenty-five students were piled up in a football heap on the stage in a rough-and-tumble tussle. A number received severe bruises. Willis' clothing was almost completely torn off before order was restored. In the afternoon the students pulled Burger through the streets with a rope around his neck, yelling, "Hang him." At night the student editors were ducked in the Wabash river to atone for criticising other students in the Blue and Gold.

LIVES WERE LOST.

Great Destruction by Storm in North Carolina.

Charlotte, N. C., May 26. — Reports from remote counties in the mountain districts show great destruction by the storm. In Bakersville sixteen residences and the Baptist church were washed away. Quinter Moore and his son were drowned. Every house in Magnetic City, a village in Mitchell county, was destroyed. At Roan Mountain station twenty residences were swept away and one man, John McKinney, was drowned, while an unknown man was killed by a landslide.

$20,000 for Hills Claims.

Lead, S. D., May 26.—Martin Johnson has sold five of his mining claims adjoining this city for $20,000, receiving $500 in cash, the remainder to be paid within sixty days. The ground lies on the Black Hills & Fort Pierre road.

Eden Valley's First Fire.

Eden Valley, Minn., May 26.—The State Bank of Eden Valley lost its building by fire. A millinery store was also burned. [illegible]

TILLMAN AND M'LAURIN RESIGN.

Will Give People a Chance to Decide Between Them.

Gaffney, S. C., May 27.—United States Senators Benjamin R. Tillman and John L. McLaurin have resigned their high offices, to take effect on Sept. 15 next. The resignations, which have been forwarded to Gov. McSweeney and are already beyond recall, resulted from an acrimonious political debate in this city, the culmination of a bitter factional fight long existing between the two senators, who represent the rival divisions of the Democracy in the South. In Saturday's debate, where McLaurin charged Tillman had no business to appear, personalities and strong language were used with liberality. The senior senator's declaration that the re-election of McLaurin would be taken as meaning that the people could not indorse him (Tillman), was followed by McLaurin's suggestion that both resign and go before the electors of the state for indorsement. Senator Tillman agreed and went farther than McLaurin in that he left the race open to all candidates, refusing to sign an agreement that the governor should appoint him or his rival to the office when the voters named their choice.

It is understood that Senator McLaurin and Senator Tillman have a tacit agreement to contest for the long term to which Tillman was elected last January. Under the state Democratic party rules the candidate must designate specifically the office to which he aspires. Whether McLaurin wins over Tillman or Tillman is re-elected, McLaurin's unexpired term will be filled by a new man.

DAMAGED BY WIND.

Heavy Storms in Utah Do Much Damage.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 27.—The windstorm which swept over Nevada, Utah, Southern Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado Thursday night and which blew constantly until last night, did damage that will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. It resulted in an almost complete prostration of telegraph and telephone service in the states affected and for nearly twenty-four hours during the height of the storm the intermountain region was practically cut off from the rest of the world. At Ogden the storm was felt worst. Here the wind tore roofs from a number of buildings, including the Baptist church. The damage in Ogden probably will reach $100,000.

BOERS CAUGHT IN AMBUSH.

Reinforcements Come to the Aid of the Boers and the British Retire.

London, May 27. — A dispatch from Standerton, Transvaal, dated May 22, says a detachment of the Queen's Mounted infantry laid in ambush near Amersfort, Commandant Joubert, the magistrate and a party of burghers rode into the town and refused the British demand that they surrender and attempted to escape. The British thereupon fired on them, wounding Commandant Joubert and the magistrate. Reinforcements came to the aid of the Boers and the British were compelled to retire with the loss of three prisoners.

SILVER SERVICE FOR WISCONSIN.

Big Battleship Made the Recipient of a Beautiful Present.

San Francisco, May 27.—A commission from the State of Wisconsin has arrived here with a $10,000 silver banquet service which is to be presented to the battleship Wisconsin by the state whose name she bears. The formal presentation will be made to-day or to-morrow. In addition to the silver service there is also a bronze badger four feet high, cast from Spanish cannon captured during the war.

COLLISION AT SEA.

Fourteen Sailors Are Thought to Have Been Drowned.

Boston, May 27.—The steamer Ohio, from Hull, reports a collision at sea with the Norwegian bark Elise, from Moss, April 1, for New York, in ballast. One sailor was picked up, but his stories are so conflicting that it is hard to tell if the bark went down with fourteen men or not. The supposition is that she did and that only this sailor was saved. The collision occurred in a fog.

NEW LINE FOR TWIN CITIES.

Illinois Central Railroad Completes Its Plans.

Chicago, May 27.—A new route between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis will be opened early in the coming fall by the Illinois Central railroad. The last link in the line that will give the company a through road of its own from Lyle, Iowa, to Albert Lea, Minn., has been finished and train service will be established as soon as other preliminary arrangements are completed.

Boers Driven Off.

London, May 27.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, May 26: "A superior force of Boers made a determined attack on a convoy between Venterdorp and Potschefstroom May 23, but were driven off. Our loss was four killed and thirty wounded. The convoy arrived in safety."

Rains Cause a Landslide.

Pittsburg, May 27.—The heavy rains of the past twenty-four hours caused a land slide which will delay the Panhandle trains for about thirty-six hours. About 600 tons of earth and stone came down from Mount Washington, behind the McClintock mills, completely covering the tracks.

Village Partially Destroyed.

Madrid, May 27.—The village of Esparagossa, province of Badajo, has been almost destroyed by a storm. One woman was killed.

Attempt at Suicide.

La Crosse, Wis., May 27.—H. E. Freeland, a stranger who was arrested by the police, attempted to commit suicide in the jail by hanging himself with a rope he had fashioned from his suspenders.

Omaha Freight Ditched.

Cumberland, Wis., May 27.—No. 103, south-bound fast freight on the Omaha, was derailed near Superior Junction [illegible] ditching and [illegible] No one was injured.

SHE TRAVELS WELL

MRS. M'KINLEY SUFFERS NO INCONVENIENCE ON THE TRIP.

Dr. Rixey Makes a Favorable Report on the Condition of the Gentle Sufferer—The Weather Seems Almost Like a Special Intervention of Providence for Her Benefit—President and His Cabinet Devoting Much Time to the Consideration of the Chinese Situation.

Ogden, Utah, May 27.—The presidential train traversed the State of Nevada yesterday, and reached Ogden at 6:30 last night. The route lay along the Humboldt river, through the Ruby and Wahsatch mountains, and then descended into the Salt lake basin. During most of the day the elevation exceeded 5,000 feet and snow-clad peaks were continually in sight from the car windows. At this season of the year the ride across Nevada is exceedingly disagreeable. The heat is oppressive and the dust from the desert is frequently blinding. Fortunately for Mrs. McKinley one of those heavy rainstorms which so rarely visit this region swept completely over the state Sunday night, laying the dust and tempering the atmosphere. It rained also several times during the day. The weather seemed almost like a special intervention of Providence for the benefit of the gentle sufferer. Mrs. McKinley passed a comfortable night passing the Sierras but the trip yesterday was looked forward to with some apprehension. The rain, however, relieved the anxiety, and Dr. Rixey reported that Mrs. McKinley was very well. She suffered no inconvenience from the rarified atmosphere. The day aboard the train was passed without incident. The president makes it a rule ordinarily not to travel on Sunday, but the present circumstances were so exceptional that he hid his compunctions in order that his wife might the sooner reach home. No service was held aboard the train, but the president and the members of the cabinet kept quietly to their rooms the major portion of the day. Once or twice when the train stopped for water they alighted to stretch their limbs. At Carlin early yesterday morning the president shook hands with some of the people who had gathered there, among them a number of Digger Indians who live in the neighboring mountains. On the way back to Washington the president and members of the cabinet are devoting a good deal of time to the consideration of the Chinese situation. The declination of the other powers to join in the suggestion of the United States with reference to scaling down the indemnity was a great disappointment, though it could hardly be said that it was entirely unexpected.

Standing the Trip

HEAD SPLIT, YET HE LIVES.

Man's Skull Ripped Open by Circular Saw—Portion of Brain Taken Out.

Newport News, Va., May 27. -- The case of C. E. Garrett, who was probably fatally injured May 7 by coming in contact with a circular saw at one of the city mills, is most remarkable. The blade ripped upward from the chin to the back of the head, passing directly through the center of the face and severing the nose. The blade entered twice, and on top of the skull cut a V-shaped strip of bone. Since the day of the accident little portions of the brain had to be taken out. Garrett was given up for dead but still lives, eats and talks. Last Wednesday the attending physician had to remove about two ounces of brain. The man's left side is paralyzed.

SAMSON'S HEAD ON MEDALS.

Design for Memorial to Those in Santiago Bay Battle to Bear Commander's Features.

Washington, May 27. -- The naval board of awards is understood to have reached a tentative decision upon the design for a medal of honor for those who participated in the naval battle of Santiago Bay. The members of the board decline to give any information on the subject, but it is currently understood among naval officers that the board has followed the precedent of the Manila medal, in showing the head of the commander-in-chief, and that this Santiago medal will show the head of Admiral Sampson.

NO NEW CARDINAL.

Not While Gibbons Lives Will Another American Cardinal Be Appointed.

Vienna, May 27.—The Politische Correspondenz learns from an important clerical dignitary in Rome that while Cardinal Gibbons lives no new American cardinal will be appointed. It is also asserted by the Rome correspondent that Archbishop Ireland, who recently made a strong declaration in favor of the restoration of the temporal power of the pope, has lost many friends by his abandonment of his former attitude on this question, and is now practically an isolated personage in the church.

PLANS NEW SUBMARINE BOAT.

Italian Admiral Claims to Have Devised Vessel Which Is Superior to Any Yet Built.

Rome, May 27. — Rear Admiral Michell, inspector general of Italian naval engineers, has presented to vice admiral Morin, minister of marine, plans for a new submarine war vessel, which he claims will be vastly superior to anything yet invented.

Broom Corn Destroyed.

Peculiarities of Crime.

One of the strangest peculiarities of human nature is its inclination to imitate the misdeeds of others. Crime is epidemical. A particularly dreadful murder, the details of which are set forth in all the newspapers, often has the effect of inducing similar crimes. One of the reasons, and probably the chief reason, why public executions were abolished in England, was that instead of acting as a deterrent the execution had the contrary effect of inciting to murder.

In 1885 a woman of Geneva, named Lombardi, killed her four children. She admitted that she had been reading of a woman who killed her husband, and the very circumstantial account had made her wish to imitate the crime, but as her husband was dead she killed the children. This is only one instance out of hundreds which have come to our notice.

The infectious nature of self murder receives a striking testimony in the following incident: Dr. Oppenheim of Hamburg had to examine the body of a man who had cut his throat and had died after some days of suffering. The medico told his assistant that death would have been immediate if the man had made the cut in a way which he illustrated, and he was startled two days later to learn that his assistant had attempted to commit suicide by lacerating himself in that very manner. The man admitted that he had never thought of suicide until the day of the examination and the doctor's remark.—London Globe.

Some Nice Royal Jobs.

"One of the most desirable posts at Windsor castle," says a correspondent of the Chicago Record, "is that of 'the king's limner,' who in ancient times decorated books and manuscripts with initial letters and who now prepares the parchment commissions, when his majesty is pleased to confer knighthood or some other honor upon one of his subjects. The man who now fills the post has extraordinary skill with the pen and brush, and his diplomas and certificates were greatly admired for their exquisite taste and skillful execution. He receives a salary of $2,500 a year. The clockmaker at Windsor castle receives the same compensation, and it is his business to keep all the timepieces in repair. The historiographer, who is supposed to keep a record of events, holds a hereditary office, with a salary of $2,500 a year. The master of music receives $1,500 and arranges concerts for his majesty's diversion. The surveyor of pictures is paid $1,500, the librarian receives $2,500, the examiner of plays $1,000, the keeper of the swans is paid $300, and the bargemaster, who looks after the boats used by the royal family at Windsor, has a similar compensation."

Verdi and the Critics.

No outsiders, not even members of the press, were allowed to be present at rehearsals of Verdi's operas. "A production of a work of mine," said Verdi, "is an affair between that work and the public. I do not write for the press, but for the public, who will support me if my work is good or who will execute me if it is not. I do not care for aught else." M. de Nevers thus describes Verdi's attitude at a dress rehearsal of "Otello" in Paris, when the press was present against his wishes:

"The critics were all placed in the corbeille of the amphitheater, some ten rows of stalls having been cleared away to make room for a table and chairs for Verdi, Boito and the directors, MM. Sardou, Meilhac, Halevy, Obin, the director of fine arts, and two or three dignitaries and officials of the Opera sat behind in the remaining rows of stalls. Among the critics were MM. Reyer, Bruneau, Joncieres, Bellaigue, Pessard, Corneau and Sarcey. The foreign press was represented by M. de Blowitz and myself, and as Verdi came in all stood up, with hats off, and cheered the wonderful man. The orchestra joined, of course, in the ovation, and it was to the musicians that the master went, and, bowing his venerable head very low, he thanked them for the kind demonstration and shook hands with the nearest, but never once did he turn our way except for one moment, when he took us all in with a side glance—an ugly one—and then for the rest of the evening, some five hours, ignored our presence completely."

CATCHING CICADAS.

How Certain Malays Obtain a Curious Delicacy.

Certain natives of the Malay peninsula catch cicadas and eat them and that as a considerable luxury. To eat a cicada seems distinctly curious, says the London Daily Mail, when we reflect that this insect is in reality a glorified member of that insect group which contains as its most prominent representative the diminutive and swarthy creature which shall be nameless here for evermore.

The way in which the Siamese proceeds was related to the Zoological society the other day by a naturalist who has spent some time in the Malay peninsula observing men as well as insects. At night, when these insects fly, the native sallies forth armed with a torch and but little raiment. The torch is deposited in a convenient place, and the swarm of natives proceed to clap their hands in a perfectly regular fashion so as to produce a considerable sound.

It is the combination of light and sound that allures the cicada from its haunts to its destruction. The insects come also in swarms and settle upon the bodies of the applauding natives, whence they are easily detached, preserved, cooked and eaten.

The Greek sage remarked that happy are the cicadas in that they have voiceless wives. It is apparently the lady cicadas who are attracted by what they fondly believe to be the love cry of the male and are thus lured to their fate by that most dangerous of passions.

Victoria and Dickens.

Literary celebrities, as a rule, were not those who attained to any high degree of personal favor at the hands of Queen Victoria, but she paid Charles Dickens a delicate compliment. Dickens, who, by the way, in his youthful days was devoured by a grand passion for the youthful queen, was invited when at the climax of his fame to dine at Windsor castle. He was after dinner presented by the queen with a copy of her book "Tour in the Highlands," and on the fly leaf was inscribed in her own hand this sentence: "From the humblest to the most distinguished author in England." The queen afterward showed many favors to Lord Tennyson, but even in making him a peer of the realm she did not bestow as great a compliment.

Trafalgar Hats.

The year 1805 was a memorable one, as on Oct. 21 was fought and gained the battle of Trafalgar, and then, as now, fashion complimented heroes by devising toilets named in their honor. So Nelson was commemorated by a hat—the "Trafalgar"—and every woman and child adopted the wondrous structure, which would outdo even the headgear of the present day, for these hats were of enormous width and breadth, something of the size of a round table, and so loaded with plumes that the wearers must have looked all hat.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Default having been made in the payment of the sum six hundred and two dollars ninety cents ($602.90), which is claimed due and is due at the date of this notice upon a certain mortgage, duly executed and delivered by Gilbert Anfinson and Sarah Anfinson, his wife, mortgagors, to Samuel M. Dainard mortgagee, bearing date the 4th day of January 1894 and with a power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the register of deeds in and for the county of Polk and state of Minnesota on the 6th day of January 1894 at 9 o'clock a. m. in book 86 of mortgages on page 237 and was recorded in Red Lake county in book B. page 553.

Which said mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Samuel M. Dainard to the Scandia American Bank, of Crookston, Minnesota by written assignment dated the 6th day of March 1894 and recorded in the office of said register of deeds on the 9th day of August 1895 at 4 o'clock p. m. in book 25 of mortgages on page 329, recorded Red Lake county Book F. page 360.

Now, therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, viz:

The southeast quarter (se¼) of section thirty-one (31) in township one hundred fifty-three (153) north of range forty-two (42) west containing one hundred and sixty acres, more or less, according to the government survey thereof in Red Lake county and state of Minnesota with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the sheriff of said Red Lake county at the front door of the court house in city of Red Lake Falls in said county and state on Friday the 14th day of June 1901 at 10 o'clock a. m. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of six hundred and two dollars and ninety cents ($602.90) and interests, and the taxes if any, on said premises and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale, as provided by law.

Petition of Legal Voter to be set off.

To the board of county commissioners of the county of Red Lake and state of Minnesota.

The undersigned, a legal voter, freeholder and resident of school district No. 133, in said county, respectfully represents to your Honorable Board, that he is the owner of the following described lands, situate in said district, to-wit:

N½ NW¼ of sec 13 in twp 152 R 43, (River Falls), which said lands adjoin school district No. 6 and that he desires to be set off, with his said lands, from said district No. 133 to said district No. 6, which lies adjoining, for the following reasons:

That the last named District is nearer and the road is better, and if the children shall go to district 133 in the summer they have to cross a creek or go around, which will make the road nearly two miles further, and does therefore petition your honorable body to be set off accordingly.

A. P. Sandberg,
Petitioner,

State of Minnesota, }

Hebert, of Brooks, to constitute said board of Health.

Which resolution was seconded by Commissioner Sutor and on motion carried unanimously the same was adopted.

State of Minnesota }
County of Red Lake } SS.

Whereas, at a session of the board of County commissioners of the County of Red Lake State of Minnesota, held July 21st, 1900 a petition signed by Laurent Gagner and others landowners, whose lands were liable to be affected by, or assessed for, the expense of the construction of the work proposed therein, praying for the establishment and construction of a public drainage ditch along a route described therein, accompanied by a bond duly approved, as provided by law, was filed with the County Auditor of said County; and it appearing by proper evidence to the satisfaction of said Board of County Commissioners that at least thirty (30) days' notice has been given of the pendency of said petition and of the time at which the same would be heard, as by law provided, whereupon the said Board did, at its session on the 21st day of July A. D. 1900 proceed to hear and determine said petition: and said Board having determined that the construction of such ditch would be of public benefit and utility, and conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare, we did accept said petition, and thereupon did appoint as viewers of said proposed work, three (3) resident freeholders of said Red Lake County, who are not interested in the construction of said proposed work, and are not of kin to any of the parties interested therein, and directed them to meet preparatory to commencing their duties as such viewers, at the terminus of said ditch in said County, at 1 o'clock, P.M. on the 24th, day of September 1900; and certified copies of the said petition and order of said board appointing them as said viewers was issued to and served upon said viewers, as by law provided, as will more fully appear from the certificate of service of Charles Sampson as Sheriff of said County, now on file in the office of the County Auditor of said county, they proceeded, at the time set in said order, with a surveyor who is a civil ingineer, and made an accurate survey of the line of said drainage ditch from its source to its outlet, and did cause stakes to be placed along said line at each 100 feet, as numbered progressing down stream from its source, and made and filed a report thereof; and reported that said drainage ditch would be of public utility; and in their said report made the necessary computations and assessments, description of location, the land through which the same would pass, the names of the owners, and the damages or allowances thereto, the expense attending such work, and all estimates, as required by law, duly sworn to as by law required.

And the Auditor of said Red Lake County did, after the filing of said report, cause a notice to be given, to be published, posted and mailed, as by law provided, of the pendency of said petition and of the time and place set for the hearing thereof;

And Whereas, said Board of County Commissioners of said County of Red Lake having met in sesssion at the time set for the heating of said petition, to-wit, the 7th day of January 1901 and adjourned to the 8th day of January 1901 and then proceeded to hear the same, and having found that the report of said viewers is made according to the provisions of law, and, that the proposed drainage ditch to be of public utility, and, conducive to public health, or of public benefit and convenience, and, from the evidence before them, that the estimated benefits of said work was greater than its total cost, including damages awarded, said board of county commissioners did then locate and establish the said drainage ditch according to the report of said viewers appointed and acting as aforesaid; which said report, together with the plats and exhibits accompanying the same was then made a part of the Resolution establishing said ditch. And the said Board of County Commissioners having from said viewers' report and the evidence before determined upon the benefits to be assessed and the damages to be awarded to the several tracts of lands as appears from the records of the proceedings of said Board had on said 8th day of January 1901.

And having accepted as true and correct the itemized statement and report of said viewers, which statement and report is on file and of record in the office of the County Auditor of said county, which said statement shows that the total sum of all expenses incurred or to be incurred in locating, constructing and establishing said ditch to be $7846.46, which sum is hereby declared to be necessary for the construction of said ditch

Now, Therefore, It is hereby resolved by the Board of County Commissioners of RedLake County Minn, that bonds of said county in the agregate sum of $8,000 be issued and negotiated for the purpose of raising necessary funds for defraying the expense of establishing and construction of said ditch, said bonds to be issued and dated the 15th day of May 1901 to bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, payable annually to be 8 in number and to be in denominations of $1,000 each, to mature on the 15th day of May 1901. Principal and interest payable at the National Bank of Commerce in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Each of said bonds to contain a recital to the effect that they are issued in accordance with the provisions and pursuant to chapter 97 of the laws of Minnesota for the year 1887 and acts amendatory thereto:

Commissioner Sutor moved the adoption of the foregoing resolution and Commissioner Johnson seconded the motion to adopted the same. The Resolution was then declared carried upon the following vote, yea's, Hanson, Johnson, Sutor, Demann and Hebert.

Nay's
None.

Whereas, Red Lake County, Minnesota, was, on the 24th day of December A. D. 1896, proclaimed by the Governor of this State duly organized, and said County has ever since such time exercised all the franchises and privileges and performed all the duties of a duly organized County under the laws of the State of Minnesota; and,

Whereas, Subsequent to said date, and prior to the 1st day of February, 1901, this county, in the due and orderly performance of the duties imposed upon this Board of County Commissioners, became lawfully indebted in the sum of at least $14,400, which is now outstanding and is represented by claims against said County duly allowed prior to February 1901, and now represented by duly issued and outstanding orders or warrants of this county, as fully appears by the records of this Board and of the proper officers of this county; and,

Whereas, Said floating indebtedness of this County has all been lawfully incurred, and is now legally owing by this County; and,

Whereas, No action has been brought, or is now pending to test the validity of any portion of the indebtedness aforesaid; and,

Whereas, No part of said indebtedness was created prior to the due organization of this county, and no part thereof represents in any manner any claims owing by this county, or any other county, prior to its due organization; and,

Whereas, This Board of County Commissioners has no funds available with which to pay the indebtedness above described and deems it expedient to fund said indebtedness to the amount of $14,000.00, as it may lawfully do under the provisions of Chapter 164 of the General laws of Minnesota for 1901:

Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, That for the purpose of funding the floating indebtedness of this County, above described, to the amount of $14,000.00, which indebtedness existed on the first day of February, 1901, and no part whereof has existed for more than five years prior to this date, and the validity of no part of which was or is now pending, or is involved in any action pending on the 6th day of April 1901 or which is now pending and no part of which was created by this county, or by any other county, when the same was unorganized, there be issued the bonds of this county in the sum of $14,000 00, in denominations of $1,000 each, said bonds to bear date the 15th day of May, 1901, and to mature on the 15th day of, May, 1916, and to bear interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. per annum, payable annually, principal and interest payable at the office of the County Treasurer of Red Lake county, Minnesota, said bonds to be executed in all respects in strict compliance with the provisions of Chapter 164 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for 1901; and,

Be It Further Resolved, That said bonds, and the coupons to be thereto attached, be substantially in the following form, to-wit:

Form of Bonds.

No (1 to 14) $1,000.

United States of America,
County of RedLake. State of Minnesota.
Funding Bond.

The county of Red Lake, in the State Minnesota, for value received, acknowledges itself indebted, and promises to pay to bearer one thousand dollars, lawful money of the United States on the 15th day of May A. D. 1916, with interest thereon at the rate of 4½ per centum per annum, payable annually on the 15th day of May, principal and interest payable at the office of the County Treasurer of Red Lake county at the county-seat of said county.

This bond is issued by the Board of County Commissioners of Red Lake county, in the State of Minnesota under and by virtue of the provisions of Chapter 164 of the General Laws of the State of Minnesota for the year 1901, approved April 6th, 1901, being an act entitled "An Act to enable and authorize the Board of County Commissioners of the several counties of the State of Minnesota to issue bonds to fund the floating indebtedness of said counties, exisiting upon February 1st, 1901, and to levy taxes for the payment thereof;" and is issued for the purpose of funding the floating indebtedness of said county expressly authorized by said act to be funded, and not otherwise.

It is hereby certified, that all requirements of law have been fully complied with in the issuing of this bond, and,

It is further certified, that the floating indebtedness, which this bond is issued to fund is a legal and valid debt of said county, and that the total debt of said county, including this bond, does not exceed the limit authorized by the Constitution or Laws of the State of Minnesota.

The faith and credit of said county of Red Lake are hereby pledged for the punctual payment of the principal and interest of this bond.

In testimony whereof, the Board of County commissioners of Red Lake County, Minnesota, have caused this bond to be signed by its Chairman and attested by the Auditor of said County and sealed with his official seal this 15th day of May, 1901.

Irish Lacemaking.

After the famine of 1847 lacemaking was revived in Ireland. Limerick, the most successful Irish lace, is not really a lace at all. It is tambour work upon net and muslin.

The Irish point, so called, is the ancient cut work, being made in quite the same way.

Net was first made by machinery in 1768. The machine was an adaptation of the stocking loom to lacemaking and was cumbrous and not very effective. In 1809 John Heathcote, a farmer's son, evolved from consciousness and experience the first machine to make true bobbinet with perfect six sided holes. It brought a great hue and cry about his ears from laceworkers, who fancied they saw themselves thus reduced to beggary.

The Luddites broke into the factory where the machines were first set up and made scrap iron and kindling wood of them. The only result was to drive the new manufacture to other and safer quarters. For long the secret of the machine's construction was most jealously guarded by English manufacturers. Not satisfied with letters patent they kept up a coast patrol to make sure that nobody took model or drawings to France.

At last, though, they were outwitted. A discharged workman who had the plan of it in his mind managed to get safe over sea and build a machine in France.

Sort of a Cannibal.

An old farmer for many years got his dinner on market days at a small hotel kept by a widow.

She had long suspected that he ate more than the price (1s. 6d.) warranted, so she determined to test him. She accordingly arranged matters so that there was no room for him at table, but she took him into a private room the table of which was graced by a steaming leg of mutton. He set to in good earnest and soon nothing was left but the bones.

Highly delighted with his cheap feed, on passing the bar he tendered 2 shillings for his dinner and a quart of ale.

The widow declined to take any payment on the ground of having inconvenienced him so much.

Chuckling to himself, the farmer lifted down his market basket from a hook, and, finding it rather light, he tore off the covering and shouted:

"Here, Mrs. Brown, where's my leg o' mutton?"

"Why, ye old silly," said the widow, "ye have ate your leg for your dinner!"
—London Answers.

The Song of the Grouse.

Certain birds when the period of courtship comes round repair to particular trysting places and announce their presence there by well known calls or signals.

The ruffed grouse, as every one knows, seeks an old log or other convenient perch and drums with his wings, a hint to any lady grouse within hearing that "Barkis is willin."

The performance of the grouse is one frequently heard, but comparatively seldom seen, and for many years there were numerous conflicting theories concerning the means by which the drumming was produced. Some said that the sound was vocal, and others declared that the grouse struck the log with its wings. Even today the precise cause of the sound is not known, for, although the bird has been closely watched, its wing movements are so rapid that it is next to impossible to tell exactly what takes place. This much, however, is known: During the performance the grouse stands upon the log or other perch and strikes the air in front of his body somewhat after the manner of an elated barnyard cock. The first few strokes are measured, but they become faster and faster until the individual thumps are lost, as in the rolling of a drum. Whether the sound is due entirely to beating of the air or whether it is increased by the striking together of the wing tips is a question yet to be settled.—Hartford Times.

Why Dinah Wept.

Not long ago a lieutenant in the navy was ordered away on a three years' cruise. The order had been dreaded for weeks, and when it came the young wife, who was to be left in a Brooklyn flat with a baby and a colored servant, was in despair.

She controlled her sorrow very well, however, until the actual moment of parting came, and then she wept as though her heart would break. The cruiser was to leave the navy yard early next morning, and the lieutenant had gone to report for duty.

In the midst of her lamentations the young wife heard a sniffling and sobbing in the dining room, and upon glancing through the door she saw Dinah, the colored maid, rocking her body to and fro in a chair and weeping violently.

"Why, D-D-Dinah, what's the m-matter?" cried the mistress. "You seem to t-t-take Mr. Blank's departure as much to heart as I d-do."

"'Deed I doesn't, Mis' Blank; 'deed I doesn't!" sobbed Dinah. "What am boderin dis chile am de fac' dat a cullud gemman friend o' mine am gwine sail hisse'f on dat same ole cruisah!"—New York Herald.

Some Exploded Food Fallacies.

Fish as a food of the brain worker must be consigned to the limbo of vanities, though certain forms of fish are the cheapest of all foods, notably the bloater. Oysters and turtle soup are frauds. It would take 14 oysters to equal the nourishment of one egg and 223 to provide the same amount of nutriment contained in a pound of beef.

Salt fish, especially salt fat fish, is the most valuable food for the poorer classes, and whole races in the south of Europe live on the Newfoundland cod. Canned salmon we see at 18 pence a pound is no more expensive than cod at sixpence. Millions of people live on it, and the North American settler who is not well provided with cash finds it a good substitute and change from flesh meat at times.

Frogs' legs are not of high nutritive value, which need not surprise us. Turtle soup from the chemist's point of view is not worth a tenth of the price paid for it.—Exchange.

Too Classic For Them.

A resident in a small suburban town had a visit from a German friend who knew little English, but played the violin well. One of this resident's neighbors gave a "musicale," and of course he and his visitor were invited. The German took his violin, and when his turn came he played one of his best pieces from one of the great masters.

When he had finished, there was an awkward silence and no applause. The people were still looking expectantly at the German, who looked disappointed and flustered. The silence grew painful.

Finally the hostess, quite red in the face, edged over to the side of the German's friend.

"Can't you get him to?" she whispered.

"What do you mean?"

"Why, now that he's got tuned up, isn't he going to play something?"—London Tit-Bits.

His Late Hours.

"You never think of staying out late," said the convivial and ill bred person.

"Sometimes I think of it," answered Mr. Meekton distantly.

"But you don't care for that sort of thing."

"Not in the least."

"Perhaps you never had any experience?"

"Oh, yes, I have. It was only last night that I was out at half past 2 a. m. Henrietta sent me out to see if I couldn't keep the back gate from slamming."—Washington Star.

A Telltale Boast.

Nell—She used to boast that she was one of the charter members of the Woman's Suffrage club. She doesn't appear to be as proud of it now.

Belle—Oh, she's just as proud, but, you know, the club was organized 15 years ago, and she must have been at least 20 when she joined.—Philadelphia Record.

The geographical divisions of the United States are the north Atlantic group, the south Atlantic group, the north central group, the south central group and the western group.

The Torture of a Flax Shirt.

The most trying ordeal that Booker T. Washington was forced to endure as a slave boy was the wearing of a flax shirt. In his autobiography, "Up From Slavery," he says:

"In the portion of Virginia where I lived it was common to use flax as part of the clothing for slaves. That part of the flax from which our clothing was made was largely the refuse, which of course was the cheapest and roughest part. I can scarcely imagine any torture except perhaps the pulling of a tooth that is equal to that caused by pulling on a new flax shirt for the first time. It is almost equal to the feeling that one would experience if he had a dozen or more chestnut burs or a hundred small pin points in contact with the flesh. Even to this day I can recall accurately the tortures that I underwent when pulling on one of these garments. The fact that my flesh was soft and tender added to the pain. But I had no choice. I had to wear the flax shirt or none, and had it been left to me to choose I should have chosen to wear no covering.

"In connection with the flax shirt my brother John, who is several years older than I am, performed one of the most generous acts that I ever heard of one slave relative doing for another. On several occasions when I was being forced to wear a new flax shirt he generously agreed to put it on in my stead and wear it for several days till it was 'broken in.' Until I had grown to be quite a youth this single garment was all that I wore."

The Resin Eaters.

"Resin eating," said a south Georgia doctor, "is a habit acquired by the Cracker settlers who live in the neighborhood of a turpentine still. The resin they use isn't the hard, shiny resin of commerce, but has been dipped out of the cooking caldron at an early stage of the process, and when it cools it can be kneaded between the fingers like wax. The backwoods resin eater will bite off an immense chunk and chew it placidly until it disappears. The heat of the mouth keeps it fairly soft, but if the chewing becomes too deliberate it is apt to 'set,' as they say, and cement the victim's jaws together in a grip of iron.

"On one occasion a big, rawboned backwoodsman who used to hang around a still I operated came rushing into my little office, clutching his face in both hands and making a horrible gurgling noise in his throat. 'What on earth is the matter?' I asked in alarm. 'His rosum's sot,' said another Cracker, who brought up the rear. I was nonplused at first, but finally grasped the fact that the man had been chewing a monstrous slab of resin and had thoughtlessly suspended operations long enough to allow it to solidify and clamp his teeth like a vice. We finally pried his mouth open with a chisel and broke a couple of molars in the operation. Next day I saw him chewing 'again."—Exchange.

The White Shark.

The shark of sharks, the real "man eater" and the one most dreaded, is the white shark. This variety reaches a length of 35 feet and a weight of 2,000 pounds. Its head is long and flat, and the snout far overhangs the mouth. Its six rows of teeth are sharp as lancets and notched like saws. Its mouth is very large, so that one has been known to cut a man's body completely in two at a single snap of its cruel jaws and another to swallow one at a gulp. Near Calcutta one of these sharks was seen to swallow a bullock's head, horns and all.

From the stomach of another a bull's hide was taken entire, and the sailor who made the discovery insisted that the bull had been swallowed whole and all except the hide had been digested. From the stomach of another was taken a lady's workbox, filled with the usual contents, scissors and all. It is commonly the white shark which follows the vessel at sea day after day and week after week.

Laughter.

Laughter is a positive sweetness of life; but, like good coffee, it should be well cleared of deleterious substance before use. Ill will and malice and the desire to wound are worse than chicory. Between a laugh and a giggle there is the width of the horizons. I could sit all day and listen to the hearty and heartsome ha, ha, of a lot of bright and jolly people, but would rather be shot than be forced to stay within earshot of a couple of silly gossips. Cultivate that part of your nature that is quick to see the mirthful side of things, so you shall be enabled to shed many of life's troubles, as the plumage of the bird sheds the rain. But discourage all tendencies to seek your amusement at the expense of another's feelings or in aught that is impure. It was Goethe who said, "Tell me what a man laughs at and I will read you his character."

The First Millionaire.

Who was the first millionaire? Solomon? But come down to earth in modern times. Solomon's wealth was fiction, like that of Croesus, Midas and the rest. Perhaps you remember Pope's lines—

When Hopkins dies, a thousand lights attend
The wretch who, living, saved a candle end.

John Hopkins was generally known as "Vulture" Hopkins from his rapacious method of acquiring money. He was the architect of his own fortune, dying worth $1,500,000 in 1732.—New York Press.

Willing to Hear of It.

A Methodist critic, wishing to put his bishop "in a hole," or, as Dr. William Everett would say, "to deposit him in a cavity," asked in open meeting whether or not the bishop came to the conference in a Pullman car.

"Yes," the bishop cheerfully replied. "Do you know any easier way?"—Boston Christian Register.

Prompt Justice.

In the "History of Beverly," Mass., the following anecdote is related of a good justice of the peace in the old colonial times. On a cold night in winter a traveler called at his house for lodging. The ready hospitality of the justice was about being displayed, when the traveler unluckily uttered a word which his host considered profane.

Upon this he informed his guest that he was a magistrate, pointed out the nature of the offense and explained the necessity of its being expiated by sitting an hour in the stocks.

Remonstrance was unavailing, for custom at that time allowed the magistrate to convict and punish at once, and in this case he acted as accuser, witness, jury, judge and sheriff, all in one.

Cold as it was our worthy justice, aided by his son, conducted the traveler to the place of punishment, an open place near the meeting house where the stocks were placed. Here the traveler was confined in the usual manner, the benevolent executor of the law remaining with him to beguile the time of its tedium by edifying conversation.

At the expiration of the hour he was reconducted to the house and hospitably entertained till the next morning, when the traveler departed with, let us hope, a determination to consider his words more carefully before giving them utterance in the hearing of a conscientious magistrate.

The Professor's Wooing.

The experience known as "popping the question" is the bugbear of every man, however confident of his charms or fluent of speech. Many original ways of asking young women to marry them have been resorted to by bashful men, but perhaps the most brilliant suggestion came to a learned German professor, who, having remained a bachelor till middle life at last tumbled head over ears in love with a little flaxen haired maiden many years his junior.

One day, after vainly endeavoring to screw his courage to the sticking point, the learned man came upon his Gretchen as she sat alone, darning a stocking, with a huge pile of the family hosiery on the table. The professor aimlessly talked on general topics, wondering how he could lead up to the subject nearest his heart, when all at once a happy thought came to him.

Leaning forward, he put his big hand on the little fist doubled up inside the stocking and said hesitatingly:

"You darn very beautifully, fraulein. Would you like to darn my stockings only?"

Fortunately the fraulein was not so simple as she appeared. She grasped the significance of the question immediately and lost no time in answering, "Yes."—Youth's Companion.

Why Girls Cannot Throw.

A great deal of fun is poked at girls because they cannot throw a stone or a snowball and hit the person or thing they are aiming at. The general idea as to why girls cannot throw as well as boys is that they have not acquired the knack by practice as their brothers have. Another explanation is given by a medical man which tends to show that girls could never learn the knack, however much they tried.

When a boy throws a stone, he crooks his elbow and reaches back with his forearm, and in the act of throwing he works every joint from shoulder to wrist. The girl throws with her whole arm rigid, whereas the boy's arm is relaxed.

The reason of this difference is one of anatomy. The feminine collar bone is longer and is set lower than in the case of a male. The long, crooked, awkward bone interferes with the free use of the arm. This is the reason that girls cannot throw well.

Such Stuff as Dreams Are Made Of.

The materials of dreams may be enumerated as memories of waking sensations, memories of waking thoughts and new sensations received in sleep, whether from without or within. Dr. Gregory mentions of himself that having on one occasion gone to bed with a bottle of hot water at his feet he dreamed of walking up the crater of Mount Etna and feeling the ground warm under him. He had at an early period of his life visited Mount Vesuvius and actually felt a strong sensation of warmth in his feet when walking up the side of the crater, and he had more recently read Brydone's description of Mount Etna.

On another occasion, having thrown off the bedclothes in his sleep, he dreamed of spending a winter at Hudson's bay and of suffering distress from the intense frost. He had been reading a few days before a very particular account of the state of the colonies during winter.—Cassell's Magazine.

Fish and the Alphabet.

Perhaps the funniest thing to be told respecting the antiquity of fishing relates to the holy wars which were waged in ancient Egypt over the finny denizens of the water, the conflicts arising from the circumstance that, as often happened, one tribe would insist with the utmost irreverence upon eating up the fishes which the inhabitants of an adjoining territory held in divine adoration.

The child of today, in learning his alphabet, calls the letters by their names simply because the ancient Phœnicians were pleased to make similar figures the symbols of certain sounds, and it is thought very likely that the Phœnicians have been driven to invent that alphabet by the necessity of corresponding with peoples of various tongues incidentally to the great commerce which grew out of the fishery.

The letter "p" is like a selfish friend, the first in pity, but the last in help.—Chicago News.

In 1700 Pennsylvania had a colored population of 10,274.

A CHANGE.

As a duty, rather than a pleasure, we with this issue bid our patrons and the readers of the SPECTATOR a formal farewell. We have quit the field of journalism to embark in other business and surrender our position and interests to Mr. H. E. Ives, senior member of the firm who will take up the work we have left. We take this opportunity of thanking our patrons and friends for the loyal support given us and for the hearty good will and encouragement shown us during the time we have had charge of this work. We trust and believe that those who have so loyally given us their support in the past will continue to do so in the future. All outstanding accounts due June 1st 1901 for job work and advertising will be collected by the undersigned.

Thanking you again for past favors and wishing for the future prosperity of St. Hilaire and its citizens, I bid you as editor of the SPECTATOR, good bye.

Yours truly
JOHN J. SOLL.

Mr. O. F. Post received his commission Monday as postmaster of St. Hilaire. Postmaster Post sounds alright.

The base ball game at Thief River Falls Monday between Crookston and their home nine ended with a score of 9 to 7 in favor of Crookston.

The Sunday school of the M. E. church has been changed to 10 a. m. A greatly increased attendance was shown last Sunday morning.

Land seekers were more in evidence here last week than ever and the local dealers in real estate were kept on a jump attending to their wants.

The Indian (?) that captured the calf moose now on exhibition at Thief River Falls and killed its mother should be serving a years sentence in the pen.

P. O. Romo, who bought the Hans Johnson farm had the misfortune to lose one of his best horses last Sunday by coming in contact with a wire fence.

Three hundred men got after a man at Thief River Falls last Saturday night for being too intimate with his neighbors wife. From last reports he is going yet.

Gov. Van Sant has issued his Memorial day proclamation, setting apart Thursday, May 30, as the day for all citizens of the state to observe by decorating the graves of the nation's dead.

T. G. Thompson, a resident of this place in the early eighties, but since a prominent business man of Crookston spent Monday and Tuesday here visiting with old time friends and viewing a few land marks.

H. T. Murray, the genial conductor formerly on this line but for the past two years on main from Fargo to St. Vincent was here Monday shaking hands with his many friends—and he has lots of them too.

Public services at the M. E. church each Sunday morning and evening at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Young peoples meeting at 7 p. m. Prayer meeting on Thursday evening at 8 p. m. Good interest is manifest, come.

The Mission Friends sewing society will meet with Mrs. O. Opperud Thursday June 6th. Ladies coming will please meet with Mrs. H. Jackson at 11 a. m. where teams will be waiting to take them to Mrs. Opperud's place.

A social will be given at the Norwegian church on Water street Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Refreshment of ice cream etc., will be served. Songs and music will be rendered to make the evening pleasant. All are cordially invited to attend.

Attorney N. Thormodson of Madelia was here a short time yesterday on his way to Red Lake Falls. He expressed himself as well pleased with the county and thought the hay meadows were as far ahead as in the southern part of the state.

—To cure a cough or cold in one day take the Imperial Cough Syrup.

July first the new revenue law takes effect and there will be no more stamping of bank checks, neither will post-office money orders require two cents additional. Promissory notes, express bills, telephone messages, warehouse receipts, telegraph messages, bills of lading, mortgages, deeds of conveyence under $2,500 and power of attorney are also excempt.

A pine cruiser was down from the Tamarac river Sunday and among other things he said an Indian killed seven cow moose inside of twenty-four hours. Will the game wardens heed this notice of wholesale killing of large game or will they wait until next August and nab a violator for killing a prairie chicken or two? Dollars to doughnuts its the latter.

Over 40 of the friends and neighbors of Rev. Hammond's gathered at the M. E. parsonage last Friday night and very handsomely surprised the Reverend and his wife and as a token of their kindly feeling for them left a good supply of the good things which tempt the appetite of the most indifferent. Lunch consisting of coffee, cake, etc., was served. Rev. Hammond and wife join in their heartfelt thanks to the donors.

ARROW SHOTS.

A feminine faced man hasn't much show.

Men who can get all the credit they want, don't need it.

You can detect lovers out walking as far as you can see them.

Some people's only virtue is, that they do not go to theatres.

Every man has to listen to long stories about nothing every day.

If your baby refuses to come to you, just have a lead pencil in sight.

There are some people who cannot have any sense pumped into them.

A great many people never get out socially except to some church conference.

You can't help judging folks by those they stop to talk with on the street.

Half the fuel is wasted because the women do not learn to regulate the dampers.

Some day stop and count how many things are told you that you don't care anything about.

Every man likes to come to his office through a heavy rain, and have it stop as he gets there.

How many men there are whose full names are never known till announced in their obituaries.

If a man carries a colored umbrella, you know he is married and the umbrella belongs to his wife.

About the meanest thing to say of a person is that he doesn't buy a thing because he can't afford it.

There are people who hate their neighbors so that they will not speak to them, yet they go to missionary meetings to bring to the heathen the love of the Lord.

We heard of a girl in this town the other day who says she has been engaged to so many fellows that she cannot remember them all. Well, why doesn't she get a family record?

Very few men around town like to get their hair cut on Saturday. They know it is the barber's busy day and they prefer to wait and get their work done when there is more leisure. Barbers say as sure as a man comes in to get his hair cut on Saturday, even though there is not another customer in sight, in no time at all, the shop will fill up and they can scarcely get around for people waiting to get work done.

An exchange says that if the farmers would follow these instructions they need never go to any expense to dehorn their cattle: Buy a five cent stick of potash, and when the little horns make the first signs of starting on the calves, wet them over with the caustic stick, and the calf will never know that nature intended that it should have horns.

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

Will Close at 8 O'clock.

We, the undersigned citizens and business men of the Village of St. Hilaire, Minn., hereby agree to close our establishments of business at 8 o'clock every evening except Saturdays and the pay-days of the St. Hilaire Lumber Company, and also all Sundays. A Great Sporting News Journal.

The illustrated special sporting section of The Sunday Chicago Record-Herald thoroughly deserves the attention of every one interested in sporting news. It is always beautifully illustrated and embraces four full pages covering with the thoroughness that satisfies to the utmost the whole realm of sports. Base ball news, racing news bowling news, cycling news, pugilistic news, golf news, yatching news—all the sporting news—is given with the degree of fullness and interest to be expected of the newspaper which combines the very complete facilities of those two great metropolitan newspapers, The Chicago Record and The Chicago Times-Herald. The sporting page of the daily issues is also exceptionally popular—a self-evident fact to those who have noted the general vogue of The Chicago Record-Herald among sportsmen.

It may surprise many to know that the Argentine Republic has 16,000 miles of railway in operation, and that is sleeping car service, as good as our's costs only 90 cents a passenger for a day of 24 hours.

Limburger cheese laid away in cupboards and refrigerators will drive away ants, says a well-posted newspaper man. No doubt of it. It will drive a spike through a brick wall; it will drive a mule through a barbed wire fence, it will drive a herd of cattle over a precipice; it will drive a tramp away from a meal of victuals; it will drive a negro from a chicken roost or a man into insanity who stays five minutes within ten feet of its savory. Yes sir, it will drive away "ants" and also uncles, and if I had any cousins that it would not drive away I would be tempted to disown them, and yet some men would sit and eat the stuff and profess to like it.

Our First Marine Band.

Up to the year 1812, our navy had never boasted a marine band. In that year Captain McNeil, famous in the navy of his absolute fearlessness, was in command of the Boston, a 28-gun American vessel anchored at Messina. While there the vessel was boarded by a band from one of the regiments quartered in the city. The sailors appreciated the music so much that McNeil promptly weighed anchor and sailed off with the whole band. Our country didn't want to go to war over a few musicians so McNeil's act was disawarded and he was removed from his office.

Since that time we have always had good marine bands. We seem to succeed at whatever we attempt, whether it is kidnapping a band, prosecuting a war or brewing good beer. Our purest beer, "Golden Grain Belt" is the most healthful beer in the world. Brewed from prime barley and choice hops, carefully aged and bottled with cleanliness, it is healthful and delicious. Try a case in your home. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Alex. Thompson, Crookston.

Farmers' Institute.

The State Farmers' Institute will be held in St. Hilaire Wednesday June 12th, commencing at 10 o'clock sharp, when and where farmers and others can get valuable "pointers" in agriculture, stock raising, dairying, etc. A day spent in attendance at a farmers institute may result in the adoption of methods, the value of which cannot be estimated. At the farmers institute you will meet those who have traveled the rough and rocky road of experience and they will try to aid you is avoiding some of the many difficulties they had to encounter. Thousands and thousands of dollars are annually lost in Minnesota to the masses, by not knowing the practical methods of the most successful farmers. The practical experience of the successful farmers make splendid "guide boards" to all others, when heeded. All methods that have proven failures should be set up as "danger singals," to prevent others from falling into the same errors. The practical experience of just one individual (when known) may be of inestimable value to the whole country; while the glowing theories of another (not practically demonstrated) may be the means of great damage. The state farmers' institute is our traveling school of agriculture, which brings to our very doors the experiences, means and methods for the best known practical results. It is all free, no collections and no charges. Tell all your neighbors. Bring your friends and get all the benefits. Remember the time, place and date. Be sure you are on time!

GIVEN AWAY!

At the close of the forenoon session, a very valuable book of over 350 pages (the institute annual), devoted to agriculture, stock raising, horticulture, dairying, sheep husbandry, swine husbandry, poultry raising, domestic economy, etc., etc., will be given free. This book is estimated by those who have carefully examined it, to be well worth from $5.00 to $25.00 to those interested in the subjects therein contained. [illegible]

BINDING TWINE!

BINDER TWINE

Prices are on board cars at Minneapolis. Prices quoted are net cash with order. No discount allowed. Put up in 50 or 60 lb. sacks which we CANNOT BREAK.

We have just received several thousand pounds of Binding Twine made this year, fresh from the factory. This twine has just been made for us in 1901. We contracted for same several months ago and received same new in April this year. To-day's prices on this twine we will make as follows:

NEW STANDARD OR SISAL TWINE, per lb	$7\frac{7}{8}$c
MANILA, per lb	$9\frac{3}{4}$c
GIRAFFE MANILA MIXED TWINE, per lb	$9\frac{7}{8}$c

Kindly send in your orders for what twine you may need promptly. Should you desire to send us a deposit of half the amount we will hold this twine subject to your order until the first of June, providing you so state in writing us.

While we do not claim to be selling the cheapest twine in the market by any means, still, on account of the fact that we would not agree to hold the prices on twine, most of the factories have refused to sell us. You will find the twine that we offer above will give splendid satisfaction.

We especially recommend the Giraffe Manila Mixed Twine, as it is made for us by one of the largest and best mills in the United States, and the fiber from which it is made is selected from the newest, brightest and strongest, leaving the balance for a cheaper grade of twine, and the best, oldest and most skilled workmen only are allowed to spin it. Let us hear from you at once in regard to twine, as we feel, considering the grade of twine, we are offering you one of the best bargains in the market.

QUEER AND CURIOUS THINGS AND EVENTS.

Japan is doing Away with Some Absurd Customs - Up to 1868 the Emperor was Carried in a Closed Cart Drawn by a Bull.

With Pipe and Book.

With Pipe and Book, at close of day,
O, what is sweeter, mortal, say,
It matters not what book on knee,
Old Isaak or the Odyssey,
It matters not meerschaum or clay.

And though one's eyes will dream astray,
And lips forget to sue or sway,
It is enough to merely be,
With Pipe and Book.
What though our modern skies be gray,
As bards aver, I will not pray
For "soothing Death" to succor me,
But ask thus much, O Fate, of thee—
A little longer here to stay
With Pipe and Book.
—Richard Le Gallienne.

Elimination of Absurd Customs.

Only a little while ago the Japanese people regarded their sovereign as sacred, because he was the direct descendant of the gods. The Mikado was considered just as much the "Son of Heaven" as is the Chinese Emperor. Since superstitions of this kind, which are received by inheritance and rooted in the minds of the common people, are most difficult to eradicate, it is greatly to Japan's credit that she has thrown off the shackles of such prehistoric ideas and practically adopted in a few years the present day attitude of the west toward royalty. Still it is natural that the Emperor of Japan should still be regarded with the greatest reverence by his subjects. It is only recently that they have been allowed to see his face. Up to the time of the restoration, in 1868, if he ever went outside of his palace grounds in Kioto he was carried in a closed cart drawn by a bull. Even the throne was surrounded by curtains. To within a few years ago nobody was allowed to look out of the upper window of a house while the Emperor passed, because it was not meant that one of the Emperor's subjects should be above his lord. When the Japanese Emperor goes anywhere on the railroad on his special train, as a few months ago, when he traveled from Tokio to Kobe to be present at the naval maneuvers, the way is almost entirely lined with soldiers, police, school children, marshalled by their teachers, and throngs of the common people. Army officers of all ranks appear resplendent in their decorations—and it must be said that few Japanese of any consequence are without one or more—and the long ranks of spruce-looking soldiers and police make a fine showing. Up to within a few years ago, when the Emperor's train was on the road no other trains were allowed to run till it had passed. It was considered disrespectful for another train to pass the imperial one. Lately this foolish rule has been done away with, and trains are supposed to run on schedule time just the same. As a matter of fact, the imperial train has the right of way everywhere, and since the time of its going and coming is arbitrary and may be changed at any time to suit the caprice of the sovereign, travel is apt to be precarious when the Emperor is on the road. The doing away with many of the absurd customs founded on long established precedent is due to the Emperor himself. He it was who first decided that he would eat with the Empress and treat her as an equal. On many occasions he has taken pains to show that his ideas are more democratic than those of most of his subjects. Of course, precedent still means a great deal, and always will, for Japan is an oriental country, and everything that the Emperor does on all occasions is cut and dried for him beforehand.—Utica Globe.

Gilpin Manor is Historic.

On the bank of the Big Elk, about one mile north of the town of Elkton, Cecil county, Maryland, in a part of the original tract of Belleconnell, and almost hidden in a park of trees, is the historic old homestead, "Gilpin Manor," where for generations have lived the descendants of Samuel Gilpin, founder of the Cecil branch of one of the oldest and most aristocratic families in America, whose long line of distinguished ancestors dates back to the year 1200. The mansion house is of stone, large and spacious. The arched doorway of the main entrance, fashioned after Kentmere hall, one of the ancestral homes of the Gilpins in England, is an attractive feature. Built in 1740 and remodeled in later years, it stands today a fair and finely preserved type of the architecture of the colonial period. Stands also as a reminder of the good old days of "open house," when the latch-string hung outside. The grounds surrounding the house carefully laid out many years ago, retain much of their former beauty. The trees and shrubbery bear evidence of great age. Leading down from it is the staircase, undoubtedly concealing "mysterious panels," to the cellar, which if one had but the courage to penetrate further, would disclose the usual underground passage ways. On the whole, "Gilpin Manor" is most picturesque, most romantic, overlooking on the one side the Big Elk, on another the "last resting place" of departed ancestors, for "Gilpin Manor" has its family burying ground, guarded by solid granite walls, its mounds marked by substantial gravestones bearing odd inscriptions, many of which came from England. In the year 1695 Joseph Gilpin, with his wife, Hannah Glover, and his two small children, emigrated to America from England, and settled in Birmingham, Chester county, Pa. Joseph was a Quaker, and the persecution of the Friends in England led him to seek another country. With his family, he landed at New Castle and set out afoot through the forests for their new home—then a wilderness. Reaching their tract of land one of Joseph's first considerations was to provide temporary shelter for his family. To accomplish this he constructed a cave by the side of a rock. In it they continued to live for a considerable time. The first house he built was burned. In 1730 he built another, "Kentmere," which is still standing. It was at this same farmhouse Gen. Howe made his headquarters after the battle of Brandywine. Joseph Gilpin was sole agent and Friend in settling all of one township in Chester county.—Chicago Journal.

Musical Taste of Monkeys.

Now that Professor Garner is instructing us in the language of monkeys, it becomes a matter of family interest, as it were, to note any peculiarities of development in the animals from which the evolutionists maintain that the human race descended, or, more properly speaking, ascended. It may be classed with the study of genealogy. The author of "Studies in Corsica" touches on monkey music in speaking of the bagpipe. The well-known boast of patriotic Scotchmen that the bagpipe is sacred to Scotland, and speaking a language which only Scotchmen feel, is as slight in foundation as it is dubious in import. In Syria, in Persia, in Afghanistan and India, in fact, throughout the south of both Europe and Asia, the bagpipe is known and is enthusiastically cultivated. In India, if I may believe some soldier friends, the pipes attached to the Highland regiments are far more enjoyed by the native population than the best brass bands of other battalions. Nay, so much akin to our original nature is the dulcet music of the simple bagpipe that it is the one sort of music which stirs the monkeys. For, according to the testimony of the same officers, the Indian monkeys, although unmoved by bands, are so powerfully fascinated by the Scottish pibroch that when a detachment of Highlanders is marching to the pipes, and when the roadway traversed is lined with trees, the monkeys will follow the troops with signs of delight, scrambling after them from tree to tree. From facts such as these one cannot doubt that the bagpipe is one of our oldest instruments.

Fishing with a Steam Pump.

What might be considered the taking of an undue advantage of the fishes, as well as the ruining of the fishing business, is a new method of fishing reported by Cosmos (Paris), and translated for the Literary Digest. The editor says: Monsieu Mercier of St. Aubin du Coudrait describes one of the most singular fishing devices imaginable. Although extremely simple, the system is revolutionary. It was discovered by chance. A pond on the farm of La Marlequette, bordered by rocky shores, was last year drained by the aid of a steam pump. Each stroke of the piston drew up twenty-five gallons of water, and the pond was emptied in a few hours; and not only was the water drawn off, but all the fishes also were transferred to a new element. This was a revolution. The owners of ponds in the neighborhood followed suit, and the proprietors of the pump is making a specialty of this sort of work. He lets one of his pumps, modified for the purpose. The peasants of the region call it the "fish pump." East stroke of the piston brings up a torrent of water, in which are fish and crawfish, together with mud and debris. A sort of metal basket receives the whole. The water and slime exude, while a boy collects the fish and sorts them according to species and weight. Recently one pond of several acres was cleared of fish at an expense of thirty-six francs, or seven dollars and twenty cents. The process is ingenious, but as one cannot have the fish and eat them also such rapid consumption must lead to equally rapid extermination.

Both Wives Satisfied.

John Olive, a Kansas City carpenter, has just closed a deal which will save him from prosecution for bigamy. It was all arranged at a dinner which he gave in honor of his two wives, who met to listen to a proposition their joint husband had to make. Olive lived in Kansas City for many years with his wife and five children. A year ago he went to Olathe, Kan., and married Miss Jennie Collins, whom he took to Kansas City, and established in a new home. He kept the wives apart successfully for some time, but three weeks ago he became alarmed and went to Indianapolis. Wife No. 2 set up an investigation, located wife No. 1 and swore out a warrant for the husband. Olive heard of it and returned to face the wives and the warrant. He invited both women to dine with him and laid before them this proposition: Wife No. 1 to get a divorce from him on his promise to find her an acceptable husband; wife No. 2 to drop the bigamy proceedings and to become Mrs. Olive legally when wife No. 1 got her divorce. The proposition was accepted and the divorce suit has been brought, the bigamy prosecution has also been dropped, and it is said that an acceptable husband for Mrs. Olive No. 1—an old soldier with a pension—has been found.

Strange Fish Story.

W. H. Williams, of the water-works, tells a strange fish story concerning the reservoir, says the Hawesville, Ky., Plain Dealer. One day recently there was a coat of ice over the pond and the pumps were started. After a time he noticed that the machinery was not working smoothly and began an investigation. In the valves he found several species of fish and a number of water dogs. They were removed and he then examined the pond. To his surprise there were dozens of dead fish lying immdiately under the ice. These fish had been in the pond for months, but when the pumps failed to work a great deal of air was pumped into the pond, and being unable to escape on account of the ice, killed the fish. It is strange that a man can be pumped full of air, especially hot air, and live over it. It never did take much to kill a fish, no how.

OUR BISCUITS IN HAVANA.

Two Things That Impressed a Visitor—The Other Was the Strength of the Coffee.

A Philadelphian who has just returned from Cuba was impressed by two things during his stay in Havana—the strength of the coffee that is served and the vast quantities of soda biscuits of American manufacture consumed by the natives. "It took me some time to get accustomed to the coffee," he said. "At first I used to water it, but gradually I fell into the Cubans' way of drinking it, and learned to like the strong, aromatic flavor. Our own coffee now tastes weak and insipid to me. The poorer classes of Cuba will make a meal from coffee and soda biscuits. I learned that more of those biscuits are sold in Havana than in any of even the largest American cities. Key West, although comparatively a small community, comes next in the consumption of biscuits."—Chicago Journal.

Verdict Meant Death.

Aldrich, Mo., May 27th.—Four of the best doctors in the vicinity have been in attendance on Mrs. Mollie Moore of this place, who has been suffering from a severe case of nervousness and kidney disease. Each of them told her that she would die.

Hearing of Dodd's Kidney Pills, she began to use them, and instantly noticed a change for the better. Her improvement has been continuous since then. She says that the disease first manifested itself by the appearance of dark spots floating before her eyes. Her nerves were so bad that many times she would collapse completely, and she would fall down as if shot.

The fact that Dodd's Kidney Pills saved her after four doctors had given her up, has caused no end of talk in this neighborhood, and all are loud in their praises of this new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pils—which is curing so many hitherto incurable cases, in this state and elsewhere.

The Immortal Hawes Inn.

It was at the Hawes Inn that Scott's learned hero of "The Antiquary," while he waited for the "tide of ebb and the evening breeze," to enable him to cross, regaled himself in the sanded parlor on the appetizing bill of fare of "Caller haddies," mutton chops and cranberry tarts. The Hawes Inn has been immortalized in two romances, for Stevenson made his hero in "Kidnaped" first smell there the salt of the sea, and started him on his unpremeditated voyage in the "Covenant," which threw threw that rather stolid youth, David Balfour, into the enlivening company of Alan Breck.—Chambers' Journal.

WESTERN CANADA'S DECEMBER WEATHER

Equal to That of May in Minnesota.

To the Editor:—Thomas Regan and C. Collins of Eden Valley, Minnesota, went out to Western Canada last December as delegates to look over the grazing and grain lands that are being offered at such low prices and reasonable terms. This is what they say:

"We arrived in Calgary about the 20th of December and although we had left winter in Minnesota and Manitoba, we were surprised to find beautiful warm weather at this point, quite equal to what we have in May in Minnesota. There was no snow nor trace of winter to be seen, and the climate was really splendid. Horses, cattle and sheep were running out, in prime condition, with plenty of feed on the prairie, and really better than that of ours stabled in the south. We are impressed with this country as one of the finest mixed farming countries we have ever seen. The immense tracts of fertile lands well sheltered and abundantly watered leave nothing to be desired.

"Leaving Alberta we returned east and visited the Yorkton district in Assiniboia. We drove out about ten miles at this point and were highly pleased with the splendid samples of grain we were able to see—wheat yielding 25 bushels, oats 60 bushels. Roots were also good specimens. From what we have seen, we have decided to throw in our lot with the Yorktoners—satisfied that this part of the country will furnish good opportunities for anyone anxious to make the best of a really good country."

"Any agent of the Canadian government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper will give you full particulars of the new districts being opened out this year in Assiniboia and Saskatchewan.

Yours truly, Old Reader.

"I Followed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Now I am Well."

A woman is sick—some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story.

She holds back something, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and this completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it a wonder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician. This is the reason why hundreds of thousands of women are now in correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can give every symptom, so that when she is ready to advise them she is in possession of more facts from her correspondence with the patient than the physician can possibly obtain through a personal interview.

Following we publish a letter from a woman showing the result of a correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. All such letters are considered absolutely confidential by Mrs. Pinkham, and are never published in any way or manner without the consent in writing of the patient; but hundreds of women are so grateful for the health which Mrs. Pinkham and her medicine have been able to restore to them that they not only consent to publishing their letters, but write asking that this be done in order that other women who suffer may be benefited by their experience.

Mrs. Ella Rice, Chelsea, Wis., writes:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—For two years I was troubled with falling and inflammation of the womb. I suffered very much with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and was not able to do anything. What I endured no one knows but those who have suffered as I did. I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I doctored with the physicians of this town for three months and grew worse instead of better. My husband and friends wished me to write to you, but I had no faith in patent medicines. At last I became so bad that I concluded to ask your advice. I received an answer at once advising me to take your Vegetable Compound, and I did so. Before I had taken two bottles I felt better, and after I had taken five bottles there was no happier woman on earth, for I was well again. I know that your Vegetable Compound cured me, and I wish and advise every woman who suffers as I did to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Believe me always grateful for the recovery of my health."—Mrs. Ella Rice, Chelsea, Wis.

Piles Cured While You Sleep

You are costive, and nature is under a constant strain to relieve the condition. This causes a rush of blood to the rectum, and before long congested lumps appear, itching, painful, bleeding. Then you have piles. There are many kinds and many cures, but piles are not curable unless you assist nature in removing the cause. CASCARETS make effort easy, regulate and soften the stools, relieving the tension, and giving nature a chance to use her healing power. Piles, hemorrhoids, fistula, and other rectal troubles yield to the treatment, and Cascarets quickly and surely remove them forever. Don't be persuaded to experiment with anything else!

HUNDREDS KILLED

DEATH AND DESTRUCTION CAUSED BY TERRIBLE FLOODS IN WEST VIRGINIA.

WORSE THAN JOHNSTOWN HORROR

Loss of Life Will Easily Reach Two Hundred and Some Estimates Place It as High as Five or Six Hundred — Property Loss Estimated at Two Million Dollars—Communication Cut Off.

Bluefields, W. Va., June 24.—This entire section has just been visited by a flood, the extent of which in all probability will equal, or exceed that of Johnstown in 1889 so far as the loss of property is concerned. Early Saturday morning a heavy downpour of rain began, accompanied by a severe electric storm which violently increased in volume and continued for several hours. This continued throughout the entire day and night, and at 10 a. m., while the storm had abated, the lowering clouds would indicate another, terrific downpour at any moment. Many miles of the Norfolk & Western railroad track, bridges and telegraph lines are entirely destroyed and communication is entirely cut off west of Elkhorn, so that it is impossible to learn the full extent of the loss of life and property, but officials of the coal corporations located in the stricken district have sent out messengers to Elkhorn, the terminus of both telegraphic and railroad communications and have received a report that a conservative estimate as to the loss of life will Easily Reach Two Hundred.

Some of the drowned are among the most prominent citizens of the coal fields. The Pocahontas coal field is located in a basin, with high mountain ranges on either side. Elkhorn creek flowing through the center of the basin, which ranges from one-fourth to one mile in width. From Ennis, W. Va., to Vivian Yard, W. Va., a distance of ten miles, miners' cabins, coal company commissaries and coke plants line the basin. Elkhorn creek, being fed by numerous small streams coming from the mountain-side, rises very rapidly, and this waterspout came so suddenly that the entire basin between the two mountain ranges was flooded before the terror-stricken people realized what was upon them, and they were carried down by the flood which swept everything in its path. The little town of Keystone, with a population of about 2,000, seems the greatest sufferer, practically the entire town being washed away. This town is the principal one in the Pocahontas coal field, and is located near its center. A great number of the coal and coke plants throughout the Pocahontas are reported and are in some instances entirely washed away. Owing to the very high water which has flooded the region and prevented communication, anything like a correct estimate of the loss of property is impossible, but the best information obtainable at 2 p. m. Sunday the loss to property will easily reach two million dollars. Between Elkhorn and Vivian Yard, a distance of ten miles, one hundred cars are said to be washed from the tracks and many of them were carried down the stream. A rough estimate places the number of bridges washed away between Bluefields and Vivian Yard, a distance of twenty-eight miles, at from fifteen to twenty, and from present indications it will be impossible to get trains through to Vivian and points west of there under a week or ten days. This will render it impossible to get relief into the stricken district, and with those who escaped with their lives, homeless and without food, indescribable suffering is inevitable.

Practically Destroyed

Communication Severed.

On the Clinch Valley branch of the Norfolk & Western railroad, between this city and Norton, Va., communication is entirely severed west of Tazewell, Va. Reports come from that point of great loss of life and property throughout that entire section. The railroad and telegraph companies are working between 1,000 and 1,500 men day and night. Officials are on the ground pushing the work of constructing telegraph lines and are building the road and hope to be able to communicate with both the storm-swept districts by noon Monday. Nothing whatever has been heard from the section of country between Vivian and Williamson other than that the Tug river is reported as being entirely over its banks and higher than ever known by the oldest inhabitants. The town of Welch, county seat of McDowell county, necessarily must have suffered seriously and a number of the large lumber plants situated along the banks of Tug river no doubt are entirely washed away.

MAY REACH SIX HUNDRED.

Loss of Life Is Appalling — Rivals Johnstown and Galveston.

Roanoke, Va., June 24.—There was a great deal of excitement and anxiety created here yesterday when it was reported that an awful flood and cloudburst had swept over the Elkhorn coal region in West Virginia. This territory is near the Virginia line and is about 125 miles west of here and some twenty-five miles west of Bluefields, W. Va. The region visited by the flood is said to be devastated and the Pocahontas coal fields are reported in ruins. More than thirty miles of the railroad tracks of the Norfolk & Western railroad is gone and reports are still coming into the general offices of this system in this city, reporting washouts on the various sections of lines in the flooded districts. One of the breaks in the track will require at least a thousand laborers and several days work to repair it. The railroad yards at Vivian, a small town in West Virginia, were completely destroyed, and it is reported most of the town was washed away. North Fork Junction and a few other smaller towns suffered greatly. It is stated that the greatest damage so far as known is at Keystone, W. Va.

From the meager reports describing the force of the storm at Keystone it would appear that the damage rivals that of Johnstown, and is equal to the Galveston horror in its intensity so far as the percentage of population lost and property destroyed. There is no telegraphic communication west of Bluefields as the telegraph lines were swept away along with the railroad tracks. It is estimated that 200 lives alone were lost at Keystone. Railroad ties and tracks, small buildings of all descriptions, trees, telegraph poles, huge bowlders and every imaginable movable thing that came within the sweep of this mighty torrent of maddened waters, went down the mountainous district in a seething, roaring mass of debris. Dead bodies could be seen floating along the valley by those who had gained a place of safety on the high hills. The total loss of life will probably reach 500 or 600, and possibly this number will be swelled when fuller details are obtainable.

OTHER STORMS.

Terror and Havoc Created in Other Places.

Pittsburg, June 24.—The storm which broke over Allegheny county on Saturday afternoon carried with it deaths by drowning and deaths by electric shock to the number of four, floods that caused much damage and wind that created terror and havoc. Every part of the county suffered. The storm broke about 2:30 o'clock after darkness had gradually been settling down for half an hour. The day until then had been a beautiful one. The rain was very heavy, the wind strong, and often the lightning seemed to be playing right overhead.

-o-

Columbus, Ohio, June 24. — There were severe storms in many sections of Ohio Saturday and Saturday night, and considerable damage was done to property and crops. No fatalities have been reported but a number of people were injured. A veritable tornado swept Concord township, Delaware county, destroying a number of buildings.

STRUCK BY TORNADO.

Houses and Barns Blown Down and Many Horses Killed.

Pomeroy, Ohio, June 24.—A tornado struck the residence portion of Middleport yesterday morning. Two houses and six barns were blown down, about twenty buildings unroofed and 500 trees uprooted. All the telephone, electric light and telegraph wires were torn down across the trolly wires of street cars. Horses were killed by contact with the wires and one man was fatally burned. Thousands of dollars damage was done to bridges.

NEARLY A LYNCHING.

Philadelphia Crowd Would Kill a Negro Murderer.

Philadelphia, June 24.—Hugh O'Donnell, a white man aged thirty-eight years, was stabbed to death by Thomas Brockson, colored, aged twenty-nine. The crime was committed on the Walnut street bridge over the Schuylkill river and the murderer has a narrow escape from being lynched. A crowd of nearly 1,000 persons pursued the negro and were only prevented from carrying out their purpose by the arrival of eighteen policemen. O'Connell and Brockson were employed in a cement manufacturing plant, and quarreled over a trifling matter.

RENEWS OFFER.

Wanamaker Again Offers to Buy Philadelphia Street Railway.

Philadelphia, June 24.—John Wanamaker has sent a letter to Robert Foerderer, renewing his offer of $2,500,000 for the rapid transit franchise to the city and an additional $500,000 for the men holding the franchise as a bonus. He also agrees to guarantee a 3-cent fare certain hours of the day and agrees to return the franchise, etc., to the city any time within ten years provided the city pays back the actual money invested and expended. The letter was delivered to Mr. Foerderer at his home. He made no reply.

KILLED BY RUFFIANS.

Young Man Stabbed While Defending Himself in an Unequal Combat.

Kansas City, June 24. — Thomas Scruggs, aged eighteen years, son of M. D. Scruggs, a well known live stock dealer, was killed last night at Troost Park in this city while trying to withstand the unprovoked attack of ten or fifteen young ruffians. Scruggs and his companions were seated on a bench when they were approached by their assailants who immediately started an altercation which was followed by a fight. During the unequal struggle Scruggs was stabbed in the right side and died from the effects of the wound. Two suspects have been arrested.

AIMED AT RELIGIOUS ORDERS.

Associations Bill Passed by the French Senate.

Paris, June 24.—The senate held three sittings on Saturday and finally the associations bill passed at 1 o'clock on Sunday morning by a vote of 173 to 99. The associations bill, or the law of associations, is aimed at the religious orders and is intended to give the government control of their operations. The immediate cause of its introduction was the use of money by the Assumptionist Fathers for political purposes. It has already been passed by the chamber of deputies.

MAD MULLAH NARROWLY ESCAPES.

He Encounters the Main British Force and Is Routed.

Aden, June 24.—The Mad Mullah, after the recent repulse by Capt. MacNeill of his attack on the British Zereba, accidentally encountered the main British force of cavelry and mounted infantry, which immediately attacked and routed him! The pursuit was continued throughout the night. A hundred of the enemy were killed and the mullah and the sultan of Nur narrowly escaped capture. The British force lost seven killed and wounded.

BRITISH DEFEAT.

Twenty Men Killed and Sixty-Six Captured.

Cradock, Cape Colony, June 24.—In an engagement at Waterloof June 20 the British lost twenty men killed and two mortally wounded and had four men seriously wounded. In addition, sixty-six of the Cape (Colonial) Mounted Rifles were captured. Capt Spandon is reported to have been wounded and one Boer was killed.

KILLED BY A FALL

ADELBERT S. HAY THE VICTIM OF A TERRIBLE TRAGEDY AT NEW HAVEN.

SECRETARY HAY IS PROSTRATED

Full Details of the Tragedy Will Never Be Known—Generally Supposed That While Sitting in the Window He Dozed Off and, Overbalancing, Fell to the Pavement

New Haven, Conn., June 24. — Adelbert Stone Hay, former consul of the United States at Pretoria, South Africa, and eldest son of Secretary of State John Hay, fell from a window in the third story of the New Haven house in this city shortly before 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning and was instantly killed.

The dead man was a graduate of Yale, of the class of '98, and his death occurred on the eve of the university commencement, which brought him here Saturday, and in which by virtue of his class office, the young man would have been one of the leaders. The terrible tragedy has cast a gloom over the whole city. The full details of the accident will never be known. Mr. Hay had rooms at the New Haven house for commencement week. It is generally supposed, however, that after going to his room he went to the window for air, sitting on the sill, he dozed off and, overbanencing,

Fell to the Pavement

below, a fall of fully sixty feet. The fall resulted in instant death, and within fifteen minutes the body had been identified as that of young Hay. How it all happened became a matter of speculation on the part of the throng of curious spectators who gathered, and a subject of mournful inquiry for the classmates and friends of the young man. Half a dozen physicians who were hastily summoned were unable to do anything and the body awaited its disposition at the orders of the coroner's deputy, Medical Examiner Bartlett. That official pronounced it a case of accidental death and reported to his superior, Coroner Mix. The body was removed as soon as possible to the rooms of a near-by undertaker where it awaited instructions from the family. Repeated efforts to locate Secretary Hay by wire were futile until the early morning hours, when a request from the father reached Mr. Seth Moseley, the proprietor of the hotel, to care for the body until the members of the family could reach town. Meanwhile the sensation occasioned by the tragedy continued.

Secretary Hay Prostrated.

Hon. John Hay, secretary of state, arrived in New Haven from Washington at 5:45 p. m. in response to the dispatch announcing the sudden death of his son, Adelbert S. Hay. Mr. Hay was unaccompanied, and gave signs of great grief. He entered a carriage and was driven immediately to the residence of Mr. Seth Moseley, 36 Wall street. Worn out with the long trip from the capital and only within the walls of the house that sheltered the remains of his dead son, the secretary collapsed. His prostration was so complete that medical aid was deemed necessary, and Dr. Gilbert was summoned. Dr. Gilbert said that the illness of the secretary is apparently not serious. The physician said: "Mr. Hay is simply overwhelmed by the tragic death of his son and is suffering from a prostration which will probably be relieved by sufficient rest."

Miss Helen Hay, a daughter of the secretary, arrived in New Haven from Boston at 7:10 p. m.

DESTRUCTIVE TORNADO.

Does Great Damage at Lincoln, Ill., and Vicinity.

Lincoln, Ill., June 24.—This city and vicinity was visited Saturday night by a destructive tornado which did $100,000 damage. The Lincoln mattress factory was almost totally destroyed while severe damage was done to the Illinois asylum for feeble minded children, Illinois Odd Fellows orphans' home, Lincoln college, roller flour mills and the county poor farm. Several stores were unroofed, houses wrecked and thousands of trees torn up. An elevator at Middleown was destroyed and stores damaged. Reports of damage by the storm came from rural districts. At Elkhart several freight cars were blown from the tracks and great damage done to wheat, corn and oats.

TWO WERE DROWNED.

Steamer Collides With a Naptha Launch.

Boston, June 24.—While coming into the harbor yesterday morning on her regular trip from Maine ports the steamer City of Bangor, of the Bangor Steamship company's line, during a dense fog ran down the naptha launch Estelle, anchored off Deer island beacon, directly in the steamer's path. Five men on the launch were thrown into the water. Two were drowned, the others being rescued with considerable difficulty.

SHOOTS MAN THROUGH LUNG.

Alexander McBride Mortally Wounds James Green in Street Altercation.

Spencer, Ind., June 24.—Alexander S. McBride, a merchant and ex-trustee of Franklin township, shot James Green through the lung at Freedom. The wound will prove fatal. McBride had interfered in a quarrel between Green and Dow Hickam, and Green threatened to take his life. Later Green began abusing McBride in front of his store, when the latter drew his revolver and shot.

TRY TO WRECK KANSAS CHURCH.

Enmity Toward the Pastor and Mayor of Manhattan Ascribed as Cause.

Manhattan, Kan., June 24. — An attempt was made this morning to blow up the First Methodist church with dynamite. The explosive was thrown on the door of the main entrance, blowing a large hole in the floor, shattering the steps and breaking a number of windows. Rev. J. E. Miller, the pastor, was elected mayor last spring and has waged a bitter fight on the joints.

JUMPS INTO THE LAKE.

Woman Commits Suicide by Jumping From a Steamer.

Milwaukee, June 24.—According to a story told by Richard Silver, a passenger on the Goodrich line steamer Virginia, a woman, supposed to be a Mrs. Rosa Richter, living on Thirty-first street, near Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, committed suicide by jumping overboard from the Virginia when the steamer was about a mile from Milwaukee at an early hour yesterday morning. It is said Mrs. Richter became violent after the steamer left Chicago and attempted to end her life by leaping overboard, but was prevented.

LONG FAST.

Yankton Man Will Go Three Weeks Without Food.

Yankton, S. D., June 24.—J. M. Duna, an old citizen of Yankton, who for many years has been under the care of physicians almost constantly for stomach troubles, in desperation will attempt to alleviate and if possible cure his ailment by abstaining from all nourishment for a period of three weeks, taking nothing into his system but water for that length of time. He will have in constant attendance the best physicians to watch over him, and he will remain in bed during the time taken up by his fast.

THREE GIRLS INJURED.

West Superior Hotel Narrowly Escapes Destruction by Fire.

West Superior, Wis., June 24. — The West Superior hotel narrowly escaped destruction by fire. As it was $10,000 damage was sustained and three lives were nearly lost. Annie Macki, Carrie Jenson and Kate Yariches, all three employed at the hotel, were overcome by smoke and burned. The latter is seriously injured and may not live. After a hard struggle to get to her she was carried out by Manager Rossiter. The fire started in the hall from a crossed wire at the switchboard.

DROWNING ACCIDENT.

Merchant of Albert Lea Loses His Life While Fishing.

Albert Lea, Minn., June 24. — A. C. Wanamaker, who kept a store here, while at St. Olaf's lake, Waseca county, with his brother fishing, was accidentally drowned. No one was with him when the accident occurred. His brother left him about 10 o'clock Saturday night in a boat fishing and he has not seen him since, nor has his body been recovered. The water is very deep in the lake. Searching parties have gone out to attempt to get the body.

Man Wants Public Steam Laundries Run in Connection With Creameries.

Grand Rapids, Wis., June 24. — Assemblyman F. J. Frost of this district is endeavoring to work up a sentiment in the rural districts in Portage and Wood counties in favor of steam laundries to be run in connection with the creameries and cheese factories and in this way lighten the burdens of the country housewife.

CHINAMAN'S AWFUL WORK.

He Murders Four of His Own Countrymen.

Vancouver, B. C., June 24.—A report just reached here from the country town of Cadun, B. C., of a horrible tragedy. A Chinaman murdered four of his countrymen. The murderer has not been caught. There is great excitement in the town and every effort is being made to capture him.

CLAM FISHER'S LUCK.

Largest Perfect Pearl Ever Found in Mississippi River.

La Crosse, Wis., June 24.—The largest perfect pearl ever taken out of the Mississippi river was found by John Umberger and B. D. Stone, two clam fishers residing near the river a few miles below here. The pearl weighs 110 grains and is valued at $5,000.

Trouble Over a Line Fence.

Redfield, S. D., June 24.—Redfield has a sensation. Paul Schmidt came and gave himself up, saying he had killed John Kellar, a farmer living a mile west of town. Sheriff King went to the scene and found Keller unconscious. The trouble arose over a line fence. At the last report Kellar was doing well. Schmidt is still here, ready to give himself up if Kellar should not improve.

Smallpox Grows More Virulent.

West Superior, Wis., June 24.—Smallpox is making its appearance in this vicinity in a more virulent form. The predictions of the experts that the disease would grow deadly seems to be coming true. While there have been in the neighborhood of 300 cases in this city in the last few months, there has been but one death. The health authorities, however, are beginning to fear the disease more than ever before.

Fined for Assault.

Luverne, Minn., June 24.—Clyde Maxwell, a young man of Kanarawzi township, was tried in Justice Webber's court for an assault on Miss Lottie Bruissane. Because of the disinclination of the lady to submit to the ordeal of an examination in court Maxwell escaped with a small fine. He paid the amount and immediately left town.

Mrs. McKinley Able to Walk.

Washington, June 24.—Mrs. McKinley's strength has increased to the extent that she is now able to walk around her bedroom for some time each day. Her general condition continues satisfactorily and Dr. Rixey said last night that she had passed a comfortable day.

Infant in the River.

New Ulm, Minn., June 24.—The body of a male infant two days old has been found in the Minnesota river. An inquest was held and it was learned that the child came to its death by violence at the hands of an unknown person.

Minot Boy Drowned.

Minot, N. D., June 24.—Herbert, aged nine, only child of James Morrison, a photographer, was drowned in the Mouse river while playing with companions on the river bank [illegible]

BLOODY TRAGEDY

LOUISVILLE MAN MURDERS A WOMAN AND THEN COMMITS SUICIDE.

WOMAN IS HORRIBLY MUTILATED

Police Find Her Corps Rammed Into a Closet—She Had Been Choked to Death and Terribly Mutilated—The Man Died From Wounds Self-Inflicted With a Pistol and Razor.

Louisville, Ky., June 24.—The death of H. S. Church early yesterday morning was the second act of a bloody tragedy that began in Louisville three days ago with the murder of Emily Stuart, but which did not come to light until late Saturday night when the police found the horribly mutilated body of the woman hidden in a closet and in the same house the man dying from wounds self-inflicted with pistol and razor. Several pistol shots near Twelfth and Market streets caused Policemen Finnegan, Webb and Hueghlin to enter the small frame building at 1215 West Market street, occupied by H. S. Church as a grocery store and residence, the living rooms being just back of the grocery. The policemen saw through a window clouds of smoke from a pistol. They forced an entrance and found Church propped up in a chair bleeding from a big wound in his left breast with a 45-caliber Colts revolver and from a slash across his left wrist made with a razor. On the floor was an empty bottle labeled laudanum. Church gave utterance only to

His Death Groans.

He was gotten to a hospital but died without making a statement. Police Lieutenant Meyer and four officers began to search the premises. This would have been abandoned as fruitless of special result had not the blood-stained hem of a woman's white garment been seen protruding from the crack of a closet door. The officers opened the door and saw at a glance that a woman had been horribly murdered and her corpse rammed into the closet. There was a big wound on the right side of the face and a gingham apron was tied tightly around her neck. "She was choked to death," said the coroner when he arrived. A physician said the woman had been dead forty-eight hours. The blood had come from the wound on her face which the policeman thought had been made by the stamp of a shoe heel. The woman was identified as Emily Stuart from a letter dated New York found in a bureau drawer which the coroner said "was a love letter and unsigned." Another in the same handwriting, unsigned and dated Chicago, was also found.

DESPERADO CAPTURED.

Gregorio Cortez Is at Last Run to Earth.

Laredo, Tex., June 24—Sheriffs Avant of Atacosa county, Kinsel of Frio and Deputy Sheriff Choate of Karnes county, with several members of their various posses, arrived here at 6 o'clock last evening to identify the man captured by Capt. Rogers and R. P. K. Merriam about forty miles above here Saturday. Among the men who arrived were two who knew the prisoner. One of them, William Loueary of Bastrop county, has known Cortez since 1892, and Deputy Sheriff Choate of Karnes county has known him for several years. They both positively identified the prisoner and said there is absolutely no doubt that he is the man whom they have known all these years as Gregorio Cortez and who killed Sheriff Morris of Karnes county and Sheriff Glover of Gonzales county. The identification is complete and the alleged murderer will be surrendered to the officers from the interior.

WADDELL WINS DERBY.

Big Crowd at Chicago Treated to a Surprise.

Chicago, June 24.—Before the largest crowd that ever went to Washington Park track, and for the largest amount of money ever at stake except in the memorable race of 1893, Robert Waddell Saturday won the fourteenth American Derby. On his back sat John Bullman, who rode the American Derby winner of one year ago. Back of the sturdy Virginia gelding finished the pick of American three-year-olds from East, West and South. W. T. Shafer's Terminus, a Tennessee colt belonging to a seventeen-year-old lad now attending school at Nashville, finished second, and R. T. Wilson Jr.'s The Parader, pride of the East and the selection of the betting men, came in a poor third, with the others badly beaten.

SUICIDE BY STARVATION.

Kentucky Man Succumbs After Twenty-Two Days Without Food.

Sebree, Ky., June 24.—W. M. Shelton, a respected citizen of Pool, Ky., chose a novel method of suicide. He has just died of starvation. Shelton had expressed a desire to die, but he did not wish to commit suicide with human agencies. Shelton first refused food three weeks ago. All efforts to induce him to eat failed and he died after twenty-two days' fasting. Shelton was sixty years of age. For several years he had not been in good health. Recently his condition became worse and it is believed his physical condition unbalanced his mind.

Many Farmhouses Destroyed.

Lynch, Neb., June 24.—Three persons were badly injured near here in the tornado which swept Naper. Many farmhouses were destroyed and much wheat was ruined by hail.

Japs Interested in Horses.

Chicago, June 24.—Representatives of the Japanese government are here in connection with a visit for the purpose of examining the American horse and the methods of its breeding with a view of its introduction into Japan.

Snap for the Ice Man.

New Orleans, June 24. — In consequence of the prolonged hot weather prevailing here the output of ice from the thirteen ice factories has passed 1,000,000 pounds a day and is insufficient to supply the demands.

FORESTRY AND FOREST FIRES.

Sixth Annual Report of the Forest Fire Warden of Minnesota.

The chief forest fire warden of Minnesota, Gen. C. C. Andrews, has issued his sixth annual report, being for the year 1900. It comprises 138 octavo pages, with numerous original illustrations of Minnesota forests. The spring of 1900 was the driest season that has occurred since 1894. The number of forest fires reported in 1900 was 139, which burned over 179,521 acres, and did damage to the amount of $153,399. The number of prairie fires was fifty; acres burned over, 213,240; damage, $63,017. During the dry season 300 reports were received from fire wardens, indicating activity in preventing and controlling fires. Twenty-six pages are devoted to extracts from the reports of local fire wardens. In a number of instances a great amount of property was saved by the efforts of fire wardens. Still better service could be had, the chief fire warden thinks, if the pay of fire wardens was more liberal. The area in which forest and prairie fires are liable to occur in Minnesota exceeds thirty million acres, and it may be presumed that some fires occurred in the unsettled territory not covered by fire warden service. The following are extracts from the report:

As an example of the efficiency of the fire warden service may be mentioned the fire which occurred in the township of Moose Lake, discovered June 22 on school section 36, township 46, range 20, two and a half miles in a direct line from the village of Moose Lake, between which and the fire is dense woods. The fire appears to have been set in three different places by a hunter in order to make pasture for deer. But for the energy and activity of the chairman of the town board in calling out help and controlling the fire it would doubtless have spread to and destroyed the village of Moose Lake (in which a hundred pupils were attending the village school) and might have extended also north to Barnum. I subsequently visited the scene of the fire, and was gratified to see the amount of work which had been done to prevent its spread.

The first step in forestry is the prevention of forest fires. Without that there can be no forestry. Our Minnesota system is not perfect and can be improved, but it has proved more effective than that of any other state. The six years it has been in operation the damage from forest fires, according to the reports of fire wardens, has averaged only $35,000 a year; and our forests at a conservative estimate are worth one hundred million dollars.

In previous reports I have strongly protested against the "dead and down" system of lumbering. A recent visit to two of the Chippewa Indian reservations satisfies me that there are good grounds for the common impression that the Indians are being wronged—I may as well say robbed—by the cutting of pine timber under the "dead and down" timber law and that the way this law is administered offers a premium for causing forest fires.

While much credit is due to the government of the United States for having put in practice within the last ten years the plan of creating forest reserves, mostly in mountainous regions, still it is a painful fact and one with which the friends of forestry ought to be acquainted, that, excepting what has been done in regard to forest reserves the disposal of pine lands has been prodigal and wasteful. Obtaining pine lands under the "soldiers'" additional homestead law and under the stone and timber act are illegitimate ways by which large bodies of such lands are acquired at much less than their value.

Now these unpleasant facts ought to stimulate the friends of forestry throughout the country to demand of their senators and representatives in congress, and of the president, a reform of this pine land system of plunder. Apparently the most particular reform would be to have all of the remaining public pine lands created into forest reserves, and treated on forestry principles.

The cutting of pine timber has been going on increasingly in Minnesota for over fifty years. The use of logging railroads facilitates consumption, and the average value of the pine just as it stands in the woods that is now annually cut is six million dollars. This great industry employs many thousands of workmen. As the benign mother of wages, let alone the benefit of future supply and cheapness of lumber, we should take heed that the industry be not ruined. To-day there is scarcely a lumber yard in Minnesota in which is not found lumber from the Pacific coast competing with our home products; and the railroad companies operating to the coast are looking forward to the time when the bulk of lumber consumed in this state will be brought from the primeval woods of Oregon and Washington. For any one who will need to buy lumber in the next twenty-five years, it will make a difference of hundreds of dollars whether we go on in our present wasteful consumption of of the forest, or whether we inaugurate measures for forest regeneration. Probably there are twenty billion feet of pine still standing in Minnesota, and principally in the counties of Cook, Lake, St. Louis, Itasca, Cass and Beltrami. There is still some left in Carlton, Pine, Kanabec, Mille Lacs, Aitkin, Morrison, Crow Wing, Todd, Hubbard and Becker. There remains much cedar, spruce, balsam and tamarack, immense quantities of poplar, and an extensive supply of other deciduous woods. Most people know that hardwood timber land has a natural fertility which makes it suitable for farming, and this will ultimately come under the plow. It is different with most of the land which naturally bears coniferous forest such as the pine. And herein is the significance of forestry for the people of Minnesota, that the pine will in our climate earn by its growth a net income on the capital it represents of 3 per cent compound interest on refuse land—land that is too sandy, or too hilly, or too rocky for profitable cultivation.

I would recommend an amendment to the constitution in substance as follows:

"Land which is unfit for agriculture and on which forest is systematically grown in good faith on tracts of not less than forty acres shall be exempt from taxation; but the forest crop on such land shall be taxed according to its value when it has reached merchantable size; and the tax shall be a lien on the land. Provided, that any land on which the branches and tops of felled trees shall remain after six months from the time the trees were felled shall be assessed and taxed as other land is assessed and taxed."

The report contains sketches of the forestry of sixteen European countries.

Surgical Operation in China.

Placing the suffering Chinese woman on a rudely-constructed bamboo couch near the open door and facing the court yard, in order to get the best light, with beating hearts, and under high nervous tension, we commenced the operation for cancer, so pregnant with the direst possibilities. While I administered the anesthetic, the doctor and my wife proceeded to remove the cause of the woman's suffering, while the members of the family stood near by, and with fearful and awe-struck expressions gazed upon the ghastly scene.

We had just reached the critical stage of the operation, the roots of the troublesome cancerous growth had been skilfully removed, gushing arteries were being deftly caught and ligated, and we were quietly congratulating ourselves that the terrible tension would soon be over, when we were startled by a terrific cry from Tsang, our servant, who watched by the gate, and who, with an expression of almost hopeless despair, exclaimed:

"Teacher, there is a crowd of men coming up the street!"

In some way our visit to the cottage had become known, and soon a horde of wildly gesticulating and excited Chinese traced their way to where we were. As they came nearer, the sound of angry voices and fierce exclamations reached our ears, and we mutely looked at one another, for the situation was growing desperate and full of horror.

"What will I do, Morley?" I cried to the doctor.

Finish the operation," he stoically replied.

Two Hundred Years Old.

On the 29th of December, 1902, the Russian press will have the opportunity of celebrating its 200th anniversary. It was on that day, in the year 1702, that Peter the Great signed the ukase ordaining the publication of the first Russian newspaper, the "News on Military and Other Matters." A few days later the first number of the official Russian newspaper was issued, and from Jan. 16, 1703, it appeared regularly, both in St. Petersburg and Moscow. The first Russian newspaper, by the way, had but a short life. The News ceased to appear in 1711.

Already preparations are being made in the Russian empire for a worthy celebration of the jubilee. The Bibliographical Society of Moscow plans the publication of a magnificent work, containing a list of all the Russian newspapers published from 1702 to 1902, and adorned with the pictures of prominent journalists and publishers. The net proceeds of the sale of the work are to used as a fund for supporting needy journalists. They also intend to arrange, on this occasion, a magnificent exhibition at Moscow.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Game to the Last.

A certain duke, while driving from the station to the park on his estate, to inspect a company of artillery, observed a ragged urchin keeping pace with the carriage at his side. His grace, being struck with the cleanliness of the lad, asked him where he was going. The lad replied:

"To the park, to see the dook and the sogers."

The duke, feeling interested, stopped his carriage, and opened the door to the lad, saying he could ride to the park with him.

The delighted lad, being in ignorance of whom he was, kept his grace interested with his quaint remarks until the park gates were reached.

As the carriage entered, it was saluted by the company and guns, whereupon his grace said to the lad:

"Now, can you show me where the duke is?"

The lad eyed his person all over, then, looking at the duke, replied, quite seriously:

"Well, I dunno, mister; but it' either you or me."—London Spare Moments.

About the Eyes.

Watch children writing and you will see that they never (unless they are made to) sit correctly before their paper, with eyes looking straight at it.

The head slopes down to the left, the book or paper slips away to the right, and the eyes, looking at it askew, are focussed from different distances.

Very possibly they may have something to do with the defective eyesight of the present day.

Tell the children to never rub their eyes.

Train them always to read with their back to the window, lamp or gas, that the light may fall on the book, and not on the eyes.

Never let a child read lying down.

Do not read, write or work longer than two hours at a time without resting the eyes.

Closing them for five minutes at a time is restful and beneficial.

Cheap Telephones.

Telephone charges in France are being further reduced. The Journal Officiel publishes a decree that goes into effect in January, whereby Paris subscribers get a telephone for $60 annually, instead of $80. Lyons subscribers will pay $50. Non-subscribers can converse three minutes from any public telephone box in Paris for 3 cents; in other cities for 2 cents.—New York Herald.

A force of twenty young Christian Endeavorers were holding a series of religious meetings in a Nebraska town last week. One evening some gay youths treated the meeting to a volley of stale eggs and other such things. Attorney General Douglas has gone after the American Mining Investment Company, a concern that had headquarters at St. Paul and has been doing an immense swindling business. An examination of the affairs of the company discloses the fact that they cannot show clear title to even the furniture in their offices. They had sold stock to the par value of $14,000,000 and had taken in over $250,000 in cash, yet the assets discovered by the examination amount to but $1,000 against which there is an indebtedness of $2,500. Nearly every state in the Union furnished a big bunch of suckers who got caught by these smooth operators.

The Story of the Vivacious Maid Who Received the Flowers.

"Yes, it was a lovely bunch of violets," sighed the girl who received them, "but I wish they had never come to me. You see, it was this way: The man who sent them is one of those awfully nice fellows who bore you to death—the kind you feel so glad to see talking to some one else, don't you know," she ended appealingly.

"Yes: I've seen the type," sympathetically replied her auditor.

"Well, on my birthday he sent that lovely bunch of violets—perfect beauties they were—with a dear little note to the effect that he had to go out of town, but would be represented by these little purple clad messengers, so like my eyes and whose fragrance always reminded him of me. I thought the note rather nice," she concluded pensively, "and put the flowers in the parlor on the center table, writing back that I had done so. Why in the world was I so prompt?" she wailed.

"It was no more than polite."

"Oh, much more! My dear, it is always idiotic to go into details like that. Well, he did not go out of town, but was 'fortunately' detained and came around after all to tell me so. And those wretched violets"—

"Surely they were all right?"

"I had loaned them to Annie to wear to the Blanks' dinner. Of course I had to tell him that the heat of the room was too great, and I had put them in the icebox. Just as he was going and I was congratulating myself on my escape in sailed that miserable girl, violets and all! If he had only gone, as he said he would, it would have been all right. Men are so unreliable!"—New York Mail and Express.

Ordinance No. 18.

An ordinance to establish a Fire department in the Village of St. Hilaire and to provide regulations for the same.

The village council of the village of St. Hilaire do ordain as follows:

1st. A fire department shall be and the same is hereby created in the village of St. Hilaire and said department shall consist of a chief, an assistant chief and one company or more of not less than twenty nor more than seventy-five members; to be organized and equipped as an engine company and one or more companies of not less than twelve nor more than twenty-five members each to be organized and equipped as hose companies.

2nd. The village council may by resolution provide for the appointment from among the members of the fire department of one or more fire wardens; provided that appointments to such positions shall be made by the chief, subject to the approval of the village council; provided further that upon the order or request of the village council, the chief shall himself assume and perform the duties of fire warden.

3rd. The village council may by resolution adopt and prescribe rules and regulations providing for the examination and appointment of members of the fire department, and rules and regulations providing for their conduct and discipline.

4th. The village council may by resolution fix the rate of compensation of the chief, fire wardens and all the other officers and members of the fire department.

5th. The chief shall have full power, control and command over all persons whomsoever at any fire, and in his absence the assistant chief shall preform the duties of the chief and in the absence of both the chief and the assistant, the senior fire warden or other officer present shall perform such duties.

6th. The chief or person in command at any fire shall have power to command such assistance from the inhabitants of the village, not members of the fire department for the extinguishment of fire and the preservation of property exposed to fire, as may in his judgment be required, and no person shall neglect or refuse to render assistance as above required, and no person shall refuse to obey any lawful order of the officers in command, or insult, menace or interfere with any person connected with the fire department when on duty.

7th. No wagon, cart or other vehicle shall be driven over the hose belonging to the fire department of the village of St Hilaire laid in the streets at the occurence of any fire or at the alarm of any fire.

8th. All apparatus belonging to the fire department whenever attending any fire or an alarm of fire shall have the right of way of any and all streets and alleys and all persons driving vehicles of any kind shall drive entirely off the centre of the street until such apparatus of the fire department shall pass.

9th. The chief or other officer in command at any fire shall have power to arrest and cause the removal of any disorderly or suspicious person or persons at any fire of any person caught in the act of stealing or unlawfully appropriating property at such fire.

10th. Any person who shall have served five consecutive years as an officer or member of any hose, engine or hook and ladder company belonging to the fire department of the village of St. Hilaire shall be entitled to an honorable discharge therefrom and on presentation to the village recorder of a certificate signed by the chief that the bearer thereof has served the said time, it shall be and is hereby made the duty of the village recorder to give to the said officer or member a discharge by him signed, with the seal of the village thereto affixed.

11th. Any person convicted of the violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding ninety days.

12th. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage and publication.

Passed by the Village Council this 3rd day of June 1901.

H. E. IVES,
Pres. of Council.

RUINED BY TROUSERS.

Last Remnant of the Cocopah Indian Tribe of Colorado Has Gone to Mexico.

Reduced by disease and famine to the mere remnant of a tribe, two-score Cocopah Indians, with their squaws and 50 puny, suffering children, crossed the Mexican side of the international line below Yuma, a short time ago. With no land to call their own, the little band had practically been driven from the civilization that had ruined them.

Less is known of the Cocopahs than of any other tribe in North America. In 1689 Father Rodriguez visited them and described the men as being of extraordinary size. They have always persisted in keeping to themselves. For a long time their tribe has been growing smaller and their physical proportions have been diminishing.

The Cocopahs attribute their retrogression to the assumption of clothing. Before they learned the ways of the white man, and donned trousers and shirts, they knew no illness. Since then disease has ravaged the tribe. Last winter many of them died of pneumonia and two months ago smallpox broke out among them. Scores of the Indians have died of the disease.

For weeks an armed guard kept the Cocopahs away from Yuma, their sole source of supplies. As a result the Indians suffered from lack of food and other supplies, while they had no medicine except their own concoctions.

An extraordinary ceremony was performed in Cape Town a few weeks ago. A lion tamer had been giving an exhibition for several days, and one evening he informed the audience that he had just become a father and he intended to baptize the infant on the following day in the lions' cage. Those who heard him thought he was joking, but when they reached the exhibition hall the next evening they found that he was in dead earnest.

In the cage he stood, surrounded by his assistants, and near him were seated three women—his wife, one of her friends and the godmother of the infant. To the left of them stood the clergyman, holding the baby in his arms, and behind him was a gigantic African named Leo, who was to act as godfather on the occasion. Facing this fearless group were two huge lions, whose every action showed that they were immeasurably surprised at the intrusion of so many strangers into their domicile. Moreover, their surprise was the greater since, in honor of the event, their cage was wreathed with flowers and splendidly illuminated with electric lights.

The ceremony was duly performed, and while it lasted the lions behaved with "perfect propriety," much to the satisfaction and surprise of the immense crowd which thronged the hall.

Supreme Court Rules in Favor of Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Cunningham.

On Friday last the supreme court handed down a decision sustaining the district court in the cases of Mrs. Adams and Mrs Cunningham against Thief River Falls and the Great Northern railway company. The case is familiar to our readers having been tried at the winter term of court in Red Lake county.

The action was brought by Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Cunningham against the city and railway company jointly, but the case against the latter was dismissed as to Mrs. Adams. The jury returned a verdict of $5,000 for Mrs. Adams and $4,000 for Mrs. Cunningham. Judge Watts ruled that the amounts were excessive and reduced them to $3,5000 and $2,500 respectively. The defendants appealed and the result is as stated, the lower court being affirmed.

Alex Thompson, B. O. Anderson and Louis Fillatrault were among the traveling men who transacted business here yesterday.

Hon. Thos. Shevlin and F. P. Hixon, who are at the head of the St. Hilaire Lumber Co., were here yesterday looking over the plant.

"What Shall We Eat?"

Every day the same old question, what shall we eat for breakfast, for luncheon, for dinner? assails with monotonous regularity the patient housewife who seeks to provide good living for the family in agreeable variety at a moderate cast. There is a daily department in The Chicago Record-Herald, which is intended to answer this question satisfactorily every day in the year. It is entitled "Meals for a Day," and provides menus for the three meals every day, with the necessary recipes. These menus and recipes are carefully selected by The Record-Herald's household editor, and cash prizes are rewarded to the best that are received. Housewives everywhere are invited to participate in the competition. For full particulars see the "Meals for the Day" department in The Chicago Record-Herald.

Card of Thanks.

Through the SPECTATOR we wish to extend our sincere thanks to the many kind friends who extended us their aid and sympathy in our recent bereavement. Also to those who so kindly decorated the church for the funeral services. P. LeMay and Family.

ARROW SHOTS.

> It fell to the earth; I know not where.
> —LONGFELLOW.

You judge folks by the people who visit them.

Almost anybody nowadays carries a fountain pen.

It is too bad that dudes and preachers were white ties.

A wedding party looks just as funny in Chicago as at home.

It looks awfully funny to see a man get all excited over a fish.

It seems a sort of pity for any girl to get the declaiming habit.

No woman is so homely that she does not try to deny her age.

When you get out of humor with anybody it is generally your own fault.

Lots of people make fun about things just because they don't know any better.

A man who keeps up with the styles in overcoats usually does not pay his debts.

You can't tell how big a fool a man can make of himself till you see him drunk.

Did you ever figure out how little ice a fellow from a country town cuts in a big city.

It is surprising what faults we can find with a person as soon as we don't like him.

People whose highest ambition is to get enough to live without work rarely ever get enough.

The trouble with fire proof buildings you can't tell about them till you burn them to try them.

Don't you know that by too much zeal for a cause you may drive away a good many reasonable people.

If a girl gets married too quick folks talk about it, and if the courtship is carried on too long, they talk too.

While women do most of the church going, have you ever noticed that men invent most of the new religions?

—Julius Pleth, the land man of St. Hilaire wants to buy farm lands—wild or improved, and will pay spot cash for same.

Be a King in Your Line.

There is always room at the top. The world does not demand that you be a physician, a lawyer, a farmer or a mechanic; but it does demand that, whatever you do undertake, you will do it with all your might and with all the ability you possess. It demands that you be a master in whatever you undertake. That is the meaning of success.

To compete with bright, active, healthy men you must be as well equipped in every way as they are. To the Pan American Exposition at Buffalo.

The most popular railway from the Northwest to the great show at Buffalo will be the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

It runs, every day, five beautiful trains from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago, connecting directly with all Eastern lines.

Its celebrated Pioneer Limited (the famous train of the world) leaves Minneapolis 7:30 p. m. and St. Paul 8:10 p. m. daily, arriving Chicago 9:30 next morning.

Special features of the "Milwaukee's" service are the observation, buffet parlor cars on day trains, private compartment and standard sleepers on night trains, as well as buffet smoking cars and the best dining service in the world.

Tickets at cheap rates will be on sale every day at all points on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Ry., to Buffalo and return, and the maximum comfort can be obtained by using this line.

Write to J. T. Conley, Ass't Gen'l Passgr. Agent, St. Paul, for the "Milwaukee's" Pan American folder (one of the completest and most comprehensive guides yet published of the exposition) and information concerning rates, etc.

Animal Peculiarities.

If a female fox (vixen) gets caught in a steel trap and is discovered by the male or fox dog, it is said he invariably kills her, although I have not heard it stated that the vixen would kill the dog fox or another vixen or the male another male.

If a cow becomes impaled on a fence and groans with pain, the whole herd instantly rush wildly to the spot, fight and apparently do their best to destroy her if not beaten off.

A hog confined with others in a pen breaks out and on being returned to the pen is at once set upon and bitten by the others.

Why, with all the instinct animals possess, is the desire so strong to injure or destroy rather than to help or rescue?—New York Sun.

Wood That Causes Sneezing.

Among its many curious products South Africa includes the "sneeze wood" tree, which takes its name from the fact that one cannot cut it with a saw without sneezing, as the fine dust has exactly the effect of snuff. Even in planing the wood it will sometimes cause sneezing. No insect, worm or barnacle will touch it. It is very bitter to the taste, and when placed in water it will sink. The color is light brown and the grain very close and hard. For dock work, piers or jetties it is a useful timber, lasting a long while under water.

What Do the Children Drink?

Don't give them tea or coffee. Have you tried the new food drink called GRAIN-O! It is delicious and nourishing, and takes the place of coffee. The more Grain-O you give the children the more health you distribute through their systems. Grain-O is made of pure grains, and when properly prepared tastes like the choice grades of coffee, but costs about ¼ as much. All grocers sell it. 15c and 25c.

His Sister in Danger.

Little Everett was watching his mother dress his baby sister. Presently, while she was fastening the dainty slip, she said:

"Do you know, Everett, that you used to wear this when you were a little baby?"

"Did I?" he asked. "Why didn't I wear pants and a coat then, as I do now?"

"Oh, you were too small. All your clothes were just like little sister's."

He sat, thoughtfully, for a few moments, and then took a walk around the room. When he returned to where his mother and the baby were, there was a troubled look on his face.

"Did I wear all those little underskirts baby sister has on?" he inquired.

"Not the same ones, but others just like them."

"Then," he demanded, in an outburst of alarm, "is she going to turn into a boy as soon as she gets a little older, too?"

Ambrose McKay's Case.

Rockbridge, Mo., June 24th.—The neighborhood, and particularly the members of Rockbridge Lodge, No. 435, A. F. & A. M., are feeling very much pleased over the recovery of Mr. Ambrose McKay, a prominent citizen and an honored member of the Masonic Fraternity.

Mr. McKay had been suffering for years with diabetes and Rheumatism, which recently threatened to end his days. His limbs were so filled with pain that he could not sleep. He was very bad.

Just then someone suggested a new remedy—Dodd's Kidney Pills—which have been much advertised recently, as a cure for Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Dropsy, Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble.

After Mr. McKay had used a few boxes he commenced to improve. His pain all left him, and he is almost as well as ever. He says Dodd's Kidney Pills are worth much more than they cost. They are certainly getting a great reputation in Missouri, and many very startling cures are being reported.

An Odd Occupation That Pays.

The cultivation of cocoa in Trinidad is one of the few industries that can be relied upon to make a handsome return for the time and capital invested. I would advise any young man who possesses a good constitution, a few hundred dollars and a capacity for hard work, to investigate the possibilities of the island in regard to the cocoa industry. Already there are among us scores of young Americans who own cocoa plantations, and I have yet to learn of an instance in which one has failed to make money.—E. Nelson Dade, in May Success.

Baby's Bath.

There's a rushing and hushing and hunting of towels!
There's a splashing and crashing and stilling of howls!
There's a laughing and chaffing, midst
infantine wrath,
For the Emperor, Baby, is taking his bath.

There's consoling, cajoling, whenever he cries,
While we grope for the soap in his poor little eyes;
There is rubbing and scrubbing of little pink toes,
And a battle to get at his tiny pug nose.

There is fretting and wetting of carpets and floors,
There is falling and sprawling about
on all fours,
There is scolding and holding and
scratches and bites,
There is kicking and tricking and fierce fistic fights.

There's a drying and plying of towels
soft and warm,
And a hush, midst the rush, like the calm after storm,
As from riot to quiet, through soap-splattered path,
We pass—and the Baby has finished his bath.

Tillie's Knitting Lessons.

When my Grandma was young little girls were taught to do many useful things. Little girls thought it no hardship to wash and dry the dishes, and spread up the beds after a stronger hand had shaken the great feather mattresses; and all the doll clothes of those days must have been well made, because the "little mothers" were given every day a lesson in sewing, crocheting or knitting, as soon as they were old enough to learn. One day, one summer, Grandma's mother called her three little daughters to her and said, "I am going to teach you to knit. I will give a reward for the first pair of socks—and how proud papa will be to wear them!" Then she gave Lucinda, Alida and little Tillie each a great ball of yarn, and a set of shining knitting needles. She patiently spent a great deal of time in showing them how to "set up a sock" on three needles, and how to hold it, and how to use the fourth needle to really "knit." The upper maid, Dinah, was to show them how to shape the heel and toe, and "narrow," and "bind off," as she herself was to be away for some weeks. So every day, very soon, each little girl took her ball and needles and went away to her own favorite nook, and for some time a very lively race went on for the prize. For at least a fortnight the little girls knitted industriously; then Alida began to weary, even before one sock was completed, and Lucinda's sock grew very slowly, though the knitting always showed even and smooth. But how little Tillie did work! Her small fingers fairly flew; her little white pet rabbits nibbled at the ball of yarn and wondered why Tillie did not have a word to say to them. Every day she took her stool out to the grape arbor and diligently knitted away, though the shouts of the children paddling in the brook came to her ears, the loudest among them the voices of her two sisters.

"I will finish first," she said. "I will win the prize! I know I can!"

After a very long time to Tillie, and a surprisingly short time to the sisters, Tillie announced—it was on the day after mamma's return home—that her socks were finished; and then Alida wished she had not been having such a good time and had more to show than just one-half of a sock, not very tidy looking. Lucinda had finished one sock and it was very prettily and evenly knitted; but she, too, was ashamed that little Tillie had outdone her. Tillie laid the pair of socks on mamma's lap with a triumphant little smile. The three little girls hovered near while mamma slipped one of the socks over her hand. But what do you think? There were about a hundred little holes where Tillie had dropped a stitch now and then! Alas! and the other sock was quite as bad. Mamma smiled as she said: "These socks will have to be darned before they can be worn."

Alida laughed merrily, but Lucinda put her arms around poor little Tillie whose tears were falling softly over the careless work. "Never mind, Tillie," she said, "you will get the prize, for you did knit the first pair!"

Well, Grandma's mamma—Grandma was Tillie—gave them each a prize for learning to knit—a little work box, with needles, scissors, thread and tiny thimble.

"Tillie has learned something else, too, I think," said mamma as she stooped to kiss the tear-stained and sorry little face. Then she gave Tillie her workbox, a pretty blue one, and said, in a whisper, "Make haste slowly!"

Grandma says it has been over fifty years since she won that prize, and she has forgotten how to knit; but the lesson she learned along with her knitting she will never forget.—Mary Goodwin Hubbell in Little Folks.

The Giant Whistle.

The biggest willow whistle that ever came to light was, perhaps, the one made by the boys at Point Creek last spring. The May flowers dotted the banks of the stream, and the sky was blue when the trio started out for the valley below where the finest willows grew. The trio was not armed with guns, no fish poles were present, but each lad carried a newly sharpened hatchet, that glittered in the sunlight.

"Mine's sharp as a meat ax."

"Mine's as sharp as a butcher knife."

"And mine's like a razor," said the third boy, as he cleft a two-inch elder with one clever stroke.

Close by the river side, near Spook Hole, they found the tree they had agreed upon. It was a foot through, smooth, clear of branches for at least ten feet from the base. Just the kind of a willow to fashion into whistles. The tree would suffice for many "tooters." It, however, sufficed for just one affair that went on record as the greatest thing in the way of willow whistles. The three sharp hatchets soon laid it low. The trunk was quickly severed close to the first branches. There it was, as clean as a piece of willow as any you ever saw. Then the lads began to pound the bark with the faces of their hatchets. That was an operation that required great care, for they did not want to bruise the bark; they only wanted to loosen it from the sappy wood. There was much rolling and turning of the log before that was accomplished. After satisfying themselves that the bark was in shape to peel off, the boy with the razor-like hatchet was intrusted with the delicate task of splitting the bark in a straight line from end to end of the log.

"It's all right," he said, dropping his hatchet and pulling the bark back from the cut. In a few moments the bark was pulled from the trunk without a break or flaw. They shouldered the shell and went away, leaving the denuded willow glistening in its sap and nakedness by the side of the river. It was a little bit of a tug, going up the steep side of the hill, but as they had secured the shell they were not worried about a little extra exertion. When they reached the top of the hill they laid the willow shell carefully upon the grass and sat down to rest. They felt that half of the work was over—but it was not.

It took two more days before a plug was fashioned for the whistle and a mouth-end put in place. Then a place where the wind was strongest had to be found, and next it took some little time to fasten the whistle with ropes to the trees so that no strong gale might tear it away. Then they waited a good wind—but none came. Forty boys couldn't have raised enough wind to blow even the most tiny "toot." Two days and nights the giant whistle was up there on the hilltop before it began to speak. Upon the third night the wind came up the valley, bent the tree-tops and moaned. When the wind began to blow the good people of Point Creek began to arise from their beds. Such a sound had never been heard by even the oldest inhabitant. A shriek to split one's ears, followed by a heavy bass that almost made the windows tremble. Then all would be quiet for an instant, and when a gale came tearing along a roar as of a dozen trains of cars would boom forth. Some said the last day was at hand. Others said there would be a war, and not a few wondered what it all meant and were not able to solve it. But these youngsters, in separate beds laughed, stuffed sheets into their mouths and felt that they were having a gay lark. A good, stiff blast came; the giant thundered once more and it never even made a tiny "toot" again. The wind kept blowing during the night, but the big whistle was dumb. The boys wondered why—and they found out when they went next morning to the public square, where a crowd of merchants, clerks, office boys and others stood gathered about the broken and twisted remains of the giant whistle that had been blown from its fastenings as it gave forth its last "toot."—H. S. Keller in Chicago Record-Herald.

Hoe Your Own Row.

"Here you are—Evening Herald!"

"Don't want any paper. G'way, boy!"

"Only one left, sir."

"I tell you I don't want it. There!"

The old gentleman tossed a nickel to the newsboy and mounted the stairs to his office with agility hardly to be expected in one of his age. But when he arrived at the landing and was fumbling with the lock, he was surprised to find the newsboy at his elbow.

"What do you want?" he asked somewhat testily.

"Here's your paper, sir, and your change," said the boy respectfully.

"Well, I never saw such a boy!" exclaimed the old gentleman in surprise. "I told you I didn't want the paper."

"But you gave me a nickel."

"I gave it to you out of charity."

"Then, take it back," said the boy, firmly, although with trembling lip. "I am not begging; I am selling papers. I will take two cents for a paper, but I wont take a cent out of charity."

"Well, I declare," said the old gentleman, "you are a most astonishing boy! But you are a sensible chap, and I will buy a paper from you—today and every day. You will get along in the world, my lad."

There are not many boys, perhaps, who are like our newsboy, although all boys would be better and happier if they would reject all gifts and take nothing but what they have earned. Independence is a cardinal virtue that makes a man great. A few years ago a poor cartman in Boston, while plying his vocation on the docks, had the misfortune to have his cart and horse precipitated into the water, the horse being drowned and the cart damaged. Some charitable persons set on foot a subscription to repair the loss, but he firmly rejected it. "I am not denying that I am poor enough," said he, "but I have always had foresight to lay by something for a rainy day, and I'll take care that no one shall look at my new cart and horse and say 'I gave him a dollar to get it.'" These two instances might be imitated to advantage by boys and girls alike of every station in life.—Rex in Golden Days.

Willie's Perplexity.

When Willie came home last night he was more convinced of the uselessness of schools than he ever was before. Asked the nature of his latest trouble, he explained that "postpone" had been one of the words in the spelling lesson of the day. The teacher had directed the pupils to write a sentence in which the special word should appear. Along with others, Willie announced that he didn't know the meaning of the word, and so could not use it in a sentence. The teacher explained that it meant "delay," or "put off," and encouraged the youngsters to try. Willie's thoughts were on pleasanter things than school, and his made-to-order sentence was: "Boys postpone their clothes when they go in swimming." Willie wishes he lived in Jacksonville.—Buffalo Express.

Cow Stalls.

Prof. F. W. Woll, in his book on "Modern Dairy Practice," treating of the infection of milk, says:

A too long stall may indirectly be the cause of the infection of the milk. The hindquarters of the cow will under this condition be soiled by the manure when she lies down. This is especially the case with the tail, to which particular attention must always be paid in cleaning the cows. The cow will often swing her tail during the milking, and, if it is soiled, filth will of course be spread to all sides. I have found that the milk may in this manner be mixed with dirt of the most offensive kind.

At a farm where the stalls were too short, and where there was no litter in the liquid manure gutter, the cows' tails were always wet and dirty; when the cows lay down their tails lay in the gutters, which did not thoroughly drain off the liquid manure. Although the gutters were new, holes and recesses had already formed in them in which the urine and liquid manure remained and formed pools. By applying wooden shavings in the gutters the difficulties were later on avoided. The cows could then be kept clean, and the milk became, as a consequence, cleaner, and kept better than was previously the case. I have met with liquid manure gutters of even worse defects than the ones described, in a large number of stables in our country.

On another farm, considered a dairy farm par excellence, all the stalls were too short for the large, fine cows, so that the hindquarters and the tails always lay in the low gutter; the udders of a number of the cows were also dirty. What made the matter still worse was the fact that the stalls were lower than the barnyard outside, where the manure heap was placed. As a consequence the liquid manure gutter was always full of urine. Only a couple of months after the herd came in from pasture, these sad conditions had conquered all the efforts of the farm hands to keep the animals clean to such an extent that the hindquarters and parts of the udders were covered with a thick manure crust, and the tail formed one solid sticky mass. How impure the milk from this farm must have been can easily be imagined. I cannot give any exact data as to what extent it was mixed with impurities, as I was not able to examine it closely; but, judging from the large quantity of slime gathered in the separator bowl when the milk was separated, it was as one would expect from its antecedents.

Conditions similar to those given above, although not carried to such an extreme, may be found on other of our 'dairy farms'—i. e., on farms where they try, at least in the stable, to maintain a high standard of cleanliness. What can, then, be expected of the cow stables in the places where they do not try at all to follow the fundamental principle of modern dairying—strict cleanliness? The poor animals are kept in such places in undisturbed peace throughout the winter, uncarded and uncleaned; they are furthermore often confined in darkness for several months, as the very small windows are often wholly snowed or frozen over. Cow stables where such bad conditions exist are still found in many places; and still people wonder that the milk coming from these primitive stables is of poor quality, and that the products made from it do not keep well.

How to Dress Calves.

Calves from three to six weeks old, and weighing about one hundred pounds, or say from eighty to one hundred and twenty pounds, are the most desirable weights for shipment. The head should be cut out, so as to leave the hide of the head on the skin. The legs should be cut off at the knee joint. The entrails should all be removed, excepting the kidneys; the liver, lights and heart should be taken out. Cut the carcass open from the neck through the entire length—from head to bumgut. If this is done they are not so apt to sour and spoil during hot weather. Many a fine carcass has spoiled in hot weather because of it not being cut open. Don't wash the carcass out with water, but wipe out with a dry cloth. Don't ship until the animal heat is entirely out of the body, and never tie the carcass up in a bag, as this keeps the air from circulating, and makes the meat more liable to become tainted.

Mark for shipment by fastening a shipping tag to the hind leg. Calves under fifty pounds should not be shipped, and are liable to be condemned by the health officers as being unfit for food. Merchants, too, are liable to be fined, if found selling these slunks, for violation of the law. Very heavy calves, such as have been fed on buttermilk, never sell well in our market—they are neither veal nor beef.

Indiana Hogs.

The hog crop of Indiana for six years is thus given by a government authority:

Year.	No. of Hogs.
1895	2,612,654
1896	2,678,248
1897	2,739,378
1898	3,316,871
1899	2,948,055
1900	2,959,177

One looking over this table must be struck with the thought that the increase has hardly kept pace with the demand, especially in view of the fact that prices during recent years have been good, and that hogs can be increased in numbers more rapidly than any other farm animals.

A Mississippi bulletin says: There are a number of men in Mississippi who offer for sale what they claim to be the best strains of the different breeds, who do not know the strains of their respective breeds. In honest ignorance many of them are inflicting on their equally ignorant customers animals just a little removed from the razor-back. This is due to the fact that they have bought their stock from persons who, like themselves, had never seen the best of the breed, or from breeders who, against their own interest and the dictates of their consciences, sold them their "culls" because they were not willing to pay more than "cull" prices.

The number of emigrants who left Germany in 1900 was 22,309.

The barn yard fowl is gradually decreasing in numbers. The thoroughbreds are taking their place on the farm.

The Summer Man in All His Glory.

Take him as a whole, and the summer man promises to be a garish and gorgeous spectacle this summer. His shirts and neckwear are to be resplendent with the most striking of reds and blues, lavenders and greens, and a general jumble of all of them. With these are worn with the white ducks and flannels that fashion says will be the eminently proper things for outing suits, the effect will be picturesque, to say the least, especially as the straw hats are to be of a sort that will top all this showiness very properly. White canvas and tans are to be the colors for footwear, and, as the knickerbockers and plaid golf stockings will also be proper when one is not dressed for company, the male animal promises to be, in his own estimation at least, a thing of beauty and a fitting mate for the summer girl.

Wants a Composer in a Hurry.

The following curious advertisement appeared a few days ago in a small musical journal published at Leipsic:

"Wanted, a skilled musician, who can compose, before warm weather begins, a tragic opera in one act. The author of the libretto will place at the disposal of the composer a house which is furnished with a piano and which is situated near the sea, in a most idyllic and romantic country; furthermore, the composer will be well fed and supplied with all necessary fuel. A poor but gifted artist ought to be able to make his fortune in a place like this, and under conditions such as are here proposed. Those who apply for the situation are requested to send biographical notices of themselves to the office of this paper."—New York Journal.

WINTER BILE

Causes bilious head-ache, back-ache and all kinds of body aches. Spring is here and you want to get this bile poison out of your system, easily, naturally and gently. CASCARETS are just what you want; they never grip or gripe, but will work gently while you sleep. Some people think the more violent the griping the better the cure. Be careful—take care of your bowels—salts and pill poisons leave them weak, and even less able to keep up regular movements than before. The only safe, gentle cleaner for the bowels are sweet, fragrant CASCARETS. They don't force out the foecal matter with violence, but act as a tonic on the whole 30 feet of bowel wall, strengthen the muscles and restore healthy, natural action—buy them and try them. You will find in an entirely natural way your bowels will be promptly and permanently put in good order for the Spring and Summer work.
